duties in October term. The new hall and library of Keble College are making most satisfactory progress, and will, it is expected, be ready for opening on St. Mark's Day. Arrangements are being made for the reception in the library of Mr. Holman Hunt's celebrated picture "The Light of the World," presented by the widow of the late Mr. Thomas Coombe, and valued at £10,000. Keble College was built by subscription as a memorial to the late Rev. John Keble, Vicar of Hursley, near Winchester, sometime Fellow and Tutor of Oriel College, and Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. The college was incorporated by Royal charter, bearing date June 9, 1870, and by this charter it is declared to be founded and constituted with the especial object and intent of providing persons desirous of academical education, and willing to live economically in a college wherein sober living and high culture of the mind may be combined with Christian training, based upon the principles of the Church of England. The college, although of such young date, has a complement of 126 resident undergraduates.

The directors of the Glasgow Academy have concluded the purchase of five acres of ground, situated on the estate of Belmont, and immediately to the west of Kelvin Bridge, with a view to the erection of a new academy.

The Yorkshire Post says the purchase of the Beech Grove estate for the site of the Yorkshire College has been completed by the payment of the purchase-money, £13,000. The Archbishop of York has consented to lay the foundation-stone of the new college on Oct. 23.

The annual report of the president of the Belfast Queen's College shows that, during the session ending October last, the students attending the various departments were 393, of whom 353 were matriculated and ten non-matriculated, the number of new entrances being 115, of whom ninety-one were matriculated and twenty-four non-matriculated. The return for the closing session shows an increase, both in respect to the number of students in attendance and to the new entrances.

Reports have recently been issued by the council of the Yorkshire College of Science at Leeds on the work of the Textile Industries Department, and by the council of University College, Bristol, upon the Technical Classes at Stroud, both which are endowed by the Clothworkers' Company; and we learn from the City Press that the account given in each instance is extremely satisfactory. The various classes have been well attended, and the students have shown themselves fully alive to the advantages offered.

The examiners have awarded the prizes given annually by Colonel Sir Frederick Fitzwygram, President of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, to the best students educated in any veterinary school affiliated to the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons in the year 1877, as under—First prize, £50, Richard Glover, Stratford, E.; second prize, £30, Laurence C. Tipper, Birmingham.

The Dean and Chapter of Rochester have appointed the Rev. John Langhorne, M.A., of Christ's College, Cambridge, one of the Assistant Masters of Tunbridge School, to be the Head Master of the Rochester Grammar School. Mr. Langhorne was bracketed fifteenth in the First Class Classical Tripos, 1859. The Grammar School at Rochester has been entirely remodelled under the new scheme of the Endowed School Commissioners; the Rev. R. Whiston, M.A., who has held the appointment of Head Master of the school for nearly forty years, having been placed on a retiring allowance of £250 per annum, to be paid out of the school revenues.

The scholarships lately competed for at Salisbury School have been adjudged as follows:—First Senior Scholarship, R. Roberts; Second (Mathematics), J. F. S. Eve; commended, A. Rowland. First Junior Scholarship, L. G. Clarke; Second, J. R. Pinchin; Foundation Scholarship, H. Weigall. Only one of the Foundation Scholarships is adjudged, the other candidates not showing the required proficiency.

The Rev. Robert H. Wix, M.A., late Scholar of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, and for eight years Assistant Master at St. John's College, Hurstpierpoint, has been appointed to the head-mastership of St. George's School, Brampton, vice the Rev. W. L. Wilson, resigned.

The Rev. E. F. Arnold, her Majesty's Inspector of Schools for the Western District, has resigned owing to ill-health.

The following are declared by the Civil Service Commissioners to be the successful candidates at the open competition held in July, 1877, for cadetships at the Royal Military College in the order of merit. Candidates marked (*) are eligible for commissions in the West India regiments only:—

L. H. Reid, E. Vincent, *W. W. Northcott, A. W. Ranken, W. J. Langford, F. J. Stopford, *W. H. M. Stewart, C. G. Thackwell, C. B. Vyvyan, C. W. Napier, R. G. Campbell, F. P. Hutchinson, C. R. Burn, *W. C. W. Rawlinson, F. D. H. St. Quinton, J. H. Williams, H. H. Smythe, C. H. Stisted, E. A. Gossett, C. T. Dawkins, H. H. Dobbie, E. H. Dyson, G. A. Hay, A. E. Mackenzie, F. J. S. Lowry, G. S. Ommanney, A. H. Dobbs, W. J. Myers, P. J. H. Aplin, G. H. Gallenga, A. B. Maxwell, R. D. Pyrk, W. D. Thomson, T. Lamb, *T. G. Johnson, C. M. Lester, F. G. Slaney-Kenyon, S. T. Benning, A. L. Birch, F. J. Gavin, *H. S. P. Davies, H. J. A. Bowden, A. C. E. McKinty, H. C. Kelly, A. W. Pennyman, A. C. H. Thomas, S. G. Grant, A. W. Gordon, W. H. Longfield, D. H. Elletson, H. F. K. Waldron, G. E. G. W. Bird, F. S. Garratt, H. Mansell, F. W. Burnett, E. R. C. Graham, R. L. B. Carter, F. H. Cornish, P. J. Melville, S. R. Rogers, A. C. Godwin, C. H. I. Hopkins, E. J. Brook, J. S. Brown, H. P. O'Callaghan, the Hon. R. B. Hamilton, F. S. Evans, W. Hotham, the Hon. R. C. S. M. Monok, D. M. L. H. Farrington, H. Parkin, H. Temple, D. H. Stewart, F. A. C. Kreyer, J. H. Christie, H. L. Clark, C. J. Bond, C. H. Agnew, E. Rhodes, the Hon. A. S. Harding, C. F. G. Young, H. Du Buisson, H. Swire, F. I. Kane, G. S. C. Jenkinson, J. K. Alston, E. H. Watson, G. A. Ivatt, G. R. V. Hume, J. H. Plumb, W. L. Forbes, E. H. G. Heygate, B. L. J. Goff, A. J. J. Ross, W. A. A. Macbean.

The following are the names of the University candidates successful at the same examination in the order of merit:—W. H. Cornish, H. Davidson, H. A. Vowles, J. F. M. Fawcett, A. Phayre, L. H. Vidal, H. T. King, J. S. Gulle, C. E. Ogil, R. B. Gaisford, W. S. Carpenter, W. H. Watson.

The following Queen's and Indian cadets have passed a qualifying examination for cadetships at the Royal Military College:—Queen's Cadets—J. Eardley-Wilmot, J. O. D. Taylor. Indian Cadets—W. E. G. Logan, W. B. Piers, F. St. Quentin, F. H. Saules, J. Shaw, G. B. Unwin, G. J. Young-husband.

The following Lieutenants of militia have passed a qualifying examination for commissions in the Army:—J. L. C. Acton, R. S. Ireland.

A handsome monument, which has been erected in the cemetery at Gosport to the memory of the victims of the boiler explosion on board the Thunderer last year, was unveiled on Wednesday. The memorial takes the form of a polished Sicilian marble obelisk, sixteen feet high. The obelisk rests on the graves of Messrs. Slade and Winfield, engineers; the graves of the other victims running right and left.

At a meeting of the Burns Statue Committee at Kilmarnock on Monday night a report was submitted from the sub-committee, in which they stated that they have obtained two designs for the erection of an ornamental building in the public park for the reception of the Burns statue, and one of these they recommend for adoption. The estimated cost of the building is £1500, and of the statue £800. Already £1580 has been subscribed. The report was adopted, and it was agreed to lay it before the subscribers for approval.

ADA.

FLORIDA.

ADA.

NAB LIGHT-SHIP.

VOL-AU-YENT.

JULLANAB.

ROYAL VICTORIA YACHT CLUB: COLLISION BETWEEN THE ADA AND THE FLORIDA.

THE WAR: PASSAGE OF THE BALKANS.

BURNING OF THE RAILWAY STATION AT KAYADZIK HASKIOI, BY GENERAL GOURKO'S DRAGOONS.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

EXIT FROM THE HAINKIOI PASS IN THE BALKANS.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE WAR.

There is little to report this week of the progress of the campaign in Bulgaria, where the main Russian and Turkish forces still occupy the positions they took up after the repulse of the Russian right wing by Osman Pasha at the battle of Plevna, fought three weeks ago. The Imperial head-quarters are removed from Biela, on the Jantra, some distance westward, to Gorny Studeni, a few miles south of the Danube at Sistova. The Emperor Alexander is there, with the Grand Duke Nicholas, the Commander-in-Chief, awaiting the immense reinforcements he has sent for from Russia. The main Turkish army, under Mahomet Ali Pasha, the Commander-in-Chief, has its front extended from Rasgrad to Osman Bazar, with its centre resting on Eski Juma, so as to cover all the roads from Rustchuk to Shumla, which may be seen in any Map. The Turkish force at Plevna, under Osman Pasha, extends its right wing to Lovcha, or Lovatz, shutting up the west side of the country in which the Russian army is quartered; while Mahomet Ali Pasha shuts up the east side. On the south side, that of the Balkans, it is expected that Suleiman Pasha will bring 20,000 men, to join Mahomet Ali Pasha in a combined attack on the Russian positions; and it is not unlikely that an important battle may be fought between Osman Bazar and Tirnova. After the retreat of General Gourko, with heavy loss, from his raid south of the Balkans, the only mountain road that remained in the possession of the Russians was the Shipka Pass. There was severe fighting in the Shipka Pass on Tuesday last, when the Turks were repulsed; that Pass is defended by a regiment of the Ninth Division, with twenty-eight guns. The village Shipka, at the south end of the Pass, has been captured by the Turks. The north end of the Hainkioi Pass is still held by two Russian regiments; but several other passes are open to Suleiman Pasha's advance northward. From the Dobrudzha we hear that the Russian force under General Zimmermann is detained there to meet an expected movement of Turks and Circassians along the Black Sea coast to the line of Tchernavoda and Kustendje. There are some movements in Asia of the conflicting armies north and east of Kars, towards the Georgian frontier; but it is premature to speak of an actual renewal of the campaign in that region.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Marshal MacMahon received the local authorities of Caen yesterday week, and, replying to an address from the President of the Court of Appeal, expressed his conviction that the members of the Court would do all in their power to assist him in defending what was not a political cause, for he did not seek the triumph of any particular party, but that which was the foundation of the principles of society, which at the present moment were in serious jeopardy. In reply to the President of the Chamber of Commerce, the Marshal said the Cabinet was at present engaged in examining all matters relating to commercial treaties, and it was doing so with the utmost zeal and impartiality. In the evening the Marshal held a reception at the Prefecture, at which he thanked the authorities for the cordial reception he had met with. Marshal MacMahon visited St. Lô on Saturday morning, and left in the afternoon for Cherbourg, after receiving an address from the President of the Council-General expressive of the attachment of the town and department to the cause of order. At Cherbourg the streets through which he passed were decorated with flags, and the town was illuminated at night. On Sunday morning the Marshal received the authorities, and afterwards attended Divine service. On leaving the church he was greeted with acclamations. The Marshal subsequently held a review of the troops, and is said to have been very cordially received. He paid a visit next morning to the Arsenal, where he was received with much deference and cordiality. Marshal MacMahon returned to the Palace of the Elysée on Tuesday morning, and presided at the Council of Ministers.

M. de Fourtou, the Minister of the Interior, has also returned to Paris.

M. Thiers visited M. Turquet at Puy yesterday week, and was warmly cheered by the population. Two girls in Alsatian costume gave him tricoloured bouquets, while Madame Thiers was offered a bouquet of wild flowers by the villagers, and one of seaside flowers by the sailors. M. Thiers arrived in Paris on Saturday night, but has since left for Saint Germain-en-Laye, where he will remain two or three weeks.

The session of the Councils-General opened on Monday in all the Departments of France except that of the Seine, which does not come under the general rule. There are forty-two Republican, twenty-five Monarchist, fifteen Bonapartist, and eight Constitutional Presidents. Six out of the nine members of the present Cabinet are members of the Councils-General.

M. Krantz, the Commissioner-General for the Paris Exhibition, has addressed a circular to the foreign representatives announcing that the principal parts of the exhibition building will be finished on Sept. 15. Architects and engineers of the foreign commissions will then be admitted to commence work on the site allotted to them.

The manoeuvres of the army will begin this year on Aug. 29, and will terminate on Sept. 8. Lieutenant-General Sir Henry P. de Bathe, commanding the Northern district, will represent the British Government at the manoeuvres.

The journals make mention of numerous dismissals and suspensions of mayors and municipal officers. M. Dehault, the Mayor of St. Dizier (a member of the Senate), has been removed from his office. M. Marion, Mayor of Avenières, and former Deputy, has been dismissed. The number of Deputies removed from their posts as Mayors is thirty-eight. From Toulouse it is announced that the Prefect has dissolved all the Masonic lodges in that city on the ground that they had become centres of action for a political propaganda.

One of the oldest and most devoted friends of the Napoleonic dynasty, Dr. Conneau, died recently, aged seventy-four, at La Porta, Corsica. He took part in the Boulogne expedition, shared Louis Napoleon's cell, and promoted his escape, and in 1852 he became his chief physician. He was intrusted with the direction of the Prince Imperial's education.

At the funeral of M. Duvergier de Hauranne on Monday the pall-bearers were M. Jules Simon, M. Léon Say, Admiral Pothuau, and M. Barthélemy Saint Hilaire. Among the mourners were MM. Gambetta, Louis Blanc, Jules Favre, Léon Renault, Ferry, Langlois, Lockroy, Spuller, and Greppo. No speeches were made.

More than 1000 pilgrims left Paris on the 16th inst. for Lourdes, together with 150 indigent sick persons, whose expenses have been subscribed for.

A wealthy lady of Paris, Madame Hess, has given the Mayor of the second arrondissement 10,000fr., the annual income of which is to be applied to the foundation of a prize of virtue. It is to be especially devoted to the communal girls' schools of the district, and is to be awarded to the pupil who, during the year, shall have been of irreproachable conduct and given the greatest proofs of filial devotedness and piety.

SPAIN.

The Duc de Montpensier, with his family, arrived last Saturday at the Villalba station, Madrid, where Royal carriages were in attendance to convey them to the Granja. Mr. Lowell was received the same day by King Alfonso.

GERMANY.

The Emperor William gave a banquet last Saturday in honour of the Austrian Emperor's birthday. Prince Bismarck arrived in Berlin on Monday evening. He received the Ministers Herren von Bülow and von Redowitz; and on the following morning proceeded to the Castle of Babelsberg to present a report to the Emperor. Mr. Washburne on Tuesday visited Prince Bismarck, who gave him a most cordial reception. He afterwards drove with the Prince, Herr von Bülow, and Mr. Bancroft Davis, the American Minister, to Babelsberg, where the Emperor and Empress received him with especial attention, and repeatedly thanked him for the trouble he had taken in regard to the protection of German subjects in Paris during the siege and the Commune. The Emperor promised to present Mr. Washburne with his portrait at an early date. His Majesty also addressed himself particularly to Mr. Davis, and expressed great regret at his approaching departure.

Li-Fung-Cha and Theng-Ki-Long, the two Special Ambassadors of the Chinese Government, paid a visit on Thursday week to the Foreign Office. They profess a literary and educational, rather than a political errand.

SERVIA.

All the members of the Cabinet tendered their resignation yesterday week, but Prince Milan accepted only that of M. Steotcha, the President of the Council of the Ministers, and of M. Mikailovics, Minister of Public Works. M. Ristic has been nominated to the Presidency of the Council, and the other members of the Cabinet continue to hold their portfolios. Wednesday, being the anniversary of the accession of Prince Milan Obrenovich to the throne, was observed at Belgrade as a holiday.

AMERICA.

President Hayes is now visiting White Mountains, where he has been cordially received by all parties. Responding to several addresses of welcome, the President said that the differences raised through the evils of the late war had passed away, and all parts of the country now agreed to obey the Constitution. "Let us," he continued, "have harmony, unity, and peace. The sentiment that guides the Government is that of a common nationality. It desires to do something for the people of all the States, and to make them feel as citizens of a united country rather than of a particular State." Differences might exist, said the President, concerning the means of accomplishing the desired end; but the Government believed that the people of the United States wanted reconciliation, obedience to law, and protection for the rights of all, whatever their race or colour. The President, in conclusion, expressed the hope that at the close of his administration all citizens, of whatever party, might be able to say, "We are all Americans." Mr. Evarts, Mr. Kay, and Mr. Devens also made strong union speeches.

President Hayes was officially received by the Governor of New Hampshire, at Concord, on Wednesday, and afterwards held two receptions, attended by 13,000 persons, including members of all parties. Vice-President Wheeler made a speech warmly eulogising the President's administration, and earnest union speeches were made by Mr. Hayes and several members of the Cabinet.

About 45,000 people on Thursday week attended the Centenary Celebration of the Battle of Bennington, Vermont. Processions, orations, and a banquet formed part of the ceremonies, President Hayes being the central figure. Mr. William Cullen Bryant sent a poem in honour of the occasion. At the banquet the toast of "Queen Victoria" elicited great enthusiasm, Secretary Evarts responding. A letter from Lord Dufferin, Governor-General of Canada, to the President was read, much regretting his inability to attend the celebration.

Mr. Sherman, the Secretary of the United States Treasury, in a speech given at Mansfield, Ohio, yesterday week, stated that the Government by its funded operations since the 1st of March had saved over three million of dollars in annual interest.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has called for two regiments of three-months' volunteers to replace the militia in the mining districts.

Intelligence received at New York state that on the 14th inst. a band of Mexican thieves drove a herd of cattle across the Rio Grande. Mexican troops are concentrating at Camargo, opposite the Ring Gold Barracks.

INDIA.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, in a telegram of Sunday's date, states that the reports for the past week show that there is little if any change for the better in the harvest prospects. There has been a good fall of rain in Malabar, in parts of Tinnevely, and at the Neilgherries, and showers in Salem, Tanjore, South Arcot, Chingleput, Bellary, parts of Kurnool, and Kistna. The dry crops in these districts have been somewhat benefited, but more rain is wanted. Showers fell in Nellore, Cuddapah, North Arcot, and Coimbatore. None fell in Trichinopoly. There were showers in Mysore, and the prospects there have somewhat improved. From Bombay the reports are as follow:—There was good rain in Kanara and Dharwar; more is wanted in Belgaum and Caladgi; the prospects are good in Sattara and Sholapore; rain is urgently needed in Poonah, Ahmednugger, and Konkeir; the condition of the crops is very bad in Khandeish, Nassick, and Goojerat. The last official report of the Bombay Government—that for the week ending Aug. 9—is more satisfactory than might have been expected. The condition of the people in the worst districts is described as fairly good. Anxiety is felt for Goojerat and Kattywar, which have not hitherto been included in the famine area, and precautionary measures are being adopted. In Scinde the rivers are very low, and water is therefore wanted. The prospects are generally good in the Central Provinces, but rain is wanted in some parts for the rice crop. Rain is urgently needed in Berar. Only partial showers have fallen in Central India. Distress is impending in Gwalior. Rain still holds off in Rajpootana, where a great loss of crops is likely to occur. The drought continues in the North-West Provinces, except at Benares. There has been no rain in the Punjab, where the crops are drying up. The prospects are generally very favourable in Assam, Burmah, and the greater part of Bengal, but more rain is wanted in Sarun and Orissa. On the whole, the prospects of the autumn crops may be regarded as hopeless in Southern India, most critical in Western, Central, and Northern India, and fairly good in Eastern India. The relief committee at the Madras meeting have published an appeal for help. They describe the miserable condition of the people of the affected districts, who want not only food, but also clothes and shelter. Their houses are roofless, the thatch having been given to cattle and the rafters sold to provide food. Whole districts are suffering from the pressure of prices, which are double those which prevailed during the Bengal famine. Help from private charity is urgently required, and the appeal concludes by soliciting subscriptions. It is understood that a meeting will be held in Calcutta for the purpose of appointing a committee to co-operate with the Madras committee. The Viceroy left Simla on the 16th inst. for Poonah and Madras. In Madras the Duke of Buckingham spares no labour. The local officers are doing their duty manfully.

AUSTRALIA.

By a telegram from Melbourne to the 17th inst. we learn that the Victoria Budget has been presented to Parliament, and that it shows a deficit of £380,000, which the Government proposes to cover by a land tax and an import duty on live stock.

The death is announced of Count Constabile, an eminent Italian archaeologist.

The Standard learns that the differences between Mr. Scudamore and the Porte have been satisfactorily arranged, and that Mr. Scudamore retains his official position.

A handsome font of Devonshire marble, the gift of the parishioners of Plympton, was sent last Saturday from Plympton to the proposed cathedral at Pretoria, the capital of the Transvaal.

The Queen of Madagascar has, by public proclamation, liberated the whole of the slaves in the island. By a treaty with England in 1865 she engaged that the practice of buying and selling slaves should be discontinued; but, her subjects having evaded the treaty to a great extent by pretending that their slaves were purchased before the treaty came into force, the decisive step taken by the Queen has been rendered necessary.

THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

The Lord Mayor has received from Sir Thomas Biddulph a telegram as follows:—"The Queen commands me to inform you that her Majesty will give £500 towards the Indian Famine Fund."

His Lordship has received a communication also from the Prince of Wales, stating that the distressing accounts from India of the terrible famine now raging in the southern parts of that country have caused him the greatest concern, including a cheque for five hundred guineas as a donation in aid of the relief fund now being raised by his Lordship, and expressing the hope that the Lord Mayor's appeal to the public may meet with the prompt and generous response it deserves.

The Princess of Wales has sent a hundred guineas and Prince Leopold £50 to the fund.

A letter from Miss Florence Nightingale, inclosing £25 for the Indian Famine Relief Fund, has also been received, expressing her great pleasure that such a fund has been originated at the Mansion House.

Among the sums received at the Mansion House for the fund are—Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and Sons, and Messrs. Baring Brother and Co., £1000 each; the widow of the late Mr. G. Ashburner, of Calcutta, Lord Salisbury, Lord Northbrook, Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., and Messrs. Stern Brothers, £500 each; Messrs. J. Huth and Co., £250; Messrs. Truman, Hanbury, Buxton, and Co., £210; the Earl of Derby, £200; and several donations of £100. The contributions received up to Wednesday night amounted to over £24,000.

The Lord Mayor has formed a committee, including, among others, Lord Northbrook, Sir N. M. de Rothschild, M.P., Mr. Kirkman Hodgson, M.P., Mr. Edward Baring, Mr. Hugh Matheson, Mr. Charles Arbuthnot, Mr. Francis Buxton, the Hon. H. Bourke, Mr. John Fleming, C.S.I., and Mr. Arthur Hewitt.

Mr. Winzar, the cashier to the fund, took occasion on Wednesday to call the attention of the sitting Alderman, Sir R. Carden, to the fact that circulars had been issued by parties professing to be merchants and traders in the city of London, asking for subscriptions for the relief of the famine in India. He desired to state that these parties were unknown at the Mansion House, and had nothing whatever to do with the fund now being raised at the instance of the Lord Mayor, and it was considered advisable to caution the public in reference to the matter. Sir R. Carden observed that many benevolent persons were doubtless desirous to raise money for the relief of the famine, and it would be as well where this was the case that the parties should put themselves in communication with the Mansion House authorities.

Public meetings are being called in most of the large towns to take steps towards raising funds for the relief of the Indian famine. At a meeting at Manchester on Tuesday, under the presidency of the Mayor, it was determined to open a subscription for the relief of the sufferers by the famine, and a resolution was passed expressing the opinion of the meeting that it was the duty of her Majesty's Government to organise, at the cost, if need be, of our national exchequer, such measures of relief as would be adequate to the emergency. A public meeting was held on Tuesday afternoon at Southampton, under the presidency of the Mayor, for the purpose, and over £100 was subscribed in the room. At a meeting of the Edinburgh Town Council on Tuesday it was agreed that a subscription should be opened by the City Chamberlain in aid of the sufferers by the famine, and that the Corporation should head the list with a donation of £200.

At a meeting of Carnarvonshire magistrates Mr. Edwards has been appointed chairman of Quarter Sessions, in succession to Lord Newborough, resigned.

The annual horse show of the Royal Dublin Society began on Tuesday. The show is superior to that of last year in respect both to the number and the quality of the exhibits.

Harriet Smith, a domestic servant, has been presented by the painters of Maidstone with a valuable watch, in recognition of her courage and presence of mind in dragging in a painter through a bed-room window, when, by the fall of his ladder, he was left clinging to the roof of the house he was painting.

At the annual flower and vegetable show of the Alexandra district, at Penge, last Saturday, the prizes were distributed by Lady Lubbock. A short address was given by Sir John Lubbock, in the course of which he contrasted the peace and security with which the exhibitors had cultivated their gardens with the horrors of war of which the Turkish provinces were the scene, and expressed the hope that the Government might be able to keep England out of the war, without allowing the national interests to suffer. Amongst the prize-takers were the names of Messrs. Westcott, Harpin, F. Dace, Haynes, Denyer, Sale, Longman, and Leach. In the general competition, Mr. Toywood took the first and Mr. Woolmore the second prize; while Mr. Stuart carried off the palm for his collection of wild flowers.—The annual exhibition of plants and flowers in connection with the Lea Bridge Horticultural Society, established in 1865, took place on Monday, in the grounds of the society adjoining the Lea Bridge railway station. The number of plants and flowers exhibited surpassed that of any previous year.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The race meetings of last week were of little more than passing interest. There was no St. Leger sensation at Stockton, as was the case when Pretender just scrambled home in front of Islam, his slovenly display foreshadowing the disgrace he was to suffer at Doncaster, or when the despised Juga galloped Khedive down through a sea of mud. The Hardwicke Stakes, which was the chief two-year-old event of the meeting, fell to a useful colt by Adamas—Remnant, and Speculum had two smart representatives in Cutnute and Hazelnut, the last named being from the flying Nutbush, and therefore a half sister to Hazeldean. Egham furnished two very fair days' sport. Her clever victory in the King John Stakes showed Ambuscade to be a better filly than is generally supposed; and Chesterton won a couple of events in the gamiest possible style. He beat John Day cleverly in the Queen's Plate, in which All Heart, perhaps the greatest impostor ever known, made his first appearance as a four-year-old, and played his favourite part of whipper in with his usual success.

A very heavy fall of rain on Monday made the York course somewhat holding, but the weather was quite fine on Tuesday, though half a gale of wind played sad havoc with the booths and temporary stands. The antagonism of Lady Golightly, Muscatel, and Helena made the Yorkshire Oaks unusually interesting. The first-named was conceding 4 lb. to each of the others, and, as she was reported to be amiss, all the persistency of Archer's constant supporters could not save her from being the worst favourite of the three. If, however, she had the worst of the betting, she certainly had the best of the race; for, after waiting in the rear until past the distance, she shot to the front, and won cleverly by a length. Of course, after this, she was again backed for the St. Leger, 25 to 1 being taken pretty freely; but Chamant, Fontainebleau, and Co., will be very different opponents from the pair of moderate fillies she beat on Tuesday, and we do not fancy her in the least. After her form at Lewes the Convivial Stakes appeared such a certainty for Redwing that odds of 4 to 1 were laid on her. There is no doubt that she is a roarer, and the severe course and holding ground naturally did not suit her; still, she appeared to be winning pretty easily until within a hundred yards of home, when she began to stop, and Fair Lyonesse, a daughter of Lord Lyon and Fair-minster, who was in the receipt of 10 lb., just managed to catch her and make a dead-heat of it. Redwing afterwards walked over, and the stake was divided. The North of England Biennial Stakes was called a two-mile race; but as, for some unaccountable reason, the quartette engaged cantered as slowly as possible for a mile and a half, it really resolved itself into a T.Y.C. spin, and Strathmore only just got home a head in front of Wood Anemone. The former afterwards receded some points in the Leger quotations, though, for the reason given above, no notice should be taken of this performance, and he has really grown into a remarkably nice colt; but we should fancy that his place at Doncaster will be about fourth.

It is impossible to conceive anything more miserable than the scene on the racecourse on Wednesday. Rain fell in torrents during the whole afternoon, the ring soon became a perfect slough of despond, and towards the end of the day the course was fairly under water in places. Fair Lyonesse could never make Strathfleet gallop in the Filly Stakes, and we are forced to the conclusion that Redwing cannot be quite herself just now, or there would have been no dead-heat in the Convivial Stakes. Sugar Loaf was made favourite of the seven which started for the Ebor St. Leger; but he had nothing to do with the finish, which lay between Sunray and Albert Edward, the former winning very easily indeed. By this time the course had become frightfully heavy, and the warmest admirers of Hampton began to think that no horse in the world could carry 9 st. 3 lb. successfully through such a sea of mire, so, when ten numbers were hoisted for the Great Ebor, the offers on the field became more and more liberal. It was almost impossible to distinguish the colours through the mist and blinding rain, but, as far as we could make out, Escort (6 st. 10 lb.) made most of the running at a cracking pace, and Glendale (8 st. 11 lb.) lay right away last. At the distance, Il Gladiatore (5 st. 12 lb.) and Mrs. Pond (5 st. 8 lb.) came on alone, a pretty race home resulting in a clever victory for Il Gladiatore. Agglethorpe (7 st.), pulling up, was placed third; but there is little doubt that Hampton, who once more ran a great horse, could have filled that position. The colt by Scottish Chief—Hawthorn Bloom, who has hitherto always been "doomed to be near but never to be first," made short work of his four opponents in the Prince of Wales's Stakes; and the remaining races of the day may safely be passed over without comment.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club Regatta was brought to a close yesterday week, when the race round "the Wight" for the Commodore's Cup was easily won by Colonel Markham's Vol-au-Vent (time, 4 h. 47 min. 8 sec.), the second prize being taken by the Florida (time, 4 h. 49 min. 58 sec.); and the race for yachts of thirty tons and under fell to the Enriquetta.

On Monday and Tuesday the Royal Albert Yacht Club Regatta took place. We hear from Southsea that on the first day Mr. Borwick's Neva had no difficulty in winning the race for 40-ton cutters, her time being 4 h. 23 min. 7 sec., whilst the time of the only other yacht that lasted out the match, Christine, was 4 h. 54 min. 46 sec.; the race for 20-ton cutters resulted in a victory for the Vanessa by a minute over the Enriquetta; the 10-ton race was won by the Lily, which came in three minutes before the Mildred; and Allouette vanquished Bayonette in the 9-ton race. On Tuesday, despite the rough weather, the regatta was finished; and the Julianar beat the Ada and Florinda in the yawl-race without taking time allowance from either; the Miranda coming to grief in the schooner-match, the Corinne won the prize; the Christine worsted the Bloodhound and Myosotis in the cutters-match; and the Corinthian Prize for 15-ton yachts, the competing craft manned and sailed by amateurs, only tempted two little yachts to start, the Fairlie and the Koh-i-noor, the latter of which soon retired in favour of Mr. Sinclair's Fairlie.

Owing to constant interruption from rain, two out of the three great county cricket-matches which were played at the end of last week ended in draws. This was specially hard on the Middlesex eleven, who could not have lost their match with Notts, as they had only one wicket to take, and had an innings and ten runs in hand. For the former, the Hon. A. Lyttelton (100) and Messrs. A. J. Webb (100) and W. H. Hadow (59), batted extremely well; and, on the other side, Mr. A. W. Cussham (67) and F. Wild (74) were the chief contributors. Kent v. Surrey was also drawn, after some heavy scoring on both sides, the names of Messrs. F. Penn (148, not out), Yardley (76), W. Lindsay (45), L. A. Shuter (88 and 30, not out), Lord Harris (64), and Jupp (91, not out), being most prominent. Gloucestershire defeated Yorkshire by nine wickets, E. Lockwood (23 and 82) being the only one of the latter eleven who scored largely; while, on the other side, Messrs. W. G. Grace (71), G. F. Grace (31 and 43, not out), E. M. Grace (53, not out), and Midwinter (68), all did well.

On Monday last Frederick Cavill made a second attempt to swim the Channel, starting at Cape Grisnez, and he is reported to have accomplished the feat in about fourteen hours.

The one-hundred-miles walking-match between Messrs. J. E. Dixon and F. M. R. Dundas was commenced at Lillie-bridge on Monday night last, and on the following day the former won by two miles, doing the distance in the splendid time of 20 hours 36 min. 8 sec, which is only about one hour and three quarters slower than the best on record.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

Mr. Gladstone visited the annual show of the Horticultural Society, held on the grounds of Hawarden Rectory, on Thursday week, but he made no speech, the reason assigned being the pressure of work arising from correspondence. The prizes were distributed by Mrs. Gladstone, and, the Mayor of Chester having proposed a vote of thanks to that lady, Mr. W. H. Gladstone, M.P., replied on her behalf.

Last Saturday, however, Mr. Gladstone made a long address on general politics. The members of the Salford and Over Darwen Liberal Associations, numbering over three thousand, visited Hawarden. At four o'clock the excursionists assembled in front of the castle in expectation of hearing Mr. Gladstone, and on the right hon. gentleman making his appearance, accompanied by Mrs. Gladstone, he was greeted with enthusiastic cheers. Replying to a vote of thanks for throwing open his park to the excursionists, Mr. Gladstone spoke of the autumn agitation of last year as an expression of the calm and sober judgment of the people of this country upon the Eastern Question, and dwelt emphatically on the necessity of keeping a vigilant watch over the Government, lest they should yet betray the country into war on behalf of the most abominable Government in Europe. The danger was that right-minded members of the Cabinet might be led astray by those who were not so right-minded. He hoped we might have a quiet autumn; but, should occasion require, the agitation of last year would be renewed in order to prevent our being dragged into war. His one word of advice to them was "vigilance."

Mr. Gladstone was visited at Hawarden Castle on Monday by about 2000 members of the Liverpool Liberal Association and of the Bacup Union of Liberal Associations, whom he addressed from the garden terrace of the castle on the subject of the borough and county franchises. Looking at the manner in which counties are now intermingled in this country, and the vast populations which have become so thoroughly borough people in character, he said, it was the height of absurdity as well as the height of injustice to adhere to the principle of exclusion which has hitherto been acted upon. England was in the main a self-governing country, and if it was badly governed it was the fault of the people themselves, and they must take the consequences if they elected a Parliament which proved unsatisfactory. He had confidence in the people of England, and he therefore looked forward with interest to an extension of the county franchise. Mr. Gladstone also referred to the Eastern Question, and alleged that among our Ambassadors and Consuls in Turkey there have been undisguised partisans on the wrong side, who have been misled by prejudice, and whose statements must be received with considerable reserve.

A deputation of London Irishmen waited upon Mr. Butt M.P., yesterday week to represent to him that the policy of Mr. Biggar and Mr. Parnell was popular among Irishmen, and to learn his views thereupon. In reply, Mr. Butt said he would neither lead the policy of obstruction nor have anything to do with it, though he was aware that the Irish in Great Britain were altogether in favour of it. He attributed his comparative inaction during the late Session to the illness which attacked him early in the year, and indicated that next year there would be more activity shown, perhaps, by raising the question of Irish grievances on the Estimates. He further said that the Whigs understood that they could not return to power without Irish aid, which they would have when they accepted Home Rule; and that when the Home-Rule members numbered eighty, Parliament would not be able to resist the demand of a united nation. Whoever attempted to divide the Home-Rule party would have as serious responsibility to answer for.

A Home-Rule gathering took place last Saturday at Glasgow. A procession, accompanied by bands of music, marched through the principal streets of the town to the village of Cathcart, about four miles distant, where a platform was erected in a field and various speeches were delivered. Mr. O'Donnell, M.P., said that the gathering was one of which Ireland should be proud. The assembly was such a one as might have gathered around O'Connell on the hill of Tara. Irishmen had conciliated the Government long enough. They now meant to stand upon their rights until they had them granted. Ireland would be the weak spot in the British Empire. He owed his supreme allegiance to the Irish people, and he would always appeal to them as his ultimate judges.

A letter from The O'Donoghue, M.P., published in a Dublin journal, has exasperated the extreme National party. He treats the Parnell and Biggar section with great contempt, and declares their patriotism to be an absurdity.

A public meeting, called by the supporters of Messrs. Biggar and Parnell, was held in the Rotunda, Dublin, on Tuesday evening. Mr. W. H. O'Sullivan, M.P., presided, and the speakers included Mr. Biggar and Parnell. A resolution was passed expressing admiration of the Parliamentary conduct of Messrs. Biggar and Parnell. Great excitement prevailed.

Mr. Laing, M.P. for the county of Orkney, addressed his constituents on the 17th inst., dwelling principally in the course of his speech on the present aspect of the Eastern Question. He expressed his satisfaction at the firm attitude of the Government, and said that, should Russia defeat Turkey, the former must not be allowed to dictate terms in Constantinople.

General Grant has accepted an invitation from the Corporation of Stratford-on-Avon to visit that town next month.

A handsome silver service of plate has been presented to Mr. John Howard, in recognition of his services as town clerk and clerk of the peace at Portsmouth for forty-two years.

Early on Wednesday morning it was discovered that the house of Mr. Charles Read, Rosendale-road, Bromley, Kent, had been entered by thieves, and plate valued at nearly £1000 stolen. The premises were thoroughly ransacked, the family at the time being abroad. Several keys, a jemmy, and other housebreaking tools were left in the library, and it is supposed that the burglars were disturbed whilst engaged in the robbery.

Until the return of the Court from Scotland in November the state apartments at Windsor Castle will be open to the public on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, between the hours of eleven and four. Free tickets of admission are issued at the office of the "Royal Windsor Guide," Castle-hill. The Albert Memorial Chapel is open every Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, from twelve till three. Tickets are not required.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Drapers' Company have contributed 100 guineas towards the fund for providing a new building for the British Horological Institute.

Mr. William Thornton, the senior churchwarden of St. Pancras parish, on Wednesday publicly presented a drinking-fountain to the vestry, in the presence of a number of the local authorities and the general public. The fountain has been erected in the St. Giles's-in-the-Fields portion of the St. Pancras Gardens.

The beginning of another great public improvement in St. Pancras has been inaugurated by Mr. Charles Greenwood, chairman of the finance committee of St. Pancras vestry, formally taking possession of the ground at the junction of Gordon House-lane with Highgate-road, which has been bought by the vestry for the purpose of widening the lane.

A public meeting having for its object the earlier opening of Kew Gardens to the public on week days and the removal of the brick wall recently raised upon the Richmond road, was held on Tuesday at the Kew Institute. The Rev. P. W. Knott, Vicar, was called to the chair. Resolutions in support of these objects were agreed to, and a committee appointed to carry them out.

A fête in aid of the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage, at Twickenham, was held on Wednesday at the Alexandra Palace, when, in addition to extra amusements, ten police bands played in different parts of the ground. The proceedings terminated with a pyrotechnic display by Mr. James Pain, the principal set piece being a representation in fireworks of the façade of the Police Orphanage.—The Drapers' Company has given fifty guineas to this orphanage, which now maintains 200 children.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers at the end of the second week in August was 76,862, of whom 36,212 were in workhouses and 40,650 received out-door relief. Compared with the corresponding week of 1876 these figures show an increase of 5, but as compared with the corresponding weeks of 1875 and 1874 they show a decrease of 5898 and 14,832 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 728, of whom 478 were men, 199 women, and 51 children.

Many of the late Lady Augusta Stanley's American friends have manifested a desire to contribute to the fund which is being raised for the purpose of perpetuating that lamented lady's memory in connection with the Westminster Training School and Home for Nurses. The list of American subscribers includes the names of Mr. Longfellow, Mr. Emerson, Mr. James Russell Lowell, Mr. Cyrus W. Field, Mr. George W. Childs, Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, the Governor of Massachusetts, Mrs. Burlingame, and the Rev. Dr. Osgood. A sum of 1000 dols. has already been contributed. We understand that Mr. Russell Sturgess, of Messrs. Baring Brothers, and Mr. J. S. Morgan, of 22, Old Broad-street, have expressed their willingness to receive subscriptions from Americans resident in or passing through England.

According to the return of the Registrar-General, 2611 births and 1309 deaths were registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 277, whereas the deaths were 276 below, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths included 21 from smallpox, 49 from measles, 24 from scarlet fever, 12 from diphtheria, 18 from whooping-cough, 28 from different forms of fever, and 194 from diarrhoea; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 346 deaths were referred, against 315 and 300 in the two preceding weeks. These deaths were 117 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. Different forms of violence caused 44 deaths. The mean temperature was 63.7 deg., or 2 deg. above the average. The duration of registered sunshine in the week was 39.1 hours out of the 101.9 hours that the sun was above the horizon.

A special general meeting of shareholders of the Metropolitan District Railway was held on Monday at the Westminster Palace Hotel, when a resolution was passed for raising capital to proceed with the works of the Ealing Extension Line, and a working agreement with the Inner Circle Completion Company respecting the Aldgate Extension was adopted.—The half-yearly meeting of shareholders of the Great Northern Railway Company was held yesterday week at King's-cross station. Lord Colville, who presided, explained that the reduction of the dividend was owing to the large amount of compensation that had been paid in consequence of the accidents at Abbott's Ripton and Arlescy siding. Some discussion took place, after which the chairman said the directors were still open to a fair offer of amalgamation from the directors of the Great Eastern Railway Company, but the Great Northern would give no guarantee, nor would they take the line over until it was put in proper order. The report was adopted.—At the half-yearly meeting of shareholders of the London and North-Western Railway, held on Wednesday, Mr. R. Moon, the chairman, spoke in strong condemnation of the policy of strife and competition amongst railway companies, which policy had, he said, spoilt the cake they had to divide. The report was adopted, and a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. on the ordinary stock was declared.

Mr. H. S. Northcote has succeeded Mr. Northcote as private secretary to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Colonel Wellesley, the British Military Attaché, left London yesterday week, on his return to the head-quarters of the Russian army in Bulgaria.

The Countess of Leicester on Wednesday laid the foundation stone of a convalescent home at Hunstanton, which is about to be erected as a memorial of the recovery of the Prince of Wales from his serious illness a few years ago. The Earl of Leicester, Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk, has contributed the sum of £1000 towards it, and the Prince of Wales fifty guineas. About £1500 is still required to complete the home. Preliminary to the ceremony, a public luncheon was served at the Sandringham Hotel, at which the Earl of Leicester presided.

The tenth annual show of the Battle Floral and Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday, by the kindness of the Duke of Cleveland, in the grounds of Battle Abbey, which was thrown open during the day to the numerous visitors who came by special train from Tunbridge Wells, Hastings, Seven-oaks, and other towns. The extra prizes offered to ladies only for hand bouquets was won by Mrs. H. Jenner, Mrs. B. H. Jenner, and Mrs. Luff; for table decorations by Mrs. Luff and Mrs. Tapner. The best floral device (a flower garden model) was won by Mrs. James Jenner. The prizes given by the Duchess of Cleveland for the prettiest and neatest garden either in Battle or on the Duke's estate were won by James Turner, John Harris, and William Gower; and the special prizes given by Mr. and Mrs. Brassey as an encouragement to cottagers for window gardening were won by Mrs. E. Foster, Mrs. J. Jenner, and Mrs. James Turner.

AN INCIDENT OF THE BATTLE OF PLEVNA: DEATH OF COLONEL ROSENBAUM, OF THE ARCHANGEL REGIMENT.
A SKETCH FROM INFORMATION SUPPLIED BY CAPTAIN DAHNHAUER.

SIR PETER PAUL RUBENS, THE GREAT FLEMISH PAINTER: DIED 1640.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

I have lately had, I can scarcely say the pleasure, but at all events the labour, which, if we delight in it, should physic pain, of reading through, from titlepage to colophon, the bluebook containing the evidence taken before a Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed to inquire into the operation of the law of lunacy as regards the security offered by it against violations of personal liberty. There were just 582 closely printed folio pages to peruse; and the pain at which I hinted needed a good deal of physic, since I can candidly say that I never read a more painful book in my life. Of the nature of the testimony proffered by the ladies and gentlemen who have been locked up in madhouses when, as they conceived, they were perfectly sane, it would not be permissible, just now, to say one word, as the Committee, in consequence of the late period of the Session at which their sittings were brought to a close, have deferred drawing up a report until next year.

Meanwhile, I should strenuously advise Mr. Charles Reade, Mr. Wilkie Collins, and others of our melodramatic novelists, to read, mark, learn, and digest the contents of this appalling tome. It has given me the horrors; just as I remember (it must be nearly fifteen years ago) having those same horrors after a visit to Bedlam, of which I wrote a description in this Journal. Dr. (afterwards Sir Charles) Hood and Dr. Helps, the chief and the assistant physician of Bethlehem Hospital at the period of which I speak, are both dead.

Among the subscribers to the admirable "Turkish Compassionate Fund" I find, in the columns of a contemporary, the name of a small philanthropist who signs herself "Ethel," and who, sending three shillings to the fund, expresses a wish that all the little boys and girls in England would give some of their pocket-money to help to buy food for the poor Turkish sufferers. Now, in the interests of all the little boys and girls in England, I must protest. Let grown up people subscribe as much as ever they can to this most beneficent object; but leave the pocket-money of the "small infantry" alone. I am speaking deliberately when I say that children are often made to hate the sacred name of Charity through the injudicious influences brought to bear on them by their elders to make them part with their little shillings and pence. It is impossible that they should understand the bearings of the cause to which they are enjoined to give support; and, secretly, they resent the flitching away from them of their petty cash. Read a chapter on that head in "Bleak House."

Will chicken-hatching by artificial heat, ostensibly so easy and so practical a process, ever have a practical outcome in this country? The question may be worth asking, since about every ten years or so we hear a great deal about some newly-patented machine for artificial incubation, and then the nine-days' wonder is reconsigned to oblivion, and poultry remains as dear as ever it was, which is about thrice as much as it should be. Meanwhile more practical foreigners are hatching their eggs by machinery at a furious rate; and I read that among the apparatus at an agricultural show held at Antwerp in connection with the Rubens tercentenary there was a hydro-incubator, the object of which is to supersede altogether the use of the brood-hen. By this machine 450 eggs can be hatched at a time; and the process is said to be as successful in producing ducklings as chickens. Artificial "brood mothers" to shelter the youngsters while feeding were likewise shown. Mem.: Did not Signor Carlo Minasi, a well-known musician domiciled in England, and the son (if I mistake not) of the celebrated draughtsman in pen and ink, devote himself to the science of "aviculture," and patent, some twenty years since, a "gallo-incubator" of some kind? What has become of Carlo Minasi and his invention? I ask because I want chickens to be a shilling apiece instead of four and sixpence. We are mainly at the mercy of the French for our eggs, which we import by the million instead of producing them at home; and as regards fowls and ducks, we are the abject slaves of the "higglers" and the poulterers.

Most pilgrims to the dear old city of Antwerp will remember at least the exterior of the edifice in the Marché de Vendredi with the inscription over the principal entrance, "Officina Plantina." This is the house of the famous Flemish printer of the sixteenth and seventeenth century, Christopher Plantin, which subsequently passed into the hands of the Moretus family and their collateral descendants, and has now been bought by the municipality of Antwerp for a sum of 1,200,000f., and thrown open to the public. It is said to be a wonderful old mansion, full of antique furniture, pictures, statues, engravings, books, printing-presses and types; and among the literary treasures are some 12,000 letters addressed to the Plantins by the greatest scholars of the Renaissance.

I am a bibliophile (I hope), but not a bibliomaniac, in the Dibdin sense of the term, and know very little about the value of the Plantin editions of the classics; but I know that I bought the other day, at an out-of-the-way bookstall, for ten shillings, a superb Plantin Horace, edited by Cruquius, quarto, bound in white vellum, embossed with gold, turn-over edges, and which one of the many book-plates inside the cover proclaimed to have belonged at one time to Dr. Samuel Parr. Was this a "find," Mr. Quaritch, or are Plantin Horaces "down" in the market?

Professor Graham Bell may esteem himself a very fortunate "scientist" indeed not to have been born in that sixteenth or seventeenth century at which I have just been glancing. His telephone, which has just been tried, with literally astounding success, at Plymouth, would have been thought three hundred years ago a little too magical to be "canny," and if the Dominicans had got hold of him as they did of Galileo it might have gone hard with him. Professor Bell's organ was in the Guildhall at Plymouth, a quarter of a mile distant from the place of meeting of the Mechanical Section, and, through the intermediary of the telephone, the strains of "God Save the Queen" were distinctly transmitted from the Guildhall to the section-room.

Whether this wonderful invention will prove a blessing or the reverse to mankind it is premature to speculate upon; yet it seems to me that Professor Graham Bell's apparatus must inevitably prove of signal advantage to at least four classes of society: I mean popular clergymen, popular statesmen, popular actors, and popular lecturers. Sir Boyle Roche's bird will be at length outdone; and public speakers will be enabled to be, not in two, but in half a dozen places at once. Dean Stanley may preach in Westminster Abbey, and York, Edinburgh, Chicago, and Calcutta may almost simultaneously listen to his eloquent periods; Mr. Gladstone may perorate (axe in hand) about the Eastern Question at Hawarden and be audible in London or in Dublin; and Mr. Henry Irving may play Hamlet ("To be or not to be" has already been declaimed by telephone) in as many provincial theatres as he desires without ever stirring from the Lyceum.

A great invention is made, or a great undertaking accomplished. It is for awhile, as a novelty, lauded to the skies. Then we grow accustomed to it, and cease to praise it; it is found that the invention has been superseded by some newer discovery, or that the thing of which we were all once so vain-glorious is past service and must be replaced by something else. This is the way of the world, and of all things sub-lunary. In a recent sitting of the Mechanical Section of the British Association Mr. Douglas, the Trinity House Engineer, very calmly stated that the famous Eddystone Lighthouse was about to be demolished. Smeaton's great structure has served its turn, and is to be pulled down.

I am sorry. The engineering reasons for the demolition of the renowned Pharos on the Eddystone rocks are, of course, adequate. There is nothing, it would seem, the matter with the lighthouse itself; but the particular reef on which it stands has been so injured by the waves that ere long the foundation (so say the engineers) must disappear, and the tower with it, unless it be removed. The announcement made by Mr. Douglas took the sages assembled at Plymouth by surprise. There is nothing to be astonished at; still it may be as well to remember that the Eddystone (first stone laid June 12, 1757; last stone laid Aug. 24, 1759) is only a hundred and seventeen years old; a mere baby among lighthouses. The Colossus of Rhodes was set up contemporarily with the Pharos at Alexandria, B.C. 300; and the last fragments of the Colossus were not cleared away (the Saracens sold the old bronze to a Jew) until A.D. 572.

"Spare the rook," says Mr. Frank Buckland, "and you will stamp out the Colorado beetle." I am decidedly in favour of sparing the rook, and indeed every other living thing that can possibly be spared (as a rule, we destroy about ten times more life than there is any need to take away), and for ages past the farmers of Norfolk have habitually encouraged the breeding of rooks as a reward for their services in freeing the corn-land from cockchafer grubs. On the other hand, the rook's own character is by no means an immaculate one. He devours unconscionable quantities of corn; and although a rookery is held to be a very picturesque adjunct to the grounds of an old country mansion, the birds have an unpleasant habit of eating the topmost and tenderest shoots of young trees, and, in a plantation, are a decided nuisance. G. A. S.

THE RUBENS FESTIVAL.

The Tercentenary Festival of the birth of Rubens has been held at Antwerp during the past week. In our last week's Paper we gave the programme of these proceedings, and our Extra Supplement was an Engraving of the great Flemish painter's celebrated work, "The Descent from the Cross," which is in Antwerp Cathedral. The Portrait of Rubens, by himself, which is presented in this Number of our Journal, seems to warrant a few notes, merely to assist the reader's memory, concerning his famous personal career.

It has been considered hitherto doubtful whether he was actually born at Antwerp or at Cologne, or at another place on the Rhine. The precise day of his birth, in 1577, was June 29. His father, John Rubens, was a citizen of Antwerp, and one of the municipality, but had been compelled, by the political disturbances in the Netherlands, to remove to Cologne shortly before Peter Paul Rubens was born. It has now, however, been ascertained that the wife of John Rubens, and mother of Peter Paul, had been left at Antwerp; and it is certain that the families of both parents belonged to that city. They were Roman Catholics, and he was, therefore, brought up in the faith of that Church, passing his youth chiefly at Antwerp. In his sixteenth year he was placed as a page in the household of the Countess of Lalaing, but disliked that service, and soon returned home. He chose to become a painter, and was the pupil successively of Tobias Verhaeght, Adrian van Oort, and Otho Venius, till the age of twenty-three, when he went to Italy. He had letters of recommendation from the Archduke Albert, the Austrian Viceroy of the Netherlands, to the Duke Vincenzo Gonzaga, of Mantua, who appointed him a gentleman of the chamber at his Ducal Court. Rubens now devoted himself to studying the pictures of Giulio Romano, of Titian, and of Paul Veronese, as well as other great Italian artists, both at Venice and Rome. In 1605 he was sent to Madrid, on a special mission from the Duke his master to King Philip III. of Spain. He had by this time acquired high reputation as a Court portrait-painter. Returning to Antwerp, he finally settled in his native place, under the patronage of the Archduke Albert and the Archduchess Isabella, an Infanta of Spain. Rubens about this time married his first wife, Elizabeth Brant, who died in 1626; his second wife, Helen Forman, was much younger. Both wives are depicted, with himself, in several of his pictures of domestic scenes. He was a very prosperous man, and renowned all over Europe. Between 1620 and 1625 he was much employed at Paris in painting historical pictures for the decoration of the Louvre and the Luxembourg. At Paris he gained the personal acquaintance of the Duke of Buckingham, favourite of James I. and Charles I. This led to his being sent to England, in 1629, as Ambassador to the last-named King, who bestowed a knighthood upon him, and commissioned him to paint the ceiling of the Banqueting-house at Whitehall. The allegorical picture of "War and Peace," which is in our National Gallery, was also painted for Charles I. Rubens was again and again called upon by the Infanta Isabella to exert his talents as a courtly diplomatist in her service, for which he was sent more than once to Madrid and to Paris. A multitude of the pictures, large and small, which were designed by him, and which are esteemed his work, must have been executed in a great measure by his numerous pupils and assistants. During the last five years of his life he was disabled by gout in the hands. He died in 1640, the sixty-third year of his age, and was interred in the Church of St. James, at Antwerp. Among his most eminent pupils were Vandyke and Jordaens, but the influence of his bold and commanding genius has been shown in a wide sphere of modern art, not confined to the Flemish school.

Her Majesty Queen Victoria has permitted photographs to be taken of the Rubens pictures at Buckingham Palace for the Antwerp exhibition of his works opened last Sunday. The King of Sweden, the Madrid Museum, the galleries of Oldenburg, Munich, Dresden, Cassel, the Hague, and Dublin, and several French galleries, have contributed copies of their pictures, as have the Duke of Buckingham and Earl Spencer. The Madrid Museum has sent not less than thirty new photographs. There are 1500 pictures known as the works of Rubens in existence, and the catalogue of the Exhibition shows the variety of subjects he treated. It is in the following sections:—Old Testament, New Testament, sacred history and allegory, Virgins, saints, fable, profane history and allegory, portraits, hunting-pictures, landscapes, miscellaneous subjects. There are many different treatments, which it will be interesting to compare, of the Adoration of the Magi, the Adoration of the Shepherds, the Descent from the Cross, and the Assumption of the Virgin. Besides the photographs and engravings of Rubens, some relics of the master are exhibited, such as the sword given him by the Emperor, his collar, the diamond he wore in his hat, his autographs, and a remarkable tapestry belonging to him at the time when, in the character of a leading citizen of Antwerp, he arranged the triumphal entry of Ferdinand of Spain. About 500 pictures by various other artists are exhibited, with objects of ancient art. There is also the Plantin-Moretus exhibition, in Plantin's house, illustrating the history of printing and engraving in the Low Countries for two centuries and a half. The literary and antiquarian Congress has been engaged in some interesting discussions. The inauguration of a bust of Rubens at the Antwerp Museum, and the ceremony of a solemn visit to his tomb, with the performance of a grand musical and lyrical cantata in the Place Verte, added to the pageantry of a street procession, with superb triumphal arches at the Place de Meir and Place de la Commune, and a columnar trophy surrounded with statues of renowned Flemish artists, in the Horse Market, have filled Antwerp with a daily crowd of sightseers. One or more Illustrations may appear in our next.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Our last Issue contained a brief abstract of the able opening address given by Professor Allen Thomson to the British Association for the Advancement of Science, which began its meetings at Plymouth on Wednesday week.

Sectional work began on Thursday, presidential addresses being delivered in most of the departments.

For interest, perhaps Mr. Pengeley's address carried off the palm. To hear him, the Mechanics' Institute was crowded, and he discoursed with spirit upon a subject which he has made wholly his own—that of cavern exploration. Mr. Pengeley is one of the few men who took part in the meeting of the Association at Plymouth thirty-six years ago. He devoted his opening paper in the Geological Section to a kind of history of cavern-hunting in Devon, where he claimed that this species of scientific investigation had its birth. Beginning with Oreston cavern, discovered in 1846 by the superintending constructor of the Plymouth breakwater, he mourned over the fruitlessness of the prolonged search made in that famous hole, and the bungle which was eventually made when, by a second discovery, a great revelation might have been expected. A cavern containing a large number of bones was broken into, but, unfortunately, there was no one at hand to superintend the exhumation of the specimens; the work was left entirely to the common workmen, and was badly done. Many of the remains were dispersed beyond recovery, the matrix in which they were buried was never adequately examined, and we were utterly ignorant, and must for ever remain so, as to whether they did or did not contain indications of human existence. He visited the spot from time to time and bought up everything to be met with, but other scientific work in another part of the country occupied him too closely to allow of more than an occasional visit. Mr. Pengeley, however, urged that many interesting discoveries had been made among the osseous remains, which, on a less extensive scale, were undertaken by other gentlemen. The principal of these was Mr. Godwin Austen, the well-known geologist, whose papers fully bore out all that Macenery had stated. In 1846 a sub-committee of the Torquay Natural History Society undertook the careful exploration of very small parts of the cavern, and their report was entirely confirmatory of the statements of their predecessors, that undoubted flint implements did occur mixed in the remains of extinct mammals in the cave earth beneath a thick floor of stalagmite. The sceptical position of the authorities in geological science remained unaffected, however, until 1858, when the discovery and systematic exploration of a comparatively small virgin cavern on Windmill-hill, at Brixham, led to a sudden and complete revolution, for it was seen that, whatever were the facts elsewhere, there had undoubtedly been found at Brixham flint implements commingled with remains of the mammoth and its companions, and in such a way as to render it impossible to doubt that man occupied Devonshire before the extinction of the cave mammals. Under the feeling that the statements made by Macenery and his followers respecting Kent's Hole were perhaps, after all, to be accepted as verities, the British Association, in 1864, appointed a committee to make a complete and systematic investigation of Kent's Hole, a cavern whose discovery had never been dated, and which was situated a mile from Torquay, in a small wooded limestone hill. Mr. Pengeley remarked upon the regularity of the deposits, and the invariability of the successive layers. The first course was a layer of limestone blocks and chips, which had fallen from the roof; then a layer of black mould, chiefly composed of decayed leaves and vegetable matter; thirdly, a stalagmite floor, from an inch to five feet in thickness; fourthly, a layer of charred wood, which was found nowhere else; fifthly, light red clay; sixthly, another stalagmite floor; and then the oldest of cavern deposits, composed of subangular and rounded pieces of dark red grit, embedded in a sandy paste of the same colour, with small angular fragments of limestone, and investing films of stalagmite, both prevalent in the cave earth. Large blocks of limestone were occasionally met with, and the deposit to which the name of breccia was given was of a depth exceeding that to which the exploration had yet been carried. The black mould yielded bones of man, dog, fox, badger, brown deer, bos longifrons, goat, pig, hare, rabbit, and seal. In it were also found numerous flint flakes and "strike lights," stone spindle whorls, fragments of curvilinear pieces of slate, amber beads, bone tools, including awls, chisels, and combs, bronze articles, such as rings, a fibula, a spoon, a spear head, a pin, pieces of smelted copper, and a great number and variety of potsherds. Hyena remains were found only in the stalagmite black bank and cave earth. Near Kent's Hole was Anstey's Cove, a cave open-mouthed, and containing signs of habitation by all kinds of quadrupeds. After describing the caverns at Brixham, Ash Hole, and Yealm Bridge, Mr. Pengeley summed up his views on human antiquity. The Kent's Hole men belonged to the Pleistocene times of biology, but man must have been in Devonshire before the hyena, and, perhaps, dwelt in Kent's Cavern ere the hyena had reached our shores.

Next in interest to Mr. Pengeley's paper came the Mathematical Section, which was opened by Professor Carey Foster, who quoted a number of illustrious authorities to prove "that, in the investigation of the causes of physical phenomena—or, in other words, of the connection between these phenomena and the conditions under which they occurred—the really decisive guidance was afforded by the study of their measurable aspects." The consequence was that, from the very outset of his investigations, the physicist had to rely constantly on the aid of the mathematician for, even in the simplest cases, the direct results of his measuring operations. Operations were entirely without meaning until they had been submitted to more or less of mathematical discussion. This was pressed home until it led to the no longer startling suggestion that mathematical processes might even be applicable to mind. "It, too," said Mr. Foster, "continues to move in a straight line, except in so far as it may be compelled by impressed forces to change its direction. To put the matter a little differently, may we not look upon that fact as illustrating what is probably a general principle of mental action—namely, that the human mind has no more power to create an idea than the hand has to create matter or energy; our seemingly most original conceptions being in reality due to suggestions from without? There followed a discussion between Dr. Haughton and Sir William Thomson on the method of measuring geological time. Refusing to move the poles in any direction, on the ground that it required more physical force than he had at his disposal, Dr. Haughton suggested that the question was to be solved by estimating the friction of the water upon the earth's surface. Sir W. Thomson admitted the immovability of the poles, but declared that in order to work Dr. Haughton's theory it was necessary to suppose that the continent was suddenly created. Dr. Haughton read another able paper dealing with the increase in the length of the day, owing to the retardation of the earth's motion, caused by the attraction of the moon. The subject of wave motion as related to the doctrine of energy was discussed in papers by Professor Reynolds and Mr. Woodward.

The Society of Friends, which is in great strength at Plymouth, gave up their meeting house to the Economical Section, which, under the presidency of Earl Fortescue, proceeded to discuss, under due reserve, that side of the population question which has of late been very warmly debated. Earl Fortescue dwelt at some length on the subject in the paper which opened the section. He held that over-population was not likely to arise, and that the means proposed for checking it were immoral. The remainder of the paper was devoted to an argument in favour of substituting the county for the municipality as the unit in local self-government.—Mr. Stephen Bourne, who followed, returned to the first subject, and on all grounds, argued against recent alarms. He put forth as a scientific, no less than a moral fact, that large families did best, because they gave a stimulus to production, and he pointed to thinly inhabited colonies to prove that the fields were still open for human development. In the discussion which succeeded it was contended that if our population were thrifty and provident we should hear nothing of over-population.

In the Mechanical Section a paper by Mr. Barlow excited great attention. Last year, he being at the Niagara Falls, his son fell ill, and he had leisure to investigate the phenomena produced by great columns of water falling a considerable distance. He was especially struck with the constant pouring forth from the chasm of jets of water, carried fountain-like to an altitude higher than the stream above the fall. He noticed also that vibrations or shocks shook at intervals the windows of the hotel in which he was staying. He determined to investigate the apparent coincidence, and he observed that the water fell at first in a compact mass, then it divided into spray, and fell into the chasm. It at once occurred to him that the water carried with it no small proportion of air, and that the falling weight of water, imprisoning the air, must compress it until it became, so to speak, explosive. His explanation was that the explosive air sent up jets of water, just as dynamite when exploded under water would do. This explained what engineers have been puzzled to account for—the occasional rising of what were called "high waves," such as, for instance, took the bell off a lighthouse near Scilly a few years ago. Water dashing against rocks imprisons air, which explodes, and sends forth masses of water more destructive in their force occasionally than the waves themselves, which rise more than thirty-five feet in the heaviest Atlantic storms. Mr. C. E. Bramwell complimented Mr. Barlow upon an explanation which he was ashamed to say had never occurred to him, though he had puzzled himself over the same mystery.

In the Biological Section Mr. Gwyn Jeffreys, the president, referred to the deep-sea soundings; while Professor M'Alister resumed the subject of embryology, drawing therefrom deductions in support of Darwinism.

The chief attraction in Section B (Chemical Science) was the address of the president, Dr. Abel, in which particular attention was called to the beneficial results of scientific research in connection with iron and steel industries.

In the Geographical Section, Admiral Sir Erasmus Ommanney, K.C.B., delivered an exhaustive address, in which he reviewed the progress of exploration and discovery. His remarks were largely directed to the course of Arctic discovery, in which he himself took a prominent part, having discovered the first traces of the unfortunate Franklin expedition.

A brilliant soirée, given by the Mayor and Corporation, closed the day's proceedings.

The work of the Association was resumed on Friday, but the genial weather had the effect of thinning the attendance in several of the departments.

In that devoted to Mathematical and Physical Science Sir W. Thomson gave an address, in which he contended that it was possible for life to exist on a meteoric stone down to the period at which it became imbedded in the earth. Mr. Preece next gave an account of the telephone, of which there are two kinds, one for the transmission of the sounds of the human voice, and the other for the transmission of varying musical tones. He traced the history of the instrument from its inception in 1832, by Mr. Page, an American physicist, down to the present time, now that it has been perfected by Mr. Graham Bell, of Boston. The great peculiarity of the instrument, he said, was its ridiculous simplicity, and this he went on to show by means of numerous diagrams and models. Mr. Preece said he had just returned from America, where he had conversed through wires thirty-two and twenty-four miles long. In Boston the telephone was used for business purposes, and he had himself so used it in that city. He was anxious to have spoken on that occasion with Exeter, but he feared it would not be possible to do this satisfactorily, because the wire would come in contact with other wires used for business purposes. It would be necessary to have the instruments connected by single wires before they could be extensively used. Sir W. Thomson and Professor Houghton caused much amusement by putting through the telephone a number of questions, the one with a broad Scotch accent, and the other in a rich Irish brogue. The experiments appeared to be highly satisfactory, conversation being easily maintained with an assistant who was about a quarter of a mile away. The attempt to communicate with Exeter was not so successful, owing probably to the reason explained by Mr. Preece.

In the department of Anthropology Mr. Francis Galton, F.R.S., delivered an address, which contained a record of part of his study of those groups of men who are sufficiently similar in their mental characters, or in their physiognomy, or in both, to admit one classification, as types of character such as are universally recognised as being exceedingly true to nature.

In the Chemical Section Dr. J. W. Russell described a new method of preventing the corrosion of iron by forming black oxide on its surface. In the same section Mr. Gladstone exhibited some candles, altered by long exposure to sea-water. Mr. Latimer Clarke had sent him some specimens of candles recovered from the wreck of a vessel sunk off the Spanish coast in 1702. They had remained submerged till 1875, a period of 173 years. The wick had rotted away, leaving scarcely any trace of its existence, while the fatty portion has become a friable heavy substance of a dull white colour.

Politics and Political Economy were not very popular, yet one paper presented to the Economical Section led to warm discussion. It was by Sir James Watson, on the improvement of the sanitary condition of large towns. He described how in Glasgow, of which city he was a few years ago the Lord Provost, an improvement scheme which has since become famous was carried through Parliament in 1866. This measure was the direct precursor of the Artisans' Dwellings Act. Its results upon manners, morals, and health, were wonderful, and the whole condition of the displaced populace had been improved. Crime was less general, the police and the magistracy had less to do, and by model lodging-houses and cheap tenements the poorest had been provided for. He urged that what had been done at Glasgow could be done all over the kingdom.

In the Economic Science and Statistics Section Mr. Hyde Clarke, F.R.S., read a paper on the Debts and Liabilities of Sovereign and quasi-Sovereign States due to Foreign Creditors; and in the Mechanical Science Section the president, Mr. E. Woods, C.E., gave an address on the application of adequate brake power to control railway trains.

In the evening an address was delivered in the Townhall by Professor Warrington Smyth, of the School of Mines, Jernyn-street, on the Mines of Devon and Cornwall.

In one department which met on Saturday a discussion took place with reference to the colouring matter in hair, and Professor Rolliston gave a lecture on the flora and fauna of prehistoric times. But the day was mostly spent in excursions. The Mayor and Corporation of Exeter gave an entertainment, and the Bishop of Exeter and Sir Stafford Northcote spoke, the former on the need of intercommunication between the clergy and scientific men, the latter in praise of the association as a practical as well as a theoretical institution. In another excursion members saw some gunnery practice and torpedo explosions in the Hamoaze, and then went to the Eddy-stone. A third party went to Dartmoor and Lee Moor.

At the meeting of the general committee held on Monday it was resolved to hold the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the association in 1881 at York, the city in which the first meeting of the association was held in 1831. About the place of meeting in 1879 there was a friendly contest between Swansea and Nottingham, and in the end Swansea was chosen. Mr. William Spottiswoode, treasurer of the Royal Society, was appointed president elect of the Dublin meeting next year.

The sectional meetings showed a considerable decline in attendance. The trains to Cornwall and North Devon were crowded, and left behind only a comparative few inclined to take part in that pursuit of high science which the association is intended to foster.

The most popular section of the day was the Economic, which has been drawn to enter into a complete discussion of the whole population question. Dr. Farr introduced the question in a long paper, the statistics of which were valuable. Dr. Farr is an opponent of the Malthusian theories, and the figures he produced proved that practically he has the country at his back. Humanity, on the whole, is increasing in numbers, but is nowhere multiplying itself so rapidly as in England. It will take France more than 300 years to double its population at the present rate of progress; Italy more than 100 years; Spain more than 93 years; Austria, 86 years; the Netherlands, 77 years; Prussia, 64 years; and Sweden, 61 years. The fecundity of England is much better. We shall be twice as many as we are in little more than 53 years, so that there are men now living who will in all probability see the completion of the doubling process. Dr. Farr objected to artificial checks, on the ground that large numbers increased national strength. He asked whether it would not be better for France to increase and multiply, replenish North Africa, and restore its ancient greatness, than to set themselves against the laws of national increase. "No," was his advice to the people; "keep up your numbers, and trust in God." Lord Houghton, who followed Dr. Farr, took exception to this line of argument. It was true, he admitted, that increasing population increased national strength in time of war; but he argued that the patriot was called upon to consider that there was another and not less important side to the question, and that social and individual considerations must be allowed their part in the discussion. Poor men with large families struggling for existence would not transmit health and vigour to their too numerous children, nor train them with that freedom and health necessary to their future wellbeing, nor place them in such a position that they would be able to make the world what it should be to them, physically and morally, intellectually and socially. These children suffered, and the question ought therefore to be left to individual prudence.

Mr. Bramwell next propounded his scheme for giving London an efficient water supply. He strongly condemned the expensive plans which seemed now to be in favour with the metropolitan authorities and with the Government, declaring that for most domestic purposes the water we already possessed was perfectly well fitted. There was no need for spending ratepayers' money in buying companies, or in bringing a waste of water from long distances. All we required might be obtained perfectly well from the chalk. Artesian wells were not unknown in London, and they might be made to supply all the wants of the city for drinking purposes. They would yield a cheap, pure, and constant, and a practically unlimited, supply of the best water. The plan was received, in the discussion which followed, with great favour.

The business of the day in this section concluded with a paper by Dr. Hancock, proposing that the law of succession should be reformed upon what he termed "scientific bases."

In the Chemical Section Professor Gladstone gave a paper in confirmation, on chemical grounds, of the nebular theory of the creation of worlds—a confirmation based upon recent discoveries of the spectroscopic. A nebulous mass made up of many chemical elements, gradually condensing to a centre—how should we find these elements distributed? The least volatile would form the liquid or solid nucleus, while the others would arrange themselves according to their volatility, condensing into cloud at various distances from the intensely heated centre; also, as Mr. Johnstone Stoney has shown, the gases would arrange themselves according to their relative density, the lightest gases being at the outside. In neither case, however, would the separation of the constituents be perfect for mechanical movements, and diffusion will always cause some portions of the less volatile bodies or denser gases to rise into the upper region. This is actually what is taking place in the sun at present. Supposing the solar system to have been originally a great revolving nebula of this description, condensing to a central sun, and forming from its outer portions smaller masses, such as the planets and their satellites or the comets and meteorites, we may expect these to consist principally of the more volatile or the lighter elements, with smaller portions of the less volatile or heavier ones. On arranging the elements according to the known or presumed density of their vapour, it is found that such is actually the case. The plentiful elements, whether non-metallic or metallic, have always low atomic weights; the less plentiful ones are generally heavier, and the very rare ones have almost invariably high densities. This is still more strikingly the case with reference to the meteoric stones, which are composed almost without exception of elementary substances, which are light when in the gaseous condition.

Mr. G. Jeffreys read a paper on the Fossils procured by the late Arctic Expedition, which elicited a discussion. Papers were also read by Commander Cameron on the Proposed Stations in Central Africa as Bases for future Exploration; by Dr. J. Kirk on the Munguo District of East Africa; by Mr. F. Holmwood on the Kingani River in East Africa; by Mr. B. Hartshorn on the Ancient People and the Irrigation Works of Ceylon. Most of the papers elicited discussion.

In the evening Professor Odling discoursed in the Guildhall on the new metal, gallium.

The Mechanical Section was crowded on Tuesday to hear Professor Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone. He said that, Mr. Preece having fully explained the constitution and operation of the telephone, he would describe the process by which the instrument had been brought to its present state. Many years ago his attention had been called to the formation of the vibrations of air during the production of speech. Then the idea of using electricity for the conveyance of such vibrations from one place to another arose in his mind. The speaker proceeded to explain in detail the failures he had encountered, the encouragement he had received, until every articulation, although somewhat muffled, was obtained, and finally, the present form, with its remarkable distinctness of expression, was reached. The telephone had been evolved from a consideration of the mechanism of the human ear. What ultimate form it may yet assume he did not know. He did not bring the instrument before the association as a perfect invention. It was yet only in its embryo state. Experiments and investigations are still being carried on by himself and several scientific friends who have generously given him their help, and he hoped that by the time the association met next year considerable improvements will be introduced. Proceeding to make a few experiments, Mr. Graham Bell first brought into requisition his telephone organ for the purpose of producing a little music. Mr. Preece, communicating with the post office, asked an operator to put the section into telephonic connection with the Guildhall, and in a very short time a verse of "God Save the Queen," as if played on a harmonium, was distinctly heard. A song was afterwards played, and the operator at the post office sang "Auld Lang Syne," repeated several times the sentence, "To be or not to be, that is the question," and read a paragraph from a newspaper. The song and the sentence were easily and clearly heard by those of the audience seated near the instrument, but the articulation of the paragraph was not so successfully followed. In answer to a question, Mr. Bell stated that the report that a concert had been heard in America by means of the telephone was not correct, nor in the present state of the instrument did he consider that possible, although he himself had heard at a distance of two feet from the instrument the full harmony produced by a number of cornets played together. In reply to the same querist, he said he hoped he should not be repudiated as a British subject. He counted it an honour to have spent the greater part of his life on this side of the Atlantic—in fact, he had not been in the United States more than five years. An enthusiastic vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Bell.

A paper was read by Mr. J. N. Douglass, Engineer to the Trinity House, on the recent history of the Eddystone Lighthouse, showing the progress made in its illumination from the candle light of Smeaton to the present apparatus, which has an intensity 109 times greater for the service of the marines, at only four fifths the original cost per hour. The late undermining of the rock and the necessity for the erection of a new lighthouse were referred to. In the intended new structure a greater elevation and range of light was proposed; also increased intensity equal to the present first-class lights, as now exhibited at the Lizard and Start. A first-class fog signal, would, probably, be introduced, for which the dimensions of the present tower are inadequate.

Captain Galton explained the elevated railway of New York, and Mr. G. Stevenson described the various advantages alike as respects cheapness of construction, facility and comfort in travelling, and avoidance of obstruction to the street traffic.

The other sections were thinly attended. The subject of the Colorado beetle was discussed, and there was to a great extent an agreement of opinion that the insect could not live in this country. The Rev. Professor Houghton summarised the results of the tidal observations made by the recent Arctic Expedition. An address on thrift was delivered by Mr. Bartley, manager of the National Penny Bank. Sir George Young, secretary to the Factory Commission, read a paper urging the advisableness of reducing to a system the privileges to work overtime which are given by the Factory Acts to particular trades. The importance of increasing the punishment of habitual drunkards formed the subject of a paper read by Dr. Hancock. A paper on the Bulgarians was contributed by Dr. Beddoe.

In the evening there was another brilliant conversation in the Guildhall.

Only two sections were opened on Wednesday. In the Mechanical Section Mr. Loftus Perkins claimed that he had invented a boiler which could not explode; and in the Economic Section Mr. Lawson Tait read a paper on Hospitalism, showing that large hospitals were dangerous.

The meeting of the general committee was held in the afternoon, and grants amounting in the whole to £1081 were made, at the instance of the recommendations committee, to promote research in connection with mathematics and physics, chemistry, geology, biology, statistics, and economic science, and mechanics. These grants are smaller than in former years, but it was explained by Captain Galton that the receipts had not come up to the amount received in previous years.

The concluding meeting was held in the Guildhall—Professor Thomson, President of the Association, in the chair. Professor Williamson, the treasurer, reported that the attendance at the meeting had included 161 old and 19 new life members, 238 old and 58 new annual members, 474 associates, 283 ladies, and 11 foreign members—making in all 12,171. The total sum of money received for the sale of tickets had been £1267. On the motion of Professor Williamson, seconded by Mr. Gwyn Jeffreys, an enthusiastic vote of thanks was presented to the President, the mover of the resolution expressing the intense delight with which he, as a student of science, had listened to the luminous address with which Professor Thomson inaugurated the meeting. The President, in replying, referred in feeling terms to the loss which the association as a body and science in general had sustained from the recent death of Mr. Gassiot, a gentleman who had done a great deal for science and who was also much beloved in all his social relations. As far as the meeting was concerned, he thought it but just to express his opinion that it had been crowned with great success. The meeting of 1877 then terminated.

THE WAR: MASSACRES AT YENI ZARA. SKETCHES BY THE "TIMES" NAVAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE WAR PASSAGE OF THE BALKANS.

THE HAINETOI PASS

THE MASSACRES AT YENI ZARA.

We mentioned, a fortnight ago, that we had received from Captain James Gambier, R.N., the writer of several letters recently published by the Times as "from a Naval Correspondent," a series of Sketches representing the horrible proofs he found on the 17th ult., at Yeni Sagra (or Zara) of the butchery of its inhabitants by the Circassians and Bashi-Bazouks, two days before. Some of those Sketches are now put before our readers on the opposite page. There is first a view of the small Bulgarian town, which is situated in the plain south of the Balkans, half way between Eski Sagra and Yamboli, and on the branch line of railway connecting Yamboli with Adrianople. The town had nearly 6000 inhabitants. Captain Gambier's letter of the 18th ult., which has been reprinted in the weekly edition of the Times for Friday, the 3rd inst., gives a minute description of the horrors delineated in our Engravings from the drawings by his own pencil. The three corpses, one that of a woman, found together lying in a barn—also, that of the wife of Monin, who had been outraged, and then slaughtered, and finally buried under a heap of manure in the farm-yard, and the body of a man killed at his own house-door, where he stood in defence of his family—these ghastly witnesses to the worse than savage cruelty of the Sultan's irregular troops are not to be denied. The testimony of Captain Gambier will be confirmed by that of Colonel Lennox and Lieutenant Chermiside, R.E., Military Attachés to the British Embassy at Constantinople, and Dr. Leslie and Dr. Meyrick, belonging to the Society for the Relief of the Sick and Wounded. It must be remembered that what has been done at Yeni Zara is not an isolated instance, but that similar wholesale orgies of wanton ferocity and foul licentiousness have taken place at Eski Sagra, at Tschirpan, at Kazanlik, which were lately flourishing towns, and in the villages of Kara-atli, Geula-Mahalissé, and many other places in that region. The total number of victims is estimated at several thousand, and they have suffered worse than death. We are unwilling to dwell longer upon the hideous details, but will rather quote the following general remarks from one of Captain Gambier's letters of more recent date:—"In most countries the sympathies of those present when wars are going on are drawn to the soldiery, and we picture to ourselves, when we have not seen the probably more horrible reality, a field of dead and dying, a starving or fever-stricken army. But here the horrors of war, since the Russians crossed the Danube, have, with one or two solitary exceptions, been borne by the rural population, by the helpless old men, the women and children. The young and strong men, Bulgarians and Turks, have both found safety in joining, the Bulgarians the Russian army, the Turks in becoming Bashi-Bazouks. Both sets have formed themselves into vast bands of merciless executioners, and under the protection of their respective armies pillage, murder, ravish, and destroy whatever comes in their way belonging to the other race or creed. From any hill-top the fires of ten or a dozen burning villages can be counted, while every road is crowded with fugitives flying they know not whither, and their lives absolutely depending on this or that move of the opposing armies. I have seen a large valley blocked up by hundreds of Moslem fugitives, resting in supposed safety near a Turkish army. I have heard soon after of some change of position of that army, and knew that it must have been physically impossible for those unfortunate people to escape the murdering Bulgarians, who are ever ready to pounce on the defenceless and wreak on them their long pent-up vengeance. Again, on the other hand, I have had ocular demonstration of the sacking and massacre of a large Bulgarian town, and needed only time to have discovered more abundant proofs. I hear on every side the same story—Turks murdered and defiled by Christians and Christians by Turks. I pass through villages actually by the hundred where nothing remains alive but the dogs and poultry, and where every house alike, Turk or Christian, has in its turn been ransacked. In the fields the most bounteous crop that Providence has given—partly, perhaps, to heal the sores of last year, if men would allow it to be so—lies rotting on the ground, while far and near the husbandman had disappeared, his cattle scattered, his stacks of winter fodder a charred heap, and his cottage a ruin; his wife and children, if God has been merciful to them, dead, and their dishonour forgotten; or lost in some mountain forests, where they pass their trembling hours in terror and starvation. As to isolated cases of cruelty and barbarity, it is impossible to record them, so innumerable are they and so irrefutable is the evidence.

"There is no denying that the Turks have a difficult time of it. The whole Bulgarian population rise like one man on the approach of the Russians—and, as I firmly believe, murder the Moslems, besides destroying telegraphs, railways, and giving every assistance to the enemy. It only depends on the situation of a Russian force whether there is a rebellion of the subjects of the Porte in that particular district or not. The Russians foster this rebellion in every possible way; and it is needless to say that they draw no small profit from these horrors, whichever way they go. If Moslems are destroyed, it is so many dangerous people out of the way; if Bulgarians or Christians, then so much more is Russia justified in her holy war. But I must in justice to Russia say that, though I have cross-questioned many Turks as to the treatment they received at the hands of their enemy, I have not heard one single complaint against them; and the fact speaks for itself, for I have met large caravans of Turks actually trying to make their way back to be under the shelter of the Russian columns. On the other hand, I have not met a single Bulgarian who would not fly for his life if he knew where to go; but the Turks will not allow them to leave their villages for fear of their swelling the number of the insurgents. It is a war which has probably had no parallel in modern times, where the natural hatred of race against race is fanned to white heat by the most powerful incentive to fury against one another that the world knows of—viz., a difference of faith, especially virulent in this case, which presents a blind and hideous superstition on one side with an intense fanaticism on the other. It is impossible to predict how or where it will end or what the consequences may be. As the Russians advance, the fanaticism of those blood-gutted savages from Asia, the Circassians, Zerbeks, and the men from Broussa, may prompt them to massacre all Gaiours alike. Indeed, they frequently speak of this war as likely to have that much desired result."

In his subsequent letters, dated July 23 and the 3rd to the 5th inst., which have been published, the same correspondent of the Times relates many additional instances of the monstrous inhumanity with which the Bulgarian villages south of the Balkans have been punished for aiding the Russian invasion. A special correspondent of the Daily News, in telegrams of last week, abundantly confirms the worst accounts of the massacres in the Eski Sagra and Tschirpan districts, and names four or five Turkish Beys and Agas, who are said to have taken an active part in these infamous doings. On the other hand, the Daily Telegraph special commissioner at Adrianople, and the Morning Post correspondent there, dilate upon the slaughter of whole Turkish populations—the violation, torture, and mutilation of hundreds of Moslem females and children—at places named Bouk le Nouk, Escheke, Okhanlie, and Tanti, by "the Russians," or at least Cossacks, as well as the Bulgarians. Such are the reports brought to Adrianople by the Mohammedan fugitives from Kazanlik and the Balkan valleys. We are quite astounded by the conflicting evidence on both sides, and the enormous amount of falsehood.

THE WELSH NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD.

Under most favourable circumstances, the Welsh National Eisteddfod opened at Carnarvon on Tuesday, continuing over Friday. In place of the ordinary temporary pavilion, a large iron structure for the permanent use of the town has been erected, at a cost of £7000.

Tuesday's proceedings were prefaced by a Bardic meeting at Carnarvon Castle. At its close the Mayor (Mr. Pugh), president of the day, was escorted by a procession to the pavilion. In his opening remarks the president alluded to the value of these national gatherings, as developing the latent talent of Wales and encouraging love for literature and music. He trusted that the other national institution recently brought into prominence—the University College for Wales—would be successful in obtaining Government aid. "The chief feature of the programme was a choral competition for one hundred guineas, which was won by the Carnarvon Choral Union, the Waulfawr choir taking a second prize of twenty guineas. The Carnarvon amateur string band won the prize in their choir, and their leader, Mr. Howell Williams, a medal for violin playing; Mr. D. Jones, Llandoverly, took the prize for musical composition; and Miss Rees, of Nenth, and Miss Williams, of Llanillyn, for vocalisation. Professor Macfarren, who, with Dr. Rogers, organist of Bangor Cathedral, was musical adjudicator, spoke very highly of the ability displayed by the various competitors. Literary honours were won by Mr. Owen Parry, Bristol, for an essay on the training-ship; Mr. Ashley, for a Latin ode; the Messrs. J. Williams, Carnarvon; J. Paul, Bangor; E. Lloyd, Bala; and W. Edwards, Llangefni; Mr. Whalley, M.P., and Mr. E. Eyton, M.P., took part in the proceedings. At night there was a concert, in which Mesdames Patey, Edith Wynne, Mary Davies, Marion Williams, Signor Foli, Eos Morlais, J. Sauvage, and Dr. Frost took part.

The Eisteddfod was continued on Wednesday under the presidency of Lord Penryhn, Lord Lieutenant of the county. The president, who was escorted to the pavilion by a large attendance of gentry, expressed gratification in finding that at these meetings there was no longer an endeavour to keep up the Welsh language by decrying the English tongue, in protesting against which he spoke when he occupied the president's chair at Carnarvon fifteen years back. He referred to the love of music so marked amongst the Welsh, and expressed his readiness to give assistance to any choirs who might wish to take part in musical competitions in England. The chief choral prize, one hundred guineas, subscribed by Welsh quarrymen for choirs from the quarrying districts, fell through owing to absence of competitors; and the chief literary honour, for an essay on the state of society in Wales, shared the like fate. Mr. Bryant, of Corwen, won the prize basso, and literary honours were carried off by Messrs. Clarke, Llangollen; Owen Williams, Festiniog; D. Davies, Caeromvy; Thomas Davies, Pontypridd; R. Williams, Berw. The medal for water-colour drawing was given to S. Maurice Jones; for oak-carving, to J. Morris Roberts, Llangollen; for enamelled slate-work, Messrs. Nicholls and Owen, Carnarvon; and for Welsh tweeds, Jane Roberts, Menai Factory, Carnarvon; and William Hughes, Festiniog. Mr. Pritchard, of Bangor, won the forty-guinea pianoforte, given by Messrs. Brinsmead for amateur pianists; Miss Jenny Davies, Llangollen, taking second prize; and Miss Cox, Threapwood Vicarage, third. The oration was delivered by Professor Mackenna Hughes. Mesdames Edith Wynne, Patey, Signor Foli, and Professor Macfarren took part in the musical arrangements.

Sir Llewellyn Turner presided on Thursday. About 7000 persons were present. The president, in the course of a long address, urged the necessity of introducing into the Eisteddfod programme subjects of modern interest, and to giving greater encouragement to the study of the English language. A prize for a poem in memory of the late Thomas Stephens, the Welsh historian, was awarded to Mr. Edwards, of Llangefni; to Mr. E. C. Evans, of Princetown, America, for a Welsh translation of a Latin grammar; and to Messrs. Nicholls and Owen, for enamelled slate-work. Miss Owen Criccieth was the winner in the class for lady authors; other prizes going to Messrs. W. Edwards, of Llangefni; G. Griffiths, Custom House, London; T. Nicholson, Brecon; and Miss Davis, Portmadoc. In the musical section, the winners were E. C. Evans, Princetown, America, and D. Jones, Llandoverly.

Baroness Burdett-Coutts has given another sum of £1000 to the Turkish Compassionate Fund, making her subscription £2000 in all. At the present time £4000 has been placed to the credit of Mr. Layard. The Bishop of London has consented to allow his name to be associated with the fund. To prevent misapprehension, the Baroness states that in the distribution of the Turkish Compassionate Fund all the victims of the war—Christian, Jewish, and Moslem alike—will be relieved, without any distinction of race or creed.

A second supplement to the London Gazette was issued on Thursday week, containing Orders in Council relating to the movement of cattle, sheep, and goats from the metropolis. The order took effect from the 20th inst., notwithstanding anything in the Metropolitan Cattle Plague Order, 1877. The Orders in Council of July 18 relating to an infected area in the metropolis, and prohibiting the movement of cattle in London from the north of the Thames to the south of that river, are revoked; and the premises in the occupation of George Bogos, cowkeeper, 15, Norfolk-street, Bethnal-green, are declared to be free from cattle plague.

The departure of Captain Howgate's Polar expedition from Cumberland Island, the first stopping place en route to Smith's Sound, is reported by the American papers. The winter is to be spent in Cumberland Island on account of its coal deposits, and the time will be occupied not only in meteorological and other scientific observations, but in equipping the colony it is proposed to establish at Lady Franklin Bay by engaging some Esquimaux families with their sledges, and a full supply of dogs, together with abundant clothing, to be made up by native women. Next summer the entire company will be transported by the Florence to Disco, where they will be transferred to a ship which is expected in June bringing colonists sent out under Government auspices to Lady Franklin Bay, their final destination. The present outfit is wholly private, except that the Signal Service Bureau has lent some of its instruments, and Commodore Ammen, of the Bureau of Navigation, has provided his combination sledge and safety raft. Captain Howgate has Captain Tysen, of Polar fame, for his sailing master. M. Ludwig Kumlein, recommended by Professor Baird, of the Smithsonian, is naturalist to the expedition; and Mr. Sherman, recommended by Professor Loomis, is meteorologist and photographer. The Congressional assent to an appropriation of 100,000 dols. is expected next Session; and although doubts appear to be entertained as to the expedition reaching the Pole even with the aid of a balloon, which forms part of its equipment, the plan of establishing a colony is generally admitted to be a "happy thought," on account of the ample returns it promises to science. The mortality returns it promises to the colonists are, it is to be feared, also ample enough.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

Now ready, at all the Libraries.

GLORY. By Mrs. G. LINNEUS BANKS, Author of "The Manchester Man." 3 vols. ONLY A LOVE STORY. By IZA DUFFUS HARDY, Author of "Glencalma." &c. 3 vols. A THING OF BEAUTY. By Mrs. ALEXANDER FRASER. ANNETTE. By the Author of "St. Olave's." 2 vols. WINSTOWE. By Mrs. LEITH ADAMS. 3 vols. HUMOR AND BRACKET. Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

SMITH, ELDER, and CO.'S POPULAR LIBRARY.

New Volume. Fcap 8vo. Pictorial boards, 2s. BRIGADIER FREDERIC: the Story of an Abolition Exile. By M. ECKMANN-CHATHIAN. London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

Ready on the 29th August (One Shilling), No. 213, THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for AUGUST. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and Frank Dicksee.

Contents: Emma; or, My Father's Sin. (With an Illustration.) Chap. XLVIII.—A Return Call. XLIX.—Wanted, a Sawyer. L.—On Some French Writers of Verse, 1830-1877. By Edward Dowden. The Princess Pauline. Jekinda and her Sun. The Poetry of September. Modifications of a Hindu, Prince and Seppie. By A. C. Lyall. "For Percival." (With an Illustration.) Chap. I.—Thorns and Roses. II.—These Eyes of Yours. III.—Dead Men tell no Tales; at least Thorne's is told by the Writer. London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

POPULAR NOVELS at ALL LIBRARIES.

UNDER A CHARM. By ERNEST WERNER. 3 vols. SISTER NATALIE. By Mrs. AUGUSTUS CRAVEN. 2 vols. WON! By the Author of "Jennie of the Princesses." 3 vols. THE HON. MISS FERRARD. By the Author of "Hogan, M.P." 3 vols. THE BREAKING OF THE STORM. By SPIELHAGEN. 3 vols. RICHARD BENTLEY and Son, New Burlington-street.

CHEAP EDITION OF MISS BRADDON'S NOVELS. On Sept. 2nd, price 2s.: cloth, 2s. 6d.

WEAVERS AND WETS. A Novel.

By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," &c. London: WARD, LOCK, and TRILKE.

This day (Saturday), Aug. 25, A YEAR'S LETTERS.

A New Novel, by Mrs. HORACE MANNERS, will appear in the New Series of the TATLER, commencing UG 3d. Publishing Office, 200, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

ASYLUM CHRISTI: a Story of the Dragonades. By the Rev. E. GILLIOT, M.A. "A book of remarkable promise."—Spectator. "The sketches of character are excellent."—Academy. "A really carefully written historical novel."—Guardian. "We advise novel readers to procure Mr. Gilliot's tale. The love passages are gracefully described."—Court Journal. London: SAMPOUR, LOW, MARSDEN, and Co.

PRACTICE OF POTTERY-PAINTING.

A Handbook by JOHN C. L. SPARKES, Director of the Lambeth School of Art, &c. Price 1s.: post-free, 1s. 1d. London: LCHENTRIST, BARNES, and Co., 60, Regent-street, W.

DR. BARR MEADOWS ON CHRONIC ERUPTIONS.

Remarks on the abuse of arsenic, mercury, and other reputed specifics.—G. HILL, 134, Westminster-road.

DR. BARR MEADOWS ON

HOMOEOPATHY. "An excellent expose of the absurdities of homoeopathy. Its arguments are unanswerable."—Bath Journal.

Cloth, post-free, 32 stamps.

DR. BARR MEADOWS ON AFFECTIONS of the DIGESTIVE ORGANS and of the SKIN. Cases and Commentaries.—G. HILL, 134, Westminster Bridge-road.

Large 8vo, pp. 724, cloth, 8s.; post-free; or, in half-morocco, 12s.

THE HOMOEOPATHIC DOMESTIC

PHYSICIAN. By Dr. J. LAURIE, M.D. Completely re-arranged and revised by R. S. Gutteridge, M.D. The most comprehensive Guide published for the use of families, emigrants, and missionaries, being free of all technicalities. The present edition contains, in addition to the symptoms and treatment of all general diseases, including those of Females and Children, many important new chapters, comprising, among others, the specific character of effects of all the new American remedies, plain Directions for the treatment of Accidents, and illustrations delineating the minor operations in surgery. Homoeopathic Appliances, Affection of the Eyes (with a description of the Eyes and their Appendages, and illustrations showing the various parts of the eye). Full directions are also given for the treatment of Diseases prevalent in Tropical Climates. A new and concise Dictionary of Medical Terms and Treatment, with leading indications of treatment prefixed to the various chapters and divisions. An Epitome of the above, 28th Edition, price 6s.

A Case of Medicine adapted to the former Work, in Tinctures or pills, price 2s. 4d.; in globules, 2s.

To the latter, tinctures or pills, price 2s. 2d.; globules, 2s. 10s. LEARS and ROSE, 5, St. Paul's-churchyard; and 9, Vere-street, W.

CONSUMPTION: its Proximate Cause and Specific Treatment by the HYPOPHOSPHITES, upon the Principles of Stoechiological Medicine, by JOHN FRANCIS CHURCHILL, M.D.

With an Appendix on the Direct Treatment of Respiratory Diseases (Asthma, Bronchitis, &c.) by Stoechiological Inhalants; and Reports of nearly Two Hundred Cases by Drs. Churchill, Campbell, Stead, Bird, Junia Maria, Gomez, Maestre, Parrot, Benaville, Galvez, Gualdi, Langi, Fabbrì, Mastrogrossi, Perrot, Vintres, Bougard, Tiratelli, Langi, Fabbrì, Mastrogrossi, Gualdi, Todini, Ascenzi, Rognoli, Valentini, Casati, Biasi, Borromeo Fiorilli, and Fedelli. Price 21s.

London: LONGMANS and Co.

CANCER—ITS CONSTITUTIONAL AND

SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT. By the late Dr. J. PATTISON. Prefaced and Revised by his son, M. MONCRIEFF PATTISON, M.D. (Un. New York).—KEENE and ASHVELL, 74, New Bond-street, London, W. Price One Shilling.

WHITE WOOD ARTICLES for Painting,

Fern Painting, and Decalcomanie; Screens, Book-Covers, Glove, Knitting, and Handkerchief Boxes; Paper-Knives, Fans, &c. Priced List post-free.

WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

SCRAPS for SCREENS and SCRAP-BOOKS.

A Large Collection of Coloured Scraps of the best kind—Flowers, Figures, Birds, &c. 1s. per sheet; 12 sheets, 10s. 6d. WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-Inn

Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d., or stamps. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Book-Plates, Dies, &c.—PUGH BROS., Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-Inn.

MARION and CO. undertake to put

Travellers' Collections of PHOTOGRAPHS, &c., into Order, and to make them into Volumes.

COLLECTIONS COPIED, Portfolios—Mounts—Frames.

Marion and Co., 22 and 23, Soho-square, W.; Agents for Bourne and Shepherd's Indian Photographs.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

ST. SAVIOUR'S CANCER HOSPITAL,

North and Station, Fulham, S.W. for the Treatment of Cancer and External Tumours by the Michel and other Processes, WITHOUT THE KNIFE. Out-Patients seen daily, from Ten to Twelve. Bankers—Cocks, Biddulph, and Co., 43, Charing-cross. Treasurer—Edward H. Palmer, Esq., 11, King's Chancery-lane. FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED. Reply sent free. L. WATKINS, Secretary.

LONDON HOSPITAL, Whitechapel-road,

E. (Mainly supported by Voluntary Contributions.) Funds are now greatly needed.

Annual Subscriptions or Donations urgently solicited. 1st and 2nd Yearly Income, about £14,000.

Yearly Expenditure, about £40,000.

Over 600 In-Patients (admitted according to urgency) always under treatment.

From 400 to 500 Out-Patients also in constant attendance.

Wards and other parts of the Institution always Open to the Inspection of Visitors.

Reports, with full information as to privileges of Subscribers and of the work effected by this Hospital, sent free on application.

A. G. SIBTHORPE, Secretary, Bankers—Roberts, Lubbock, and Co.; and Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co.

EDUCATION.—ST. MARY'S HALL

(Established 1849), 5 and 6, St. Mary's-road, Canonbury, Islington, N. English and French Institution for Ladies, on the principles of Queen's College, will receive (F.V.) the 1st September. Prospectuses forwarded upon application.—SARA NORTHCOTE, Principal.

HOUSE PROPERTY and INVESTMENT

COMPANY (Limited), 92, CANNON-STREET, LONDON, E.C. (Seven Doors East of the Cannon-street Station.)

CAPITAL, ONE MILLION. In 40,000 fully paid-up Shares of £25 each.

For the PURCHASE and SALE of PRODUCTIVE and PROGRESSIVE HOUSE PROPERTY, and IMPROVING the DWELLINGS of the WORKING CLASSES on the SELF-SUPPORTING PRINCIPLE.

Registered March 15, 1876.

WEEKLY PROGRESS.

Capital allotted: Shares, 10,000. Amount, £250,000. The Shares have been allotted to over 1000 Shareholders.

Estates Purchased: Number, Seventy-eight. Purchase-money, £274,473.

Reversion, net, yielded by Estates, nearly Eight per Cent. Current Rate of Interest fixed for second year on Shares, FIVE AND A HALF per Cent.

Remainder of Third Issue of Shares at £2 per share premium in course of allotment.

House Property bought and sold. For full particulars, and for Report of Annual Meeting, Prospectuses, Five Minutes' Talk, and Notices of the Press, apply to W. H. BASDEN, Secretary.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS' IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.

"The best and most substantial instrument produced." 9, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET, W.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

Violas, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarinets, Flageoles, Guitars, Banjos, Accordions, Guitars, Cornets, Saxhorns, Drums, and Musical Instruments of every description. Largest assortment in the kingdom. BUTLER'S Manufactory, 29, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free.

MUSICAL-BOX DEPOTS, 56, Cheapside, and 22, Ludgate-hill, London.—Nicole's celebrated Musical Boxes, playing best secular and sacred music. Price, £1 to £120. Snuffboxes from 18s. to 60s. Largest Stock in London. Catalogue gratis and post-free. Apply to WALES & McCULLOCH, as above.

LAWN TENNIS. ASSER & SHERWIN.

The Revised M.C.C. Laws, with Diagrams, post-free. No. 1. Net 24 feet by 8 feet 6 inches, standards, guy ropes, 4 balls, half a dozen balls, and rules, in plain deal box .. 11 6

No. 2. Net 24 feet by 4 feet deep, standards, guy ropes, 4 balls, half a dozen balls, and rules, in plain deal box .. 2 9 0

No. 3. Net 24 feet by 4 feet deep, standards, and guy ropes, 2 full-sized tennis balls, 2 ladies' bats, 6 balls, rules, &c., in plain deal box .. 3 12 6

No. 4. Net 24 feet by 4 feet, polished standards, guy ropes, 2 full-sized tennis balls, 2 ladies' bats, 1 dozen 1 1/2 balls, and rules, in polished box, with lock and key .. 4 4 0

No. 5. Full-size net, with standard, guy ropes, 4 full-size superior tennis balls, 12 covered balls, rules, in polished box, with press for bats .. 5 6

Ditto balls .. 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 15s.

Ditto bats 6s. to 10s. each.

Ladies' bats 6s. to 10s. each.

Nets from 6s. each.

ASSER and SHERWIN, 80 and 81, Strand.

THE WIZARD'S BOX OF MAGIC.—Full

Instructions and Apparatus for performing 100 capital Conjuring Tricks, one hour's amusement. Post-free, 18 stamps. H. G. CLARKE and CO., 2, Garrick-street, Covent-garden.

CLARKE'S LITTLE MODELLER.—How to make a Model Village, Railway, Farm, Foultry-yard, and eight others. 250 Engravings. Post-free for 14 stamps. CLARKE and Co., 2, Garrick-street, Covent-garden.

MR. STREETER'S DIAMOND

ORNAMENTS.

LONDON-MADE JEWELLERY, of exquisite design and workmanship. The only Jeweller in England whose stock consists solely of 18-Carat Gold.

ENGLISH KEYLESS LEVER WATCHES,

with all the latest improvements.

Of Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street.

"GOLD." By EDWIN W. STREETER

Second Edition will shortly be ready.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES

are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1853; Paris, 1857; Silver Watches, from 24s.; Gold, from 66s. Price-List sent free.—58, Cornhill; 250, Regent-street; and 78, Strand.

£10. BENNETT'S WATCHES.

In return for a £10 Note, free and safe per post, one of BENNETT'S GOLD WATCHES, perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship, with keyless action, air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.—65, Cheapside, London. Good Chains at manufacturers' prices. P.O.O. to John Bennett.

BENNETT, 65 and 66, Cheapside.

JOHN MORTLOCK

begs to call attention to the

"EVERY-DAY" DINNER SERVICES,

complete for 12 Persons, £4 15s. Colours are indestructible. The Pottery Galleries, 208 and 204, Oxford-street; 80 and 81, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

CHUBB'S FIRE and THIEF RESISTING

SAFES, steel-plated, and with their Patent Diagonal Bolts, are the most secure. Chubb's Patent Locks and Locks for all purposes. Cash and Deed Boxes. Price-List sent free.

CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, St. Paul's, E.C.; and 98, St. James's-street, S.W.

THE SPECIALITE SAUMUR

CHAMPAGNE. This innocent and refreshing Wine is matchless. The "Medical Examiner" writes: "Precisely the wine that is wanted by invalids and the public." It is the same price as the ordinary "Specialite" Sherry, free from acidity and heat, 3s. per dozen, upon the cash system, carriage paid.

FELTOS and SONS, Sole Proprietors and Importers, 80, Bishopsgate-street; and 6, Union-court, E.C.

SCHWEPPE'S MALVERN SELTZER.

As there are now many spurious imitations of this celebrated Water, consumers are requested to see that every bottle bears labels with Name and Trade-Mark—"A FOUNTAIN."

E P P S'S

GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.

JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.

BROWN and POLSON'S

CORN FLOUR, WITH STEWED FRUIT OF ANY KIND.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
OETZMANN & CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, and 77, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street. Bedding, Furniture, Carpets, Upholstery, Drapery, Furnishings, Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper, Hangings, Pictures, Brasses, Clocks, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout.

THE IMMENSE RANGE OF PREMISES formerly the EAGLE BREWERY having been REBUILT and added to their SHOWROOMS. It is now one of the largest Furnishing Establishments in the world. Comparison of price and quality respectfully solicited before finally deciding elsewhere. OETZMANN & CO. are enabled to offer special advantages to Country Customers in delivery of Goods by their own large PATENTED VANS, and fixing in position by competent persons. Descriptive Catalogue, the best Furnishing Guide extant, post-free. OETZMANN & CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.

OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

MAPLE and CO.

FURNITURE.

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNITURE.

New ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the Price of Every Article required, post-free. MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.

100 Suites of various designs in stock, from 6s. to 250s. MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CARPETS.

British and Foreign, of every description. 800 Pieces best Brussels, old patterns, 5s. 6d. per yard. MAPLE and CO., 147, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CRETONNE CHINTZ.

Just received from Mulhouse a Manufacturer's Stock of about 1000 Pieces, at prices varying from 10d. per yard. These goods are about half the price they were. MAPLE and CO., 148, Tottenham-court-road, London.

SILK DAMASKS.

The largest and most varied assortment at old prices. Satins, Silks, Cottons, of all Colours, in Stock. MAPLE and CO., 148, Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO.

CARPETS.

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S complete ILLUSTRATED FURNITURE CATALOGUE new and enlarged Edition, gratis and post-free contains nearly 300 Designs of useful, artistic, and well-seasoned Furniture, and also Estimates for completely furnishing any class of House. Orders for completely furnishing in any part of England, upon cash terms, are delivered, fitted, and fixed, inclusive. 71, 73, and 75, Brompton-road, London.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

WITH SPECIAL NOVELTIES and Patented Improvements. Without addition to the Recently Reduced Prices. The Cheapest and Best.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

WITH SELF-ADJUSTING BALANCE-WHEEL. Machine cannot be turned in wrong direction. Perfection for those Learning to Sew, and for Every Variety of Family Sewing, Embroidery, and Braidwork.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

REDUCED PRICE, from 44s. Cash. 44. With New Patent Triple Action Balance-Wheel. Which is Self-Adjusting in its Perfect Control by Learners.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

HAND OR TREADLE, with Self-Adjusting Balance-Wheel. On Hire at 2s. 6d. per Week, with Option of Purchase Without Extra Charges or Expenses.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

With a NOVEL THREAD-COCOON and Cocoon Shuttle-Case. The Latest Improvement. No Re-winding of Thread. Perfect Sewing, with Great Saving of Time.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

WITH SPECIAL IMPROVEMENTS. The New Thread-Cocoon. On Sale at all the Offices of the Company. Price per dozen or per gross. As cheap as Cotton on Spools. No Re-winding of Thread.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

CAUTION. BEWARE OF PERSONS WHO, HAVING NO GOOD TRADE REPUTE OF THEIR OWN, USE OUR NAME, "SINGER," TO PALM OFF COUNTERFEIT MACHINES of Inferior Construction Manufacture.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

EVERY SINGER MACHINE Has the COMPANY'S NAME PRINTED UPON THE ARM, And Impressed upon the Brass Trade-Mark Plate.

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

To Avoid Deception, Buy only at the Offices of THE SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY (formerly I. and M. Singer and Co.).

SINGER'S

SEWING

MACHINES.

CHIEF OFFICE IN EUROPE: 97, Foster-lane, London, E.C. AND 191 BRANCH OFFICES in the United Kingdom. Prospectuses forwarded free by post.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, having concluded the purchase (in Paris) of Forty Thousand Metres of Extra RICH COLOURED SILKS, is selling the same at unexampled prices. The shades are of the most distinctive character, and this purchase is specially recommended as being by far the cheapest Stock of Silks ever submitted. Prices, 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 5s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free.

ALSO, A LARGE PURCHASE OF THE RICHEST FIGURED SILKS is now being offered at 5s. 6d. per yard, amongst which will be found the most choice shades of White, Bronze, Tulle, Vert, and every fashionable colour.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, has purchased the Model Silk Dresses of Messrs. Pingat, Grange et Magentie, E. Pasquier, P. Convent, Barutel and Denney, of Paris, and the same are now ON SALE at less than half price. These Customers are of the richest possible description, which will easily be understood by a glance at the names of the artistes from whom they were purchased.

A LARGE STOCK OF FANCY DRESS MATERIALS in every variety of fabric, 10s. 6d. to 25s. the Dress. Rich Summer Gowns and other Light Fabrics, in White, Black, and Colours, 12s. 6d. to 35s. the Dress.

IN 22 NEW SHADES OF COLOUR. CACHMERE DE PARIS. This elegant material is all wool, beautifully soft, and richer in its colourings than any article previously introduced, 46 inches wide, 2s. 11d. and 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

FOR TRAVELLING AND SEASIDE WEAR. SCARBOROUGH SERGES (all Wool), at 12s. 6d. and 22s. 6d. the Full Dress. Patterns free. In all the New Shades of Navy, Bronze, Vert, &c.

VERY FASHIONABLE THIS SEASON. CASHMERE MERINOES, 46 in. wide, 17s. 6d. the Dress. Patterns free. The richness and variety of colour in this useful fabric have never been equalled.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET. Beige and Matisse Costumes, 30s. 6d. Cashmere and Silk Costumes, 3s. 6d. Middy Washing Silk Costumes, 42s. 6d.

SEVERAL IMPORTANT PURCHASES OF MANTLES AND JACKETS, in Matisse, Cashmere, Silk, and Velvet, at very Low Prices. Also, a large Stock of Cashmere and Silk Mantles, lined Fur, from 2 to 8s. PETER ROBINSON, Oxford-street, London, W.

LADIES' BELTS.—The Norwegian Jointed Belts, gold or silver, treble joints, 2s. 11d. A marvel. Sent for two extra. Ladies' Silk-Card Belt-Holders, every colour, gold or silver mounts, 2s. 2d. free. Ladies' New Dress-Holders, 1s. 1s. 6d. each. Galloon Trimmings, all colours, 6d. to 1s. yard. Gimpure d'Art Antimacassars, silk and satin inserted, each. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

ENGRAVINGS FREE. LADIES' ULSTERS, in every variety of Fashionable Material, 11s. 6d. to 35s. 6d. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SERGE and CASHMERE COSTUMES. The Little Costume, Saratoga, Gondolier, Toulon ditto. 2s. 6d. to 8s. Engravings and Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SEASIDE SERGES.—Our Royal West of England Serges, in all the New and Useful Colours—Viz. Navy, Almond, Drab, Black, and 100 other Shades. From 10s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. yard. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP.

WASHING FABRICS, from 6d. yard. Marine Stripes, Twills, Galates Drills, Lawn Cambrics, Cretonnes, &c. Patterns free. WASHING FABRICS.—The New White, Ecru, Trelia, Rivier, Damase, Cream, Cardinal, Tulle, Pink, Sky, and all other shades, for Morning Dresses, from 6d. yard. Patterns free. WORKHOUSE SHIRTING for LADIES' DRESSES, 6d. to 1s. Patterns free.

CASHMERES.—Notice.—All the New Dark and Light Shades in our celebrated Himalayan and French Cashmere, 2s. 3d. yard. Patterns free. CACHMERE, FULLED, and other Light Decharged and Becherie WOOL FABRICS, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. yard. Patterns free.

BLACK FABRICS of every description from 6d. yard. Black Unwearable Grenadines, 6d. yard; worth 1s. Black Cashmeres, 4s. 6d. wide, 2s. to 3s. 6d. yard. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

STOCK-TAKING.—BARGAINS. BLACK and WHITE SILK COSTUMES, 2s. 11s. 6d. each, including sufficient Silk for a Bodice.

MESSRS. JAY have finished their Periodical STOCK-TAKING, and, as is their custom on such occasions, they have still FURTHER REDUCED whatever SURPLUS STOCK may have been left from their Sale. Among the Bargains are:—HUNTER'S BLACK SILKS. FRENCH MILLE RAYE SILKS. BLACK SILK COSTUMES, with Silk for unmade Bodices. ROBES PRINCESS. FRENCH FANTASY BONNETS and HATS (Amortis aux Costumes). SEASIDE HATS. CLOTH JACKETS. CASHMERE MANTLES. SHAWLS. FUR-LINED, FUR-TRIMMED, and VELVET MANTLES, MODEL FRENCH COSTUMES. BAREGE COSTUMES, with Material for Bodice, unmade. SEASIDE and TRAVELLING DRESSES. BLACK-VELLIE EVENING DRESSES, a little out of condition. As the above-named superabundant stock is limited in quantity, Messrs. Jay cannot send on approbation goods which are specially reduced for the occasion.

THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, W.

EGERTON BURNETT'S ROYAL WELLINGTON SERGES. "The Court Circular," "The Queen," "Myra's Journal," &c., unanimously testify to the superiority of Egerton Burnett's Serges as par excellence the material for ladies' wear. Egerton Burnett, Wellington, Somerset, respectfully calls attention to these admirable SERGES. He has repeatedly had the honour of supplying them direct to the ROYAL FAMILY, and orders are daily arriving from all parts of the kingdom. Being woven from the finest wools, and of a permanent pattern dye, which neither rain nor salt water can affect, they surpass all others in appearance and durability. Prices from 1s. 2d. to the finest at 4s. 6d. per yard. E. B.'S HAND-MADE VIOLENE CACHMERE (FRENCH) and FUR-TRIMMED SERGES are most fashionable. A SPECIAL STRONG MAKE IS MADE FOR BOYS' AND GENTLEMEN'S SUITS, 46 in., from 3s. 6d. per yard. Pattern-Books of the various makes and shades sent free by post, and carriage is paid to Bristol or London on parcels over 2s. Goods packed for exportation.

EGERTON BURNETT, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

"WEAR-RESISTING" (Regis.) BOYS' SUITS. Suit for a Boy 3 ft. 8 in. in height, C Class, 27s.; D Class, 31s. Prices varying according to height. Patterns, &c., post-free. SAMUEL BROTHERS, Sydenham House, 55 and 57, Ludgate-hill.

URGENT MOURNING. "ON RECEIPT OF LETTER TELEGRAM." MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on approbation—no matter the distance—with an excellent fitting Dressmaker (if required), without extra charge. PETER ROBINSON, 225, 226, 227, Regent-street, London.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by PETER ROBINSON, upon the most advantageous terms to Families. The Court and Family Mourning Warehouse, 225, 226, 227, Regent-street, London.

BLACK SILKS. A Large Consignment from a Lyons Manufacturer, the best makes, will be sold considerably under value. 370 pieces at 6s. 6d.; formerly 8s. 6d. 220 pieces at 3s. 9d.; formerly 4s. 11d. Also the following, which are remarkably cheap:— 2s. 11d.; formerly 3s. 6d. 3s. 3d.; formerly 4s. 6d. 4s. 6d.; formerly 5s. 6d. 5s. 6d.; formerly 6s. 6d. Patterns free. At PETER ROBINSON'S, OF REGENT-STREET.

FOR YOUNG LADIES. PRETTY GRISAILLE SILKS, 2s. 6d., 2s. 9d., 3s. 3d. PETER ROBINSON'S, OF REGENT-STREET.

FOR YOUNG LADIES. COSTUMES, beautifully Cut and Fashioned. In the new Grisaille Silks, at 4 and 4 1/2s. 5 yards for Bodice. At PETER ROBINSON'S, OF REGENT-STREET.

A BLACK SILK COSTUME, MADE OF RICH LYONS SILK. for 5s.; formerly 6s. 6d. for 7s.; formerly 8s. 6d. for 10s.; formerly 11s. 6d. Perfectly New Styles. Exquisitely cut and trimmed by French Artists. Photographs and Patterns of the Silk. Address—PETER ROBINSON, OF REGENT-STREET, Nos. 226 to 232.

THE NEW CRAPE. The Pure Silk Gordian Crape, for Widows and Families. Its advantages are—that it is made of Silk so pure that it will not crease when sat upon, nor spot with rain. It is a richer black than dress and the gummied appearance so objectionable in other Crape. The wear of every day is guaranteed. The Gordian Crape is a Specialty, only to be obtained at PETER ROBINSON'S, OF REGENT-STREET. THE MOURNING WAREHOUSE, Nos. 226 to 232. Excellent qualities at 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d. Patterns free.

FUR-LINED CLOAKS at Summer Prices. Good useful Cloaks at 60s. 6d. and 45s. 6d.

SEMI-FITTING SEAL PALETOTS, 33 inches long, for 9s. 33 inches long, for 10s. 6d. At PETER ROBINSON'S, OF REGENT-STREET.

G A S K and G A S K. NEW TRAVELLING, YACHTING, and SEASIDE COSTUMES, made of the New Vigona Cloth, Autumn Serges, &c., from quite new and elegant Paris models, from 21s. to 54s. 6d. FUR-LINED CLOAKS and SEAL SKINS are being sold at the Lowest Summer Prices. The remainder of the surplus stock is being cleared off at EXTREME SALE PRICES. 55, 56, 60, 61, 62, 63, Oxford-street; 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, Wells-street.

SWAN and EDGAR are now showing some Great Novelties in TRAVELLING and SEASIDE DRESSES, all wool Ulsters, new shapes, at 12s. 6d., 21s., 27s. 6d. A splendid stock of Seal Skin Paletots, the new shape, commencing at 9s.; and New Dress Materials for Early Autumn Wear. Also New Goods in Silks, Costumes, Mantles, Lace, Ribbons, Bad Dresses, Millinery, &c. Patterns sent to any part accessible by railway. Piccadilly and Regent-street, London.

HENRY GLAVE'S "NOTICE" OF THE SALE OF HENDERSON AND LANYON'S STOCK, of 167 Upper-street, Islington. 543, 535, 536, and 537, New Oxford-street.

HENRY GLAVE'S Purchase of HENDERSON AND LANYON'S STOCK. The Sale of this Stock is now proceeding, and contains Ladies' and Children's Silks, Satin, Cambric, and other Fancy Skirts; all kinds of Ladies' and Children's Underclothing; Ribbons, Fancy Bags, Baskets, Berlin Wool, Scotch Yarn, Worked Cushions, Slippers, Trimmings, Laces, Ornaments, Fringes; Furniture Gimps and Trimmings of all kinds; plain and fancy Haberdashery, with various other lots of useful goods; and, having purchased this stock by Public Tender at the large discount of 75 per cent, we have determined to give our customers all the advantage. 534, 535, 536, and 537, NEW OXFORD-STREET.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA. "The most perfect fitting made."—Observer. Gentlemen desirous of purchasing Shirts of the best quality should try Ford's Eureka. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s., 5s. 6d., 6s., 6s. 6d., 7s., 7s. 6d., 8s., 8s. 6d., 9s., 9s. 6d., 10s., 10s. 6d., 11s., 11s. 6d., 12s., 12s. 6d., 13s., 13s. 6d., 14s., 14s. 6d., 15s., 15s. 6d., 16s., 16s. 6d., 17s., 17s. 6d., 18s., 18s. 6d., 19s., 19s. 6d., 20s., 20s. 6d., 21s., 21s. 6d., 22s., 22s. 6d., 23s., 23s. 6d., 24s., 24s. 6d., 25s., 25s. 6d., 26s., 26s. 6d., 27s., 27s. 6d., 28s., 28s. 6d., 29s., 29s. 6d., 30s., 30s. 6d., 31s., 31s. 6d., 32s., 32s. 6d., 33s., 33s. 6d., 34s., 34s. 6d., 35s., 35s. 6d., 36s., 36s. 6d., 37s., 37s. 6d., 38s., 38s. 6d., 39s., 39s. 6d., 40s., 40s. 6d., 41s., 41s. 6d., 42s., 42s. 6d., 43s., 43s. 6d., 44s., 44s. 6d., 45s., 45s. 6d., 46s., 46s. 6d., 47s., 47s. 6d., 48s., 48s. 6d., 49s., 49s. 6d., 50s., 50s. 6d., 51s., 51s. 6d., 52s., 52s. 6d., 53s., 53s. 6d., 54s., 54s. 6d., 55s., 55s. 6d., 56s., 56s. 6d., 57s., 57s. 6d., 58s., 58s. 6d., 59s., 59s. 6d., 60s., 60s. 6d., 61s., 61s. 6d., 62s., 62s. 6d., 63s., 63s. 6d., 64s., 64s. 6d., 65s., 65s. 6d., 66s., 66s. 6d., 67s., 67s. 6d., 68s., 68s. 6d., 69s., 69s. 6d., 70s., 70s. 6d., 71s., 71s. 6d., 72s., 72s. 6d., 73s., 73s. 6d., 74s., 74s. 6d., 75s., 75s. 6d., 76s., 76s. 6d., 77s., 77s. 6d., 78s., 78s. 6d., 79s., 79s. 6d., 80s., 80s. 6d., 81s., 81s. 6d., 82s., 82s. 6d., 83s., 83s. 6d., 84s., 84s. 6d., 85s., 85s. 6d., 86s., 86s. 6d., 87s., 87s. 6d., 88s., 88s. 6d., 89s., 89s. 6d., 90s., 90s. 6d., 91s., 91s. 6d., 92s., 92s. 6d., 93s., 93s. 6d., 94s., 94s. 6d., 95s., 95s. 6d., 96s., 96s. 6d., 97s., 97s. 6d., 98s., 98s. 6d., 99s., 99s. 6d., 100s., 100s. 6d., 101s., 101s. 6d., 102s., 102s. 6d., 103s., 103s. 6d., 104s., 104s. 6d., 105s., 105s. 6d., 106s., 106s. 6d., 107s., 107s. 6d., 108s., 108s. 6d., 109s., 109s. 6d., 110s., 110s. 6d., 111s., 111s. 6d., 112s., 112s. 6d., 113s., 113s. 6d., 114s., 114s. 6d., 115s., 115s. 6d., 116s., 116s. 6d., 117s., 117s. 6d., 118s., 118s. 6d., 119s., 119s. 6d., 120s., 120s. 6d., 121s., 121s. 6d., 122s., 122s. 6d., 123s., 123s. 6d., 124s., 124s. 6d., 125s., 125s. 6d., 126s., 126s. 6d., 127s., 127s. 6d., 128s., 128s. 6d., 129s., 129s. 6d., 130s., 130s. 6d., 131s., 131s. 6d., 132s., 132s. 6d., 133s., 133s. 6d., 134s., 134s. 6d., 135s., 135s. 6d., 136s., 136s. 6d., 137s., 137s. 6d., 138s., 138s. 6d., 139s., 139s. 6d., 140s., 140s. 6d., 141s., 141s. 6d., 142s., 142s. 6d., 143s., 143s. 6d., 144s., 144s. 6d., 145s., 145s. 6d., 146s., 146s. 6d., 147s., 147s. 6d., 148s., 148s. 6d., 149s., 149s. 6d., 150s., 150s. 6d., 151s., 151s. 6d., 152s., 152s. 6d., 153s., 153s. 6d., 154s., 154s. 6d., 155s., 155s. 6d., 156s., 156s. 6d., 157s., 157s. 6d., 158s., 158s. 6d., 159s., 159s. 6d., 160s., 160s. 6d., 161s., 161s. 6d., 162s., 162s. 6d., 163s., 163s. 6d., 164s., 164s. 6d., 165s., 165s. 6d., 166s., 166s. 6d., 167s., 167s. 6d., 168s., 168s. 6d., 169s., 169s. 6d., 170s., 170s. 6d., 171s., 171s. 6d., 172s., 172s. 6d., 173s., 173s. 6d., 174s., 174s. 6d., 175s., 175s. 6d., 176s., 176s. 6d., 177s., 177s. 6d., 178s., 178s. 6d., 179s., 179s. 6d., 180s., 180s. 6d., 181s., 181s. 6d., 182s., 182s. 6d., 183s., 183s. 6d., 184s., 184s. 6d., 185s., 185s. 6d., 186s., 186s. 6d., 187s., 187s. 6d., 188s., 188s. 6d., 189s., 189s. 6d., 190s., 190s. 6d., 191s., 191s. 6d., 192s., 192s. 6d., 193s., 193s. 6d., 194s., 194s. 6d., 195s., 195s. 6d., 196s., 196s. 6d., 197s., 197s. 6d., 198s., 198s. 6d., 199s., 199s. 6d., 200s., 200s. 6d., 201s., 201s. 6d., 202s., 202s. 6d., 203s., 203s. 6d., 204s., 204s. 6d., 205s., 205s. 6d., 206s., 206s. 6d., 207s., 207s. 6d., 208s., 208s. 6d., 209s., 209s. 6d., 210s., 210s. 6d., 211s., 211s. 6d., 212s., 212s. 6d., 213s., 213s. 6d., 214s., 214s. 6d., 215s., 215s. 6d., 216s., 216s. 6d., 217s., 217s. 6d., 218s., 218s. 6d., 219s., 219s. 6d., 220s., 220s. 6d., 221s., 221s. 6d., 222s., 222s. 6d., 223s., 223s. 6d., 224s., 224s. 6d., 225s., 225s. 6d., 226s., 226s. 6d., 227s., 227s. 6d., 228s., 228s. 6d., 229s., 229s. 6d., 230s., 230s. 6d., 231s., 231s. 6d., 232s., 232s. 6d., 233s., 233s. 6d., 234s., 234s. 6d., 235s., 235s. 6d., 236s., 236s. 6d., 237s., 237s. 6d., 238s., 238s. 6d., 239s., 239s. 6d., 240s., 240s. 6d., 241s., 241s. 6d., 242s., 242s. 6d., 243s., 243s. 6d., 244s., 244s. 6d., 245s., 245s. 6d., 246s., 246s. 6d., 247s., 247s. 6d., 248s., 248s. 6d., 249s., 249s. 6d., 250s., 250s. 6d., 251s., 251s. 6d., 252s., 252s. 6d., 253s., 253s. 6d., 254s., 254s. 6d., 255s., 255s. 6d., 256s., 256s. 6d., 257s., 257s. 6

THE NEW MEMBER FOR GRIMSBY.

The recent election to the borough of Great Grimsby, as was lately announced, has given a seat in the House of Commons to Mr. Alfred Mellor Watkin, son of Sir Edward Watkin, M.P. for Hythe, the chairman of the South-Eastern, Metropolitan, and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Companies. Mr. Alfred Watkin is thirty or thirty-one years of age. He has devoted himself to practical engineering, and has achieved some reputation in that department. He is the author of several treatises on some details of mechanical science applied to the working of railways. He is married to a daughter of the Very Rev. Dr. Payne Smith, Dean of Canterbury. Though he has not yet taken any active part in political public life, he enters Parliament as a supporter of the Liberal party, under the leadership of Lord Hartington.

The portrait is from a photograph by Mr. F. E. Friston, of Grimsby.

THE CONSPIRACY CASE AT BOW-STREET.

The chief magistrate at Bow-street Police Court, Sir James Ingham, has been engaged many days in a preliminary examination of the charges and evidence against three officers of the Detective Police, who are accused of partaking in a fraudulent conspiracy. They are John Meiklejohn, an Inspector of the Metropolitan Police, and also Superintendent of the Midland Railway Police; Nathaniel Druscovich, a Sergeant of Police; and Inspector William Palmer; besides whom, a solicitor, named Edward Froggatt, of Argyll-street, is accused of being in the conspiracy. The principal charge is that of conspiring together to defeat the ends of justice in the recent "turf frauds," for participation in which four men—Harry Benson, William and Frederick Kurr, and Charles Bale—were sent to penal servitude after trial at the Old Bailey in April last, Benson being sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment, and the others to ten years' each. The "turf frauds" were in effect a conspiracy to obtain from the Countess de Goncourt, a French lady of property, various sums of money, on the pretence that the conspirators were largely engaged in betting "operations" on the turf, in the profits of which it was promised Madame de Goncourt should share on supplying part of the funds to work with. At first genuine remittances were forwarded to her as the result of the "operations," but afterwards worthless cheques were sent. This was the case in which the men engaged in the frauds had a sham newspaper printed, containing professed particulars of racing, to be forwarded to their dupes in France. It bore the number 1713, contained ordinary articles, advertisements, and notices of different races. The charges now under investigation are the result of some disclosures made by William Kurr since his conviction, alleging that the prisoner Meiklejohn received £500 from one of the convicts. Druscovich, who had been instructed to take charge of the inquiry into the betting frauds, was introduced by Meiklejohn, as Kurr says, to the men who were carrying them on; and Kurr also alleges that Palmer gave information which enabled them at first to escape. Froggatt is charged with tampering with witnesses at the trial of the four convicts, and with an attempt, by dictating a false telegram, to procure the release of Benson and his companions when they had been arrested at Rotterdam. At Bow-street Mr. Poland is conducting the prosecution on behalf of the Treasury; Mr. Besley and Mr. Grain appear for Palmer; Mr. Montagu Williams and Mr. Walter Ballantine for Meiklejohn; Mr. St. John Wontner for Druscovich; and Mr. George Lewis, jun., for Froggatt. In support of the charges against the defendants, the convicts William Kurr and Harry Benson have been brought up from Millbank Penitentiary, and both appeared in the witness's box on Saturday last, but Kurr had been examined on the previous days. They wore the dress of the convict prison, and their appearance caused a sensation among the crowd of spectators in court. Both are young men; Kurr is about twenty-six years of age, and Benson, a Jew, is thirty. We give an illustration of the scene at the police court on one of the days last week occupied with this inquiry. The magistrate, Sir James Ingham, is represented at the extreme right-hand side of the Engraving, holding a double eye-glass in his hand, while he listens to Mr. Montagu Williams, who stands at the table below, cross-examining the witness Kurr. The learned counsel does not wear a wig and gown, nor do any of the other barristers. Mr. Besley sits at the left hand of Mr. Williams; Mr. Poland, engaged in the official prosecution, is at the near end of the table, and seems rising to speak more closely with the learned gentleman beside him. The convict Kurr is in the witness-box, leaning with his elbow on the front rail, and listening to the question put by Mr. Williams. Two of the prison warders stand beside him; in front of them is a short-hand writer. The three accused Detective Police Officers, Meiklejohn, Druscovich, and Palmer, appear in the prisoners' dock, towards the left-hand side of the Engraving; Meiklejohn's figure is partly hidden; Druscovich, a man with thick black hair and heavy moustache, sits with his head supported by his hand; Palmer lounges with folded arms leaning on the front of the dock. The solicitor, Froggatt, sits rather back in the dock; a warder or officer of the Court stands next him. The inquiry has been constantly attended by as many spectators as could get admission, and by some persons of rank. On Saturday, the eleventh day, it was again adjourned to the latter days of this week, but Palmer was admitted to bail.

MR. ALFRED MELLOR WATKIN, M.P. FOR GRIMSBY.

THE DETECTIVE POLICE OFFICERS CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY, AT BOW-STREET POLICE COURT: EXAMINATION OF THE CONVICT KURR.

EMIGRANT GIRLS IN CANADA.

The beneficent labours of Miss Rye, in managing and personally superintending the industrial emigration of destitute female children and grown-up girls to the British colonies, have frequently been noticed. She has repeatedly visited both Canada and Australia, in charge of large numbers of these young people, whom she has taken care to place in suitable household service amongst respectable families of the colonists. At the end of last May she went out to Canada, accompanied by another lady, in the ship Sardinian, with seventy-three young persons, of whom ten were boys, seven girls in their teens, and the rest quite little children. Many of them were from the London workhouses. We have received from the lady who is with Miss Rye, at the town of Niagara, on Lake Ontario, a very satisfactory account of their proceedings. All their juvenile charges were safely provided for, on the 13th ult., except thirty, for whom they expected soon to find comfortable homes. Our correspondent says:—"Miss Rye is exceedingly particular in placing out these children, suiting the tender and timid ones to kindly and indulgent mistresses, and the wild, lawless ones to stricter managers. Nor is she satisfied to place children with householders, even those whose certificates from their ministers are satisfactory, if she has reason to think they are hard or careless. The results of her work are certainly wonderful. About one per cent only have been found to go astray, out of nearly 1200 pauper children. Boards of guardians ought to send out the contents of their schools; they would, at their age, soon adapt themselves to Canadian requirements. This is certainly the paradise for working men and women. The Canadians are a homely people, full of energy and enterprise, but living simple, primitive lives, among their farms, fruit, and cattle; sitting down with their servants, generally, at the same table. I am no longer surprised at their readiness to take our children. Their wives do their own housework, perhaps with the help of one little maid, ten or twelve years old, who is brought up rather as a child of the house. She is clothed and maintained by her master and mistress, up to the age of fifteen, when she has three dollars a month wages, till she is eighteen, after which she can make her own terms, and is on the same footing as other Canadians. But the majority of Miss Rye's girls become adopted in the family and are frequently included in the testamentary arrangements made for other children. As for boys, the one thing wanting to Canada is hands to cultivate the land. At the age of eighteen anyone can claim a hundred acres of land, to clear and cultivate it, and to possess it for ever, so that our "gutter children" may become the future landlords of the country. Whole districts are waiting to be occupied, with rich arable land, where corn can be sown and ripened in two months, or peaches and cherries, and other fruits to supply foreign markets; with forests, minerals, and fisheries of untold value; and with vast lakes and rivers for the conveyance of their produce. But this is no country for drones. The town of Niagara, from which I write, is surrounded by a pastoral population in their thriving homesteads. The old townhall has been partly converted into a meat market, and the old county prison is now Miss Rye's Distributing Home. The Judge's court is made the dormitory for a hundred little girls, and small beds are placed also in the spectators' gallery, while the butter and other provisions are kept in the condemned cell. Our poor little waifs and strays of London life have terribly sad histories, many being children of drunkards, suicides, adulterers, and felons now in penal servitude. Of course, they may go wrong even in Canada; but it is certain that they will have fewer opportunities to err, and no vicious connections to drag them down. It is touching to see them here at play, before they are sent out to work." We have an implicit reliance upon the writer's correct testimony and sound judgment; and we would especially commend this statement to public attention just now, when Miss Rye's late controversy with the Local Government Board shows that her useful efforts of charity have been ill appreciated in certain official quarters.

On the 6th inst. a great fire occurred at Samara, one of the largest cities situated on the Volga. The best part of the town, consisting of the Government quarter and the houses of the principal citizens, was entirely destroyed, as were also many barges laden with grain and tallow. Among the public buildings burnt down was the newly-constructed hospital of the Red Cross Society, which contained a great number of sick and wounded soldiers from Asia Minor. No lives are said to have been lost, but several thousand people are reported to be without food or shelter. This is the third Russian town which has been destroyed by fire during the present summer.

Professor Bowditch, of the Harvard Medical School, having examined the measurements of some 25,000 children in the public schools of Boston, United States, has presented the results in a series of tables, which have been published by the State Board of Health. He makes the following statement:—"The growth of children takes place in such a way that until the age of eleven or twelve years boys are both taller and heavier than girls of the same age, but at this period of life girls begin to grow very rapidly, and for the next two or three years surpass boys of the same age in both height and weight. Boys then acquire and retain a size superior to that of girls, who have now nearly completed their full growth. Children of American born parents are in Massachusetts taller and heavier than children of foreign-born parents, a superiority which seems to depend partly on the greater average comfort in which such children live and grow up, and partly upon differences of race or stock. Pupils of American parentage at the public Latin school and other higher schools are apparently for the same reasons superior in height and weight to the generality of boys of American parentage in the public schools, and of English boys of the non-labouring classes attending public schools and universities, the superiority in weight being as a rule more marked than that in height."

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The Volunteer Artillery encamped at Shoeburyness broke up yesterday week. In the morning the detachments were paraded and marched to the cricket-ground, where they were inspected by Colonel Fisher, in the presence of a large number of officers of the Royal Artillery and a general company. After the inspection, Colonel Fisher addressed the detachments, and complimented them on their excellent work during the past week. Afterwards Miss Fisher presented the prizes, when the 1st Hampshire men were loudly cheered. The detachment of the 1st Hants Artillery Volunteer Corps gained distinguished honours in the competitions. In addition to winning Messrs. Elkington's prize (ten cups value £21) for the highest possible score in shell firing, and the Scotland Challenge Vase for the best score in the shell competition in either week, they gained the Queen's Prize for the highest average score throughout the whole fortnight's meeting, consisting of ten cups of solid silver and entitling each of the men to wear the badge indicating that he is a Queen's prizeman. The detachment consisted of Quartermaster-Sergeant H. C. Sims (who, being "No. 1" on the battery, sighted the gun), Sergeant W. Angley, Corporals R. Gunn, S. Compton, and H. Esterford, Gunners T. Scott, F. T. Sleeman, C. Bond, and A. P. Young, and Trumpeter C. F. Pond.

The last detachment of volunteers who had received permission to drill with the regular forces at Aldershot this year returned last Saturday from their eight days' self-imposed duty, having performed their work in a manner that elicited the highest praise from Major-Generals Shipley and the Hon. F. A. Thesiger, to whose brigades Colonel Vincent's and Colonel Warner's provisional battalions have been respectively attached. During the past three weeks nearly 5000 men of all ranks have voluntarily placed themselves under the Mutiny Act and have carried out their work in a style that has gained them the commendation of every officer of the regular forces with whom they have come in contact. The work carried out has been of the most arduous character, and, though doubtless at many times the energies of the men have been severely taxed, it is but just to say they have always been found equal to the occasion and most anxious to carry out the wishes of their respective chiefs.

The third and final competition for the year by members of the Middlesex Rifle Association was held last week at Wormwood-scrubs, when prizes to the value of £120 were fired for. The principal contest was at 200, 500, and 600 yards, seven shots at each, and was productive of some of the finest shooting of the year. In this the winners were as follow:—£10, Private T. Wace, Hon. Artillery Company; £7, Private Rothon, London Rifle Brigade; £5, Private T. W. Wilson, Queen's (Westminster); £3, Private Curlew, Tower Hamlets; Corporal Weston, 12th Surrey; Sergeant Sage, Tower Hamlets; Sergeant Pullman (G.M.), South Middlesex; Colour-Sergeant Brooking, Queen's (Westminster); Corporal Gillham, 29th Middlesex; Private R. Bird, South Middlesex; Corporal G. S. Tovey, Queen's (Westminster); Sergeant-Instructor Gilder, 18th Middlesex; Quartermaster S. Stewart, 9th Middlesex; Corporal Frost, 26th Kent; Colour-Sergeant Bacchus, South Middlesex; Major Young, 39th Middlesex; Private Shoveller, Civil Service; Private T. Pullman, South Middlesex; Private W. Whittle, London Scottish; Lieutenant Dean, Civil Service; Private Rosenthal, St. George's; Private Hobbiss, South Middlesex; Lieutenant Munday, Hon. Artillery Company; Sergeant Lloyd, 19th Middlesex; Captain H. Roberts, London Irish; Major Morris, 39th Middlesex; Lieutenant St. John Clerke, Inns of Court; Private S. A. Pixley, Victoria; and Private Bewick, 37th Middlesex. This competition also decided the winners of the gold, silver, and bronze badges of the association for the best aggregate score in the three contests of the year. The first of these coveted trophies fell to a rising young shot, Private S. A. Pixley, of the Victoria, a son of Captain Pixley, the Queen's prize winner, who made the excellent total of 249 points. The silver and bronze badges were won by Corporal Tovey, of the Queen's (Westminster), and Private Rothon, of the London Rifle Brigade. The other principal prize-winners were:—Range prizes: £3, Private W. Thrower, St. George's; £2 each, Private T. Wace, H.A.C., and Private T. Pullman, South Middlesex; £1 each, Sergeant-Instructor W. H. Gilder, 18th ditto, and Captain R. W. Shipway, Queen's; Seven shots at 500 yards: £1 10s. each, Corporal G. S. Tovey, Queen's (Westminster), Private T. Wace, H.A.C., Major J. R. Morris, 39th Middlesex, Captain W. Gange, 36th ditto, and Private J. H. Shoveller, Civil Service. Seven shots at £600 yards: £3, Private F. J. Rothan, L.R.B.; £2 each, Corporal R. C. Frost, 26th Kent, and Private T. W. Wilson, Queen's (Westminster); £1 each, Lieutenant W. S. Dean, Civil Service, and Private T. Wace, H.A.C., and Corporal W. Jones, 2nd Oxford. Extra prizes:—At 500 yards: £1 10s. each, Private W. Boutcher, Artists'; Sergeant A. Blackford, Queen's (Westminster); Private R. H. Foster, 19th Surrey; Private R. Bird, South Middlesex, and Private T. Hinde, Queen's (Westminster). At 600 yards: £3, Lieutenant F. W. Sharpe, 41st Middlesex; £2 each, A. Blackford, Queen's (Westminster), and Private J. M. Ilay, Artists'.

The last inspection for the present year in the metropolitan district took place on Saturday, when the 1st London Engineers underwent that ordeal at the hands of Colonel Gordon, commanding Royal Engineer of the home district. The first part of the inspection took place in Gray's Inn-square, to which the corps, in six companies of twenty-five files, in addition to a good company of recruits, were marched from their head-quarters, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Drew. The inspecting officer made a minute inspection of the line, being accompanied by Colonel Mulliner, the honorary Colonel. A few battalion movements were then performed. At the close of the drill the corps returned to their head-quarters at Islington, where the principal part of the inspection took place, this being in strictly engineering work. Here during the past week the members of the corps, acting under their new Adjutant, Captain Parker, of the Royal Engineers, and their instructors, Sergeant-Major Johnson and Corporal Utridge, had been engaged in constructing a series of models of batteries, saps, and bridges, a full-sized single lock bridge, &c. The several companies marched to the points at which they had carried out their respective tasks, and the inspecting officer proceeded haphazard to question various members as to the details and objects of the different works. A most interesting exhibition of the skill of the members then ensued in the construction of bridges, barrel piers, gabions, &c., which were executed in a manner creditable alike to instructors and instructed. At the conclusion of the inspection Colonel Gordon congratulated the corps on the improvement they had made during the past year, and stated that it would give him great pleasure to make a satisfactory report of their efficiency.

The detachment of men of the 1st Hants Artillery Volunteers, who were successful in carrying off the Queen's and other prizes at Shoeburyness camp this year, arrived at Southampton on Saturday evening. The rejoicings assumed quite a public character.

The great rifle competition between two hundred of the best shots of Great Britain, including Queen's Prize men of 1876 and 1877, and several silver medallists, was concluded on Saturday last at the Altcar ranges, Liverpool, the prizes being of the total value of about £1000. The shooting was most excellent in quality, as may be gathered from the results, the principal of which are appended:—No. 1 Competition: £15, Private C. Rimmer, 13th L.R.V.; £10, Private H. Smith, London Rifle Brigade; £5 each, Corporal Horatio Jones, 1st Denbigh, and Private E. Latham, 1st L.R.V.; £4 each, Corporal W. Bratherton, 36th C.R.V., Private M. Caldwell, 6th Renfrew, Private Messenger, 9th Leicester, and Private C. D. Blundell, 13th L.R.V. No. 2 Competition: £15, Sergeant M. Rees, 5th L.R.V.; £10, Colour-Sergeant J. Bacchus, South Middlesex; £5 each, Sergeant J. Howarth, 11th L.R.V., and Private R. Wright, 5th L.R.V.; £4 each, Private James Kindell, 18th Middlesex, Private Jones, 36th C.R.V., Private T. Grantham, 1st L.R.V., and Private R. Wade, 1st L.R.V. No. 3 Competition: £20, Private J. Johnstone, 1st Cumberland; £15, Private W. Mason, 1st Lancashire; £10 each, Sergeant E. C. Foster, 1st Newcastle, and Lieut.-Colonel Bertram, 9th A. B. Lancashire; £5 each, Corporal W. Bratherton, 36th Cheshire; Sergeant M. Rees, 5th Lancashire; Quartermaster-Sergeant Brooks, 7th Devon; Colour-Sergeant J. Greaves, 2nd West York; Private W. F. Cherry, 2nd Cheshire; Sergeant T. Smitton, 15th Lancashire; Sergeant J. K. Speers, 1st Lancashire; and Private M. Caldwell, 6th Renfrew. No. 4 Competition: £20, Private W. M'Kinlay, Queen's Edinburgh; £15, Colour-Sergeant Cunningham, 2nd Lancashire; £10, Sergeant-Instructor F. Thompson, 88th Lancashire; £5 each, Quartermaster-Sergeant Price, 10th Glamorganshire; Corporal W. Bratherton, 36th Cheshire; Major Pearce, 13th Devon; Private R. Wade, 1st Lancashire; and Sergeant T. Smitton, 15th Lancashire. No. 5 Competition: £15, Private W. Davidson, 3rd C.R.V.; £10, Private A. Little, Leeds Rifles; £5 each, Corporal C. E. Rippon, 4th Essex; Robert Simson, Dublin Shooting Club; Private J. Masson, Montrose Rifles; and Private J. Goodier, 6th L.R.V. No. 6 Competition: £15, Private R. Muir, 11th Stirling; £10, Sergeant J. Robinson, 1st Warwick; £5 each, Private J. Cooper, 15th Lancashire; Private R. M'Vittie, 7th Dumfries; Sergeant G. Junor, 47th Lancashire, and Private R. B. Burgess, 1st Newcastle. Members' Prizes.—£15, Sergeant E. Deane, 1st Lancashire; £10, Sergeant W. E. Spalding, 2nd Cheshire; £5 each, A. Cortis, 1st A. B. Sussex; John J. Bryce, 3rd Cheshire, and H. A. Buckley, 1st Lancashire.

ASTRONOMICAL OCCURRENCES IN SEPTEMBER.

(From the "Illustrated London Almanack.")

A Partial Eclipse of the Sun takes place on the 7th. It begins on the Earth generally at 11h. 10m. a.m., in longitude 75 deg. 30 min. west, and latitude 23 deg. 15 min. south. At the time of the greatest eclipse a little more than three fifths of the Sun's diameter will be obscured—viz., at 0h. 49m. p.m., in west longitude 91 deg. 48 min., and south latitude 61 deg. 22 min.; and the eclipse will end at 2h. 27m. p.m. in east longitude 23 deg. 7 min., and south latitude 78 deg. 14 min. This eclipse will be seen from Cape Horn and parts of South America.

The Moon is near Mercury on the 9th, near Venus on the evening of the 9th, and near Jupiter on the nights of the 14th and 15th. She is near Mars during the night hours of the 20th and morning hours of the 21st, and near Saturn during the night hours of the 21st and morning hours of the 22nd. Her phases or times of change are:—

	New Moon on the 7th at 0 minutes after 1h in the afternoon.	First Quarter " 14th " 8 " 11 " morning.	Full Moon " 22nd " 85 " 11 " afternoon.	Last Quarter " 30th " 20 " 6 " morning.
--	---	--	---	---

She is nearest the Earth on the evening of the 6th, and furthest from it on the afternoon of the 19th.

Mercury sets on the 3rd at 7h. 8m. p.m., or 20m. after sunset; on the 8th at 6h. 49m. p.m., or 11m. after sunset; on the 13th at 6h. 29m. p.m., or 11m. after sunset; on the 18th the planet and the Sun set nearly together, and from Sept. 19 to Nov. 20 he sets in daylight. He rises nearly at the same time as the Sun on the 27th, and a few minutes before sunrise at the end of the month. He is near the Moon on the 9th, stationary among the stars on the 13th, and in inferior conjunction with the Sun on the 26th.

Venus is an evening star, and sets on the 8th at 7h. 26m. p.m., or 57m. after sunset; this interval increases very slowly as the month advances, on the 18th it is 59m., and on the 28th 1h. 3m., the planet setting on this day at 6h. 48m. p.m. She is near the Moon on the 9th, and in her descending node on the 13th. She is due south on the 1st at 1h. 56m. p.m., and on the last day at 2h. 12m. p.m.

Mars rises at 6h. 53m. p.m., or 24m. after sunset, on the 8th; and the planet rises at the same time as the Sun sets on the 18th; from the 19th till the end of the year he rises in daylight. He sets at nearly the same time as the Sun rises on the 5th, at 4h. 53m. a.m. on the 9th, at 4h. 1m. a.m. on the 19th, and at 3h. 16m. a.m., or 2h. 42m. before sunrise, on the 29th. He is in opposition to the Sun on the 5th (at midnight) and near the Moon on the 21st. He is due south on the 1st at 0h. 33m. a.m. on the 15th at 11h. 18m. p.m., and on the last day at 10h. 9m. p.m.

Jupiter is an evening star, setting at 10h. 48m. p.m. on the 1st, at 10h. 18m. p.m. on the 8th, at 9h. 42m. p.m. on the 18th, and at 9h. 7m. p.m. on the 28th. He is near the Moon on the 14th and in quadrature with the Sun on the 17th. He is due south on the 1st at 6h. 50m. p.m., on the 15th at 5h. 58m. p.m., and on the last day at 5h. 6m. p.m.

Saturn rises on the 7th at 6h. 40m. p.m., or 11m. after sunset; on the 13th he rises at the time of sunset, and from the 14th till the end of the year he rises in daylight. He sets at about the time of sunrise on the 9th, at 4h. 46m. a.m. on the 19th, and at 4h. 2m. a.m. on the 29th. He is in opposition to the Sun on the 9th and near the Moon on the 21st. He is due south on the 1st at 0h. 37m. a.m., on the 15th at 11h. 34m. p.m., and on the last day at 10h. 31m. p.m.

Mr. James Spaight, the Mayor of Limerick, opened the People's Park in that city last Monday, and handed it over in trust for the citizens. Lord Emly took part in the proceedings. The park, which is said to be one of the prettiest in Ireland, is laid out as a tribute of respect to the commercial integrity, enterprise, and philanthropy of the late Mr. Richard Russell. The ground was given by the Earl of Limerick.

Isaac Pride, one of the Tynnewydd colliers, has sent the following letter to the Times:—"I wish to thank her Majesty the Queen for the First Class Albert Medal which Lord Aberdare was commissioned to present. And next, I thank Major Duncan for presenting me with the medal of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. Then I wish to thank the Lord Mayor and the subscribers to the Mansion House Fund and others for the money I have received from them; and I wish to thank the members of Parliament for their kindness in presenting me with a watch and chain. I wish to say I am very proud of the rewards that I have received, and little did I think the public would take as much interest in it as they did when we were working to rescue the men."

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR.

The expedition of General Gourko, with the advanced force of the Russian army in Bulgaria, crossing the Balkans on the 12th and 13th ult. by the Hainkioi Pass, and descending on the south side to the Tundja Valley, has been much spoken of. Our Special Artist, Mr. E. Matthew Hale, who joined this expedition, travelling by the Shipka Pass, has supplied a number of Illustrations. The following letter from him describes the battle of Monday, the 30th ult., at Dzurani, near Eski Sagra, where the force of Raouf Pasha, on its way to join the army of Suleiman Pasha, was severely cut up:—

"I have a little time to write you a few lines to show you I am well and alive; but when I tell you that for the last ten days I have not stopped long enough in any place to have more than a few hours to work at my sketches, you will understand my silence. For six days I have not had my clothes off, and have been in the open air without even a tent at night, and next to nothing to eat except bread, which we had to break with a stone. On Sunday morning last week Rose (the Correspondent for the Scotsman) and Dr. Carrick, a St. Petersburg doctor, and I started at four in the morning with General Gourko and his flying column from Kazanlik. We were the only Correspondents with this advanced force, much to our delight, and I had a clear field for the first time. Our object was to cross the lower Balkans and occupy Yeni Sagra and Eski Sagra, meeting another column on our way. Well, we rode on through burning villages through the long, hot day with the Staff, and were very well received, as they were very well satisfied to see us accompany them on this adventurous expedition.

"The way lay through a lovely valley, rich with maize and corn, and for the most part beside a very pleasant little river, the Tundja; stopping beside it for a couple of hours to bivouac in the heat of the day; then on and on into the night till the poor infantry men could go no further, and we stopped at one o'clock a.m. at the village of Balabanli. Almost asleep in our saddles, we gladly tied our horses to a tree, and, after robbing a corn-field for our horses, we lay down, and woke again at four o'clock. Three hours' sleep after eighteen hours' march was hard lines, but off we went. Then I got separated by trying a short cut to save my dear horse, and got fixed in a thick wood; but luckily a few reconnoitring Cossacks came up and gave me a lead; and, as my horse would sooner die than be left behind, we tore through the brushwood at a breakneck pace, and came out on the hills above Yeni Sagra to see the place in flames; this was serious, as we hoped to find a resting-place. We soon drove the Turks out, and, as I and my companions could stand our hunger and fatigue with patience no longer, stormed a deserted village, catching our dinner, a turkey and two fat geese, plums, and flour. Here was a feast! We soon entered a Turkish house, and Terence, my faithful servant and cook, made us a soup fit for the Lord Mayor, and baked the flour into bread; dough though it was, it was better than the dry rusks we had hitherto eaten, and after a smoke and sleep we resumed our way to overtake the column, though rather regretting our greediness, as the neighbourhood might still contain parties of Turks or the dreadful Bashi-Bazouks. When we got to the town of Yeni Bazar we found it a heap of ruins and dead, the trenches filled with dead Turks and the railway station full of burning trucks of ammunition, which was going off in all directions. Here I got my first spoil, a nearly new Remington rifle, picked up from a dead Turk, and ammunition to match. The roads were filled with Bulgarians, who returned to divide the spoil like jackals, waiting till the Russian lion had satisfied himself. There was no use waiting here; and, after a sketch, and feeding my poor horse on some corn, which I found in the Turkish camp, and guarded till he was stuffed, we rode on and on after Gourko till ten that night, the poor soldiers dropping out on the road in the direction of Eski Sagra. The road was filled with the household goods of the flying Turks; and Terence was an amusing sight, with beautiful tin pans shining like silver, and bits of stuff with which I vainly hoped to decorate my studio, and a pamsol which he would stick to. These, however, the poor fellow had to drop with sheer fatigue, when the exuberance of his spirits flagged, and he had to hold himself on his horse. Another bivouac in the open—this time no moon, and a chill night wind, as the nights can be very cold in spite of the hot burning days.

"Well, at six in the morning we moved off, and as Carrick and I rode on ahead we were startled by a white puff from a thick wood across the plain, and the shriek of a shell as it fell harmless across the chaussée ahead of us, then a galloping Cossack from the advanced guard, who cocked his gun as we approached; but, thanks to Carrick, who speaks Russian like a native, he understood we were not Turks. As neither of us adopts the uniform some Correspondents think it necessary to put on, I was in a brown suit and a small round cap, and Carrick in a Glengarry cap. This little danger over, and hearing Turks were ahead, we rode on to a mound with an advancing battery of Cossack artillery, and climbed the mound as they unlimbered. Here we were in a splendid position to see all, and as we lay down were quite safe from the shells which they poured about the roads. We saw the Turks apparently retire, and a shell from our battery pitch in their very midst as they went along the road. By this time the Staff appeared, and seeing an important movement on the left wing we galloped out from our mound in front of the Staff and got a mound all to ourselves in the very midst of the operations. We repented our rashness, though only for a moment, when we found it impossible to stand on the hill for the shells which whizzed and shrieked and burst around us; they were trying to prevent our troops advancing by this way to attack their right wing. No use, however, the Russian stands fire too well; and soon we were relieved by the advance of the tirailleurs, who advanced as coolly as if they were at a review; the officers to the front, our friends went by into the shell-strewn plain and advanced on the Turks by the wood. Then came the most fearful fire I ever heard at a review, and as the Russian Attaché said afterwards he had never heard anything like it himself, I was not overrating it. The noise was incessant and the smoke dense. Where we lay we were happily out of the line of fire and just out of range, only an occasional bullet falling with harmless thud as it reached the ground spent. We were not long quiet, however, for the Russian infantry were obliged to retire from this deadly reception, as they could see no foe, all being hidden by the trees. Again they and the 33rd Regiment went in, and carried the wood in a splendid manner. Meanwhile, the poor wounded fellows who could walk or crawl, or be lifted by their less severely wounded companions, sought refuge with us; and refuge indeed it must have been, after the frightful fire they had experienced. The shells, however, did not cease; and, as Dr. Carrick took out his case and appointed me his assistant, I put sketch-book away for sponge and water and bandages, and hard work we had. The first we attended was our captain, with a ball through his chest, helped out of the battle by a man with a shattered arm and a man with a wound in his foot. Poor fellows, their devotion to their officer was noble and touching, and glad I was to be of some use. Of course, my bandages and instruments were in Kazanlik when I wanted them; but I was obliged to take no more than my horse could easily carry—viz., a rug and waterproof. They still came, the poor wounded fellows, and we were far from help. The artillery between us and the Turks fell short of ammunition and retired. What a moment! Here were helpless men, whom it was impossible and almost cowardly to leave to the mercy of the Turks, and yet self-preservation would cross one's mind from one's inability to help them in case of an advance of the Turkish right. Some buried their heads in the ground, and others one could see quite dazed, and, since they were shot, indifferent to what happened. The captain ordered them not to show themselves, and as we could not bear to see their suspense, I, in my brown suit quite invisible, crept through the parched grass till I could watch the operations again. I lay still and called down to them that there was no danger, till, to our relief, another battery galloped up and dashed forward about 400 yards off, and wheeling round opened a heavy fire on the Turks. Then the infantry went in and won the day on our left wing, and all was over for us. The last shell fell and left us in peace with our charge. Hearing there were doctors behind our mound, a man came galloping up on what I at once recognised as our Colonel's horse, and said there were wounded men in the wood to our left. So we did all we could for our little hospital, and rode away. We found the poor Colonel with a shattered leg and several others in a bad way; we sent off for assistance, and soon, to our relief, a party of ambulance men with litters appeared, and we abandoned our charge. Carrick was tired out, and I got a wounded officer on my horse and kept him steady. We had eaten nothing since the night before, and it was now three o'clock. We thought of our lunch on the day before, and the good Terence had saved the remains of the goose and the dough, though starving himself. We retired to a wood, and flung ourselves down and slept, and in our sleep our horses strayed. When I awoke, oh! awful moment, we found ourselves away from the main body, miles from a town, no horses, and dead tired, and the Turks in force not far from us, for we had to advance to see our wounded friends. Terence, however, got hold of some unwilling Bulgarians and a stray Cossack, and Carrick and I ran opposite ways; no horses. We met, disconsolate and tired, and, determined to make the best of it, we lighted a fire and made some tea, lighting our fire with a cartridge, as we had no matches; then I walked over to the poor wounded men left here far away from the retreating army, for the Turks were too strong for the Russians to hold the position, and the Russians were forced to retire. We were between the two armies, and we well knew the treatment of the Turks to prisoners and wounded. Here I got a pipeful of tobacco from the good Colonel, who in his pain remembered I had none when on the mound, and felt at his side for his own bag; I don't think I ever saw so touching a piece of gentlemanly gratitude for slight services, and I never enjoyed a pipe more; but better was in store. I saw the faithful Terence and the Bulgarians with the three truants, and with delight I embraced my horse and felt rich again, and rewarded the poor fellows handsomely. The three horses had gone for a walk in the wood; the bushes closing behind them, had effectually concealed their retreat.

"Night closed in and still no orders; we had been forgotten by our General and must act for ourselves. The poor fellows were lifted into long waggons, many were the shrieks and groans and the continued cries for 'Woda, woda.' My flask was soon empty, and again I blessed the moment that I decided to take a large one instead of the small regulation one. Three or four times our departure was delayed by some poor fellow who had to be buried before he was cold, as we could leave no dead behind unburied for fear of the Turks mutilating them; not that it much mattered, but they insisted on Christian burial. At last we moved in pitch darkness, very slowly and wearily, until we came up with a picket of hussars that had cut their way through the Circassians in the after-part of the battle. Here Carrick and I determined to stay and lie down. In the morning we awoke, and I found we had in the darkness lain down close to the dead—a horrible moment; but I am now so accustomed to horrors, I did not take much notice. In the morning we all moved on, and I found my friend Rose at head-quarters, much to my delight, as I had been uneasy about him without necessity."

This action is related by the military correspondent of the Times, in a letter from Bucharest dated the 14th inst., in which he speaks of "Mr. Hale, the artist of the Illustrated London News," as having personally set a good example by going to fetch water for the wounded "from a distant well, along a road so exposed to fire that the Russian soldiers dared not go." The same letter describes two incidents of the battle, which are the subjects of two of Mr. Hale's sketches engraved for the present number. These are, the Russian infantry of the 34th Regiment, led by their Colonel, entering a wood under the Turkish fire; and the charge of the Astrachan Dragoons and Kiev Hussars, under Prince Eugene von Leuchtenberg, cutting their way through a mass of three thousand Circassian horsemen that menaced the rear of General Gourko's force. A general view of the battle-field of Dzurani is given in another sketch; showing, to the right hand, the singular isolated mound occupied by General Gourko's staff; in the centre, the Cossack field artillery; and to the left hand the advancing tirailleurs and other infantry. The Turkish positions are in the background, in the woods at the base of the hills beyond the open plain which the Russians are crossing to attack them. The burning of the town of Yeni Sagra, at the approach of General Gourko's force on the preceding day, is also the subject of an Illustration. The town is burning at both ends; behind it we see the railway line to Yamboli, with some Turkish guns "that the foe was sullenly firing." The Russian artillery and infantry are seen to the left-hand side of the foreground, and the Cossacks to the right hand, moving towards the town, where they could not stay. Mr. Hale furnishes one or two Sketches of the stern and wild mountain scenery at the mouth of the Hainkioi Pass, which was traversed by the Russian army a fortnight before, and of which there is a very interesting description in the Times of Tuesday week, the 14th inst. The destruction of the railway station at Kayadzik Haskioi (otherwise called Kassat Kaskien) is shown in a separate Illustration. This act was performed by a flying column of Russian dragoons, on the 24th ult., to prevent the Turks using the railway; the station buildings were set on fire, and the rails and water-tank blown up with dynamite. The Bashi-Bazouks, the only Turkish force there, had speedily taken flight. The German station-master and clerk, with their wives and children, were led away captive to Eski Sagra, but received no personal ill-treatment, though all their furniture and household stores were lost. A large store of grain was here destroyed by the Russians. On the whole, if we consider how these exploits of General Gourko's expedition, with the brief insurrection of the Christian inhabitants against the Turkish rule, were followed by an ignominious retreat, and by the wholesale slaughter of the unhappy townspeople and villagers, as described in another page, the Emperor of Russia has small cause to be proud of the hasty raid across the Balkans.

We have nothing fresh this week from the main Russian army, or from the division of General Zimmermann in the Dobrukscha, which our Special Artist, Herr Schöenberg, has now quitted, to join the Imperial head-quarters at Gorny Studeni, a few miles south of Sistova. He will no doubt supply us with abundant Illustrations of the principal Russian movements in future. Although, as we stated last week, none of our Special Artists happened to be actually present at the battle of Plevna, we received authentic sketches from other hands; and the one now published, of Colonel Rosenbaum's fall on the battle-field, was prepared from materials furnished by Captain Dahnauer, an eye-witness of the scene.

"The Last Shot Fired in the Defence of Kars," on the 9th ult., when the Russians at length withdrew from the fruitless siege, is an incident worthy of note. It was sketched in the Kara-Dagh redoubt by our Artist, Mr. J. Bell, whose account of the siege has been given. This was the 17,458th shot fired by the Turkish batteries. The great Krupp gun was pointed, for the nonce, at the extraordinary elevation of 36 deg., but we do not suppose its parting fire had any effect in hastening the enemy's retreat.

A naval artillery performance, the practice-working of a big gun (18-ton gun) between decks on board a Turkish iron-clad frigate in the Black Sea, forms the subject of our Extra Supplement; and it is probable that we shall soon hear more stirring news of the Turkish fleet.

THE NEW DRILL.

A general order has been issued by the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief drawing attention to a new issue of the "Field Exercises and Evolutions of Infantry."

His Royal Highness states that in future battalions will be raised to their full strength by the addition of men from the reserves. It is therefore imperative that troops should be trained in but one system, and he has received the Queen's commands to require of all general officers in command of troops the most scrupulous adherence to the system now promulgated. He enjoins a precise observation of the first four parts of the instructions which treat generally of drill, as neither officers nor men can profit by the subsequent part of the field exercises if they are not first thoroughly grounded in the principles and details of drill. Part 5 deals with manoeuvres and tactics of more than one battalion—that is to say, the application of the drill instruction contained in the former parts to the requirements of actual warfare, and to the features of the ground worked over. His Royal Highness reminds officers that the application of drill and the adaptation of the formation of troops to ground are, under the present conditions of warfare, essential, and require the most careful study. Regulations on these points must not be taken as rules, but as guides to point out the general direction. These regulations, as such, are useful and requisite; but it must be distinctly understood that, as regards the distances between the fighting line and the supports, and between the supports and the main body, and as regards reinforcing the fighting line from the supports, it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast line, so much must depend upon the circumstances of each case and upon the intelligence with which the officers actually on the spot appreciate the situation. His Royal Highness expects to receive the intelligent co-operation and assistance of officers of the Army, of all ranks and of all branches, in carrying into practice the principles here laid down. He is of opinion that the best means of giving practical instruction in manoeuvring, whether the force be two companies, a battalion, a brigade, or a larger body, is to exercise it divided into an attacking and defending force, so that not only each officer, but each man may see how the irregularities of the ground, if skillfully used, conceal the attackers or defenders from view.

The Duke of Cambridge concludes by expressing a desire that officers of all ranks, but more especially general and field officers, should seek to impress on those under their command the application of drill to the varying circumstances of ground; great freedom should be given to company officers, but such errors as they may fall into should from time to time be pointed out. Any departure from the drill regulations, his Royal Highness observes, tends to produce irregularity and confusion, and to destroy the value of drill as a means of teaching discipline; but a blind adherence to the words of these instructions in real war, or under the varying circumstances of ground, cannot fail to prevent that development of individual intelligence which is so essential to the success of modern tactics.

Lord Hampton is to preside at the Glasgow meeting of the Institution of Naval Architects, which will be opened on the 28th.

The Clio, a screw-frigate giving by the Admiralty as an industrial training-ship for North Wales, Chester, and the border counties, and which is moored in the Menai Straits, off Bangor, was opened on Monday by the Duke of Westminster, chairman of the executive committee. His Grace referred to the great necessity existing for such a vessel, which was dedicated to the training of poor and destitute children as seamen, and pointed out that the committee were putting into practice the late Canon Kingsley's suggestion that there should be ragged schools on sea as well as on land. The dedicatory prayer was offered by the Bishop of Bangor. Among the company were the Duchess of Westminster, Lady Beatrice Grosvenor, Lord Ronald Gower, Lord and Lady Penrhyn, Sir Richard and Lady Bulkeley, the Deans of Carnarvonshire and St. Asaph, Major Platt, High Sheriff of Carnarvonshire, Mr. Whalley, M.P., Mr. Richard Davies, M.P., Mr. Bulkeley Hughes, M.P., and other representatives of Welsh constituencies. A bazaar was held on board. During the afternoon the vessel was visited by 3000 persons, and Bangor and Beaumaris was en fête.

The autumnal meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom will be held at Hull on Sept. 11 and 12. The resolutions of which notice has been given embrace, as usual, a variety of subjects proposed by the various chambers throughout the kingdom. One relating to public bills in Parliament is to the effect that, in order to facilitate the progress of the public business in Parliament, bills which have been read the second time in the House of Commons not later than June 30 should be taken up at the same stage in the next ensuing Session of the same Parliament. Another resolution relates to the expiration of the Railway Commission. It sets forth "that the establishment and action of the Railway Commission has, on the whole, commended itself to the approval of all parties interested in the traffic on railways, and that it is desirable that such Commission should be continued, with such modifications and extension of jurisdiction as experience has proved to be desirable." The remaining resolutions deal with bankruptcy, county courts' jurisdiction, bills of sale, Companies Acts (1862-7), public prosecutors (desirability of appointment of), assize extension, Italian treaty, inhabited house duty, assessment of machinery, registered letters, compulsory pilotage, partnerships en commandite, registration of firms, foreign telegrams, factory Acts, and Post Office money orders.

THE WAR: PASSAGE OF THE BALKANS.

BATTLE OF DZURANLI, NEAR ESKI SAGRA (JULY 30): TURKISH POSITIONS IN THE BACKGROUND.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

CHARGE OF PRINCE LEUCHTENBERG'S DRAGOONS THROUGH CIRCASSIAN HORSE, AT DZURANLI.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

BETWEEN DECKS OF A TURKISH

FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL

IRONCLAD—WORKING THE GUNS.

ARTIST WITH THE TURKISH FLEET.

THE WAR: PASSAGE OF THE BALKANS.

BURNING OF YENI SAGRA (YENI ZARA) AT THE APPROACH OF THE RUSSIANS, JULY 29.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

RUSSIAN INFANTRY GOING INTO THE WOOD AT DZURANLI UNDER THE TURKISH FIRE.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

MY HOLIDAY.

There is a very pretty poem called Carcassonne, by the best of living French ballad-writers, Gustave Nadaud—who has, by-the-by, written a mill-song which may well stand in French for the one great mill-song which each literature, I think, possesses: it is so simple and so perfect. However, it is not so well known as the Carcassonne—a sad little sermon on the old text which shows how petty are most of our ambitions, and yet how seldom they are fulfilled.

It is supposed to be spoken by an old peasant who has had throughout his life one chief desire, never attained, though always apparently so easy of attainment. Here below, he says, there is for no one complete happiness; his prayer will never be granted—he will never see Carcassonne. (A large town—need I remind un-geographical readers?—at the extreme south of France.) Its roofs are just visible in the distance, across the blue mountains, but it is five long leagues away; he is sixty years old, the vintage will not be good this year again; the vicar is right to say that ambition is the ruin of men; yet, if he could only find two days to spare at the end of the autumn! How contentedly he would die after having seen Carcassonne, where the people go about in black coats and fine dresses on week-days, where there are palaces like those of Babylon, where live a bishop and two generals!

There is no need to reiterate, expand, or explain this sermon. Of course, we have all our Carcassonne—not a much grander one perhaps than this peasant's; and it may even be that Wordsworth's resolve not to spoil his ideal by converting it into a reality was the wisest—though he did not keep it. At any rate, the poem which commemorates his visit to Yarrow is not to be compared to those loveliest lines:—

Be Yarrow stream unseen, unknown!
It must, or we shall rue it;
We have a vision of our own;
Ah, why should we undo it?
The treasured dreams of times long past
We'll keep them, winsome Marrow!
For when we're there, although 'tis fair,
'Twill be another Yarrow!

It is often, as in this case, that an association of poetry has gathered round the birthplace or home of some great man whom we especially admire, which endears it to us. So Stratford-on-Avon is in some sense the foyer of all England—all England, New as well as Old, for it is to many intelligent Americans the "hub of the universe" even more than imperial Boston. Again, there are young men of letters for whom Hampstead—with all its donkeys and its holiday-makers—is sanctified by the dear cockney poet, Keats; with Wordsworth, the father of the passing school of poets, as Shelley is, perhaps, of the present.

To a country boy of fifty years ago, awkward, gaunt, and shy—an ugly duckling, as he afterwards called himself—the beautiful city of Copenhagen was as Carcassonne to the old French vintager: it drew him to it like the strongest magnet, and he was fortunately able to allow himself to be so drawn; and this boy, Hans Christian Andersen, grown up into the greatest poet of children, has made of his home a sacred place for us.

Denmark—why is it so little talked of, thought of, visited? Is it merely because it has no great mountains, the one feature in scenery sufficiently striking to attract the attention of those who will not turn a hundred yards out of their way to see the loveliest sunset ever witnessed in Hyde Park—which ought to be, if it is not, famous for its sunsets? It is true that there is no land in Denmark as far above the sea as the highest part of Salisbury Plain—but why should there be? Is one never to travel comfortably? Must one's holiday always be spent among tremendous ups and downs? And if so, why?

There can be beauty without big mountains. In Hydemeer, one of his most entirely characteristic stories, Andersen has told us how lovely are the beech-forests, in spring, summer, autumn, and winter; and each one of the queer-shaped islands (like insects, many of them—Langeland, Syltoe, Aeroc, Samsoe) has its particular beauty. Then there is everywhere the sea—the Skager Rack and the Kattegat (whose names are alone "worth all the money") meet at the north-east point of Denmark; and near to Copenhagen is the Sound—so full of memories for Englishmen as well as Danes: its name makes us think of Nelson and of Campbell, as of Holger the Dane and of King Christian, who stood by the high mast in smoke and flame. And the "wild and stormy steep" of Elsinore has yet another association, which has made it a household word with all of us. Here Francisco kept watch, and was relieved by Bernardo, who brought with him his and the Prince's friend Horatio—here there glimmered through the darkness before dawn the Ghost of the murdered Hamlet; and the high eastern hill, over whose brow walked the morning "in russet mantle clad," must have been on the coast of Sweden, not three miles away.

One thinks of all these things in poring over the map of a place which is only a place on the map to us, and odd, indefinite pictures of towns, lakes, and islands rise before us. All the curious flocks, creeks, and bays of Denmark, of which we see the outlines only, take quaint and interesting features of their own—very likely quite unlike the real ones, but all picturesque; homely in a certain way, but unlike what we are used to here on our longer sweeps of English coast. The little country towns, the comfortable villages—how well we could get to know each of them in but a very short time! Each of them, even literally; for one of the delights of Denmark is its smallness—even including (as naturally one must) Schleswig and Holstein, one might obtain a very thorough knowledge of the country in a few weeks. Of other places one sees a little bit—"the sights," as people say—one catches a glimpse of half a dozen show-towns, and is dragged to certain fixed points of view, and forced to admire on one's bended knees scenes which one could only really learn to love gradually and quietly, in the course of time; which one ought to take naturally, not be of set purpose inoculated with—if I may parody Sydney Smith.

But—with perhaps a few introductions to hospitable burghers of Copenhagen; with a slight knowledge of the most simple, and, it is said, most musical Danish language; and with only a very little money and a very light knapsack; how delightfully might one pass a summer holiday in the country of Thorwaldsen, whose statues were so classically pure; of Oehlenschläger, the simple and straightforward poet of the Northern sea; of Hans Ewald, the daring, unhappy father of Danish literature; of Holberg, the quaint, old-fashioned dramatist; of so many heroes, before and after King Christian; of Tycho Brahe, the unwearied student of the skies; and of our childhood's favourite, whom I have already quoted more than once or twice. To wander, as Andersen, freely and without haste, in his quiet fatherland, in its beautiful and ancient capital and by its winding shores; to learn to know it in reality, as one does already by imagination—this is my holiday, often dreamt of, and, as yet, never realised. Denmark is, as was Carcassonne to the Southern peasant, a place very near, and a "home of the heart" much longed for. Will it, like Carcassonne, never be reached?—will the pleasantest and easiest of holidays never be spent? Most likely, never!

MUSIC.

The Covent Garden Promenade Concerts are continuing to attract large audiences nightly. We noticed last week, in detail, the performances of the opening night. Several of the principal features of that occasion have been repeated, including the effective orchestral adaptation from Gounod's opera, "Cinq Mars," arranged by Signor Ardit, and this gentleman's spirited valse, "Le Tortorelle," and "Drummer-Boys' Polka." The refined violin-playing of Mdlle. Pommereul and the brilliant pianoforte-playing of Mdlle. Debillmont have also been repeatedly displayed with success, as have the vocal powers of Mdles. Rajmondi, Celega, and Derivis, and Signori Gianini and Medica. On Saturday the programme included a "Fantasia Mélancolique," for flute solo, which was admirably played, both as to tone and execution, by Mr. Oluf Svendsen (his first appearance this season). He was enthusiastically applauded and encored. The selection comprised an "Entr'acte and Valse" from Massenet's new opera, "Le Roi de Lahore," which pleased greatly; the orchestral pieces named above, and an adaptation of themes from "Un Ballo in Maschera," arranged for these concerts by Signor Ardit. Mdles. Pommereul and Debillmont contributed solos on their respective instruments, and the vocalists were those already specified. The Prince and Princess of Wales and the King of Denmark were present. A Beethoven night was given on Wednesday last, when the programme included the fourth symphony (in B flat), the overture to "Coriolanus," the first movement of the violin concerto (played by Mdlle. Pommereul), and other interesting specimens of the master. A Gounod night was announced for Friday.

Music continues to form an important part of the many attractions at the Alexandra Palace. The promenade concerts on Thursdays and Saturdays are still continued, and include performances by the excellent orchestra of the establishment and by eminent vocalists; with Mr. H. Weist Hill as conductor. A Meyerbeer night was given on Thursday, when the programme comprised selections from "L'Etoile du Nord," "L'Africaine," "Dinorah," "The Huguenots," and "Robert the Devil."

The Carl Rosa Opera Company has opened a fresh provincial tour with a brilliantly successful series of English opera performances at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin. Abandoning the "star" system, Mr. Rosa now boldly rests his claims for public support on the thoroughness and general excellence with which the many operas in his repertoire are rendered; and he has had his reward in a constant succession of crowded audiences, prominent among his distinguished patrons having been the Duchess of Marlborough and Lady Randolph Churchill. The leading vocalists of the company—Madame Blanche Cole, Misses Julia Gaylor and Josephine Yorke, Mr. Packard, Mr. Ludwig, Mr. Lyall, Mr. and Mrs. Aynsley Cook, and Mr. Turner—merit praise for their representation of the principal parts in "Il Trovatore," "The Flying Dutchman," "The Bohemian Girl," "Maritana," "The Siege of Rochelle," "Robin Hood," &c.; but equally meritorious are the chorus and band, under the skilful guidance of Mr. Carl Rosa himself, who, bringing his three weeks' season at Dublin to a close to-night, transfers his company to Hull on Monday next.

It is now certain that, in consequence of the continued illness of Mdlle. Titiens, she will be unable to sing at either the Gloucester or the Leeds Festival, both of which take place next month.

Mr. Langdon Colborne, late organist of St. Michael's College, Tenbury, has been appointed by the Dean and Chapter of Hereford to the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. George Townshend Smith.

THEATRES.

In the present lull of things dramatic, the last spectacle at the Alhambra may be, perhaps, profitably received by the ballet-loving section of the public. Mr. Alfred Thompson, who has already established a great reputation for this kind of invention, on Saturday placed on the boards of this theatre a grand romantic ballet d'action, entitled "Yolande." He has kindly issued an explanatory preface for the use of the public, which relieves us from the need of interpreting the supposed story, which, indeed, sinks into insignificance before the splendour and brilliancy of the stage accessories. The scene is an Italian market-place, distinguished by a fountain and the statue of the Countess Yolande. The statue on certain nights is supposed to exhibit animation, when it is prudent for bridegrooms in general to avoid crossing the path of the spirit. Tito and Graciosa, the former noble, the latter of humble parentage, are about to be wed; after the ceremony comes the feasting, and then something less pleasant. Lothario, who has rivalled the hero for the affection of the heroine, is forward to serenade the bride, after which he taunts the bridegroom, tempts him to fight, and wounds him. Left alone in a swoon, Tito has a vision of Yolande, whose spirit he follows to earth's centre, but resists her fascinations. Remaining true to his bride, he incurs her displeasure. She consigns him to demons, who plunge him into an abyss. Next, he finds himself in a Daimio's palace in Japan, accompanied with his bride, his rival, and his temptress, and has to combat with Lothario and his guards. But he is at once delivered, and wakes in an Italian hostelry, where he is supported by Graciosa and surrounded by his friends. Mr. Thompson has a poetic imagination, and his stage illustrations are superb. The dances and groupings are numerous, and all "beautiful exceedingly." The excellence of the ballet will doubtless ensure its popularity.

MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

Thème Polonais, Variations Brillantes pour Piano, par Stephen Heller (Ashdown and Parry). This piece will be especially welcome to the many admirers of Heller's pianoforte music, being a new edition of an early work (op. 5) which had never been published in London and had long been out of print abroad. The theme is a graceful and characteristic melody, and the variations are full of diversified interest, the passage-writing being distinguished by that charm and grace which peculiarly belong to Heller's pianoforte music. The work is an especially elegant drawing-room piece, and cannot fail to please all hearers; in addition to which, it will be found very improving practice. Ashdown and Parry now publish all the extant works of Stephen Heller, extending to opus 141, only two numbers (op. 3 and 4) being wanting to complete the series. These missing works are out of print, but will probably, like the one just noticed, be recovered and reproduced.

Six cantatas by Carissimi, edited and accompaniments written by Ridley Prentice (Lamborn Cock). These are interesting reproductions of works of a composer who preceded Handel, and in some respects served as a model for that master, who, indeed, appropriated some of Carissimi's music as portions of his own oratorios. Carissimi effected much for the progress of Church music, particularly in the development of recitative and the use of accompanying orchestral instruments.

The pieces reproduced by Mr. Prentice are "A morire," for mezzo-soprano (with violoncello accompaniment ad lib.); "Deh contentatevi," and "Filli, non t'amo più," for soprano or tenor; "No, no, mio core," for the same (with violoncello obbligato); "Exulta Gaude," duet for two sopranos; and "Anima mea," duet for mezzo-soprano and bass. The melodic grace of Carissimi's music is remarkable, considering the period of its composition, and the collection now referred to contains interesting specimens thereof. Mr. Prentice has exercised his office of editing and arranging with care and judgment.

MORGANATIC MARRIAGES.

The Europe Diplomatique publishes the following list of the morganatic marriages contracted by Princes of the Royal Houses of Europe. The list comprises fifteen names, which are given in alphabetical order.

The Archduke Henry of Austria, born in 1828, younger son of the late Archduke Regnier, who was at one time Viceroy of Lombardy and Venetia, married at Botzen, in the Tyrol, Feb. 4, 1868, Fraulein Leopoldine Hoffman, born in 1842, and now entitled Frau von Waldeck.

Prince Charles of Baden, born in 1832, younger brother of the reigning Grand Duke, married, May 17, 1871, Baroness Rosalie von Beust, born in 1845, and created Countess von Rhena.

Prince Louis, Duke of Bavaria, born in 1831, and elder brother of the Empress of Austria, was married at Augsburg, May 28, 1857, to Fraulein Henriette Menthe, who now bears the title of Baroness von Wallersee.

Prince Louis de Bourbon, born in 1845, eldest son of the Count of Aquila, of the late reigning house of Naples, was married at New York on March 20, 1869, to Mdlle. Marie Hamel, born in 1847, who is now entitled Princess de Bourbon.

Prince Alexander of Hesse-Darmstadt, born in 1823, younger brother of the late Grand Duke Louis III., married, Oct. 28, 1851, to Countess Julia von Hauke, daughter of the late Count Hauke, formerly Minister of War in Poland. She was first created Countess of Battenburg, and in 1858 was raised by her brother-in-law, the Grand Duke Louis III., to the dignity of Princess, a title which is also borne by her children.

Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Augustenburg, born in 1830, was married, May 17, 1870, at Gotta (Holstein), to Fraulein Carmelite Eisenblatt, daughter of a merchant in Venezuela. The Prince has received from the German Emperor the title of Count von Noer for himself and his descendants.

The King of Italy, whose first wife died in 1855, was re-married a few years ago to the Countess Rosina de Mirafiori, whose family name is not stated.

Prince Elimar, of Oldenburg, born in 1844, brother on his mother's side of the reigning Grand Duke, contracted a morganatic alliance at the end of last year, the particulars as to which are wanting.

His cousin, Prince Nicholas, born in 1840, and a Colonel in the Russian service, was married on May 29, 1863, to the widow of Count von Doubett, who has received the title of Countess von Merenberg.

King Ferdinand of Portugal, Prince of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, born in 1816, and father of the King of Portugal, Louis I., whose first wife, Queen Maria da Gloria, died in 1853, was re-married, June 10, 1863, to Mdlle. Elise Hensler, who has been created Countess Edla.

Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, born in 1823, a cousin of the reigning Grand Duke and a General in the British Army, was married, Nov. 27, 1851, to Lady Augustus Gordon Lennox, a sister of the present Duke of Richmond and Gordon, who has been created Countess von Dornberg by the reigning Grand Duke.

His brother, Prince Gustavus of Saxe-Weimar, born in 1827, and a General in the Austrian army, married, Feb. 14, 1870, Mdlle. Pierma Marechia, who has been created Countess von Neuberg.

George, Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, born in 1826, lost his first wife, Princess Charlotte of Prussia, in 1865, and his second wife, Princess Feodora of Hohenlohe-Langenburg in 1872, and was married for the third time on March 18, 1873, to Fraulein Eden Franz, now entitled Baroness von Heldburg.

Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, born in 1824, a younger brother of King Ferdinand of Portugal, was married at Vienna, April 23, 1861, to Fraulein Constantine Adelaide Theresa Gerger, and who now has the title of Baroness von Rutenstein.

Prince Albert of Waldeck-Pyrmont, born in 1841, a cousin of the reigning Prince, was married at Dublin Castle on June 2, 1864, to Miss Dora Gage, a daughter of the late Rev. Robert Gage. She has since been created Countess von Rhoden, taking her title from a town in the principality of Waldeck.

It will be seen that fourteen of these fifteen Princes belong to the reigning houses in Germany and Austria. In four cases their wives were formerly actresses.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A charter conveying to the ratepayers of Birkenhead, Cloughton, Tranmere, Oxton, and part of Higher Bebington the privilege of a municipal borough has arrived at Birkenhead in the custody of Mr. Charles Walker, solicitor, of London. The new municipal borough is continuous with the Parliamentary one, represented by Mr. D. M'Ever, M.P. The first election will be held on Nov. 14.

The eighth annual meeting of the Architectural Association was concluded last Saturday at Warwick, the week having been fully occupied with excursions to Stratford-on-Avon, Coventry, Wrexham, Kenilworth, Tachbrook, Whitnash, and Southam; while Warwick itself, with its churches, castle, college, Leicester Hospital, and domestic buildings, occupied a large share of the members' time. The lucid explanations by Mr. Burgess of the various buildings examined added much to the interest of the meeting.

The amended Public Libraries Act recites that the mode by which the Act must now be adopted is by public meeting, "and it has been found that in many cases a public meeting is a most incorrect and unsatisfactory mode, and fails to indicate the general opinion of the ratepayers, and it is desirable to ascertain these opinions more correctly." The opinion of ratepayers, as to a majority, may now be ascertained by a public meeting, "or by the issue of a voting-paper to each ratepayer; and the subsequent collection and scrutiny thereof, and any expense in connection with such voting-papers, shall be borne in the same way as the expense of a public meeting would be borne, and the decision of the majority so ascertained shall be equally binding." In addition to the simple vote, "Yes" or "No" as to the adoption of the Act, such voting-paper may stipulate that its adoption shall be subject to a limitation to some lower rate of assessment than the maximum allowed by Act of Parliament in force at the time, and such lower limit, if once adopted, shall not be subsequently altered, except by public vote similarly taken.

BOOKS ABOUT TURKEY.

Calculation having revealed the astounding fact that a translation of Von Hammer's "entire work, with a continuation of equal copiousness, would make up at least twenty octavo volumes such as are usually printed in this country," nobody can question the soundness of the judgment which led to the plan adopted in the History of the Ottoman Turks, by Sir Edward S. Creasy, M.A. (Richard Bentley), a history founded upon that of Von Hammer, but so treated that in the new and revised edition now offered to the public it is contained within the two covers of one handy volume. And that volume deserves the close attention of everybody who desires to arrive at a satisfactory understanding of the events which have led to the present aspect of the momentous Eastern Question. The author's original work has been long out of print; and in this new edition he has employed the processes of correction, curtailment, and addition, having supplied "a few pages as to events subsequent to the Crimean war," written, however, "with studious brevity." Besides Von Hammer, the author has consulted a great many other weighty and trustworthy purveyors of information—so many, indeed, that a bare enumeration of their names would occupy more space than can be here afforded. Suffice it to say that the information has been sought in every kind of publication, from the historian's ponderous tomes to the monthly magazine. From such a book, composed on such a plan, the reader in search of sound instruction can hardly fail to obtain, with comparatively little trouble and at a comparatively small expenditure of time, an ample supply of what he seeks. Be it added that the source from which the supply comes is such as to inspire the utmost confidence; for the author has long ago acquired the reputation of deep learning, judicial calmness, ripe wisdom, experience in the sifting of evidence, practice and skill in the art of literary composition. The history commences with an incident which occurred some six centuries ago, and which must fall with all the shock of a surprise upon the vision of readers who have caught the modern knack of thinking and talking of a certain fellow-creature as the "unspeakable Turk." This incident introduces the Turk as a chivalrous leader who, under a name which, being interpreted, means the "right-hearted man," came, with his followers, "upon a field of battle, on which two armies of unequal numbers were striving for the mastery," and who at once formed the generous resolution of striking in on the side of the weaker. From that hero's son, Othman, came the appellation of the Ottoman Turks, whose character, as drawn by the author, when they are not under the influence of warlike frenzy or religious fanaticism, appears to be anything but "unspeakable," and who are considered by the author to have owed, in no small degree, the bad name which they have certainly acquired in their official capacity to the example set them by those "renegades from Christendom, of whom so large a portion of the Turkish officials has been composed." But, whatever may be said in favour or excuse of the Turk, there are very few of us, perhaps, who do not regret his presence among the European family of nations; and that regret is increased rather than diminished by the reflection that Christendom itself was probably to blame for the fixity and continuation, if not the initiation, of that presence. It is impossible not to feel some such misgiving when we read the following significant sentence:—"The Roman See, once so energetic in exciting the early crusades, had disregarded the progress of the new Mahometan power, so long as the heretical Greeks were the only sufferers beneath its arms." One cannot help thinking that the followers of the Crescent were as much indebted to the lamentable divisions between the followers of the Cross as they were to their own prowess for the settlement of the Mohammedan incubus upon certain fair countries of south-eastern Europe; and that the Christian of to-day owes his sufferings, originally, less to the inherent "unspeakableness" of the Turk than to the early dissensions of the Christian Church. Such considerations cannot be altogether neglected when Christian brotherhood is the plea, genuine or false, upon which one Power claims the right to despoil another and drive it "bag and baggage" out of its possessions. Nor can anybody fail to see the force of our author's remark that the "declaration of insolvency on the part of Turkey did more than anything else to create a wide-spread belief that the speedy downfall of the Ottoman Empire was to be expected; and it also did much to create the disfavour with which the Turks have lately been regarded in England, compared with the general zeal in their behalf which was generally felt here when Turkey was attacked by Russia in 1854. Defaulters are always unpopular." Add to all this the dreadful tale of "atrocities," the report of which made the ears of everyone who heard it to tingle, and it is no wonder if the Turks have fallen so low in English estimation as to make it desirable that what he was and what he is and what is likely to become of him should be studied and divined in and from a perusal of the "History of the Ottoman Turks." Time has unfortunately upset the hopes of peace with which the author concludes his volume; and it remains to be seen how far he will be justified in his opinion that the war between Russia and Turkey is "almost certain to extend itself to other nations." Nobody, perhaps, will be more rejoiced than he to find himself astray in his conjecture.

Outrageous partisanship and headlong dogmatism, together with unquestionable learning and knowledge of the subject, will, of course, be expected in The Ottoman Power in Europe, by Edward A. Freeman, D.C.L., LL.D. (Macmillan and Co.), and the expectation will not be in vain. The volume is one in which the hater of Turks may fairly revel; for, while there will be no doubt about the firmness of the historical ground, the structure built upon it will be found to be sufficiently fantastic and sufficiently laden with vituperative ornamentation to gratify the taste of the most virulent anti-Turk. The author's fiery eloquence and swinging periods, to say nothing of his masterly grasp and lucid exposition of history, are excellent reading; but very often his eloquence degenerates into something far worse than rhetoric. Moreover, the language in which, both in his preface and elsewhere, he does not consider it unbecoming to speak of Lord Beaconsfield, Lord Derby, and others, who have at least a right to be treated with common civility, will hardly commend itself to even the most rabid of his party. He is believed to be identical with the gentleman who was wont to be so hard on the ruffians who would course a hare; and yet he calls upon us, in so many words, to hunt the Turk—who, after all, is a fellow-creature—out of Europe with as little mercy and with as much violence as we would employ in the destruction of a dangerous wild beast. It is ten thousand pities that one who has so much scholarship, and who ought to display a corresponding cultivation, should have so little control over his temper and his words. By his frantic declamation and abuse of all who take the liberty of differing from him he detracts immensely from the weight of that which is really valuable in his work—that is to say, the greater portion of it; for it is probable that he has exceeded in vigour, lucidity, pithiness, brevity, completeness, every writer who ever before attempted to give an intelligible, comprehensive sketch of the growth and decline of the Ottoman power in Europe within the limits of scarcely more than two hundred pages. His summary at the commencement of his fifth chapter is a notable specimen of instructive condensation or condensed instruction.

A thin volume, containing, in three chapters of moderate length, a somewhat bald account of a by no means eventful trip is not much to offer under the suggestive title of Turks and Greeks, by the Hon. Dudley Campbell (Macmillan and Co.); but it is all that an expectant reader will get. The author's tour is soon described; and it must be allowed to have been undertaken at a time when he should have had a chance of seeing and hearing something more memorable than, to judge from what he has recorded, he was destined to see and hear. For it was in August, 1876, that he started from Dover, and proceeded in the usual way by Ostend to Vienna. He then made his way, not to mention places of less importance, to Pesth, Belgrade, Bucharest, Rustchuk, Varna, and Constantinople. From Constantinople, after spending some time there, he took steamer for Athens, which he reached in due course. He "did" Athens, visited one or two of the Ionian Islands, left Corfu for Brindisi, and so made his way home by Italy and France. On his travels he fell in with communicative newspaper correspondents, with Dr. Sandwith and Lady Strangford, of philanthropic fame, with traces of Mr. Forster and Lord Hartington in their energetic pursuit of information, with an intelligent German engineer, who "had lived in Turkey twenty years" and had the worst possible opinion of the "Turkish official system in all its departments," with at least one zaptieh or Turkish policeman, and with various more or less affable personages of various nationalities; but from none of them does he happen to have learnt anything that can be described as particularly new, or particularly true, or particularly striking. Even the Greek who said, "We have no confidence in the Russians," and who apparently supposed that he was imparting a piece of news, was only repeating what had been pretty widely known for more than a quarter of a century. It is true that, during the Crimean War, the hearts of the Greeks were with the Russians rather than with us; but, to pass over the religious question, the hearts of the Greeks are always with everybody who tries to weaken the power of the Turks, though the ingenuous Greek would grieve to see Russians or Slavs or anybody but the Greeks deriving benefit from Turkish weakness. The Greek dreams of Constantinople, as the Jew of Jerusalem; and that fact may account for whatever has appeared surprising in the attitude of the Greeks during the present disturbances in South-Eastern Europe. It is a question whether the Greeks would not rather have the Turk than the Russian at Stamboul; whether they do not hope more from the increasing feebleness of the former than from the religious relationship and possibly consequent generosity of the latter. But to return to the little narrative. It does not pretend to be much "more than the substance of two lectures on a vacation tour made last autumn in Turkey and Greece given in the winter, one to a country audience, and the other to the College for Working Men and Women in Queen-square;" and it is intended for a class of persons "whose occupations scarcely leave them time 'for solid works' upon the topics of the day. Of such persons it will probably be found to meet the requirements; and the map which accompanies it will conduce thereto.

During the past year events have succeeded one another, if with no great increase of speed, yet with so much augmentation of importance, that names which were upon the lips of everyone at the commencement of the troubles in South-Eastern Europe are now all but forgotten, and such a title as Two Months with Tcherniaeff in Servia, by Philip H. B. Salusbury (Chapman and Hall), wears quite an antiquated air. For this neither the author nor the publishers are to be held responsible, for they are believed to have struck while the iron was hot, to have sent out their book a long while ago, at an early and an opportune season, though circumstances have hitherto delayed the notice which it fully deserves. It is the sort of book which might be read at any time without much diminution of interest; for it is, above everything, a personal narrative. Indeed, the personality is almost obtrusive; at any rate, it is so conspicuous as to lay the author open to a charge of egotism. But in extenuation of that fault he might very fairly plead the youth and inexperience which he hopes, not without good reason, will be admitted as a plea in mitigation of severe criticism as regards his literary style. However, one cannot help smiling at the idea of a young subaltern, only twenty-one years of age, who served for two months as a volunteer in the army of which Tcherniaeff was commander-in-chief, writing as if he had expected to be treated by the Russian General with some kind of special regard. "No one," he says, "has less cause to be grateful to Tcherniaeff than myself, for he never treated me with common civility, and I never had a kind word from him, with one exception, the whole time I served under him." There is delicious ingenuousness in the familiarity of the tone, in the omission of any respectful military title, and in the unconscious betrayal of a firm belief that Russian generals and English subalterns are of about equal standing—a standing in which alone there could be much question of civility and the like. On the other hand, one is led by such books—pleasant, amusing, and exciting though they be—as the author's to ask oneself whether the gallant English youths who go, as he went, on their own hook, as the saying is, to join in foreign wars which are no concern of theirs must not be very often regarded by those to whom they offer their valuable services as nuisances rather than anything else, and must not cause more trouble than is compensated for by the good they do. In the first place, they are generally liable to the reproach which was levelled against David of going in pride and naughtiness of heart to see a battle—that is to say, they have no lot or part in the matter to be decided by arms; they are prompted chiefly, if not entirely, by the desire of seeing what real war is like, and possibly of gaining some knowledge which may at some future time lead to their advancement in their own service. In the next place, they are very often totally ignorant of the language or languages spoken in the country whose cause they embrace; ignorant also of that country's history, even to the extent of not knowing so much as the name of the reigning Prince. Hence they begin, as was the case in the present instance, by getting into all kinds of scrapes and putting the authorities to all kinds of inconvenience. Then they abuse the native officials for stupidity and suspiciousness. All this, of course, as in the present instance, tends to give piquancy to the narrative as a record of personal adventure; but the narrative must be regarded solely from that point of view. So regarded, the book under consideration may be read with much pleasure and satisfaction. Readers will be delighted with their young fellow-countryman's animal spirits, pluck, cheerfulness, nonchalance, and gallant bearing in hardship and difficulty; and they will be proud of the excellent example he shows as a soldier and a horseman, though they may wish that he was a little more reticent about his swearing, and his spurring, and his thrashing. As a critical survey of a celebrated campaign, it is not probable that the volume will be considered of any great value; how many Russians really took part in the various battles, what amount of strategical ability was displayed, and whether the Servians deserved the contempt with which they have been spoken of as soldiers, are points which have certainly been touched upon incidentally, but they have not been discussed in such a manner as to set the vexed questions by any means at rest. At one time the Servians are branded as rank cowards; but, at another, it is mentioned as "a curious fact that whereas, as a rule, the Servian infantry were cowards, the artillery, on the contrary, were as brave as could be desired." It would surely have been worth while to investigate the matter, in case some cause might be discovered or some theory propounded to explain this "curious fact." The author's description of the squadron to which he was at first attached reads like downright caricature. However, he was spared from all perils, whether in battle or in rejoicings among his own troopers, to wear a gold medal, "as well as the gold cross of Takova," and, what is more to the present purpose, to write a very entertaining book. It occurs to one, nevertheless, to ask whether there is not something ludicrous in the spectacle of a young gentleman gratuitously courting dangers and then returning "heartfelt thanks" to "a good Providence" for carrying him through them "scatheless." If he desired to be scatheless, the more reasonable course would have been to remain at home and mind his own business, instead of positively tempting Providence, with a sort of self-complacent reliance upon undeserved protection.

That civilised England is, in at least one respect, behind primitive Montenegro will be acknowledged, with a sense of humiliation and injury, by any of the ladies called strong-minded who shall happen to take up and peruse the two solid volumes entitled Travels in the Slavonic Provinces of Turkey-in-Europe, by G. Muir Mackenzie and A. P. Irby (Daldy, Isbister, and Co.), for at the two hundred and sixty-seventh page of the second volume it is thus written:—"According to Danilo's code, the Montenegrin woman has, in every respect, the same legal rights as a man." But to such ladies, or to the whole race of Englishwomen, let not the perusal of the two volumes be confined; let men also, as many Englishmen as have leisure, fall to and study the volumes, in which is contained a prodigious amount of information, conscientiously obtained from trustworthy sources, and set forth in a manner which makes it both agreeable and profitable to acquire. Moreover, there are illustrations, many and striking, elucidating and embellishing the letter-press. And the whole is introduced by a preface, wherein the able pen of an illustrious man and voluminous writer, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P., has found congenial employment in treating of a subject upon which he feels so deeply and has spoken and written so often and so eloquently, though at the same time, perhaps, a little perfervidly and wildly. Now, when a book about Turkey is introduced by Mr. Gladstone with a sonorous preface, it is unnecessary to state how the Ottoman empire fares in the pages of that book; the utter destruction of that empire is his present passion, and is urged by him with a pertinacity which reminds us of what tradition tells about the famous Cato, who never omitted, in season and out of season, to impress upon the Roman Senate the necessity of destroying Carthage. But this need not prevent us from giving a modified assent to Mr. Gladstone's assertion that "no diplomatist, no consul, no traveller among our countrymen has made such a valuable contribution to our means of knowledge in this important matter as was made by Miss Mackenzie and Miss Irby, when they published, in 1867, their travels in some of the Slavonic provinces of European Turkey," and that "the journey was indeed one which would never have been undertaken except by ladies endowed with a courage and resolution as remarkable as their discernment and their benevolence." The original narrative—that of 1867—appears now in a revised form, with the addition of three chapters, with which the first volume commences, and which are headed, respectively, "Bosnia in 1875," "Journey in Bosnia in August, 1875," and "Bosnia in 1876-7." For these chapters Miss Irby alone is responsible; Miss Mackenzie being understood to have died in 1874. There is just the difference which might have been expected between the greater portion of the work and the smaller, supplementary part; for the former was written under ordinary, and the latter under extraordinary, conditions. No part of the work testifies to a disposition at all favourable to the Turk; but in the more recently written portions there is evidence of a distinctly hostile spirit. This was inevitable after the scenes which have been witnessed; the most statesmanlike, the most learned, the most judicial, the most expanded minds, as well as the narrowest and most volatile, having completely lost their balance in the whirl and excitement of irrepressible indignation. At the same time, though a tendency may be observed in Miss Irby's recent additions to adopt the tone of the accuser and denouncer instead of the former more purely descriptive style, it is probable that the work, as a whole, will leave no impression whatever of partiality, but a very strong one of faithfulness in the reproduction of personal experiences among countries and peoples whose present and future destinies are at this moment the most interesting of all topics. No difference of opinion can diminish the attractiveness of the pages occupied with descriptions of various visits paid to various persons and places, and with historical sketches of Servia and Montenegro.

The valetudinarian class of travellers and excursionists from town, before they resolve to start for Germany or Switzerland, should once more be reminded that North Britain has its medicinal waters, as well as its refreshing airs and interesting scenery, which may do them as much good as those of the Tannus, the Black Forest, the Alps, or the Pyrenees. To Strathpeffer, in Ross-shire, twenty-five miles beyond Inverness, we would direct the attention of those who are recommended to try a fine sulphurous cold draught, for the benefit of the stomach and liver and other digestive organs, and of the skin, and the nervous system. Dr. Manson, of Chesterfield, has described and discussed the merits of the Strathpeffer Spa in a short treatise published by Messrs. J. Churchill and Co., which may be consulted by those who desire further information.

Tourists on the Continent who mean to inspect the customary sights and shows of foreign cities will find help in the little volume, just published by Macmillan and Co., which is called "A Handbook to the Public Picture-Galleries of Europe." The author is Miss Kate Thompson, daughter of Sir Henry Thompson, the eminent surgeon, and she has been encouraged both by him and by Mr. George Grove to undertake this useful piece of work. It is not a mere guide-book and catalogue, but includes a brief historical sketch of the rise and progress of art in different countries, Italy, Flanders, Holland, Germany, Spain, France, and England. The volume is not too cumbersome for a lady's hand-bag or a gentleman's coat-pocket.

Experimental trials of the electric light were made on the Téméraire at Chatham on Monday night, with special reference to the detection of the presence of torpedo-boats at night. The vessel leaves for the Mediterranean to-day (Saturday). The trials were satisfactory.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 1990.—VOL. LXXI.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1877.

WITH } SIXPENCE.
TWO SUPPLEMENTS } By Post, 6d.

RUSSIAN WOUNDED SOLDIERS BEGGING TO BE CARRIED FROM THE FIELD OF BATTLE.
A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

BIRTHS.

On the 22nd ult., at The Larches, Adisham, Lady Victoria Villiers, of a son.
On the 24th ult., Lady Balfour of Burleigh, of a daughter.
On the 25th ult., at Ardfray, Ireland, Lady Wallcourt, of twin daughters.
On the 28th ult., at Great Sarratt Hall, Rickmansworth, the wife of W. B. Green, of a daughter. Australian papers please copy.
On the 18th ult., at Irton Hall, Cumberland, the wife of J. L. Burns-Lindow, Esq., High Sheriff of Cumberland, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 23rd ult., at St. Saviour's Church, South Hampstead, by the Rev. Alfred Ainger, Reader at the Temple Church, assisted by the Rev. J. C. H. H. John Frederick, son of George B. Murly, solicitor, of Bristol, to Annie Perot, eldest daughter of Jonas Browne, of 18, Fellows-road, N.W., London. W.I. papers please copy.
On the 28th ult., at St. John's Pariah Church, Hampstead, by the Rev. J. W. Talboys, James Ellis, of Abbey-road and Boundary-road, St. John's-wood, N.W., to Eleanor Frances, daughter of Edward Hunt, of Kensington-crescent, W.
On July 14, at the British Legation, Lima, Peru, and subsequently at the house of John Mathison, Esq., uncle of the bride, by the Rev. B. J. Weatherhead, M.A., assisted by the Rev. Campbell Mackinnon, B.A., Noel West, manager of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, Callao, to Nina, eldest daughter of George Petrie, Esq., late manager of that company. No cards.

On the 29th ult., at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, by the Ven. Archdeacon Buchanan, of Potterne, Wilts, assisted by the Hon. and Rev. John Grey, M.A., Rector of Houghton-le-Spring, the Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., brother of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, to Lady Beatrice Louisa Lambton, eldest daughter of the Earl of Durham.
On June 18, at Christ Church, South Yarra, Australia, by the Rev. W. N. Guinness, Walter Relf Pearless, M.R.C.S. Eng., of East Grinstead, Sussex, to Marianne Sessel, eldest daughter of H. Campbell Raikes, late Bengal Civil Service, of Weston-super-Mare, Somersetshire, and niece of Sir Arthur Nicholson, Bart.

DEATHS.

On the 28th ult., at the Manor House, Shepperton, Middlesex, W. S. Lindsay, Esq., late M.P. for Sunderland, in the 61st year of his age.
On the 24th ult., Lady Edith Tudway, aged 27.
On the 18th ult., Anne, widow of the late Rev. Henry Sewell, of Bagganley Hall, Chorley, aged 62 years.

* * The Charge for the Insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 8.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 2.
Fourteenth Sunday after Trinity.	Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Duckworth.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. Prebendary Row; 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Lightfoot; 7 p.m., Rev. H. W. Watkins, Chaplain of King's College.	St. James's, noon, probably Rev. Francis Garden.
	Whitehall, closed for repairs.
	Savoy, closed for alterations.
MONDAY, SEPT. 3.
Beginning of the New Style, 1752.	Library; the remains of Basingwerk Abbey, and the Holy Well of St. Winifred; 8.30 p.m., closing meeting.
British Archaeological Congress, Llan-gollen: 9 a.m., visit to Mostyn Hall for the examination of the
TUESDAY, SEPT. 4.
The present French Republic declared, 1870.	Gloucester Musical Festival, 1.45 p.m. (Mendelssohn's "Elijah"); evening, grand concert at the Shire Hall.
Staffordshire Agricultural Society, show at Burton-on-Trent (two days).	Races: Richmond.
WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 5.
Old St. Bartholomew's Day.	Entomological Society, 7 p.m.
Horticultural Society, fruit and floral committee, 11 a.m.; general meeting, 3 p.m.	Oxford Cattle and Horse Show (two days).
London Hospital, quarterly court, 1 p.m.	Gloucester Musical Festival, 11.30 a.m. (Bach's Passion Music—St. Matthew); 7.30 p.m. (Haydn's "Creation"; Mendelssohn's "St. Paul").
Serpentine Swimming Club, 7 a.m., captaincy race.
THURSDAY, SEPT. 6.
Walker Art-Gallery, Liverpool, to be opened by the Earl of Derby.	Worral Agricultural Society Show, Birkenhead (three days).
Gloucester Musical Festival, 11.30 a.m. (Kyrie, Luard Selby; Brahms's Requiem; Wesley's "Wilderness"; Hymn of Praise); evening, concert at the Shire Hall.	Royal Northern Yacht Club: Closing Cruise and Matches.
	Races: Canterbury, Wolverhampton.
FRIDAY, SEPT. 7.
New moon, 1.0 p.m.	Gloucester Musical Festival, 11.30 a.m. (Handel's "Messiah"); Special Evening Service.
Sun partially eclipsed: Invisible at Greenwich.
Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
SATURDAY, SEPT. 8.
Jewish Year 5638 begins.	Matches: Thames Sailing Club; New Brighton Sailing Club.
Wakefield dog show.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 84 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOM.		WIND.
	Barometer Corrected.	Thermometer of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum, read at 10 P.M.	Minimum, read at 10 P.M.	General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, at 10 a.m. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.	Inches.
Aug. 22	29.820	60.1	49.6	70	5	69.4	53.9	SW. WSW. W.	333	0.040
23	29.818	55.4	40.2	59	4	64.0	49.0	W.	184	0.000
24	30.128	55.2	41.6	63	7	66.2	42.5	W. SSW. S.	88	0.080
25	29.666	57.8	55.9	94	10	63.1	54.8	SSW. E. SSW.	332	0.800
26	29.766	61.6	54.8	80	1	65.8	56.8	SW. W. WSW.	234	0.230
27	29.854	62.6	60.7	94	10	67.2	57.4	SW.	413	0.040
28	29.689	62.9	55.8	79	8	68.8	60.3	SW.	5	0.000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—
Barometer (in inches) corrected ... 29.770 29.773 30.170 29.800 29.622 29.853 29.710
Temperature of Air ... 64.7° 68.3° 67.1° 68.3° 63.2° 66.0° 61.2°
Temperature of Evaporation ... 68.8° 61.6° 60.9° 66.0° 66.7° 62.7° 62.2°
Direction of Wind ... WSW. WSW. W. S. W. SW. SW.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 8.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30
8 15	8 15	8 15	8 15	8 15	8 15	8 15
9 00	9 00	9 00	9 00	9 00	9 00	9 00
9 45	9 45	9 45	9 45	9 45	9 45	9 45
10 30	10 30	10 30	10 30	10 30	10 30	10 30
11 15	11 15	11 15	11 15	11 15	11 15	11 15
12 00	12 00	12 00	12 00	12 00	12 00	12 00
12 45	12 45	12 45	12 45	12 45	12 45	12 45
1 30	1 30	1 30	1 30	1 30	1 30	1 30
2 15	2 15	2 15	2 15	2 15	2 15	2 15
3 00	3 00	3 00	3 00	3 00	3 00	3 00
3 45	3 45	3 45	3 45	3 45	3 45	3 45
4 30	4 30	4 30	4 30	4 30	4 30	4 30
5 15	5 15	5 15	5 15	5 15	5 15	5 15
6 00	6 00	6 00	6 00	6 00	6 00	6 00
6 45	6 45	6 45	6 45	6 45	6 45	6 45
7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30	7 30

DORE'S GREAT WORKS, "THE BRAZEN SERPENT." "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM," and "CHRIST ENTERING THE TEMPLE," each 3ft. by 2ft.; with "Dream of Pilate's Wife," "Christian Martyr," &c., at the DORE GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, W. Daily, 10 to 6. Is.

ELIJAH WALTON.—EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, chiefly ALPINE and EASTERN, ON VIEW and for SALE at very moderate prices.—NOW OPEN, at BURLINGTON GALLERY, 193, Piccadilly. Ten to Six. Admission (including Catalogue), Is.

CRYSTAL PALACE PICTURE-GALLERY.—Open all the year round for the RECEPTION and SALE of PICTURES by the British and Foreign Schools. For Particulars apply to Mr. G. W. Wass.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE MOORE AND BURGESS MINSTRELS will introduce an ENTIRELY NEW PROGRAMME. The whole of the Songs contained in the first or musical portion of the Entertainment will be changed. New Dances, New Whistallities, and New Burlesque sketches. The New Programme will be given EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT, and on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at THREE and EIGHT.

Fausts, &c.; Sofa Stalls, 2s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Doors Open at 2.30 for the Day Performance; at 7.30 for the Evening Performance. No fees. Ladies can retain their bonnets in all parts of the Hall.

Now ready,
THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK for 1878.
Containing Twenty-Four Engravings from the Illustrated London News—viz., Gates of Constantinople, Forts on the Bosphorus and the Black Sea, Old Modes of Locomotion, &c.; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Licenses; Eclipses, Remarkable Events, Post-Office Regulations, and a great variety of Useful and Interesting Information. The Trade supplied by G. VICKERS, Angel-court (172), Strand; and H. WILLIAMS, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—Great Success.—HAMILTON'S RUSSO-TURKISH WAR. Vivid representations of the most important Events of the Campaign. Magnificent Scenes in Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Vienna, Belgrade, &c. EVERY EVENING at Eight; Wednesday and Saturday, at Three and Eight.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1877.

The military struggle between the Empires of the Czar and the Sultan has not yet developed decisive results for either. The balance of success, in the long run at least, inclines towards Russia, but the immediate position is less favourable to her than the world in general had expected would be the case. The task she had undertaken is evidently a far greater one than she had foreseen. At the outset she had plainly underrated the strength of resistance which she was destined to encounter. Both in Armenia and in Bulgaria she has committed the same mistake. She seems to have aimed at brilliancy of movement without due consideration of solidity, and the result has been the same in Europe as in Asia. She will probably retrieve the error which has led her astray, but it may be at the expense of a second campaign. She has the advantage of numbers over her adversary, but she does not yet appear to know how to turn it to decided account. Her strategy has been based upon a misappreciation of the spirit and force which she would be called upon to subdue. She has not yet, however, exhausted the resources at her command, though she has been compelled to draw upon them far beyond her first anticipations. For the moment she has to pause in order to gather up fresh strength; and it is doubtful whether she will sufficiently recover herself to accomplish the immediate ends she had in view before winter sets in and practically imposes a temporary limit upon the military movements of both parties.

The on-looking world may draw some inferences from the progress of events hitherto, whatever may be their ultimate issues. Until now the conflict has been one of soldiers—that is, of rank and file. The courage and endurance of the troops engaged, whether Russian or Turkish, have been not simply on a par with, but even beyond, most precedents. The enthusiasm on both sides, and the difficulties and dangers with which they have grappled and to which they have cheerfully exposed themselves, probably grow out of the religious sentiment with which both the army of Russia and that of Turkey is inspired. In each case it is associated with lamentable ignorance of facts, in each also it is inflamed by inveterate prejudices, and in each the result is that both armies believe that they are fighting for God as well as for country. So far as mere military material is concerned, both the Czar and the Sultan may be looked upon as well provided. But modern wars require more than this. The power of machinery needs to be directed by sufficient intelligence, and in this respect both sides appear to be wanting. In the beginning the Turks evidently suffered from defective and apathetic generalship, as the Russians did from too great a reliance upon their superiority of force. Things are changed now, to some extent, but there is evidently on both sides too great a disposition to count upon the sacrifice of life as one of the main elements of successful warfare. The Battle of Plevna and the terrible struggles in the Shipka Pass alike indicate a deficiency of strategic genius—genius, that is, competent to bring about the most decisive results with the least expenditure of living means. Enough soldiers have now been hurled to destruction to have accomplished, under adequate scientific guidance, almost any end that can be contemplated by fighting; and the very fact that no such end has been achieved furnishes sufficient ground for a presumption that on neither side has generalship been of equal avail with numbers.

We are not sure that, in the interests of humanity, this is much to be deplored. The world does not stand in need of any additional development of all-conquering genius in relation to war. The odds are that it would flame out into ambition which, whether selfish or patriotic, would tend to trouble the peace of mankind. Great warriors are like fire—they may be useful assistants in suitable emergencies, but they are terrible masters. We know not whether they are a greater scourge to the country which they lead to victory, or to that over which they triumph. We are not, therefore, depressed by the fact that the gigantic stature of Russia is not, as it would appear, under the guidance of a corresponding superiority of mind. We do not disparage the talents of its generals or of its diplomats, but we draw a marked distinction between military talents and strategical genius. The first satisfies, the second dazzles, the people who are ostensibly served thereby. We could hardly wish for Russia—or, indeed, for Europe—at the present time a greater curse than that she should be able to claim as her own a Napoleon I. or even a Count Moltke. With the elements of power which she possesses any such accession to it would be disastrous to humanity. We wish her well out of the present struggle. We have no doubt she will finally achieve, although at no little cost to herself, the object she has ostensibly proposed. But her success will not encourage a warlike ambition. Possibly her people even now begin to doubt whether the enterprise which she so chivalrously undertook at her sole cost was one which, either for her own well-being or for the well-being of the Christian populations of Turkey, was to be commended for its wisdom.

The events of the last few weeks, we should imagine, must have toned down any fears which really existed in regard to the exposure of India to a Russian invasion. They who would have us base our foreign policy upon the possibility of such a movement must surely have been convinced of the unreality of its character. There seems to have been among our politicians a section of them who attributed to Russia a sort of magical supremacy, both in regard to diplomatic craft and in regard to physical force. They may have learned during the last few weeks that neither breadth of territory nor extent of population gives to its possessors undisputed command over the world's affairs. Between even the farthest outlying posts of the Russian Empire and British India there lie far greater, more numerous, and more varied, obstacles to be overcome than any which have been encountered by her in her War with Turkey. For a generation at least, if not two generations, her policy will obviously be to husband with the utmost care her domestic resources. Once well through this war, her statesmen will be compelled, we think, to bestow their chief attention upon her home interests. The pressure of national sentiment which has forced her rulers into the present conflict, will probably urge them to some modification of her own political institutions, and, for some time to come, at all events, after the close of the present struggle, she will be too straitened and too busy at home to make distant excursions into the territories of other Powers.

THE COURT.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Prince Leopold, arrived at Balmoral Castle at three o'clock p.m. yesterday week from the Isle of Wight. The Prince of Wales, with his three daughters and Prince George and the Princesses of Schleswig-Holstein, lunched with her Majesty previously to her departure from Osborne. The Queen, Princess Beatrice, and Prince Leopold attended Divine service on Sunday, performed at Balmoral by the Rev. Archibald Campbell of Crathie. On Monday Prince Leopold, with the gentlemen in waiting and the servants and tenants of the Balmoral, Aberfeldie, and Birkhall estates, assembled at the Obelisk at noon and drank to the memory of the Prince Consort, Sunday having been the anniversary of the Prince's birthday. The Queen, with the members of the Royal family, has made various excursions on Deeside, and has walked and driven out daily on the Royal demesne. The Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy is the Minister in attendance upon her Majesty; he dines generally with the Queen. Sir Thomas and the Hon. Lady Biddulph have also dined with her Majesty.

Viscount Bridport has succeeded Colonel McNeill, C.B., V.C., as Equerry in Waiting to the Queen.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Princess of Wales, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor of Wales, left Marlborough House on Saturday last for Cowes. The Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz took leave of their Royal Highnesses at Victoria Station. The Princess and the Prince travelled by special train, which was under the charge of Mr. J. P. Knight, general manager of the railway. Special arrangements had been made by the railway authorities to insure the most comfortable journey possible for the Prince, who was able to walk without assistance along the platform to the train. At Portsmouth their Royal Highnesses were met by the Prince of Wales and Prince George. The Royal party embarked on board the Royal yacht Osborne and left for Cowes under a salute from the harbour battery.

THE KING OF DENMARK.

The King of Denmark left Marlborough House yesterday week upon his return to Denmark. The Princess of Wales accompanied her father to Charing-cross, and took leave of him upon his departure for Dover. Sir Edward Watkin, M.P., chairman, and Mr. John Shaw, general manager of the railway, were in attendance at the station. The King passed the night at the Lord Warden Hotel, and crossed the Channel the next day.

His Excellency the Russian Ambassador, Count Schouvaloff, has arrived at Cowes.

His Excellency Count Münster has left the German Embassy to pay a series of visits in the country. The Countess Marie Münster has gone to Germany on a visit to the Crown Princess.

His Excellency the Danish Minister and Madame de Bülow have returned to town from visiting the Earl and Countess of Ilchester, at Melbury.

His Excellency the Chinese Minister, Sin-Ta-Jen, accompanied by Mr. Sin-Fu-Zi, his attaché, and Mr. Brown, secretary and interpreter, arrived at the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin, on Monday, from London.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland left Dublin on Monday for Belleek, in the county of Fermanagh, on a fishing excursion.

The Duke and Duchess of Westminister and Lady Beatrice Grosvenor have left Eaton Hall, Cheshire, for Reay Forest, his Grace's shooting quarters in Scotland.

The Marquis Conyngham is in his yacht Minerva on a cruise off the coast of Holland.

The Earl and Countess Cowper have left Panahanger, Herts, for Scotland.

The Earl and Countess of Stradbroke and Ladies Rous have arrived at Henham Hall, Suffolk.

The Earl and Countess of Morley have left Homburg to meet the Countess Dowager and Lady Katherine Parker in Switzerland.

Earl Sydney has returned from Homburg. The Countess has come to town from Buxton.

The Earl of Denbigh has joined the Countess at Boulogne.

The Earl of Harrowby, accompanied by Viscount and Lady Mary Sandon, has arrived at Sandon Hall, near Lichfield.

The Earl of Shaftesbury has left his residence in Grosvenor-square on a visit to his son, the Hon. Evelyn Ashley, M.P., at Clarsybawn, Sligo.

Earl Brownlow has left town for Scotland.

The Countess Dowager of Craven has left town on a visit to the Countess of Coventry at Croome Court.

Viscount and Viscountess Stratford de Redcliffe have arrived at Frant Court, Tunbridge-wells.

Viscount and Viscountess Cardwell have arrived at Studley Royal on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon.

General and Mrs. Grant and Mr. Jesse Grant, accompanied by General Badeau, have left the Bristol Hotel, Burlington-gardens, for Edinburgh.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

The marriage of the Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., brother of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, and Lady Beatrix Louisa Lambton, eldest daughter of the Earl of Durham, was solemnized on Wednesday at St. George's Church, Hanover-square. Viscount Lambton was accompanied by all his brothers except Lieutenant the Hon. Hedworth Lambton, who is serving on board her Majesty's ship Alexandra, in Besika Bay. Lady Herbert of Lea was present. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, the Hon. Michael H. Herbert, and Mr. E. W. Hamilton. The bride was accompanied by her father. The bridesmaids were the Ladies Katharine, Eleanor, and Anne Lambton (her sisters), Lady Gladys Herbert (sister of the bridegroom), and Lady Victoria Edgcombe and Lady Florence Anson (cousins of the bride). The bride wore a dress of white satin duchesse of a very pale cream shade, made as a princess, with long train, trimmed with Brussels lace, and scarf with wreaths and bouquets of orange-blossom. She also wore a wreath of orange-blossoms and Brussels lace veil, fastened by diamond stars. Her jewels were a pearl and diamond locket and earrings, the gift of the Earl and Countess of Pembroke; and pearl and diamond bracelet, presented by the inhabitants of Wilton. The bridesmaids were attired in princess dresses composed of cream white poul de soie, trimmed with white satin and damascene buttons of steel and gold, and gipsy hats, trimmed with cream white feathers and bunches of plums. Each lady wore a handsome gold marguerite pendant with pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. The marriage service was performed by the Ven. Archdeacon Buchanan, of Potterne, Wilts, assisted by the Hon. and Rev. John Grey, Rector of Houghton-le-Spring, uncle of the bride. The register was attested by the Earl of Durham, Lady Herbert, the Duke of Abercorn, the Earl of Pembroke, Mr. E. W. Hamilton, and Lady Gladys Herbert. The Earl of Durham afterwards received a small party at breakfast in Charles-street, Berkeley-square. The bride and bridegroom left in an open carriage and four greys for Oak Dene, Holmwood, the Marchioness of Blandford's residence, near Dorking, for the honeymoon. Lady Beatrix's travelling dress was of white toulard royal, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, with close-fitting jacket en suite. White bonnet, covered with poppies. The wedding presents were very numerous and included a silver cup from Prince Leopold.

The Hon. Herbert P. M. Pakington, second son of Lord Hampton, and Miss Evelyn Nina Frances Baker, third daughter of Sir George Baker, Bart., were married on Thursday week.

The marriage of Miss Manners Sutton and Mr. Heathcote was solemnized on Saturday last, in the parish church of Newark-on-Trent. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Evelyn Arnaby and the Rev. Cruyer Murray Aynsley, uncles of the bride.

Marriages are arranged between Lord Ernest Seymour, third son of the Marquis of Hertford, and Lady Georgiana Fortescue, fourth daughter of Earl Fortescue; and between Mr. Arthur Grey Hazlerigg, Major Royal Scots Fusiliers, eldest son of Sir Arthur Grey Hazlerigg, Bart., of Nosely Hall, Leicestershire, and Miss Orr Ewing, eldest daughter of Mr. Archibald Orr Ewing, M.P., of Ballikinrain, Stirlingshire.

THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

At a meeting of the sub-committee of management in connection with the Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund, held on Monday, an additional sum of £20,000 was directed to be sent to the Governor of Madras. A telegram was also sent to the Duke of Buckingham to ensure the distribution of the money to the most distressing objects. The committee state that from information they have received they feel it necessary to appeal to the British public not to relax their efforts, and they are delighted to hear that many meetings are now being held in various parts of the country by public bodies and institutions for the purpose of assisting them in this work.

A telegram has been received from the Governor of Madras acknowledging the receipt of a message from the Lord Mayor thanking his Lordship, in the name of the people of Madras, for the efforts being made to relieve the sufferers by the famine in India, and stating that the distress in South Arcot and southward is on the increase, and that the Godavery has not filled.

Among the contributors to the Mansion House Fund are the Earl of Carnarvon, £200; Messrs. J. H. Schroder and Co., £250; Messrs. Bass and Co., £20; Messrs. Allsopp and Co., £210; Messrs. Roberts, Lubbock and Co., £105; the Skinners' Company, £105; Messrs. R. and J. Henderson, £100; Lord Hatherley, £100; Messrs. Luca Brothers, £100; Messrs. Lincoln, Bennett, and Co., £100; Messrs. Whitbread and Co., £100; Mr. Samuel Montague, £100; Messrs. Coutts and Co., £1000 (making, with other donations from the same quarter, £1805 14s.); Messrs. Glyn Mills, and Co., including clients of theirs, £1164; the Earl of Pembroke, £500; Sir Stafford Northcote, £100; the Earl of Port, £100; Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co., £100; Lord Penrhyn, £100; offertory at the parish church of Ludlow, £71 odd; the Lord Mayor of Dublin, £500 (first instalment); Mr. T. Emsley, £100; Mr. James Price, £100; Messrs. Combe and Co., £105; Cambridge University Branch, £150; the Duke of Cambridge, £50; Commercial Sale Rooms, Mincing-lane, a third instalment, £135 5s.; Messrs. Hird, Dawson, and Hardy, £100; London and County Bank, £105; Messrs. Charrington, Head, and Co., £100; collection at Worcester Cathedral, £40 17s. 8d.; Mr. R. Lowder, £100; the Ironmongers' Company, £105; the Royal Exchange Assurance Company, £100; Messrs. Knowles and Foster, £105; the Borneo Company (Limited), £100; Richardson, Findlay, and Co., £100; Messrs. Martin and Co., £100.

The Mansion House Fund amounted on Wednesday evening to £62,500.

A meeting, convened by the Lord Provost, was held at Glasgow on Wednesday, when nearly £3000 was subscribed. At Brighton £908 has been collected.

A meeting was held at York on Wednesday, which was presided over by the Lord Mayor of that city, and was addressed by the Archbishop. It was resolved that a subscription-list should be opened, and several hundred pounds were collected in the room.

At Norwich subscription-lists have been opened at the banks, at the instance of the Mayor, and collections are to be made at the churches throughout the diocese.

In other places the inhabitants are up and doing.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Marshal MacMahon is to leave Paris on the 6th inst. for a tour in the south-west provinces. He will visit amongst other places Bordeaux, Périgueux, Angoulême, Poitiers, and Tours, and will return on the 14th. Fifteen councils-general have, it is said, invited the Marshal to visit their departments.

M. de Fourtou, the Minister of the Interior, made a speech at the opening of the Council-General of the Dordogne, in which he defended the Government of Marshal MacMahon from various charges brought against it. He maintained that it did not desire war, but was eminently pacific, and that it did not deserve the insulting name of a priestly Government which had been given to it. The clergy, he added, should observe the laws of the State, and not interfere with temporal matters. In conclusion, M. de Fourtou said that he would not repudiate any of the principles of modern progress.

Meanwhile the Deputy-Mayor of Evreux, who recently told Marshal MacMahon that the whole of Normandy was deeply attached to Republican institutions, has been dismissed from his post. Count Rampon, Vice-President of the Senate, a member of the Left Centre, has been removed from his post as Mayor of Gilliac. The Agricultural Society of Domfront, to which M. de Marcère and M. Christophle, former Ministers, belonged, has been dissolved. M. Bucheron (or "Saint-Genest"), the author of two articles against the Duc de Broglie and General Berthaut which appeared in the Figaro, has been condemned to thirty days' close military confinement. Being a Lieutenant of the Reserve Forces, M. Bucheron falls under the jurisdiction of the military authorities, no member of the active army of France being allowed to publish or print anything whatever without the consent of the Minister of War. M. Waddington and M. de Sainte Vallier, both of the Left Centre, have been speaking in strong terms against the action of May 16.

M. Thiers made a speech at St. Germain, in reply to a Republican deputation, in the course of which he expressed his conviction that the Republic is the only possible Government for France, and assured them that they might rely on his constant efforts to support it. He had no doubt of the success of Republicanism in France, and he had no hesitation in assuring the deputation of it.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Council, held last Saturday, under the presidency of Marshal MacMahon, it was determined that prosecutions should be instituted against M. Gambetta and the newspaper editors who printed his recent speech at Lille. M. Gambetta has received a summons to appear before the Juge d'Instruction, M. Ragon, of the Civil Tribunal of the Seine, Palais de Justice, on Friday; and the manager of the République Française has received a like summons. The citation throws no light on the intention of the Government, as it contains no information as to the charge which they are called on to answer. These prosecutions are generally condemned.

The Republican subscription for the elections amounts to 200,000f. Of this sum, M. Menier gives 100,000f.; nine Paris papers, 2000f. each; M. Vincent de Bochet, 25,000f.; M. Koechlin (Alsace), 10,000f.; and M. Ferry, Senator, 1000f.

Sir Richard and Lady Wallace have laid the foundation-stone of a new hospital in the Rue de Villiers, Paris. Sir Richard Wallace explained that his idea in establishing the Hertford British Hospital had been to give to the British sick poor of Paris a comfortable home to which they could go to have their maladies cured or alleviated, under the care of physicians and nurses of their own country.

Madame Adeline Patti has begun proceedings for a nullification of her marriage with the Marquis de Caux. In the text of her request to the Tribunal of the Seine she states that at the time she imagined she had contracted a union in conformity with English and French law, but that she has found that the English clergyman who officiated at her marriage was not legally qualified; and she makes several other averments in support of her plea for release.

The cost of lighting the streets and public buildings of Paris last year was £186,230. There were 37,514 lamps in the streets, and 21,271 gas-burners used in the public buildings.

The Paris Prefecture of Police has fitted up a laboratory for the analysis of wine which the public wine-tasters suspect to be adulterated, and has appointed an analytical chemist, with a salary of £320 a year.

At the busy and thriving seaport of Havre the French Association for the Advancement of Science began its annual meeting on Thursday week. This busy and enterprising outlet for the North American trade, not merely from France, but also from the centre of Europe, presents a very striking contrast to the place of meeting of last year; Clermont, the ancient city and capital of Auvergne, a city of memories of things long passed, of the Crusades, and of the warlike deeds of the Middle Ages, though still a town of much importance. The president of last year was M. Dumas, the eminent chemist, this year his successor is Dr. P. Broca, distinguished in his early years as an eminent professor of medicine in Paris, but of late years an eager follower of the younger science of anthropology, in which his studies, particularly on craniology, have raised him to the foremost rank of European anthropologists. Dr. Broca opened the session by an interesting address on the anthropology during the quaternary period of geology of the races of Western Europe, which he considered as three in number, and belonging to two distinct divisions in craniology. The Mayor, M. Masurier, heartily welcomed the association to the town, which, as well as the shipping, was gaily decked with flags. Among the presidents of sections who are aiding Dr. Broca are M. Catalan, of the University of Liège, in the mathematical; M. Cornu, well known at the Royal Institution for his experiments on the velocity of light, presides over the physical; while M. Alluard, the courteous and well-known director of the Puy de Dôme Observatory, reigns over the meteorological section. The general secretaries (not permanent, as with the British Association, but changing each year) are the distinguished naturalist, M. Deheraid and Le Commandant Perrier, of the Bureau des Longitudes. Papers were delivered yesterday week on the geology of Havre and the neighbourhood, on the works of the Port of Havre, on Transatlantic Steam Navigation; and in the evening by Count Saporta, on the Climates of the Past in Connection with the changes in European Vegetation.

ITALY.

We hear from Rome that the bull regulating the procedure to be observed by the Conclave of Cardinals on the death of the present Pope has been completely drawn up at the Vatican. It empowers the Cardinal Camerlengo either to summon the Conclave immediately or to await the arrival of the foreign Cardinals. The death of Cardinal Bizzari is announced.

GERMANY.

It is stated that the German Government has received from the Cabinets of all the great Powers which have relations with the Porte a communication to the effect that their representatives in Constantinople have been instructed to join in the representations made by Germany respecting various violations of the Geneva Convention by its troops in the cruel treatment of the Russian wounded and prisoners.

Prince Bismarck, accompanied by his family, left Berlin on Thursday week for Gastein.

The Canossa Column at Bismarckstein, near Harzburg, was unveiled last Sunday in the presence of a large concourse.

The tailors of Berlin have passed a resolution that foreign fashions are to be discarded, and national German fashions introduced in their place.

AUSTRO-HUNGARY.

The Emperor, with the Crown Prince, returned on Wednesday week from Ischl to the Château of Schönbrunn. The Crown Prince has left for Miramere, proceeding thence to Pola, where he is to go through a course of nautical instruction.

A correspondent of the Daily News at Vienna says that in several churches in Hungary a Te Deum has been celebrated and prayers offered up for further Turkish victories, and that the Holy See has instructed the Bishops to prevent this.

GREECE.

The King and Queen have gone to Tenos. It is said that the King will afterwards proceed to inspect the Greek army on the Turko-Grecian frontier.

Denial has been telegraphed from Athens of a reported insurrectionary movement in Thessaly and Crete; but a number of the Christian inhabitants of the latter place have assembled at Clema and drawn up a memorandum to the Porte demanding, in threatening terms, an organic law for Crete, in conformity with the proposal of the Cretan Assembly.

RUSSIA.

The issue of rouble notes has been increased by 11,000,000. The Czar has ordered the State Bank to advance to agriculturists 60 per cent on the corn and wheat harvested. A Commission has been appointed to deliberate on the proposition that all passenger fares and charges for goods freights on the railways shall be collected in gold.

The fair at Nishni-Novgorod had been exceedingly dull, and merchants are demanding delay in the payment of debts.

AMERICA.

The National Board of Trade at Milwaukee has followed the Chamber of Commerce at New York in recommending the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States.

A New York telegram states that the Halford team arrived there last Saturday, and were met in Lower Bay by a committee of the National Rifle Association. The members were escorted to New York city, where they were received with enthusiasm. In the first day's practice at Creedmoor on Tuesday the average obtained by the American rifle team was 201 marks, and by the British team 190 marks.

The Government at Washington has received a communication from the American Consul at Liverpool warning American mechanics of the futility of coming to England in search of employment.

A Daily News telegram from New York announces that Brigham Young died on Tuesday of inflammation, after a few days' illness. He was in his seventy-seventh year. He joined the Mormons in 1831 or 1832, and became their leader after the murder of Joseph Smith, in 1844.

News has been received at New York from Des Moines, in Iowa, that a train on the Rock Island Railway has run into a creek several miles from Des Moines. Sixteen persons are known to have been killed, and it is feared that this number will be found to be greatly exceeded. There are, besides, a large number of wounded.

Lewis Brooks, who gave 50,000 dols. to the University of Virginia a year ago, and 12,000 dols. to the Washington Lee University, died suddenly at Rochester on the 8th ult.

The Indian tribe of Nez Percés have attacked two parties of settlers; sixteen of the latter were killed. General Howard continues in pursuit of the Indians.

CANADA.

The Quebec Morning Chronicle of the 10th ult. reports an attempt to upset a special train containing the Governor-General of Canada and Lady Dufferin, with their family and suite. The train was going west, and when about a mile and a half from Rudd's Mills, on the West Wisconsin Railway Company's line, the driver saw a woman ahead signalling to him to stop. The train was pulled up as quickly as possible, but only within a very short distance of a large bar of railroad iron, which had been placed across the track in such a manner that had the engine struck it the train would have been upset.

THE CAPE COLONIES.

News from the Cape to Aug. 7 says that Sir Bartle Frere intended visiting the Eastern Provinces about Aug. 15. The Griqualand West Annexation Bill has passed through all stages. A bill authorising the Cape Government to borrow £175,000 to pay the debts of that territory, including £90,000 due to the Free State, has virtually passed.

PERSIA.

An official notification has been issued that Persia has joined the Berne International Postal Union. The Convention takes effect from to-day (Saturday). There will be a weekly post, via Tiflis and Tabreez.

Better accounts respecting the plague have been received from Resht.

The Alexandria correspondent of the Standard telegraphs that the launch of the obelisk began last Tuesday morning.

The Prussian correspondent of the Times states that the Khedive, in return for his military services to the Porte, demands the right to form a navy.

The new iron barque Saraca, Captain Lynch, sailed from Queenstown on the 26th inst. with the undermentioned number of passengers bound for Maryburgh, Queensland—105 single men, 53 single women, 70 married people, 43 children between the ages of twelve and one, and 13 infants: making a total of 284 souls.

From the Customs' report recently issued, it appears that smuggling increased in tobacco and cigars, and also in spirits, last year, compared with the preceding. In 1876, of tobacco and cigars the quantity smuggled was 11,532 lb., being an increase of 3007 lb. on 1875. Of spirits the increase last year was thirty gallons, the figures showing 235 gallons smuggled in 1875 and 265 last year. These figures naturally suggest the question—How is it possible to know what has been smuggled? The unsuccessful ventures are, of course, known, but what of the successful ones?

Advices from Tashkend state that the country of Kashgar is now divided into three portions. The eastern part, comprising the territory round about the towns of Tourfan and Toksoon, is in the hands of the Chinese. Arks and Karashar, two other towns, have been seized by Kakeem-Khan-Toor, a former governor of the province in which they are situated, while Bek-Kooli-Bek, the eldest son of Yakoub-Beg, rules the rest of the country as far as the Russian frontier. As Kakeem and the late Emir's son are at variance, and are both being attacked by the Chinese, it is expected that Kashgaria will speedily succumb to the Celestials. No notice has been taken by General Kaufmann of Bek-Kooli-Bek's appeal to the Russian Government for assistance.

A U S T R I A N W A R P R E P A R A T I O N S .

DISTRIBUTING MILITARY SADDLES TO THE HONVEDS IN A VILLAGE OF HUNGARY.

HONVEDS COMING TO THE HUSSAR BARRACKS FOR THEIR ARMS AND EQUIPMENTS.

THE MASSACRES IN THE BALKAN VILLAGES.
SKETCHES BY THE "TIMES" NAVAL CORRESPONDENT, AND BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE MASSACRES IN THE BALKAN VILLAGES.

We have engraved for this week's publication two more of the sketches we have received from Captain James Gambier, R.N., the "Naval Correspondent" of the Times lately with the Turkish army of Adrianople. He visited the towns of Yeni Zagra (or Yeni Sagra), Eski Sagra, Kazanlik, and the neighbouring villages, during several days, and at short intervals of time, between July 17 and Aug. 5, to examine the traces and proofs of the atrocious massacres perpetrated there; and his letters have appeared in the Times. Besides the two sketches of Geula-Mahalissé, by Captain Gambier, we present on the same page one taken at Dalboka by our Special Artist, Mr. E. Matthew Hale, who accompanied General Gourko's Expedition. Mr. Hale's note upon it runs thus:—"Horrible discovery at the village of Dalboka, whither the Russians retreated on the night of the battle. There some unfortunate Bulgarians had been surrounded by the Turks, driven into the house, and burnt. All who tried to escape were shot down. The ruins were still smoking. This I saw with my own eyes."

The following is Captain Gambier's letter on the subject of his two sketches:—

"Aug. 3.

"Yesterday I visited a large Bulgarian village of upwards of 300 houses, that had been sacked, burnt, and the people massacred by the Bashi-Bazouks on July 30. The village is called Kara-atli, about sixteen miles from Tirnova, towards Philippopolis. The place is a total wreck, hardly one stone standing on another. It is more completely destroyed than any other I have visited. The people had all fled, so it is difficult to say what became of them, though the account of the survivors seems probable enough. This is, that a great many of them had left before the 30th, and gone to Philippopolis, but about 600 remained, chiefly women and children. They all ran away into the woods and fields on the approach of the Bashi-Bazouks, and many were caught and slaughtered at once, and others are roaming about until a similar fate overtakes them. Of the few corpses I saw, the most shocking was a woman with her head half hacked off, her clothes all torn away at the waist, and the body half burnt. Dogs and pigs were devouring the bodies, while donkeys and cattle strayed through the roads ownerless. The school had not been burnt, and had evidently been the scene of a terrible fray. Blood on the floors and door-posts, and all kinds of household gear, school-books, and other things in the greatest confusion, told the same dreadful tale. The spelling-books and childish copy-books appealed powerfully to every human instinct within me.

"This affair of Kara-atli, however, sinks into insignificance before the appalling horror of the massacre at Geula-Mahalissé. It appears that on the 26th a strong force, under Raouf Pasha, made a reconnaissance from Yeni-Sagra, and spent a night near the village above named, which is situated a little off the line of rail between Yeni-Sagra and Tirnova. After the force had left, a large body of Circassians returned to the village, and, in the first place, carried off an immense number of young girls, whose fate can only be guessed at. They then returned to the village, and found that the remainder of the women and children had fled for protection to the church. There they slaughtered them all, and from that church Colonel Lennox and Lieutenant Chermide, R.E., military attachés, and Messrs. Leslie and Meyrick, of the Aid to the Sick and Wounded Society, brought out and buried 175 bodies of women and children. Besides these, there were many others killed in different places about the village, and thirty-six wounded had their wounds dressed by the above-named medical officers. These eye-witnesses describe the scene in the church as something indescribably awful. The dead and the dying were piled in suffocating heaps, little children crawling about looking for their mothers, wounded mothers trying to move those ghastly heaps to find their children, and when found hardly able to recognise them with the fearful sword-cuts about their little heads. Many women had been violated and subjected to fearful barbarities, pregnant women ripped open, while others had their breasts cut off or their hands chopped off at the wrist. A mother lay stone dead, and her baby was vainly endeavouring to get the food for which it was starving; while an older child was calling and pushing the dead woman to try and make her awake. Even while these gentlemen were in the village the murdering was going on at another part, and so threatening were those ferocious ruffians that their lives stood in very great danger. A Circassian, from behind a hedge, took a deliberate shot at Mr. Meyrick, but missed him.

"To-day I availed myself of a train which was intended to have taken provisions and ammunition far enough up the line of rail to communicate with Suleiman Pasha, to visit the scene of this fearful massacre. I had previously, through my dragoman, got the officer in command of this force—upwards of 1200 men—to promise me a small escort of troops, three or four, which would have been quite sufficient; but when we arrived at the place he refused to let me have them because the village was Bulgarian, and he did not see any reason why he should do anything to help Giaours. However, as I was very anxious to learn the fate of the thirty-six wounded whom the doctors had left in the village, as there was no means of removing them, I went on with my dragoman and made an arrangement for the train to pick us up again if it came back at all. The village, or rather town—for I suppose it must have contained upwards of 4000 inhabitants—had not been burnt, except in a few outlying parts, but every house had been pillaged. We directed our steps through the deserted town towards the square wooden church tower, and entered the churchyard, where great mounds of fresh earth bore testimony to the numbers of dead that lay underneath. The scene in the church was one of complete confusion. It is a dark, gloomy building, about 60 ft. long by 25 ft. wide, and, sunk about 8 ft. below the outer surface of the ground, is entered by a flight of steps. A large wooden screen with a great number of icons, and one large painting of 'St. George and the Dragon,' separates the body of the church from the apse, which, however, does not appear to have been in any way an adytum, and resembled more the slips of a small theatre with a large rough wooden table and a few wooden benches. Some wooden erections, about five feet high, something like stalls in an embryo state, surround the church, and a flight of wooden steps leads up to the gallery, which extends to nearly one third of the whole body of the building. A pulpit and a reading-desk, in Byzantine style, complete the church furniture, and added considerably to the general effect of destruction by their tottering attitude. The floor of the church, and especially the steps near the screen, was saturated with blood, and clothes, broken boxes, books, and relics lay in one confused heap. On passing out through a small door at the east end of the church we came across the few survivors of the massacre, lying all huddled together on one of the great mounds of earth covering the graves—as if they had a superstitious horror of the church itself, but wished to remain as near as possible, for I am told the Bulgarians have an idea that it is better to die under the shadow of a sacred building. The party consisted of two very old women, one with her thigh fractured by a musket-ball, the other perfectly insane from terror, besides being blind. Another and younger woman, who had been slightly wounded in the body, also appeared insane, for she got up soon afterwards and ran away, and we could not find her again. A little girl of five had received a fearful sword-cut on her head, almost down to the skull, and about five inches long. It is a marvel the blow did not kill her. There were two old men also severely wounded. All these, with two orphan children, whose parents had been massacred, we with immense labour carried out of the churchyard and deposited in a bullock-cart. By this time two Bulgarian men had turned up, and it is hardly credible that we were obliged to thrash one of these idle, stupid vagabonds before he could be induced to go and fetch from the field close to the village the bullock to draw the araba. We could not induce two old women whom we found in another part of the village to accompany us. I regret this above all, as one of them claimed as her own a little girl of about three years old, a most engaging little creature, who, as the old woman was over seventy, could not well have been her daughter. These three I left behind me with many misgivings, but it is difficult to say when and where one is permitted or justified in setting aside the wishes of people even for their own good. I was sorely tempted to take away this fair little girl from these helpless old women, but they cried and begged so hard I would leave her that I at last reluctantly consented. As the Bashi-Bazouks have visited this village every day since the massacre, and have killed one or two more, and as I met a party of these villains just as we got out of the village, I can only suppose these poor old creatures, and probably that little child, will soon be beyond the reach of those hell-fends, where their terror and sorrow will be alike forgotten.

"We got back to the line just as the train came up, and, with more difficulty than I expected, lifted those poor creatures into the guard's van. I heard then of the pitiable end of this expedition, which for cowardice I think has never been equalled. This train, with all these armed men, had reached within half a mile of its destination, when some of the soldiers shouted out, 'Moscow, Moscow!' the panic cry of the Turkish army. About fifty Bulgarians, with white covers on their heads and rifles in their hands, had appeared, and, naturally enough, as quickly disappeared. In vain the inspector of the railway, who happened to accompany the train to see what damage had been done on the line, implored the officer to advance, and at least see whether there were any Russians or not; but nothing would induce him to do so, and, indeed, he became so terrified at the idea of being taken there in spite of himself that I have no doubt he would have ordered his men to shoot the inspector if he had persisted. After I rejoined the train the same thing occurred again. A panic set up among the troops—they had all got down to get water at a station—on one of them shouting out, 'Moscow, Moscow!' They rushed for the train again, instead of forming in companies, while the officer tore frantically down the line, shouting for the engine to go on. However, before the engine could be coupled, the cause of all their terror turned out to be six Bashi-Bazouks returning with great bales of plunder on each side of their horses from some neighbouring village.

"On returning to Karabunar the wounds of these poor people were attended to, and we learnt from them the fate of the thirty-six wounded who had been left in the village. It appears that some have gone to Eski Sagra, a few died, and about ten have been re-massacred, if I may be permitted the word. I accompanied them to Karabunar, taking with us also a Turkish woman who had been shot in the back some ten days ago, and who has the ball in her still. She is nursing a baby three months old. At Tirnova, after having put these people into another train for Adrianople, we thought that, at least, they might be safe there; but we were suddenly alarmed by a party of Bashi-Bazouks making an attempt to get at and murder these wretched old people. Had some of us not promptly drawn our revolvers and stood on the steps of the carriage there is not the smallest doubt they would have butchered them all. As it was, one ruffian ran round to the other side and hurled in through the window a piece of a chimney-pot weighing 40 lb. or 50 lb., which fortunately killed none of them. It was perfectly useless to send to the officer in command, for a variety of reasons. In the first place, no one ever knows who he is, as he is changed by every train. Secondly, he would not dare to lift a finger or give an order that the Bashi-Bazouks might resent. Thirdly, he was probably drunk—an opinion which may startle the admirers of the 'sober Turk'; but I have excellent reasons and good authority for believing that the sobriety is confined to the lower orders, and that drunkenness is by no means an exceptional state among the upper classes. At last we found an old creature who informed us he was the head Zaptieh, and, by threats of holding him responsible at Constantinople with his head if these people were injured during the night, we induced him to surround the carriage with a guard. The Bashi-Bazouks were very threatening with shouts of 'Giaour!' and loud cries to massacre all. It was a mauvais quart d'heure. There are at Tirnova now about 3000 Bashi-Bazouks and about 200 regulars. The large Bulgarian towns of Semetz and Tirnova are at the mercy of these people, and I cannot but think they must soon share the fate of the others.

"In the meanwhile, it is not a Bulgarian question alone. It becomes a most serious consideration how Europe is to get rid of the ruffians whom Turkey has armed, and whose sole idea is that the Christian is an 'institution' for him to earn a livelihood by robbing, and to glut his passion by violating and murdering. It is useless to blink the fact that Turkey is utterly powerless to deal with them herself; and yet of all her great crimes there are few greater than the employment of these hordes of undisciplined fanatics. Besides, the time cannot be far off when the desolation of the country and the starvation of the few scattered remnants of the population will afford no field for their operations, and they must fall back on the more civilised cities, such as Adrianople, Constantinople, Salonica, and so forth. With the Circassians, again, the cause for anxiety is still greater. The Turks stand in awe of these men, and the reason is not intelligible, for on nearly every occasion of a fight they have run away. The massacre of Yeni Sagra was chiefly done by them. The massacre of Geula-Mahalissé was exclusively Circassian, except the few cases since, when Bashi-Bazouks have visited the town. The Circassians have no quarrel with the Bulgarians, and no kind of excuse is discoverable for them. There is no retaliation in the matter—no long-standing feud fostered by foreign intrigue. They come from another continent, are armed and let loose by Turkey, and their deeds are written in letters of blood wherever a Christian, or even a Jew, is to be found."

The Channel Squadron, Lord Walter Kerr in command, arrived in Torbay on Sunday morning. The fleet, which left Vigo on Tuesday week and experienced a heavy sea with fair wind all the way, consists of the Minotaur, 17 guns; the Black Prince, 28 guns; the Defence, 16 guns; the Warrior, 32 guns; and the Hector, 18 guns. Several years have elapsed since the Fleet was in Torbay.

THE WAR.

Sanguinary conflicts in the Shipka Pass of the Balkans have been raging without intermission from day to day since the middle of last week. The army of Suleiman Pasha, mustering thirty thousand men, after driving the Russians back over the mountains, advanced from Kazanlik to the village of Shipka, which was reoccupied by the Turks on Sunday, the 19th ult. On the Tuesday following, Suleiman Pasha entered the Shipka Pass through which lies the road to Gabrova and to the old Bulgarian capital, Tirnova, north of the Balkans. The Russians, according to the Special Correspondent of the Daily News, from whose account (sent by telegraph) we shall largely quote, then had a garrison for their works in the Pass, consisting only of the Bulgarian Legion and one regiment of the 9th Division, both weakened by previous hard fighting, and probably reckoning little more than three thousand bayonets, with about forty cannon. No supports were nearer than Tirnova, a distance of forty miles. The same writer, describing the scene of action, tells us the Shipka Pass is not a pass at all in the proper sense of the term. 'There is no gorge, no defile; there is no spot where three hundred men could make a new Thermopylae; no deep-scored trench as in the Khyber Pass, where an army might be annihilated without coming to grips with its adversary. "The Shipka Pass," he says, "has its name simply because at this point there happens to be a section of the Balkans of less than the average height, the surface of which, from the Jantra Valley on the north to the Tundja Valley on the south, is sufficiently continuous, although having an extremely broken and serrated contour, to afford a foothold for a practical track, for the Balkans present a wild jumble of mountains and glen. Under such circumstances, such a crossing-place as the Shipka point affords is a practicable, although steep, high road. The ground on each side of the ridge is depressed, sometimes into shallow hollows, sometimes into cavernous gorges; but these lateral depressions are broken and have no continuity, otherwise they would afford a better track for a road than the high ground above. The highest peak is flanked on each side behind the lateral depressions by a mountainous spur higher than itself, and therefore commanding it, and having as well the command of the ridge behind. The highest peak—that is to say, the first of these two spurs—can rake the road leading up to the Russian positions. These spurs break off abruptly and precipitously, one on the northern edge, and therefore afford no access into the valleys north of the Balkans. Their sole use to the Turks, therefore, was in affording positions whence to flank the central Shipka ridge. It is possible also for troops to descend from them, struggle through the intervening glens, and, climbing the steep slopes of the Shipka ridge, give the hand to each other on the road which runs along its summit. This done, the Shipka position would, of course, be turned; but the advantage would be of little avail till the road had been opened by carrying the fortified positions on it. Without the command of the road an enemy might indeed send bands down the road on to which he had scrambled into the lower country about Gabrova, to burn and plunder, but the road over the Shipka constitutes for an army the only practicable line of communication in this section of the Balkans. Much has been said of the strength of the Shipka position. In these opinions I do not concur. It seems to me that unless strongly held, with wide extending arms of defence, it is easy to be attacked and very difficult to be held with any security. The strength of a position does not depend wholly on its elevation, or even on the difficulties of access to a direct attack, but on the clear range around it which its fire can sweep, and its ability to concentrate its fire on critical points. Herein lies the defect of the Shipka as a defensive position. It cannot search with its fire the jumble of lateral valleys and reverse slopes which hem it in. A brigade of light infantry might mass in a hollow within one hundred yards of the Russian first position without exposing itself to the artillery fire."

The Turks began the attack on the 21st (Tuesday week), pushing on directly up the steep above the village of Shipka. The Russian garrison, under General Stoletoff, fought hard, and hindered the Turks from gaining any material advantage, though they forced the outer line of the Russian shelter trenches on the slopes below the position of Mount Saint Nicholas, the highest peak of the Shipka Pass. The Russians had laid mines in front of their trenches, which were exploded just as the head of the Turkish assaulting parties were massed above them, and it is said that a number of Moslems were blown up in the air in fragments. The loss to the Russians on the first day's attack was but two hundred, chiefly of the Bulgarian Legion. On the second day (Wednesday week) the fighting was not heavy, the Turks being engaged in making a wide turning movement on the right and left flanks of the Russian position; these attacks were developed with great fierceness and pertinacity.

On Thursday week, the Turks assailed the Russian position on the front and flanks, and drove in the defenders from their outlying ground. The radical defects of the position became painfully apparent, its narrowness, its exposure, its liability to be outflanked and isolated. Fortunately reinforcements had arrived, swiftly marching from Selvi, a brigade of the 9th Division, commanded by General Derotchinski, and this timely succour was of material value to Stoletoff. The fight lasted all day, and at length, as the sun grew lower, the Turks had so worked round on both the Russian flanks that it seemed as though their separate columns, climbing the Russian ridge, would give a hand to each other on the road in the rear of the Russian position. The two Russian Generals, expecting momentarily to be environed, sent a last telegram to the Czar, telling what they expected, how they tried to prevent it, and how, driven into their positions and beset, they would hold these till reinforcements should arrive. At all events, they and their men would hold their ground to the last drop of their blood. We borrow the Daily News' correspondent's narrative of what came to pass:—"It was six o'clock; there was a lull in the fighting, of which the Russians could take no advantage, since the reserves were all engaged. The grimed, sun-blistered men were beaten out with heat, fatigue, hunger, and thirst. There had been no cooking for three days, and there was no water within the Russian lines. The poor fellows lay panting on the bare ridge, reckless that it was swept by the Turkish rifle fire. Others doggedly fought on down among the rocks, forced to give ground, but grimly and sourly. The cliffs and valleys send back the triumphant Turkish shouts of 'Allah il Allah!' The two Russian Generals were on the peak which the first position half incloses. Their glasses anxiously scanned the visible glimpses of the steep brown road leading up from the Jantra Valley, through thick copes of sombre green and dark rocks. Stoletoff cries aloud in sudden excitement, clutches his brother General by the arm, and points down the pass. The head of a long black column was plainly visible against the reddish-brown bed of the road. 'Now, God be thanked!' says Stoletoff, solemnly. Both Generals bare their heads. The troops spring to their feet. Such a gust of Russian cheers whirls and eddies among the mountain tops that the Turkish war-cries are wholly drowned in the glad welcome which the Russian soldiers send to the comrales coming to help them. Some time elapses. The head of the column draws near the Karaula, and is on the little plateau in front of the khan. They are mounted men; but on the projection to the right of the khan a mountain battery has just come into action against the Turkish artillery on the wooded ridge, by the occupation of which the Turks are flanking the right of the Russian position. Then comes a column of Russian infantry on the swift tramp uphill till they get within firing distance of the Turks on the right; and then they break, scatter, and from behind every stone and bush spurt white jets of smoke. It is a battalion of the Rifle Brigade—the same Rifle Brigade which followed General Gourko in his victorious advance and chequered retreat. The brigade has marched fifteen kilometres without cooking or sleeping, and now is in action without so much as a breathing halt. Such is the stuff of which thorough good soldiers are made. Their General, the gallant Tzvitinsky, accompanies them, and pushes on an attack on the enemy's position on that wooded ridge on the Russian right. But Radetzky, who himself brought up the tirailleurs, and so saved the day, marches on up the road with his staff at his back, runs the triple gauntlet of the Turkish rifle fire, and joins the two Generals on the peak hard by the batteries of the first position. As senior and highest officer present, he at once took command, complimenting General Stoletoff, whom he relieved, on the excellence of his dispositions and stubborn defence."

The troops engaged in Friday's battle were, the same writer thinks, not above 13,000:—

"The operations commenced at daybreak. An attack was made on the Turkish commanding position on the Russian right flank, by the tirailleur brigade and the Breanski regiment of the Ninth Division. Almost at the same moment the Turks from that position renewed their turning effort, extending their left with intent to push across the intervening deep valley and gain the top edge of the ground in the rear of the Russian positions, and so hem in the Russian forces. The simultaneous attacks met in the valley separating the parallel ridges held by the Russians and Turks. The fighting became at once fierce and stubborn. I had been told about eight o'clock that in half an hour the Turks would be driven back. When I reached the crest of the Russian ridge I was fain to confess I saw no immediate prospect of this. A furious infantry fire was raging in the valley between the bare ridge and the Turkish higher wooded ridge. The bareness of our slope brought about that our men went down into battle without cover, blistered by the Turkish infantry fire from their wooded slope, and by the shell fire of the mountain batteries on the summit. The Russian battery in the first position confronting the Turkish ridge fired, but at rare intervals. It is true it is a waste of ammunition to shower shells into trees, but the Turkish battery on the sky line unquestionably afforded a mark, and it would have been worth while to throw a few shells to help to cover with their moral effect the advance of our infantry. I fancy there was a long period when the battery was short of ammunition. The road was so exposed that fetching ammunition was extremely dangerous. The Turks had detachments of marksmen detailed with seemingly no other duty than to sweep the Russian road at the exposed points of its course, and, indeed, to fire at everything and everybody exposed on the Russian ridge."

About nine Dragimiroff arrived with two regiments of the second brigade of his own division, the Podolsk Regiment. He left in reserve near the khan the Jitomir Regiment, and marched up the road to the first position. There was no alternative but to traverse that fearfully dangerous road, for the lower broken ground on its left was impracticable, and swarming with Bashi-Bazouks. The Jitomir men lost heavily while making this promenade, and, having reached the peak, found no safe shelter, for the Turkish rifle fire was coming from two quarters simultaneously. So the infantry were stowed away till wanted in the ditch of the redoubt. Radetzky and his staff remained on the slope of the peak, and here Dragimiroff joined, and was welcomed by his chief. The firing in the valley waxed and waned fitfully as the morning wore on to near noon. The Turks were evidently very strong in their wooded position, and there was an evident intention on their part to work round their left and edge in across the narrowed throat of the valley towards our rear."

"About eleven the firing in the valley swelled in volume. It was wholly musketry fire. I crept up to the edge of the ridge and looked down upon the scene below. The Russians had their tirailleurs in among the trees of the Turkish slope, leaving the bare ground behind strewn with killed and wounded. The ambulance men were behaving admirably, picking up the wounded under the hottest fire; and, indeed, not a few were themselves among the wounded. As to the progress of the Russians in the wood little could be seen, the cover was so thick; but it was clear that the battle waged to and fro, now the Russians, now the Turks, gaining ground occasionally. The Russians at some point would be hurled clean back out of the wood altogether, and I could mark the Turks following them eagerly to its edge, and lying down while pouring out a galling fire. It seemed an even match: the Turks and Russians alike accept valiantly the chances of battle. The Russian tirailleurs, finely-trained skirmishers, looked out dexterously for cover; and the Turks displayed fine skirmishing ability, but the soldiers of the Breanski line regiment were not so good at finding cover. There was clearly no thought among them of quailing, but they stood up in the open and took what came. As a natural result, this fine regiment showed the greatest proportion of casualties."

"There is something terrible in a fight in a wood. You can see nothing save an occasional flash of dark colour among the sombre foliage, and the white clouds of smoke rising above it like soap bubbles. Hoarse cries come back to you on the wind from out the mysterious inferno. How is it to go? Are the strong-backed Muscovites, with these ready bayonet-points of theirs, to end the long-drawn-out fight with one short, impetuous, irresistible rush, or are the more lissom Turks to drive their northern adversaries out of the wood backwards into the fire-blistered open? Who can tell? The fire rages still. The mad clamour of the battle still surges up around into the serene blue heavens. Wounded men come staggering out from among the swarthy trunks and sit down in a heap, or crawl on to the ambulance men. I leave the edge of the ridge soon after eleven, and pick my way up towards the peak, on the slope of which the Generals and staff are surveying the scene. The bullets here are singing like a nest of angry wasps. One bullet strikes on the left knee General Dragimiroff, who has been standing calmly in the face of the fire, looking down upon the battle. One of the best Generals in the Russian army is hors de combat. He is as brave as he is skilful. He never so much as takes his spectacles off, but quietly sits down, and, ripping up his trouser-leg, binds a handkerchief round the wound. Surgeons gather round him; but, like the true soldier he is, he says he will take his turn when it comes. He is carried out of the line of fire somewhat, his boot removed, and the limb bandaged. Then he is placed on a stretcher, and is borne away. The last words on the noble soldier's lips are a fervent wish for good fortune to the arms of the Czar."

It was determined at noon that day to deliver a counter-flank attack on the right edge of the Turkish ridge, simultaneously with a renewed strenuous attack by the tirailleurs and the men from below. The two battalions of the Jitomir regiment, each leaving one company behind as supports, emerge from the partial shelter of the peak of the Russian first position, and march in company columns across the more level grass land at the head of the intervening valley. They have no great dip to traverse, and their way is good marching-ground; but the Turkish mountain guns, from the battery high up on the wooded peak of the Turkish position, are ready for them, as also is the Turkish infantry on the Turkish right edge of the ridge. The fire sweeps through them, and many a gallant fellow dyes the grass with his blood. But the battalions press steadily on, and dash into the wood at the double. The Russian artillery had done its best to prepare the way, for their battery on the peak had fired hard while they were crossing over, and a reserve battery near the khan down below had come into action. But now the artillery had to cease, for there was danger in blind firing into the wood when our men were in it. The arbitrament had to be left to rifle and bayonet."

"The crisis of the battle had now arrived. It remained for us but to gaze into the perplexing mystery of forest and to hope fervently. The fighting of the infantry on the Turkish front and flank lasted for a long hour and raged with great fury, but it was clear that the Russians were gradually gaining ground. The fight was on the balance. The Russians, as they stood, could all but succeed, but not quite. It was an intensely exciting period, and Radetzky was equal to the occasion. I have mentioned that the Jitomir battalions had left two companies in reserve when they marched out from behind the peak. Radetzky himself took one of these companies; the Colonel of the Jitomir regiment placed himself at the head of the other; and, thus led, the two companies set forward to throw themselves into the fray. The Jitomers had been chafing at their inaction; but it was clear that the leadership of their chief thrilled them with increased zeal. Their ringing cheers rose high above the rattle of musketry as they dashed across the grassy slope at the head of the valley, and precipitated themselves into the wood. There was a concentric rush on the peak. Its rude breastworks were surmounted; there was some hot bayonet work, and then a tremendous volley of Russian hurrahs told that the Turkish ridge was cleared and the position won. This was at two o'clock to the moment. The Turk, if unspeakable, is also irrepressible. All day he had fought with stubborn valour, and would not yet own himself beaten. He came on again out of the valley beyond his late ridge, and strove to retake it, but the Russian soldiers are not fond of relinquishing positions earned by the price of blood, and the Turks were repulsed. By three o'clock they had abandoned the effort for the day, and the fire had all but died out."

"Radetzky now came back to the peak of his first position, panting, but not content. He had fought a good fight and won it. Now he determined to strike while the iron was hot, and recover the outlying positions in his front towards Shipka, on which the Turks had encroached on the first day of the fighting. The Podolsk regiment was called up from reserve, and went down to the attack under cover of a heavy fire of artillery from the Russian batteries around and beyond the position on Mount St. Nicolas. This attack also was successful, and Radetzky increased his elbow-room in front as well as on the flank. How narrow was the escape of the Shipka need not be now closely inquired into, or what would have been the consequences if the Russians had lost their hold that day."

The conflict was renewed on Saturday, and that day's fighting is thus described in a despatch from Suleiman Pasha:—"The enemy has not ceased, day or night, to endeavour, by a sustained artillery fire, to dislodge our troops from the positions which they occupied on the Alikrid Jebel heights, to the left of the enemy's works, and which threaten his line of retreat. Yesterday morning the enemy opened a terrible fire upon our whole line to divert attention from a sortie for the recapture of the positions of Alikrid Jebel. The Russian troops made continual assaults from morning till evening, replacing or reinforcing his attacking columns by fresh troops. About four o'clock in the afternoon three Russian companies succeeded in making their way into the positions, but the first and third brigades, under Vessel Pasha, partly reoccupied them. The fighting continued all night, and at three o'clock in the morning our troops had completely driven out the enemy, and at day-break reoccupied all the positions. The enemy, receiving reinforcements in the morning, unsuccessfully attempted a final assault, after which they returned to their fortified works. The cannonade continued all Sunday without appreciable result. Matters are still undecided, since we have not yet taken the enemy's formidable works. The enemy's losses during the six days' uninterrupted fighting must have been very great; 1000 dead were left by the Russians on the heights of Alikrid Jebel, after they were driven from that position by our troops." Later Turkish accounts say that Suleiman Pasha is waiting for reinforcements."

A despatch of Tuesday last, from the headquarters of the Grand Duke Nicholas and the Emperor, at Gorny Studeni, says that "the Russians continue to hold their positions in the Shipka Pass, in spite of the desperate attempts of Suleiman Pasha to dislodge them. There was no fighting yesterday in that locality. Many false rumours are in circulation respecting the Russian losses and their present positions in the Shipka Pass. The Turkish losses have been very heavy, as they were attacking, with the exception of one day's fighting, when the Russians took the offensive and carried a Turkish position on their flank, the Moslems having attempted a turning movement. On that day the Russian troops suffered considerably, the five battalions which made the assault losing 800 killed and wounded. The Turkish skirmishers occupy a position from which they can fire upon the Gabrova road, and they fire upon the Russian wounded as they are carried to the rear."

General Nepokoitchitzky, Chief of the Grand Duke's Staff, has gone to the Shipka Pass. The main Russian army is still between that of Mahomet Ali Pasha, on its left flank, extending from Rasgrad to Eski Djuma, and that of Osman Pasha, now strongly reinforced, which holds its former positions in front of Plevna. It is expected that an attack will presently be made on Osman Pasha. The Roumanian contingent, under Prince Charles, has crossed the Danube by a bridge constructed for this purpose at Corabia, twenty-five miles above Nicopolis. Servia is likely again to join in the war, and to make an attack on Widdin, or assail the rear of Osman Pasha. The country over which the Russian army must move to the attack of Osman Pasha is exceedingly broken and abounds in strong defensive positions. The Russians are fortifying their present lines, so as to have a secure refuge in case of another repulse before Plevna. Osman Pasha has received 15,000 Nizamis from Suleiman Pasha, to reinforce the Plevna army, which is estimated to number fully 75,000 men, with 200 guns. The Russian lines extend from Lovatz, through Toglun, Vadin, Bogot, Tuchenitz, thence a little east of Grivitza, thence west of Uchitza, thence north-west to a point near Riben. Fresh troops are being gathered at Adrianople, and sent to the front, at the rate of five thousand a day, some from Asia, and some from Albania. The Turkish Commander-in-Chief has already received 40,000 by sea, landing at Varna. We hear of an action which was fought on Wednesday week between the outposts of the Army of Mehemet Ali and a Russian detachment that had been dispatched to attack the heights on the eastern bank of the Lom. In the combat consequent upon this Russian movement the Muscovite force was numerically superior, as it consisted of eight battalions of infantry, six squadrons of cavalry, and fifteen guns. On the other side, the Turks could only bring into action seven battalions, twelve guns, and three squadrons. But, aided by the nature of the ground and the advantage which breech-loading arms afford to troops acting on the defensive, the Turks successfully repulsed the attack of their assailants and drove them back across the Lom. The Turks have gone across the Danube at Widdin and inflicted some damage on the Roumanian posts in that neighbourhood."

There is stirring news also from the seat of war in Asia. It appears that Ahmed Mukhtar Pasha has gained a great victory in the plain near Kuruk-Dara, on Friday, the 24th ult. The Russians advanced from Kizil-Tipe upon Kuruk-Dara and Vezir-Koy. The Turkish commander sent a sufficient force to encounter them, and an engagement ensued which lasted five hours. The Russians retreated. Some cases of ammunition belonging to the Russians exploded through being struck by Turkish shells. Moukhtar Pasha thus relates the action, in his despatch of next day:—"During the night we advanced against the enemy's position. The division under Hachim Pasha upon the left carried the heights of Kizil-Tipe and invaded the Russian encampment. The Russian forces at Baldipovan were hastily brought up, and made three successive attempts to recapture Kizil-Tipe. Two hundred guns were brought into action, and the engagement assumed the proportions of a great battle, which lasted until six o'clock this evening. The enemy was routed along the whole line, and we remained victorious masters of the battle-field. Four thousand Russians were placed hors de combat, and we captured four ammunition-waggons and gun-carriages, as well as an immense quantity of arms and munitions of war. We lost 1200 killed and wounded, including several officers."

Among our Illustrations of the War in this week's Number, besides the Sketches by our Special Artists with the Russian and Turkish Armies, we give the Portraits of Mahomet Ali Pasha, the Serdar Ekrem, or Commander-in-Chief of the Sultan's forces, and Suleiman Pasha, the commander of the army now fighting its way through the Balkans. The Times correspondent lately with Suleiman Pasha gives the following personal description of him:—"The General commanding, Suleiman Pasha, is a most unostentatious and reserved man. His headquarters are the very reverse of the gorgeous establishments one sees with many Generals of much less pretence than this the most successful and favoured of the Sultan's Field-Marshal. His tent consists of a simple piece of canvas stretched across two sticks, under which he crawls at night and sleeps on the ground, and, being once in, leaves no room to spare for a shake-down for anybody else. Guards, sentries, orderlies, and all the pomp and circumstance of military rank are dispensed with; and his two or three aides-de-camp bivouac in like style near him. His two horses are picketed in front of his tent, with their saddles on their backs, and take their chance of forage with the rest of the cavalry in the same way that their master expects no different fare from the rest of the army. He is a man between forty and forty-five, tall and strongly built, with a rough weather-beaten face, a forehead very much wrinkled, and a short red beard and moustache. He speaks French a little. His character seems singularly simple and self-reliant, and presents contrasts which make it still more exceptional. In detail and in matters of organisation he seems to have great readiness, a quick perception of what is necessary as to provisioning, forwarding ammunition, or any other administrative part of generalship, while at the same time he appears to have the intuitive qualities of a born commander, which enable him to carry out a plan rapidly and successfully without going through any of the accepted and roundabout methods of modern warfare. I would instance in this respect the extraordinary way in which, in a few hours—I believe in '48—he transported the whole of his army from Adrianople to Karabunar. It is with a system which leaves him untrammelled, when his mind is not distracted by the memory of all kinds of obscure forms, or haunted by the idea of hurting some touchy sensibilities of relative rank, that a man of talent and of self-reliant nature is able promptly to carry out a plan without the aid of complicated machinery. It is this which I imagine will be found to distinguish Suleiman Pasha from the run of ordinary Generals."

Our Special Artist, Herr Schönberg, lately with the Fourteenth Russian Army Division, in the Dobrudzha, has now joined the headquarters of the extreme right wing, between Nicopolis and Plevna, and will be enabled to furnish Illustrations of decisive battles expected to take place in the course of another week."

We present a couple of Sketches from a village in Hungary, where the calling out of the Honveds, or Yeomanry Cavalry, and the assembling of them at the district cavalry barracks to receive their arms and equipments, gave occasion to an unwonted display of martial enthusiasm. The Hungarians seem to be desirous that Austria should take part in the war, as an ally of Turkey, but the Austrian Imperial Government prefers a neutral policy."

Baron Bernhardt von Tauchnitz, her Majesty's Consul-General at Leipsic, has been appointed Consul-General for the kingdom of Saxony, the Grand Duchy of Saxe-Weimar, and the Duchies of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Saxe-Meiningen, and Saxe-Altenburg, to reside at Leipsic."

A map giving an excellent bird's-eye view of the passages of the Danube and the passes of the Balkans has been drawn and lithographed by Messrs. Maclure and Macdonald. It presents the seat of war from a northern point of view, and therefore has the Danube in the foreground and Constantinople in the remote distance."

Tuesday's Gazette contains the following:—"Mr. Pakenham, her Majesty's Consul in Madagascar, in a despatch to the Earl of Derby, dated June 28th, reports that, as the result of negotiations which have for some time past been carried on between her Majesty's Government and the Hova Government, an edict of her Majesty Queen Ranavalona, emancipating all Mozambiques (i.e., African slaves introduced into Madagascar) within her Majesty's dominions, was proclaimed on the 20th of that month at Antananarivo, and all other Hova stations throughout Madagascar. At Tamatave the proclamation was publicly read by envoys from Antananarivo, in presence of the assembled native population, the leading members of the foreign communities, the Hova Governor and his staff, most of the foreign representatives, and the commander and officers of her Majesty's sloop of war Flying Fish. During the reading the Hova battery fired a salute of 21 guns, which was returned by the Flying Fish. On the following day a decree was issued by the Queen providing for the maintenance of all freed slaves, pending their settlement in villages or their obtaining employment. Mr. Pakenham estimates the number of slaves who will thus receive their freedom at about 300,000."

PEASANTS RETURNING TO THEIR VILLAGE NEAR KARS AFTER WITHDRAWAL OF THE ARMIES.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

HEREFORD AND LUDLOW, VISITED BY THE ROYAL ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.

The Extra Supplement.

"FUGITIVES FOR CONSCIENCE SAKE."

Mr. C. J. Staniland's picture, which was in the last Exhibition of the Royal Academy, reminds the reader of history that scarcely two centuries have passed since, both in Great Britain and on the Continent of Europe, innocent people had to fly from their homes to escape cruel persecutions on account of their Christian faith. The Covenanters of Western Scotland, as well as the French Huguenots, and the Protestants of Holland and Flanders, suffered all that ecclesiastical bigotry, allied with political corruption and tyranny, is ever disposed to inflict upon those who steadfastly deny its pretensions to rule the souls of men unconvinced by its claims to spiritual authority. We hope there is no further need, at the present day, to preach a sermon from this text on behalf of religious liberty; but the picture is an eloquent appeal to human sympathies, which cannot behold with indifference this hurried flight of a distressed family, husband and wife, mother and babe, with their servants bearing a few precious or necessary articles, and in company with their revered pastor or chaplain, to embark for a place of refuge beyond the seas. It seems as though a rising tide had overtaken them, probably in consequence of some unforeseen delay or hindrance to their escape; for they must now wade at least knee-deep through the water before they can reach the boat which is to convey them, under the safeguard of a party of armed men, to the ship engaged for their departure from their native shore. This circumstance, however, is likely to ensure their safety from worse foes than the waves of the sea; we observe that the pursuing troop of spearmen, just now crossing the sands, in which a horse and cart are sinking, have no means of following the boat when it shall have taken the fugitives on board. Firearms, or even crossbows, might yet do them a mischief; but we trust they will get away to a land of freedom.

ARCHÆOLOGY AT HEREFORD AND LUDLOW.

The Royal Archæological Institute, during its recent congress at Hereford, visited and discussed most places of antiquarian interest in that neighbourhood; as far as Ross to the south of Hereford, and Leominster and Ludlow to the north. Hereford Cathedral, which is represented in several of our Illustrations, was a subject of a paper read by Sir Gilbert Scott. The bishop's see at Hereford, then called Fernleigh, was of Saxon foundation. Robert of Lorraine was appointed bishop in the reign of William the Conqueror. He began the Norman building, which was finished by Robert de Bethune in the twelfth century. The massive Norman piers of the nave and choir have some remarkable peculiarities of construction. The Lady Chapel, of Early English style, with its lancet-shaped windows, belonged to the thirteenth century, subsequent to other portions of the east end, which were built probably by William de Vere, from 1186 to 1199. The north transept, a fine example of Early Decorated, contains the shrine of St. Thomas de Cantilupe. The date of this shrine is about 1310; it is of Purbeck marble, adorned with sculptured figures of Knights Templars. There is a beautiful tomb containing the marble effigy of Bishop Aquablanca, one of Henry III.'s favourites, who was despoiled and imprisoned by the Barons, in their war against that king. Hereford is pleasantly situated on the Wye; and, some distance below this city, on the banks of the same river, is the small town of Ross, famous for its "Man," who was John Kyrle, Esq., a generous local benefactor, in the times of Queen Anne and the first two Georges. Pope's verse has preserved the memory, if not the name, of this charitable gentleman during a hundred and fifty years. The parish church, whose "heaven-directed spire he taught to rise," is still surrounded by the trees which he planted. About twenty miles from Hereford, in the opposite direction, and in the county of Shropshire, is Ludlow, with its ruined Castle. It was visited by the members of the Royal Archæological Institute, and was described to them by Mr. G. T. Clark. This Castle, as well as those of Kilpeck and Ewyas Harold, belonged to the line of warlike strongholds, nearly a hundred in number, extending from north to south along the March, or Welsh Border. The keep and much of the outer wall, and a round tower which was the nave of the chapel, is of the old Norman building. The hall and state apartments are of the age of Elizabeth, and may be compared to those of Kenilworth. In her reign, Ludlow Castle was the property of Sir Henry Sidney, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and father of Sir Philip Sidney. It is interesting to remember that Milton's poem of "Comus" was written for a masque performed at Ludlow Castle, not many years before the demolition of this place in the Civil Wars of Cromwell. The next year's meeting of the Royal Archæological Institute will take place at Northampton. The British Archæological Association has this week held its Congress at Llangollen, on the Dee, under the presidency of Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, M.P., of Wynnstay, in that neighbourhood.

The annual rifle competition at Browdown, near Gosport, began on Wednesday, extending over four days. The entries number upwards of two thousand, and prizes to the value of £250 were competed for.

Visitors to the Isle of Thanet are promised a novel marine fête. On Wednesday next a practical illustration of torpedo warfare on a grand scale is to take place in the sea in front of the Granville Marina, Ramsgate—or, rather, St. Lawrence-on-Sea.

The Royal Cornwall Polytechnic Society opened its forty-fifth annual meeting at Falmouth, on Tuesday, when the president, Mr. Richard Taylor, gave an address, in which he said that the society had reason to be pleased that this exhibition was not only equal but superior to former ones. The following is a list of medals that were awarded:—Illustrations of a simple method for obtaining effective designs in lithography (James Fairbairn, Truro), first bronze medal; Halme's sea flame projectile, first bronze medal; the Phosphor Bronze Company, first silver medal; model of Scott's dividing apparatus, first silver medal; model of press (J. C. Scott), second silver medal; Caxton printing press, second bronze medal; Ingasoll rock-drill, first silver medal; Jordan and Power's rock-drill, second silver medal; eclipse patent portable gas-making machine, first bronze medal; new American sewing-machine, first bronze medal; Rider's hot-air pumping engine, first silver medal; Cape and Maxwell's self-governing steam-pumping engine, second silver medal; Loft's patent bottle-washing and rinsing machine, second bronze medal; and Heaps and Hensley's plant frame, second bronze medal; pocket stethoscope (A. W. Kemp's), first bronze medal; cork-cutting machine (T. A. Warrington), first bronze medal; hydrotrappe (T. A. Warrington), second silver medal; Allen's steam-engine governor, first bronze medal; self-cleansing steam-trap (Le Gros, Clarke, and Co.), first bronze medal; model of retort mouth (J. C. Scott), second bronze medal.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

There was a great improvement both in the weather and the sport on the last day at York, so that the wind-up of the meeting was highly successful. Proceedings commenced with the Colt Sapling Stakes, in which Cavour, who had moved so well through the mud on the previous afternoon, was opposed by Beauclerc and Kirkleatham. The former is credited with being the best juvenile in the north of England, and, though he appeared to be in trouble for a stride or two at the distance, he won cleverly at the finish. The York Cup, though reduced to a match between Thorn and Skylark, produced very great interest, and some of the heaviest betting which took place during the week. It was reported that Skylark was slightly amiss, so, though Thorn galloped decidedly short, while Lord Falmouth's colt looked in the pink of condition, the betting was as level as possible. Archer made the running at a fair pace with the four-year-old, and, in spite of all Osborne's efforts to bring up Thorn at the distance, the old horse did not seem to relish his task, and was beaten very easily indeed. It may be remembered that Thorn won this same race as far back as 1873, when odds were laid on Uhlán, so it is no wonder that he is beginning to show the effects of continuous hard work, and will doubtless soon retire to the well-earned repose of the stud. Industrious backers had generally pitched upon Lady Golightly for the Great Yorkshire Stakes as the "good thing" of the day; so there was no little astonishment when it was discovered that Lord Falmouth intended to start Sleipnir as well; and, moreover, had declared to win with him and put Archer up; while Morris, in the absence of a second "maggie" jacket, donned the pretty colours of the Duke of St. Albans upon the filly. Of course, under these circumstances, nearly all the money went upon Sleipnir, and at last slight odds were laid upon him against the field; while 7 to 1 might have been obtained against Lady Golightly. The former held a good place until turning into the straight, where he crossed his legs, and was so hopelessly beaten that Archer wisely pulled him up, and left Lady Golightly to dispose of Sunray without an effort. The Gimcrack Stakes was rendered interesting by the début of King Olaf, one of the first of the Kingcraits, with whom Archer, as usual, got well away, and won from start to finish. This victory was a very popular one, as the colt is one of the first to carry the colours of Mr. J. Lowther, the member for York.

The meeting at Scarborough last Friday and Saturday was generally regarded as a convenient excuse for a pleasant holiday at the seaside; and the returns of the Weymouth, Croydon, Great Yarmouth, and Sutton Park gatherings, which have taken place during the last few days, do not need even passing notice. In fact, there will be a comparative lull until Doncaster, when, if the betting be any guide, we may expect a very exciting St. Leger. Since the Derby, Chamant has not done at all the kind of work that Jennings is accustomed to give a thoroughly reliable candidate for a great race, and during the present week he has receded to 8 to 1. We fear that the injury he sustained prior to the Derby was a serious one, and we doubt if he will ever win another race. Silvio keeps his place well, though, of course, the York victories of Lady Golightly have brought her into prominent notice, and she now disputes the position of second favourite with Fontainebleau. There can be no doubt that her ladyship is fast recovering her form, and there are plenty of precedents for supporting her in the "mares' month;" still, she has defeated nothing within 21 lb. of a first-class animal this season, and we do not think that she will tread in the footsteps of Achievement. Glen Arthur appears to have gone hopelessly to the bad; but we shall defer further remarks until next week, when we shall give our accustomed list of the probable starters and jockeys.

The Woodlands Stud, the property of Mr. Van Haansbergen, was dispersed on Monday last, but only poor prices were obtained. Of the three sires, Macgregor, who has grown into a grand horse, was bought in for 2200 gs., and Idus was almost given away at 200 gs.

Such heavy rain as has fallen during the last week or two has interfered sadly with a successful finish to the cricket season, and far too many matches have been drawn of late. That between Surrey and Yorkshire terminated in this very unsatisfactory manner, after Mr. W. W. Read (140) and Jupp (87) had made such a grand beginning for the southern eleven, that victory appeared almost a certainty for them. Kent has defeated Notts in a single innings, with twelve runs to spare. The scoring on both sides was poor, the only notable exception being Mr. W. Foord-Kelsey (56), who has quite come out as a batsman this season. Notts has not done very well this year, and the title of champion county fairly belongs to Gloucestershire, whose eleven have just beaten Sussex by eight wickets. For the latter, Mr. R. T. Ellis (not out, 73) did extremely well, and, on the other side, Dr. E. M. Grace (60) was the chief contributor; but once more the heavy state of the ground was all in favour of the ball.

On Monday last W. Spencer, of Chelsea, and J. R. Hymes, of Stockton, sculled from Putney to Mortlake for £200. A splendid race took place until reaching Hammersmith Bridge, at which point the men were exactly level; but from there Spencer, who has never been defeated, drew right away, and finally won as he chose by half a dozen lengths. News comes from Sydney that Edward Trickett, the champion sculler of the world, has just defeated Michael Rush, one of his old opponents, very easily indeed. It is expected that either the victor in the forthcoming match between Higgins and Boyd or else Blackman, will shortly proceed to Australia to try to bring back the title of champion to this country.

William Gale, of Cardiff, started on Sunday night to try to walk 1500 miles in 1000 hours at Lillie-bridge. The task will occupy him for about six weeks.

International money orders are issued and paid at all post-offices in France and Algeria, instead of at the limited number of offices hitherto authorised to transact international money-order business.

Reports of storms and floods have come from various parts of the country. In South Wales the destruction of property has been immense, many places being entirely submerged. In Bridgend alone the value of the property destroyed is estimated at £20,000. All over the north of Scotland rain has been falling in torrents, and in one place three persons lost their lives by the sweeping away of a bridge.

At the monthly meeting of the Liverpool School Board, on Monday, a letter was read from the clerk to the London School Board, containing a memorial to the Committee of Council on Education, praying that a Royal Commission be issued to consider the best method of reforming and simplifying the present method of spelling. The letter contained a request that the Liverpool Board should concur in the memorial, and, on the recommendation of the School Management Committee, this was agreed to.—The Manchester School Board have sanctioned the establishment of penny banks in connection with their schools, and one was opened on Monday in Every-street. The experiment promises to be successful, there being already upwards of 400 depositors.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The directors of the Bank of England on Tuesday raised the minimum rate of discount from 2 per cent, at which it was fixed in July last, to 3 per cent.

Mr. Lowe, M.P., president of the West Kent Bicycle Club, has undertaken to distribute the prizes at the races which are arranged to be run at the Crystal Palace on Sept. 15.

The council of the Working Men's Club and Institute Union have received 25 guineas from the Company of Drapers and £25 from the Company of Fishmongers.

The carpets and embroidery, the gift of the Shah of Persia to the South Kensington Museum, have arrived, and are now exhibited in the portion of the museum devoted to Persian objects of art.

The accounts showing the income and expenditure for the city of London during the past year were issued on Monday. The income is put down at £279,477, and the expenditure, irrespective of loans and other matters, at £324,351.

The first annual distribution of prizes in connection with the National Training School for Dancing took place last Saturday on the stage of Her Majesty's Theatre. The prizes included a gold medal to Mdlle. Marie Müller and silver medals to Miss Clara Cocks and Master George Craig, the others being articles principally of a useful nature.

A committee, consisting of Major Duncan, Royal Artillery and four surgeons of Volunteer corps, has been appointed to carry out the preliminary details as to the formation of a Volunteer Sick Bearers' Corps in London; and Miss Florence Nightingale has expressed her sympathy with the object of the association.

It is intended to open the Grosvenor Gallery early in November with a representative exhibition of water-colour drawings and studies by deceased masters. The collection is to be completely illustrative of the rise and growth of this branch of the English school, and the loan of several important collections has already been promised.

The hearing of the charge against Meiklejohn, Druscovich, and Palmer, detective inspectors, and Mr. E. Froggatt, solicitor, for conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice, was resumed for the fifteenth time on Thursday morning, at Bow-street, before Sir James Ingham. Benson was again under examination the whole day, and another adjournment took place.

Many instances have been given from time to time (the City Press says) of improvement in the value of City properties, but one of the most remarkable is that of a house in Lombard-street, the property of the Drapers' Company, which in 1668 was let for £25 a year. In 1877 the site lets for £2600 a year ground rent, and the lessee, having expended £10,000 on the building covering it, gets a return of £7000 a year rent.

Colonel Henderson has sent to all metropolitan police stations copies of a letter from the Home Secretary with reference to the traffic in Italian beggar children, in which he urges the importance of suppressing it, and points out that in many cases the employer will be found to have committed an offence against the Vagrant Act by procuring the child to beg, and the child will probably come within the provisions of the Industrial Schools Act.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers at the end of the third week in August was 77,154, of whom 36,407 were in workhouses and 40,747 received outdoor relief. As compared with the corresponding week of 1876, 1875, and 1874, these figures show a decrease of 132, 5646, and 14,452 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 702, of whom 464 were men, 192 women, and 46 children.

We are asked to state that Lambeth Palace Library is closed for the recess for six weeks. It is hoped the Ecclesiastical Commissioners will provide for the arrangement of several ancient parchment and paper rolls of manors and rentals relating to the see of Canterbury. The nature of these documents is fully described in the sixth Report Historical MSS. Commission; at present their contents are inaccessible, and urgent representations have been lately made to render them equally serviceable with the other portions of the archiepiscopal records.

The thirteenth annual exhibition of plants and flowers cultivated by the working men of East London was held on Monday and Tuesday. The show was held in the assembly-room of Mr. George Conquest's place of multifarious amusements in the City-road. There were about a hundred entries for which prizes were awarded, graduating in value from a guinea downwards. There were some excellent specimens of fuchsias, geraniums, and dahlia blooms, as well as rare grasses. Oddly enough in such an exhibition, the greatest amount of pains was bestowed upon dinner-table decorations.

The half-yearly election for the admission of children into the Merchant Seamen's Orphan Asylum took place on Monday at the Cannon-street Hotel. The candidates on the list for election numbered forty-six—twenty girls and twenty-six boys—and from these ten girls and fifteen boys were elected. Mr. N. Griffiths, the treasurer of the institution, presided, and stated that the work of the institution was being carried on in the most efficient and successful manner. The inmates, 259 in number, were in the enjoyment of excellent health, and their progress in the educational department was most satisfactory. The number would be augmented by the children to be elected on the present occasion; and, as the present was the jubilee year of the institution, the committee earnestly solicited special contributions, and appealed to the governors to aid them in augmenting the list of regular subscribers.

There were 2323 births and 1261 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 16 and the deaths 245 below the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The annual death-rate from all causes, which in the two preceding weeks had been equal to 19.1 and 19.3 per 1000, declined last week to 18.6. The deaths from smallpox, which had been 20 and 21 in the two previous weeks, declined to 11 last week, a lower number than in any week since the beginning of October last. The deaths referred to diarrhoea, which had been 166 and 194 in the two previous weeks, declined to 158 last week, and were 99 below the corrected average weekly number. There were 11 deaths from smallpox, 29 from measles, 24 from scarlet fever, 2 from diphtheria, 17 from whooping-cough, 19 from different forms of fever, and 158 from diarrhoea; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 260 deaths were referred, against 300 and 346 in the two preceding weeks. These 260 deaths were 173 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. In Greater London 2847 births and 1504 deaths were registered. The mean temperature was 62 deg., or 1.3 deg. above the average. The duration of registered sunshine in the week was 41.5 hours out of the 98.9 hours that the sun was above the horizon.

H.M.S. RAPID AT KUSTENDJE.

The Foreign Office batch of correspondence just published regarding the ill-treatment of both the Christian and Turkish inhabitants of Bulgaria during the present campaign makes some mention of the presence of H.M.S. Rapid at Kustendje in the second week of July, and of the timely action by which Commander Drummond, with the officers and crew of that vessel, prevented the Bulgarian populace from attacking their Moslem neighbours. This was after the withdrawal of the Ottoman troops, and before the arrival of the Russians, who belonged to the Fourteenth Army Division, under General Zimmermann, then operating in the Dobrudscha. Our Special Artist, Herr Schönborg, in a letter which we published three weeks ago, spoke of the prompt and opportune interference of the British naval commander, who landed a party of seamen and marines to keep the peace in the town, when abandoned by its regular governing authorities. The sketch by Herr Schönborg, which we have now engraved, is an illustration of this particular scene. The British marine force had no difficulty in preserving order, without the need for any display of rifles and bayonets or pistols and cutlasses, which were discreetly kept out of sight. In the meantime the English manager of the railway, with a train, set out for Medjidieh to meet the Russians, and request them to come and occupy the place. The general said that Kustendje did not lie in their line of march, and the occupation of the place did not enter into their plans; but that to satisfy the inhabitants he would send over a regiment of Cossacks to assist in keeping the peace, and would also dispatch some one to organise a local government. The result was the arrival on Sunday, the 15th, of the 29th Regiment of Cossacks, whose entry into Kustendje was greeted by the whole population in holiday dress, along both sides of the road leading into the town.

A correspondent, writing from Kustendje to one of the daily papers, thus describes its present condition:—"The town is more than half empty, and looks very miserable. The houses deserted by the Turks have been occupied by whomsoever chose to reside in them, certain of not being troubled for rent for some time to come. The Russian Governor of Kustendje informed all those whom it might concern that they were at liberty to go out into the country and gather in the crops deserted by the Turks and Tartars. Having selected those they intended to work upon, they were to have them registered in the village to which the land belonged. In this way men who have not sown a grain of corn will be able to reap hundreds of acres. One man I know, a German, who in all his life has never been able to sow more than six kilos in one year, has now fifty kilos of splendid crops, which he may as good as call his own. I have heard sad accounts from more than one quarter of the behaviour of the Bulgarians to the Turks and Tartars who had been so unfortunate as to remain in the land after their comrades had left. A vast quantity of property has been abandoned by the Mussulmans in their exodus from the Dobrudscha, the greater part of which has been squandered by the Bulgarians and others who remained. Many a time during the last year or two I have heard the Bulgarians tell the Turks to their faces, 'When the Russians come, as come they will, we will pay you out for the way you treated us at the time of the last war, and since that. Our time will come, and then we will make you smart for it,' or as they said in Turkish, 'Bis sixie ateshâ yackaries,' which literally translated means, 'We will burn you in the fire.' They have kept their word, and are likely to go on doing so, to prove to the world that the Bulgarians are Christians in word and deed."

SULEIMAN PASHA,
GENERAL OF THE TURKISH ARMY IN THE BALKANS.

Sir Charles Adderley, M.P., President of the Board of Trade, accompanied by Mr. T. Gray, Assistant Secretary, arrived yesterday week in the Tyne on board the steam-yacht Galatea, and subsequently landed at North Shields, where the mercantile marine offices and Board of Trade offices were visited and inspected. Sir Charles Adderley has also visited the other mercantile marine offices on the Tyne as well as on the Wear.

TURKISH BATH-HOUSE AT MEDJIDIEH SACKED BY THE BULGARIANS.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN THE DOBRUDSCHA.

ENGLISH OFFICERS OF H.M.S. RAPID KEEPING ORDER AT KUSTENDJE.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN THE DOBRUDSCHA.

PONTOON PRACTICE BY THE ROYAL ENGINEERS AT HENLEY-ON-THAMES.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

Addressing his constituents at Elgin yesterday week, Lord Macduff said that when the country sent a distinguished member of the Government to a conference, and empowered him to draw up and impose upon Turkey conditions which were necessary for the peace of Europe and the welfare of large populations, we ought to be prepared to enforce those conditions. The least we could have done would be to support by our fleet the armies of the neighbouring Powers; and no one could doubt that if we had done so the Turks would have given way with good grace, and this wicked war would have been avoided. Referring to the Scotch legislation of the Session, he expressed approval of the Sheriff Courts Act, but said that sooner or later its application must be carried much further. Mr. McLagan's Game Bill which had been passed would, he believed, only serve to further encumber the statute-book.

Sir G. Campbell, M.P. for the Kirkcaldy Burghs, addressed his constituents on Saturday. He said the indignation of the House of Commons at the obstructive policy of the seven Irish members had had an evil effect upon the business of the Session, by enabling the Government to carry through measures in a high-handed way, and without discussion. On the Eastern Question he entirely discredited the Turkish official allegations of atrocities by the Russians, and he expressed strong suspicion of the British Government, and accused Mr. Layard of breach of neutrality. He spoke at some length on the question of the Indian cotton duties, which he said were never instituted for protective purposes, though with the growth of the cotton manufacture in India they had come to a great extent to be protective. He admitted that there was good ground for the demand for the repeal of the duties, but it was impossible to get rid of a large source of revenue without finding a substitute for it.

Sir Stafford Northcote attended a Conservative Working Men's demonstration at Plymouth on Monday night, and spoke in terms of high satisfaction at the position of the Conservative party. He contended that the past Session had not been a barren one. He pointed to the Universities Act, the Irish Judicature Act, the Prisons Act, and other measures in proof that the legislation was eminently useful if not sensational. In reviewing the political condition of Europe, he remarked that there was cause for anxiety, but that the neutral position taken by the Government was the only one which could be held with advantage to the country. Nevertheless, it was owing to no pusillanimity or degeneracy that England had decided to stand apart from the contest. England's interests were not at present involved, and having failed to successfully exert her influence to avert the war, she was now reserving herself so as to be able to interpose with advantage when an opportunity should present itself for bringing the strife to a close. However, should the country's interests be infringed upon, the Government would be prepared with such measures as would protect them. Sir Massey Lopes, M.P., Mr. Sampson Lloyd, M.P., Mr. Carpenter Garnier, M.P., Captain Price, M.P., Mr. E. Bates, M.P., and Mr. Puleston, M.P., also addressed the meeting.

Mr. Dillwyn addressed a meeting of his constituents at Swansea on Monday night. He characterised the past Session as the most unsatisfactory one of the twenty-seven during which he had sat in Parliament. In fact, it had entailed nothing but disgrace upon the House. In regard to the Eastern Question, he avowed his sympathies to be with the Russians, between whom and England there should be an entente cordiale. He had supported the Irish Obstructionists when their opponents, in order to punish them, had attacked the privileges of Parliament. He hoped in the future to see a federation of English-speaking peoples.

A public meeting, convened by the Leeds Home-Rule Association, was held in the Albert Hall on Saturday evening—Mr. O'Neill in the chair—when addresses were delivered by Mr. O'Connor Power, M.P., Mr. John Ferguson, of Glasgow, and others, and resolutions were adopted approving of the policy of the Irish Obstructionists, censuring the Government for withholding an amnesty from the Fenian prisoners, and asking for the concession of Home Rule.

A similar meeting was held at Bradford, when Mr. Parnell, M.P., and Mr. Power, M.P., were present.

The annual Convention of the Home-Rule Confederation of Great Britain was held at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, on Monday; Mr. Butt, M.P., in the chair. Sixty branches were represented by delegates, and amongst the members of Parliament who attended were Mr. O'Donnell, Mr. Parnell, Mr. Biggar, and Mr. O'Connor Power. The proceedings of the conference were private. The following resolutions were adopted:—"That the Home-Rule Confederation of Great Britain, fully conscious that the feeling of the Irish people in Ireland is in favour of a more active and vigorous policy on the part of their Parliamentary representatives, calls upon the Home-Rule League in Ireland to summon a National Conference, to settle the lines upon which the policy of the Home-Rule party should be grounded." "That this Convention of the Home-Rule Confederation of Great Britain hereby endorses the vigorous policy pursued during the late Session by those members of the Home-Rule party who were termed Obstructionists. On Tuesday Mr. Parnell, M.P., was elected president of the Confederation for the ensuing year, and Mr. O'Donnell secretary. The Convention agreed to issue an address to the various towns and counties in Ireland, urging them to purify their national representation. It was resolved to hold the next Conference in London.

A soirée in connection with the Stourbridge Constitutional Association was held in the Corn Exchange on Monday. Resolutions were passed expressing confidence in the Government and approval of the Conservative federation scheme.

Earl Granville, who has been for some days the guest of the Duke of Devonshire at Bolton Abbey, visited Bradford on Tuesday and opened a new club erected by the Bradford Liberal Association. His Lordship, with Lady Granville, Lady F. Cavendish, Lady Louisa Egerton, Mr. W. E. Forster, M.P., Admiral Egerton, M.P., Sir Harcourt Johnstone, M.P., Sir M. Wilson, M.P., and some of the leading Liberals of the West Riding, were afterwards entertained at luncheon by the members of the club, Mr. Isaac Holden, formerly member for Knaresborough, presiding. Lord Granville counselled the Liberals of York to pay close attention to the work of registration, and pointed out that all recent measures of reform had been carried by a Liberal Government or forced upon their rivals by Parliamentary pressure. Mr. Forster, in responding to the toast of "The Houses of Parliament," strongly protested against the obstructive policy pursued in the recent Session by a section of the Home Rulers. In the evening Lord Granville presided at a meeting in St. George's Hall. He advocated the assimilation of the borough and county franchise, and the representation of the agricultural labourers. Adverting to the Eastern Question, he spoke in vindication of Russia from the charge of perpetrating atrocities, and ridiculed the idea that our Indian Empire would be endangered by the successes of the Czar. It was impossible, he added, to interpose in the war at the present critical juncture, but the true policy of the Government was to watch the course of events closely, and to tender their good offices whenever there was a prospect of obtaining peace, which must rest upon the basis of self-government for the Christian populations of Turkey. Mr. Forster and other gentlemen also addressed the meeting.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERRMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Bell, S., to be Curate of St. Saviour's, St. George's-square.
Bellett, G. Crosthwaite; Curate of St. Cyprian's, St. Marylebone.
Birch, Edward, Vicar of Blackburn; Archdeacon of Blackburn.
Cochrane, J. H. D., Vicar of Cheadle Hulme; Organising Secretary to the Chester Diocesan Finance Association.
Dixon, Harding; Curate of Holy Trinity, Killburn.
Douglas, H. C., Chaplain of St. George's Cemetery, at Ealing.
Gedge, H. S., Vicar of St. Luke's, Northampton.
Hennessy, George; Curate of West Hackney.
Jones, Thomas Simpson; Curate of All Saints', Stoke Newington.
Keeling, W.; Vicar of Malborough and St. Huish, Diocese of Exeter.
Kerry, Charles; Vicar of Matten, Northampton.
Lloyd, L. H.; Vicar of St. Lawrence's, Northampton.
Macdonogh, Telford; Curate of St. Saviour's, Poplar.
Murphy, J.; Chaplain to Seamen's Missions, Singapore Roadstead.
Ramsey, A. Keith; Curate of St. Stephen's, Hammersmith.
Sotheby, W. E. H.; Curate of Holy Trinity, Hoxton.
Stack, J. Maurice; Curate of St. Matthew's, Upper Clapton.
Stretton, J. G. M.; Curate of St. Cyprian's, St. Marylebone.
Thomas, Thomas William; Curate of St. Bride's, Fleet-street.
Ward, Horatio J.; Vicar of Morville-with-Aston Eyre.—Guardian.

The little village church of Stanley, Derbyshire, dedicated to St. Andrew, has been completely restored.

The Bishop of Worcester recently reopened Birtsmorton Church, which has been partly rebuilt and greatly restored, at a cost of upwards of £1000.

The ancient parish Church of St. Helen, at Stapleford, after undergoing thorough repair, was reopened on Tuesday by the Bishop Suffragan of Nottingham.

The Western Morning News states that Mr. E. H. Burrows has been appointed her Majesty's Inspector of Schools in the Western District, in succession to the Rev. E. P. Arnold.

The Rev. Rowley Hill, late of Sheffield, was consecrated Bishop of Sodor and Man in York Minster yesterday week, the officiating Bishops being the Archbishop of York and the Bishops of Durham, Chester, and Rochester.

The congregation of St. Pancras have presented the Bishop of Rochester a pair of handsome silver candelabra, with a silver salver, in recognition of their affection for him and their appreciation of his earnest and faithful labours during the seven years and a half he was Vicar of the parish.

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners have agreed to assign a district to the proposed new Church of St. Bartholomew's, Charlton, Dover. A sum of £3000 has been deposited with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as a building guarantee. A contract has been entered into for the erection of a portion of the church, consisting of nave and chancel, for the sum of £4362.

Efforts are being made to restore a portion of the old abbey church at Bridlington, which was said to have been founded in 1106 by Walter de Gaunt, great nephew of William the Conqueror. Not a vestige of chancel or transepts is now visible, and the central and two western towers have disappeared. In Bridlington and its neighbourhood £12,500 has been raised.

The chancel of St. John's, Derby, has been enriched by two memorial windows from designs by Clutterbuck, of Stratford. One has been subscribed for by the congregation, in memory of the Vicar's wife, Mrs. Chancellor, who died twelve months ago. The subject is the raising of Lazarus. The other has been placed by the senior churchwarden, Mr. R. A. R. Jones, in memory of his wife, the subject being the Saviour speaking to Mary in the garden.

At a meeting held at Kells, in the county of Meath, yesterday week, at which Lord Plunket, the Bishop of Meath, presided, the Archbishop of Canterbury denied that he had endeavoured to pull down the old-established Church of Ireland. He did what he could to mitigate the blow that was falling on it. His Grace stated that it was an untrue representation that English Churchmen generally were not interested in the Church of Ireland, and observed that the Churches of England and Ireland had in past times benefited by free intercourse with each other, and he trusted that intercourse might exist in times to come.

The annual fête of the children attending the schools of St. Mary's, Lambeth, of which the Archbishop of Canterbury is the patron, was held yesterday week in the grounds of Lambeth Palace. Mr. John Herniman, Head Master of the schools, had charge of the arrangements. There were about 1000 children on the grounds, and a variety of amusements was prepared for their entertainment. During the day the boys were put through a course of drilling, at which they acquitted themselves admirably. The proceedings terminated with the distribution of a large number of prizes by the Head Master, for whom the boys gave three hearty cheers.

The consecration of the Rev. Rowley Hill as Bishop of Sodor and Man took place yesterday week (St. Bartholomew's Day) in York Minster. The new Prelate was presented by the Bishops of Durham and Rochester. Morning prayer having been said at half-past eight, the Archbishop of York began the communion office as soon as the Bishops, Dean, and other clergy had taken their seats in the sacristy. The epistle was read by the Bishop of Chester, and the Gospel by the Bishop of Durham. Canon Hoare preached from Acts i. 8. The sermon was an attempt to prove that the power of the Holy Ghost, promised, in Acts i. 8, to the apostles, though still given to the Church, was one of testimony and witness only. After the sermon, the consecration proceeded in the usual form.

A stained window has been placed in the Church of St. James, Hindlip, Worcester, as a memorial to the late Lord Lyttelton, at the cost of Mr. Allsopp, M.P. It bears the inscription—"A tribute of admiration of his many noble qualities by Henry Allsopp, M.P.;" and the subjects have been specially selected with reference to his Lordship's public and philanthropic work. The top light represents "The Faithful Steward," in allusion to his Lordship's discharge of his duties as Lord Lieutenant of the county. Below are designs representing "The First Council of Jerusalem," intended to recall his Lordship's interest in Convocation; "The Building of a New School of the Prophets," suggestive of his work in the cause of education; and "The Departure of St. Paul from Tyre," commemorative of the late Peer's visit to New Zealand to found the Canterbury settlement.

Yesterday week the Bishop of Ripon, in the presence of the Bishops of Hereford and Ely and an immense congregation of clergy and laity, consecrated a new church at Armsley, near Leeds, built partly on the site of an old one consecrated by Archbishop Sterne on St. Bartholomew's Day, 1674, and partly on a site given by Mr. W. Whiteley. Though the foundation-stone was laid on Easter Monday, 1872, by Mr. S. E. Wilson, who gave £5000, the new edifice is not yet complete, the porches, western turrets, upper portion of the tower, and choir vestry being unfinished. The sanctuary is apsidal, and contains a beautiful reredos of alabaster marble and Caen stone, by Messrs. Earp, with paintings on tiles by Messrs. Powell, and, together with the handsome lectern, is the gift of Mrs. Batger; the font is given by Dr. Gott, the Vicar of Leeds; the holy table by the girls' Bible class. Messrs. Walker and Athron were the architects.

The Dean of Westminster preached in Westminster Abbey on Sunday afternoon from the text, "And who is my neighbour?" He went through the parable of the Good Samaritan, and, after pointing out numerous positions at home and abroad in which Christian kindness might be rendered to others, said that the war now raging in the East suggested a lesson from this parable, that without arguing or discussing the merits or demerits of either of the belligerents, it was our Christian duty to do all that was in our power to diminish and to shorten the period of the sufferings engendered by a strife which was desolating one of the fairest territories in Europe. Again, there was the famine in India afflicting those who, though very far off, were our neighbours, for they were the subjects of that wonderful empire which was intrusted to us, when "by chance" we passed that way. Whoever, instead of passing by another way, turned and gave relief to the suffering was acting like the Good Samaritan, and like our Master, Christ.

The Archdeacon of Stoke-on-Trent, the Ven. Sir L. S. Stamer, in his primary charge, given on Tuesday, referred to the Burials Bill, and said that, after the success of Lord Harrowby's amendment, no settlement of the question was at all likely which did not go in the direction which that amendment indicated. A grievance had been admitted by the proposal of the bill to allow the burial of Dissenters without the Church service. He, for one, thought the concession a perfectly just one. He did not believe that opening the churchyards to Dissenters with their own services would lead to infidel and blasphemous displays at the grave-side. Nor did he see any logical connection between the admission of Dissenters to the churchyards and the disestablishment of the Church. There were strong arguments in favour of the one which did not apply to the other. If disestablishment was at hand, it would come, not from outsiders, but through internal divisions. The burials question could not remain unsettled much longer, and he entreated his brethren to lend their aid to its solution in a way of fair and reasonable concession, instead of attempting to delay what must inevitably come.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Rev. Edwin Roberts, B.A., of Magdalen College, Oxford, has been elected to the temporary Head Mastership of Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School, Alford.

The Rev. J. A. Kershaw, M.A., Head Master of Spalding Grammar School, has been elected by the Governors of King Edward's Grammar School, Chelmsford, Head Master, in succession to the Rev. J. Tanner, who has held the office for ten years, and resigns in consequence of failing health.

Mr. Joseph S. Cooper, B.A., St. Peter's College, Cambridge, has been appointed Assistant Master in the Grammar School of King James the First, Bishop Auckland.

The Rev. D. J. J. Barnard, M.A., Second Master of the Royal Grammar School, Lancaster, has been elected Head Master of Kilnorth-Beauchamp Grammar School.

The Queen has approved of Mr. Richard Hingston as Consul for Dartmouth, Torbay, and Salcombe Bay, for the King of the Belgians.

The Prince of Wales having been invited by the Mayor of Nottingham to visit the town and open the Fine-Art Museum into which the Castle has been converted, has replied that, should circumstances permit, he will have pleasure in visiting a town of so much renown.

The Manchester Guardian understands that the Manchester Aquarium was sold on Wednesday evening, by private contract, for the sum of £6950. The purchaser is Bishop Vaughan, of Salford, who, it is stated, proposes to carry on the institution as an aquarium and museum.

The "Harvest Home" of the Philanthropic Society was kept on Wednesday at the establishment, Redhill, in the presence of a number of visitors, and, the weather being fine, the day proved a very pleasant one. There are at present about 300 boys employed on the farm and in trades which supplement the labours connected with it.

At a meeting of the Lord Provost's Committee in Edinburgh, on Tuesday, it was resolved that General Grant should be presented with the freedom of the city on Friday. General Grant arrived in Edinburgh from London on Wednesday night, and was received at the station by the Lord Provost. The General and his family remained with his Lordship for some days.

Cheap trains for hop-pickers began running into Kent on Thursday, being continued during this week and next. Only the early kinds of hops are as yet ready to be gathered; but the London pickers seek to make sure of employment by being early on the scene, and already the tents erected in the Fair Meadow at Maidstone by the local sanitary authority have been used as shelter during the night by some hundreds of persons who had tramped from London. It is estimated that last year the number of hop-pickers who went down from London was at least 35,000.

The following notice has been issued by the Post Office:—The address of the sender of a telegram is not required for any purpose of signalling, and should be omitted in all cases where the addressee will be able to identify the sender without it. For reference, the address should be added at the bottom or on the back of the message form. In sending telegrams firms and public companies should adopt their briefest "style," and should avoid the use of stamps containing full name, title, and address. The prefixes "Mr." and "Messrs." and the affixes "Esq.," "Limited," &c., should be omitted, as far as possible, in the addresses of both senders and addressees. Brevity in these respects ensures swifter transmission without any attendant risk.

The annual meeting of the Institution of Naval Architects was begun on Tuesday, in the Corporation Galleries, Glasgow. Lord Hampton, the president, gave the opening address; and papers of considerable interest in connection with the building and launching of ships were read. Mr. Reed and Mr. D'A. Samuda both expressed opinions on these subjects. At Wednesday's meeting Mr. Ravenhill read a paper on "Our Commercial Marine Fleet," and recommended that engineers in the Royal Navy should spend twelve months on board an ocean-going steamer, in order to acquire the experience which could only be so gained. Mr. Reed, M.P., expressed his approval of the suggestion. Mr. Scott Russell read a paper on the boilers and engines of our future fleet, with the intention of showing that eight times the performance of the present steam-engine might, by adopting the plans he suggested, be achieved.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHEAP EDITION OF MISS BRADDON'S NOVELS.

WEAVERS AND WIFE. A Novel. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," &c.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 213.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for SEPTEMBER. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and Frank Dicksee.

Contents: Drama: or, My Father's Sin. (With an Illustration.) Chap. XLVIII.—A Return Call. XLIX.—Wanted, a Sawyer. L.—The Panacea. On Some French Writers of Verse, 1830-1877. By Edward Dowden. The Princess Pauline. Betsey and her Son. Lucian. The Poetry of September. Meditations of a Hindu, Prince and Seppie. By A. C. Lyall. "For Percival" (With an Illustration.) Chap. I.—Thomas and Rose. II.—"Those Eyes of Yours." III.—Dead Men tell no Tales; Alfred Thorne's is told by the Writer. London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE

(No. 215) for SEPTEMBER. Price 1s. Contents of this number: 1. Prussian History. By Professor Seeley. 2. Love's Arrows. By St. Loe Strachey. 3. Young Magrave. By Mrs. Oliphant. Chaps. XXVI.—XXVIII. 4. The Italian Drama. By Catherine Mary Phillimore. Part V. 5. The Colours of Animals and Plants. By A. B. Wallace. I.—Animals. 6. The Smile and the Sigh. 7. German Society Forty Years Since. By Lady Duff Gordon.

THE ART JOURNAL for SEPTEMBER

(Price 2s. 6d.) contains the following Line Engravings:—1. Offer of the Crown to Lady Jane Grey. After C. R. Leslie. R.A. II. My Children. After Alma-Tadema. A.B.A. III. W. H. Beward. After J. R. Handolph. LITERARY CONTENTS.—The Works of Laslett John Pott. By James Dafforne. Illustrated.—The Art of Dressing and of being Dressed. By Percy Fitzgerald, M.A., F.R.S.—Ancient Irish Art—Interlaced Metalwork. By J. Jewitt, F.S.A. Illustrated.—Royal Academy Exhibition (Continued).—Norway. Chapter VIII. By R. T. Pritchett, F.S.A. Illustrated.—Use of Animal Forms in Ornamental Art. By F. E. Hulme, F.R.S., F.S.A. Illustrated.—Secretary of the Pacific Railway. By William H. Ridding. Illustrated. Art at Home and Abroad, Obituary Reviews, &c. London: VINTAGE and Co., Limited, Ivy-lane, and all Booksellers.

Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

FAMILY HERALD for SEPTEMBER.

PURE LITERATURE. The Illustrated London News, in reference to pure literature, speaks of the "Family Herald, that joy to tens of thousands of innocent English households."

LEADING ARTICLES AND ESSAYS. The "British Quarterly Review" says:—"There is a well-considered leading article or essay every week, upon some subject of an instructive or thoughtful character."

NOVELS AND TALES. The "Saturday Review" says:—"Its novels and tales are quite as well written as the best circulating-library stories."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS. The Saturday Review says:—"The editor is the confident and confessor in every station of life. The answers to Correspondents cannot be fiction, a romance and a life history being embodied in almost each of them."

Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.

FAMILY HERALD for SEPTEMBER. Part 412. WILLIAM STEVENS, 421, Strand, London; and all News-vendors and Railway Stations.

VITREMANIE.—An Easy Method of Decorating Windows in Churches, Public Buildings, and Private Homes equal to Real Stained Glass. Illustrated Handbook of Instructions, post-free, 1s. 3d. Particulars free. London: J. BARNARD and SONS, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Seventh Edition, cloth, post-free, 3s. stamps.

DR. BARR MEADOWS ON CHRONIC RUPTIONS. Remarks on the abuse of arsenic, mercury, and other reputed specifics.—G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

Third Edition, post-free, 13 stamps.

DR. BARR MEADOWS ON HOMOEOPATHY. "An excellent exposé of the absurdities of homoeopathy. Its arguments are unanswerable."—Bath Journal.

Cloth, post-free, 3s. stamps.

DR. BARR MEADOWS ON AFFECTIONS OF THE DIGESTIVE ORGANS AND OF THE SKIN. Cases and Commentaries.—G. HILL, 154, Westminster Bridge-road.

Large 8vo, pp. 724, cloth, 8s.; post-free; or, in half-morocco, 12s.

THE HOMOEOPATHIC DOMESTIC PHYSICIAN. By Drs. FULFIE and EPPS. Revised, with important additions and many new remedies, by WASHINGTON EPPS, L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S., Assistant Physician to the London Homoeopathic Hospital.

CONTRACTS.—Cerebral Diseases.—Catarrhs.—Cutaneous Diseases.—Fever.—Affections of the Mind.—The Head.—The Eyes.—The Ears.—The Nose.—The Face, Lips, and Jaws.—The Teeth, Gums, and Mouth.—The Windpipe and Chest.—The Stomach and Bowels.—The Urinary and Genital Organs.—General Hygiene.—Treatment of Children.—Anatomy and Physiology.—Hygiene.—Medical and Surgical Appliances.—Dislocations and Luxations.—Fractures. A Chest of Booklets, 6s. 2s. 6d. 1s. 6d. 6d. 3d. 2d. 1d. or, with glass stoppers to all the Tinctures, 4s. 4s. 2s. 1s. 6d. 6d. 3d. 2d. 1d. James Erre and Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, 48, Thread-needle-street; and 170, Piccadilly.

CANCER—ITS CONSTITUTIONAL AND SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT. An Experience of Twenty-five Years. By GEORGE L. FAY, M.D., of Padua, and Lecturer in his son, M. MONCHIEFFI PATTISON, M.D. (Univ. New York).—KEENE and ASHALL, 71, New Bond-street, London, W. Price One Shilling, post-free.

AMIONS TOUJOURS. New French Song. By GEORGE L. FAY. Poetry by Victor Hugo. Beautifully illustrated. In 2s. 6d. for music. In 1s. 6d. for lyrics. 2s. net. MONTAIGNE and Son, 55, Baker-street, London, W. Pronounced by all who hear it as one of the loveliest melodies they ever met with.

MUSICAL-BOX DEPOTS, 56, Cheapside, and 22, Ludgate-hill, London.—Nicole's celebrated Musical Boxes, playing best secular and sacred music. Prices, 4s. to 12s. Sun-boxes from 1s. to 10s. Latest Stock in London. Catalogue gratis and post-free. Apply to WALES & McCULLOCH, as above.

WHITE WOOD ARTICLES for Painting, Fern Painting, and Decalcomanie: Screens, Book-Covers, Glove, Knitting, and Handkerchief Boxes: Paper-Knives, Fans, &c. Priced list post-free. W. M. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

SCRAPS for SCREENS and SCRAP-BOOKS. A Large Collection of Coloured Scraps of the best kind—Flowers, Figures, Birds, &c. 1s. per Sheet; 12 Sheets, 10s. 6d. W. M. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

ASK your Stationer for PERRY and CO.'S 6d. Sample Box of 36 Selected Patterns of Steel Pens. Post-free for 6d. in stamps. Wholesale, 19 and 20, Holborn Viaduct, London.

PERRY and CO. (Limited), STEEL PEN MAKERS. UNIVERSAL SCHOOL PENS, 1s. per Gross. 19 and 20, Holborn Viaduct, London. Works, Birmingham.

PERRY and CO. (Limited), THE HOLBORN VIADUCT PEN. One shilling per Gross. 19 and 20, Holborn Viaduct, London.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS. Sold by all Stationers THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. The People's Printing Press, for Authors, Amateurs, the Army and Navy, and all who require a small publication. D. G. BERRI, 35, High Holborn, London, W.

THE GROSVENOR SCHOOL OF ART, 18, North Audley-street, W. Conducted by Miss E. Highy Williams. Students prepared for the South Kensington and Royal Academy Examinations. Classes reopen in SEPTEMBER. Life Model and Antique, &c.

MUSICAL EDUCATION.—There are VACANCIES in the Choir of St. John's, Torquay, which consists of two classes of boys—1. Choristers whose voices and training reach the standard of solo singing, who receive gratuitously board and lodging, and pocket-money, and a thorough musical education to fit them for the musical profession; 2. Probationers who receive the same treatment in all respects, but are required to pay £25 a year, to cover the expense of their board, lodging, and pocket-money. There are no extras. The boys live with the organist and choirmaster. Three hours a day are devoted to general education, and religious teaching is given by one of the clergy. When boys in No. 2 class reach the standard of No. 1, they have the preference in the filling up of a vacancy. There is a new organ erected by Hill at a cost of £1400, and the other arrangements of Divine worship are in keeping. Parents who design their boys for the musical profession, and are disposed to follow out perseveringly the course indicated, are requested to apply to the Rev. C. E. H. Robinson, Vicar, St. John's, Torquay, or, C. Benson, Esq., Organist and Choirmaster, St. John's, Torquay.

HOUSE PROPERTY and INVESTMENT COMPANY (Limited), 62, CANNON-STREET, LONDON, E.C. (Seven Doors East of the Cannon-street Station.) CAPITAL, ONE MILLION, in 40,000 fully paid-up Shares of £25 each, for the PURCHASE and SALE of PRODUCTIVE and PROFITABLE HOUSES, PROPERTIES, and DWELLINGS of the WORKING CLASSES on the SELF-SUPPORTING PRINCIPLE. Registered March 15, 1876.

Capital allotted.—Fully Paid-up Shares. 1st Issue, at par .. 4000 Shares, amount .. £100,000 2nd .. 21 prem. .. 4000 .. 10,000 3rd .. 22 prem. .. 2124 .. 53,600 Total 10,124 Shares.

Shareholders, 1057. 1840 Shares, the remainder of the third issue, are in course to allotment of £2 per share prem.

Estimated Purchase-money, £276,423. Revenue, net, yielded by Estates, nearly Eight per Cent. Current Rate of Interest paid for second year on Shares, FIVE AND HALF per Cent. about £12,000.

Applications are now being received for 1846 shares, the remainder of Third Issue, at £2 per share premium. The Fourth issue will be offered at such premium as may protect the opinion of the Board, the interests of existing shareholders. House Property bought and sold. For full particulars, and for Report of Annual Meeting, Prospectuses, Five Minutes' Talk, and Notices of the Press, apply to W. H. BARNARD, Secretary.

LONDON HOSPITAL, Whitechapel-road,

E. (Mainly supported by Voluntary Contributions.) Funds are now greatly needed. Annual Subscriptions or Donations urgently solicited. Fixed Yearly Income, about £12,000. Yearly Expenditure, about £40,000. Over 400 In-Patients (admitted according to urgency) always under treatment. From 400 to 500 Out-Patients also in constant attendance. Wards and other parts of the Institution always open to the Inspection of Visitors. Reports with full information as to privileges of Subscribers and of the work effected by this Hospital, sent (free) on application to A. G. S. BARNARD, Esq., and Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co., Bankers—Roberts, Lubbock, and Co., and Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co.

CHUBB'S SAFES and LOCKS.

CHUBB and SON HAVE REMOVED from 47, St. Paul's-churchyard, to 129, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, ST. PAUL'S. Communication by Special Private Wire with their West-End Branch at 48, St. James's-street, Piccadilly; and Safe Factory, Old Kent-road, S.E. Lock Factory, Whitechapel, Dept. of Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. Price-Lists sent free.

LORNE "THE PERFECTION OF WHISKY."

HIGHLAND WHISKY. UNBLENDED FOR "TODDY." Wholesale of the Sole Proprietors: GREENLEES BROTHERS, 1, Gresham-buildings, E.C. Distilleries, Argyleshire.

THE SPECIALITE SAUMUR CHAMPAGNE.

This innocent and refreshing Wine is matchless. The "Medical Examiner" writes:—"Precisely the wine that is wanted for invalids and the public." It is the same price as the celebrated "Specialite" Sherry, free from acidity and heat, 3s. per dozen, upon the cash system, carriage paid. FELTOW and SONS, Sole Importers and Importers, 50, Bishopsgate-street; and 4, Union-court, E.C.

NATURAL MINERAL WATERS OF VICHY.

Property of the French Government. CELESTINS.—The water of this spring is very agreeable, sparkling, and slightly acidulated. Kennedy for Complaints of the Kidneys, Gravel, Gout, Diabetes, Rheumatism, &c. HAUTE-REVE.—This spring contains a greater quantity of carbonic acid, and is especially recommended as a table water. GRANDE-GRILLE.—For Complaints of the Liver and Biliary Disorders, Indigestion, &c. HOPITAL.—For Stomach Complaints, &c. VICHY WATERS are pleasant to the taste, and may be drunk pure or mixed with wine or spirits. CAUTION.—See that the name of the particular water required is on the capsule. Sold by all Chemists, Wine and Mineral Water Merchants, Price One Shilling per Bottle.

EPPS'S COCOA.

Wholesale Depot—Smith and Vandenberg, Park-place.

PARIS. EPPS'S COCOA.

Dépôt—A. Delafosse, Faubourg St. Honoré, 64.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S

AUREOLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. Guaranteed not to injure the hair. Price 6d. and 1s. 6d. of all Perfumers, Wholesalers, HOVEN and SONS, 5, St. Mark-lane, W.; and 33 and 35, City-road, E.C. London; Pinaud and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris; St. Graben, Vienna; 44, Rue des Longs Châteaux, Brussels.

DOES YOUR HAIR TURN GREY?

Then use HERRING'S PATENT MAGNETIC BRUSHES and COMBS. Brushes, 10s. and 15s. each. Combs, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., and 6s. 6d. Pumps on application.—6, Great Marlborough-st., W.; 33 and 35, City-road; and of all Perfumers.

PIESSE & LUBIN. HUNGARY WATER.

Prophylactic, refreshing, invigorating. "I am not surprised to learn," says Humboldt, "that orators, clergymen, lecturers, authors, and poets give it the preference, for it refreshes the memory." Emphatically the scent for warm weather, for hot and depressive climate. A case of six bottles, 14s.; single samples, 2s. 6d.—2, New Bond-street, W.

PALACE SOAP, 20s. per lb., for State

Apartment.—PIESSE and LUBIN, 2, New Bond-street, are the only makers of this exquisite Soap. Single Cakes, 5s.; or six in a carton, 27s. 6d. Piesse and Lubin also make some charming Flower-scented Soaps, at 10s. per lb., such as Opoponax Soap, Violet Soap, Frangipani Soap, After Shave Soap, and others, in Cakes, 2s. 6d. each, suitable for superior use. Royal Laboratory of Flowers, 2, New Bond-street.

PIESSE and LUBIN. SWEET SCENTS

POUR CADEAUX.—Opoponax, Jockey Club, Patchouly, Frangipani, Lign-Rose, White Rose, Paeonia, and 1000 others in every flower that breathes a fragrance, 2s. 6d. each; three in a case, 7s. Sold by fashionable Druggists in all parts of the World.—Laboratory of Flowers, 2, New Bond-street, London.

HAIR DESTROYER.—248, High Holborn,

London.—ALEX. ROSS'S DEPILEATOR removes Superfluous Hair from Face and Arms without injury, 3s. 6d. Sent post, carefully packed 4s. 6d. Oiling Hair, 3s. 6d.; or stamps.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET,

having obtained the purchase (in Paris) of FOUR THOUSAND YARDS of RICH COLOURED SILKS, is selling the same at unexampled prices. The shades are of the most distinctive character, and this purchase is especially recommended as being by far the cheapest stock of SILKS ever so imported. Prices, 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 5s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free.

ALSO, A LARGE PURCHASE OF THE RICHEST FIGURED SILKS is now being offered at 5s. 6d. per yard, amongst which will be found the most choice shades of White, Bronze, Tulle, Vert, and every fashionable colour.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET,

has purchased the Model Silk Dresses of Messrs. Pinget, Grange et Magent, E. Pasquier, P. Canivet, Barutel and Denery, of Paris, and the same are now ON SALE at less than half price. These Costumes are of the richest possible description, which will easily be understood by a glance at the names of the articles from whom they were purchased.

A LARGE COLLECTION OF NOVELTIES FOR EARLY AUTUMN DRESSES, in every variety of Fabric and Shade of Colour, from 12s. 6d. to 42s. the Full Dress. Patterns free.

FOR BALL and FETE DRESSES. RICH GRENADINES and other Light Fabrics, in White, Black, and all New Colours, 12s. 6d. to 35s. the Dress. Patterns free from PETER ROBINSON, Oxford-street.

IN 62 NEW SHADES OF COLOUR. CACHEMIRE DE PARIS.

This elegant material is all wool, beautifully soft, and richer in its colourings than any article previously introduced, 48 inches wide, 2s. 11d. and 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

FOR TRAVELLING AND SEASIDE WEAR. SCARBORO' SERGES (all Wool), at 18s. 6d. and 22s. 6d. the Full Dress. Patterns free. In all the New Shades of Navy, Bronze, Vert, &c.

IN WHITE, BLACK, AND ALL NEW COLOURS. VELVET—FINISHED VELVETEENS, beautifully soft, rich, and very wide. This charming fabric can be had in Black, from 2s. 9d. to 5s. 6d. per yard, and 35 choice Shades of Colour at 4s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 105, Oxford-street, W.

VERY FASHIONABLE THIS SEASON. CASHMERE MERINOES,

46 in. wide, 17s. 6d. the Dress. Patterns free. The richness and variety of colour in this useful fabric have never been equalled.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

New Designs in Cashmere and Silk Costumes, 4s. 6d. Specialties in Travelling Costumes, 35s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Micado Washing Silk Costumes, 40s. 6d.

SEVERAL IMPORTANT PURCHASES OF MANTLES and JACKETS,

In Matalass, Cashmere, Silk, and Velvet, at very low prices. A large stock of Cashmere and Silk Mantles, Fur from 2 to 8s. Ladies' Dust Cloaks, 3s. 6d. Waterproof Tweed Cloaks, from 17s. 6d. PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

WOOLLEN CLOTHS.—Waterproof

Tweeds, Matalass Cloths, Sealskins, Fur Beavers, and other materials for Ladies' Jackets; also every kind of Woollen Goods for Gentlemen's and Boys' wear. C. MEKING and CO., Woollen Warehouse, 111 and 112, Hatton-garden, Holborn-circus, London.

SELLING OFF! SPLENDID DIAMONDS

GOLD JEWELLERY. Great Bargains. For a short time only. Will positively Close on the 25th Inst. No reasonable offers refused. Reductions in Plain Figures. Must be cleared.—31, BURLINGTON-ARCADE, Piccadilly, W.

SILKS—SILKS—SILKS.

The Cheapest and Best BLACK, COLOURED, FANCY, and JAPANESE, Plain and Figured SILKS, from 2s. 11d. Full Dress. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

LADIES.—FOR THIS and COMING

SEASON, Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP'S New Wool Serges From West-England Serges From New Pinaud Serges 10s. 6d. Cashmere Serges 10s. 6d. New Scarvo Serges 10s. 6d. Homespun Serges 10s. 6d. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP'S French Merinos .. 1s. 11d. 1/2d. Workhouse Sheetings From French Cashmeres .. 2s. 3d. Snow-flake Fabrics 6s. 6d. Himalayan Cashmeres 2s. 3d. 1/2d. Cannel-hair ditto 6s. 6d. Washing Summer ditto 10s. 6d. 198, Regent-street.

THE Most LADYLIKE COSTUMES,

ULSTER, and JACKETS. Engravings and Patterns free. The new Serges, Cashmeres, Snowflakes, and every other Fabric for Autumn, 25s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. 110, Ulfster-street, W. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street, London.

VELVETEENS in BLACK and all Colours.

Silks of every description to match the Woollen Fabrics for Autumn. BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street. Patterns free.

HENRY GLAVE'S SALE

of BLACK and COLOURED SILKS, at Reduced Prices. The new Figured Micado, or Japanese Silks, 4s. 6d. to 1s. 11d. the yard. Yokohama Silks, 1s. 6d.; former price, 1s. 11d. 7000 yards Coloured Damascene, 3s. 9d. a yard. 5000 yards of Coloured Dress Silks, in all the Newest Shades, 2s. 11d. to 10s. 6d. a yard. The Princess Black Silk, 3s. 6d. A New Make of Extreme Richness. The Princess Black Silk, 3s. 6d. The Princess Black Silk, 3s. 6d. Superb Black Silks, at 7s. 11d. and 8s. 11d. 500 yards Rich Lyons Black Silk, in three qualities:—No. 1, Quality Black Silk, 2s. 11d. a yard. No. 2, Quality Black Silk, at 2s. 11d. No. 3, Quality Black Silk, at 2s. 11d. A job lot of Black Silks in three prices wonderfully cheap, 1s. 9d., 2s., and 2s. 6d. the yard. Black and Coloured Velvets and Velveteens. Any Silk Patterns free on application. 534, 535, 536, and 537, New Oxford-street, London.

HENRY GLAVE'S

COSTUME and UNDERCLOTHING DEPARTMENT. Handsome Black Silk "Princess" Costumes, 4s. 6d. Japanese Costumes, various Colours, 3s. 6d. Brown and Grey Snowflake Costumes, new Styles, 25s. 6d. Black Alpaca Costumes, fashionably made, 18s. 6d. to 31s. 6d. Useful Serge Costumes, for Travelling or the Seaside, 21s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Black Velveteen Costumes, 2s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. A variety of Useful Costumes in Mixed Fabrics, from 18s. 6d. to 25s. 6d. each. A serviceable Servant's Costume, at 14s. 6d. Morning Wrappers, in Coloured Flannel, 7s. 11d. each. Printed Cambric Morning Wrappers, 7s. 11d. each. A New Underclothing and Outfitting List for Ladies and Children, with Illustrations, sent post-free. 534, 535, 536, and 537, New Oxford-street, London.

G A S K and G A S K.

NEW TRAVELLING, YACHTING, and SEASIDE COSTUMES, made of the New Vienna Cloths, Autumn Serges, &c., from quite new and elegant Paris models, from 21s. to 54s. 6d. FUR-LINED CLOAKS and SEALSKINS are being sold at the Lowest Summer Prices. 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, Oxford-street; 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, Wells-street.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA.—"The

most perfect fitting shirt."—Glasgow. Gentlemen desirous of purchasing shirts of the best quality should try Ford's Eureka. 4s., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d. 41 and 43, Finsbury. Branch—305, Oxford-street, London.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE

is about to be erected in England. Every man capable of endurance should have a monument more enduring than the famous obelisk by doing his best to banish ignorance, misery, and disease. For the best means of preventing disease and producing HEALTH, HAPPINESS, and LONG LIFE, see a new Illustrated Sheet, given with ENO'S FRUIT SALT.

As a SPARKLING SUMMER BEVERAGE; or for those who from any cause are FAGED, WEARY, or WORN OUT; or any whose duties require them to undergo mental or physical EXHAUSTION; or STRAIN; for ERRORS OF EATING OR DRINKING; or HOW TO ENJOY OUR GOOD FOOD TO AGREE WITH the digestive organs, the Fruit Salt takes away the ground-work of malarious diseases and all liver complaints, and neutralises poisonous matter. Out of a large number of Testimonials, we select the following:—

ENO'S FRUIT SALT

(Prepared from Sound Ripe Fruit). It is a pleasant Beverage, both Cooling, Refreshing, and Invigorating. You cannot overstate its great value in keeping the Blood pure, and its true value is universally known, no family would be without it.

TO EUROPEANS who propose visiting or reading in HOT CLIMATES, I consider the FRUIT SALT to be an indispensable necessity, for by its use the system is relieved of all poisonous matter, the result of eating to nearly the same extent, and of too rich food, as they do in a colder country, while so much heat-making food is not required in the warmer climate. By keeping the system clear, the Fruit Salt takes away the ground-work of malarious diseases and all liver complaints, and neutralises poisonous matter. Out of a large number of Testimonials, we select the following:—

ENO'S FRUIT SALT.

A Gentleman writes:—"I feel quite certain, if your FRUIT SALT was known in INDIA and the COLONIES, that the sale would not be limited to thousands of bottles per annum, but MANY MILLIONS. India alone would use more than all England."

ENO'S FRUIT SALT.

M.D. (EDINB.) and M.R.C.S., L.A.C., London, writes:—"I am much pleased with your Fruit Salt, having used it on myself. Your Urinary remarks are most reasonable. Having nearly died of Typhoid, when studying at College, being the only one out of sixteen who recovered, I mean to go on well by purifying the blood. Though I am sixty-three, I have not the least doubt it will be very serviceable to me."

ENO'S FRUIT SALT.

A Lady writes:—"Everything, medicine or food, seemed to do properly for at least three months before I commenced taking it. The little food could take generally punished me or returned. My life was one of great suffering, so that I must have succumbed before long. To me and my family it has been a great earthly blessing. I feel I cannot say too much for it. The least I can do is to do my best to make the FRUIT SALT known to other sufferers. I am getting better rapidly, and expect to be purifying the blood, though I am sixty-three, I have not the least doubt it will be very serviceable to me."

ENO'S FRUIT SALT.

Messrs. GIBSON and SON, Chemists, of Hexham, write:—"Since we introduced your FRUIT SALT, we have sold upwards of one thousand bottles, and it gives general satisfaction, as customers who get it almost always recommend it to their friends."

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM OF HIRE.

PIANOFORTES of every description by all the most celebrated makers from Two Guineas a Quarter.

HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, from One Pound Five Shillings per Quarter.

SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES, at immense Reductions for Cash, or on the Three-Years' System.

CHAPPELL'S ENGLISH 20-GUINEA or SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, in Canadian Walnut or Mahogany. This instrument combines good quality of tone and excellence of workmanship. Has a lovely touch, and is capable of enduring hard practice without going out of order. Owing to its size, it is admirably adapted for the boudoir or any room where space is an object. In Solid Oak or White Ash, 22 ga.; Rosewood or Walnut Case, 27 ga.

NEW POLKA by CH. D'ALBERT.
THE FANFARE POLKA. By CHARLES D'ALBERT. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. net; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NEW DANCE MUSIC.

SWEETHEARTS. Waits on Arthur Sullivan's popular Song. "One of the best waltzes ever written by the Net. Above favourite Composer." 2s. 6d.
TRIAL BY JURY LANCERS, on Airs from Sullivan's popular Work. 2s. 6d.
TRIAL BY JURY QUADRILLE... 2s. 6d.
TRIAL BY JURY WALTZ... 2s. 6d.
TRIAL BY JURY POLKA... 2s. 6d.
BINK GALOP... 2s. 6d.
FLEUR DE THE QUADRILLE... 2s. 6d.
FASCINATION VALSE A Trois Temps... 2s. 6d.
SULTAN'S POLKA (New Edition)... 2s. 6d.
The above, arranged for Full Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. each.
N.B. A Complete List of M. D'Albert's Popular Dance Music will be sent on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO'S LIST OF NEW SONGS.

THOU'RT PASSING HENCK... ARTHUR SULLIVAN 2s. net.
MY BROTHER (sung by) ARTHUR SULLIVAN 2s. net.
IF (sung by B. McGuckin) PINSUTI... 2s. net.
THE CAPTIVE SKYLARK... PINSUTI... 2s. net.
THE SKY... PINSUTI... 2s. net.
BOOKS AND FLOWERS... PINSUTI... 2s. net.
OH! FOR THY WINGS... PINSUTI... 2s. net.
THE EVERLASTING SHORE... PINSUTI... 2s. net.
SWEETHEARTS... ARTHUR SULLIVAN 2s. net.
CHADLE SONG... CARRINGTON LEE 2s. net.
THE LAST LETTER... CARRINGTON LEE 2s. net.
FOR EVERMORE... H. GADSBY 2s. net.
WHEN THOU ART NIGH... GOUNOD... 2s. net.
WILLING THREE SONGS OF ARABY... F. CLAY 2s. net.
THE FATE OF A ROSE... HENRY SMART 2s. net.
MY LOWER ACROSS THE BLUE SEA... S. ADAMS 2s. net.
THE MEN OF WALES... B. RICHARDS 2s. net.
THE DAY MY LOVE WENT MAYING... L. GRAY 2s. net.
NOT FAR AWAY... TOURS 2s. net.
TIME AND THE STREAM... EDWIN HARPER 1s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TRIAL BY JURY. Dramatic Cantata. Written by W. S. Gilbert. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed with immense success at the Strand Theatre. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d. net. TRIAL BY JURY. Pianoforte Solo. 2s. 6d. net. THE JUDGES SONG. 2s. net. THE LOVE-SICK BOY. Defendant's Song. 1s. 6d. net. KUHE'S FANTASIA. 2s. net. SMALLWOOD'S FANTASIA (easy). 1s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

L'ORGANISTE PRATIQUE. 260 Easy Pieces for Organ or Harmonium, by J. LEYBACH. In 2 vols., price 6s. each net; or in eight parts, each 2s. net. The above will supply a want long felt by amateur performers on the organ or harmonium, as all the pieces are very pretty without being difficult.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S NEW PUBLICATIONS. All Music sent post-free half price.

H. WEIST HILL'S COMPOSITIONS. Performed with great success at the Alexandra Palace.
Values. Gertrude, 3s. Promenade, 2s. Alma, 4s. Son Image, 4s. True Love, 4s. Gavotte, Madame de Pompadour (Beautifully Illustrated), 4s. Galop. To Paris in Ten Hours (Illustrated), 3s.

PINSUTI'S POPULAR SONGS.

THE RAFT. Descriptive Song, sung by Signor Foll; in E and G. 4s.
I LOVE MY LOVE. Soprano, B flat, or Contralto, A flat. 4s.
WHAT WE HAVE LOVED WE LOVE FOR EVER. 4s.
WILT THOU BE MINE. 2s.
THE MAIDEN'S FLOWER SONG. 2s.
LOVE WILL SHINE ALL THROUGH. 4s.
THE OWL. Baritone or Bass. 4s.
The above songs are universally acknowledged to be the finest productions of this talented composer.

FOLI'S LATEST SUCCESSES.

A LIFE'S LOVE. By J. B. WALDECK. 4s. In keys C and D. PEACE BE STILL. Do. do. 4s.
By the same Composer.
IN THE TWILIGHT LONG AGO. Keys D and F. 4s.
WE ROAM AND RULE THE SEA. For Baritone or Bass. 3s.
Review:—"Since the days of Dibdin we have not come across a song possessing more merit and true English style."

CATALOGUES GRATIS.

Shipping Orders on most favourable terms.
LONDON: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 24, BERNERS-STREET, W.; and 123, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

ASHDOWN and PARRY'S CATALOGUES of MUSIC.

PART 1. PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONIUM.
PART 2. VOCAL.
PART 3. HARP, CONCERTINA.
PART 4. VIOLIN, VIOLONCELLO, ORCHESTRA, &c.
PART 5. FLUTE, CORNET, CLARINET, &c.
Sent gratis and post-free to any part of the world.
Ashdown and PARRY, Hanover-square, London.

SIR WILLIAM STERNDAL BENNETT'S BARCAROLLE (from the Fourth Concerto).—This beautiful Composition is now published in the following forms:—
Piano Solo... 4s.
Piano Duet... 4s.
Organ, arranged by Dr. Stegall... 4s.
London: Ashdown and PARRY.

GAVOTTE, in E Minor. By SILAS. Played by Madame Esipoff at her Concerts in England and America with immense success. A new edition of this celebrated Gavotte is now ready. Price 3s.
Ashdown and PARRY, Hanover-square.

OLIVIA. New Waltz. By CHARLES COOTE, Jun. Played by Coote and Tinney's band at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace, June 22. Piano Solo, 4s.; Duet, 6s.—London: Ashdown and PARRY.

CHARLES HALLE'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. Section 1.—No. 1. Pianoforte Tutor. FORTY-SEVEN, LONDON and MANCHESTER.

CHARLES HALLE'S NEW EDITION OF POPULAR WORKS. For List of Pieces already published Catalogues will be forwarded, post-free, on application to FORTY-SEVEN, LONDON and MANCHESTER, and Cross-street, South King-street, Manchester.

NEW MUSIC.

W. T. BEST'S FIRST ORGAN BOOK. Forty pages, music size. An Elementary and Practical Guide for Organ Students. This day, price 1s. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

J. W. ELLIOTT'S NEW HARMONIUM TUTOR. Containing everything necessary to be learnt for playing the Harmonium. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day. Price 1s.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

HENNING'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLIN. A celebrated German Method. Now for the first time published in English. It includes 162 Progressive Exercises. Forty pages, music size. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

EDWARD HOWELL'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLONCELLO. Founded on Bomberg's Method. A Complete and Practical Instruction Book, for the use of all Students who wish to master the Instrument. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

DR. CALLCOTT'S GRAMMAR OF MUSIC. Boosey's New Shilling Edition. This day.

VACCAJ'S SINGING METHOD, and BALFE'S BALLAD TUTOR. Boosey's New Shilling Editions. This day.

MUSIC FOR THE SEASIDE. New Boosey's Musical Cabinet. Numbers. Price 1s. each, post-free, 1s. 1d. Arthur Sullivan's Ten Songs. Rubinstein's Piano Album. Santley's Ten New Songs. Brahms's Piano Album. A. S. Gatty's Twelve Ballads. Liszt's Piano Album. Longfellow & Balfe's Ten Songs. Walden's Piano Album. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street, London.

TRUE HEARTS. New Song, by the Composer "Nancy Lee." This day. Sung by Miss Ellen D'Alton.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

ONE ONLY. By WEKERLIN. This exquisite Romance, sung with equal success by Mr. Edward Lloyd and Mr. Santley, may be had of all Musicians in town and country. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

STILL WATERS RUN DEEP. By PINSUTI. Price 2s. each net.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE. By PINSUTI. Price 2s. each net.

AS YOU LIKE IT. By PINSUTI. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

FAIR IS MY LOVE. By HATTON. Mr. Santley will sing this celebrated song at all the concerts during the approaching tournee with Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

IF YOU WERE AT YOUR WINDOW. By MOLLOY. The Words by Weatherley. Price 2s. net. "If you were at your window, And I were passing by, I wonder would you greet me, And smile to see me nigh." Molloy's version must be ordered. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. On the Celebrated Song. The Waltz of the Season. Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SONGS by HAMILTON AIDÉ. Remember or Forget. The Fisher. Spanish Boat Song. Maid I Love is Six Years Old. Let me Dream of Happy Days. Brown Eyes, or Blue Eyes. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SONGS by ALFRED SCOTT GATTY. Bethany Bay. One, Morning, oh! so early. Old Sweet Story. The Departure. Hay is in the Mow. Apart. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. The Lost Chord. Let me Dream Again. Living Poems. Sleep, my Love, Sleep. Golden Days. Looking Back. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SONGS by F. H. COWEN. It was a Dream. Almost. Spinning. Marguerite. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SONGS by DOLORES. Destiny. The Fairies. Clear and Cool. Seaweed. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 295, Regent-street.

RALPH THE RANGER. By J. P. KNIGHT. Notice to the Trade and Public.—Owing to the unprecedented demand for copies of this new song, a few days' delay in the delivery is unavoidable. Orders can only be executed in rotation. Sent post-free for 18 stamps. Sole Publisher, W. MOSELEY, Jun., 70, Upper-street, N.

LA SERENADE. New Waltz. By METRA. A most attractive and popular waltz. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA VAGUE. New Waltz. By METRA. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

W. SMALLWOOD'S NEW PIECES for PIANOFORTE. Illustrated with Titles. CRYSTAL DEWDROPS. AVELETTE. Gondola Song. FAIRY DREAMS. Post-free, 18 stamps each. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

EDITH'S SONG. From Tennyson's "Harold." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

A WINTER'S TALE. From Tennyson's "Harold." "Two young lovers in wintry weather." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WAR SONGS OF THE EAST. By H. B. FARNIE. In handsome cover, price 1s. post-free, 13 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. Now ready. New Illustrated Book. Post-free. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

PIANOS for HIRE, 10s. per Month. Seven octaves. No hire charged if purchased at any time within six months. THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, London, W.

PIANOS, 17s. 6d. per Month, on the Three-Years' System. Becomes the property of the hirer if the payments are kept up. Illustrated Catalogues, post-free, on application.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street.

PIANO, £14. Seven-Octave PICCOLO PIANOFORTE. Second-hand, in good condition, for ready money.—May be seen at 27, Baker-street, Fortman-square.

THE GRANVILLE, ST. LAWRENCE-ON-SEA. near Ramsgate.—Baths, Theatre, Concerts, Billiard-Room. Board, with attendance, in the Grand Gothic Dining-Hall, 12s. per day.—Address, THE MANAGER.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY. TOURIST ARRANGEMENTS, 1877. First, Second, and Third Class TOURIST TICKETS, available for TWO MONTHS, will be issued from May 15 to Oct. 31, 1877. For particulars see Time-Tables and Programmes issued by the Company. Paddington Terminus. J. GARRISON, General Manager.

ACCIDENTS BY FLOOD AND FIELD. Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY, the oldest and largest Accidental Assurance Company. Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., Chairman. Subscribed Capital, £1,000,000. £1,120,000 have been paid as compensation. Apply to the Clerks at the Railway Stations, or 84, Cornhill, London. WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND (Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 20, 1861). Bankers to the New Zealand Government. Paid-up Capital, £750,000. Reserve Fund, £75,000.

DIRECTORS. J. LOGAN CAMPBELL, Esq., President. George B. Owen, Esq. W. I. Taylor, Esq. Alfred Cox, Esq. M.G.A. James Watt, Esq. Samuel Browning, Esq. Hon. Jas. Williamson, M.L.C. LONDON BOARD. The Right Hon. Sir James Ferguson, Bart., K.C.M.G. Falconer Larkworthy, Esq. Archd. Hamilton, Esq. Robert Porter, Esq. A. J. Mundella, Esq., M.P. Thomas Russell, Esq., C.M.G. Head Office—Auckland.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES. In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle. In Fiji—Lewaka. In New Zealand—Auckland, Christchurch, Dunedin, Wellington, Napier, Nelson, Invercargill, Picton, and at seventy-eight other towns and places throughout the Colony. The Bank grants Drafts on all their Branches and Agencies and issues every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms. The London Office RECEIVES DEPOSITS of £20 and upwards for fixed periods of two to five years, bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum. The rate for shorter periods can be ascertained on application at the Office of the Bank. F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director. No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

ARTISANS', LABOURERS', AND GENERAL DWELLINGS COMPANY (LIMITED). Shareholders anxious to dispose of their Shares are invited to send particulars and lowest price to NEMESIS (care of Henry Bell), 10, Bolt-court, E.C.

KINAHAN'S LL WHISKY. UNIVERSALLY RECOMMENDED BY THE MEDICAL PROFESSION. A pure old spirit, mild, mellow, delicious, and most wholesome. Dr. Hasall says—"The samples were soft and mellow to the taste, aromatic and ethereal to the smell. The whisky is pure, well matured, and of very excellent quality."

ELLIS'S RUTHIN WATERS.

PURE AERATED WATERS.

ELLIS'S RUTHIN WATERS.—Crystal Springs. Soda, Potash, Seltzer, Lemonade, Lithia; and, for Gout, Lithia and Potash. Corks branded "R. ELLIS and SON, RUTHIN." and every Label bears their Trade Mark. Sold everywhere, and wholesale of R. ELLIS and SON, Ruthin, North Wales. LONDON AGENTS: W. BEST and SONS, Henriette-street, Cavendish-square.

COOK'S READING SAUCE is the best and most economical sauce ever manufactured FOR FISH, ENGLISH SOUPS, GRAVIES, &c. It only requires a trial to convince the purchaser of its excellence. CAUTION.—The genuine is protected by Trade Mark—viz., CHARLES COOK'S Signature on a white ground across the Reading Arms.

In consequence of Spurious Imitations of LEA and PERRINS' SAUCE, which are calculated to deceive the Public, Lea and Perrins have adopted NEW LABELS, bearing their signature. "LEA and PERRINS," which signature is placed on every bottle of WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE, and without which none is genuine. Sold wholesale by the Proprietors, Worcester; Crosses and Blackwell, London; and Export Agents generally. Retail, by Dealers in Sauces throughout the World.

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF MEAT.—Finest Meat-flavouring Stock for Soups, Made in England. See Labels. For Details, apply to J. LIEBIG, with facsimile of Baron Liebig's signature across Label.

TAYLOR BROTHERS'

MARAVILLA COCOA. DELICIOUS AND INVIGORATING.

MARAVILLA COCOA. "It may justly be called the perfection of prepared Cocoa." British Medical Journal.

MARAVILLA COCOA.—"The 'Globe' says, 'MARAVILLA COCOA has achieved a thorough success, and supercedes every other cocoa in the market. Entire solubility, a delicate aroma, and a rare concentration of the purest elements of nutrition, distinguish the Maravilla cocoa above all others. For invalids, dyspeptics, and consumers of Cocoa in general, we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage.'"
Sole Proprietors, TAYLOR BROTHERS, London.

AMERICAN CENTENNIAL PRIZE MEDAL.

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. Its pure flavour, delicate aroma, and invigorating qualities have established its position as a first-class dietetic article.

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "The Caracas Cocoa of such choice quality."—Food, Water, and Air. Dr. Hasall says—"A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

FRY'S EXTRACT OF COCOA, "than which, if properly prepared, there is no nicer or more wholesome preparation of Cocoa."—Food, Water, and Air. Edited by Dr. Hasall.

TENTH INTERNATIONAL MEDAL awarded to J. S. FRY and SON.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.

BROWN and POLSON'S

CORN FLOUR,

WITH STEWED FRUIT OF ANY KIND.

THE ESSEX FLOUR and GRAIN COMPANY. Liverpool-road, London, N. supply the best goods only.—Whites, for Pastry, 10s. 8d. per bushel; Households, for Bread, 10s.; Wheat Meal, for Brown Bread, 9s. 4d.; Coarse Scotch Oatmeal, 3s. 2d. per 14 lb.; Fine, 3s. 4d.; American Hominy, 4s.; Barley, Buckwheat, 5s. per bushel, or 19s. per sack; Indian Corn, 4s. 8d. per bushel, or 17s. 6d. per sack; Oats, 4s. per bushel; Crushed Oats, 5s. 6d. per bushel, 13s. 6d. per sack; Middlings, 2s. 4d. per bushel; Ground Pollard, 1s. 6d.; Peas, 7s. 6d.; Tick Beans, 8s.; Split Peas, 2s. 6d. and 3s. per peck. Meat Biscuits, 20s. per cwt.; Barley Meal, 4s. 8d. per bushel, or 17s. 6d. per sack. Lentil Flour, for Invalids, in fine, 1 lb. size, 1s.; and 7 lb. 5s. All other kinds of Grain and Seed. Special prices for larger quantities. Orders and cheques to be made in favour of G. Young.

WILLS' "BRISTOL MIXTURE," Mild and Fragrant. WILLS' "SMOKING MIXTURE," a choice combination of "First Growth." Sold everywhere, in One, Two, and Four Ounce Packets, protected by our Trade Mark. W. D. and H. O. Wills, Bristol and London.

"In point of fact, the mass of the London water is drawn from sources which are contaminated by the most offensive of all impurities."—Time Leading Article, Monday, Aug. 12, 1877.

A POLLINARIS WATER. "THE QUEEN OF TABLE WATERS." London Medical Record.

"The history of human sickness induced by water pollution, if it could be fully written, would be a very horrible and startling record."—Time Leading Article, Aug. 17, 1877.

A POLLINARIS WATER. An eminent physician says:—"He who drinks Apollinaris will never be troubled with gout, rheumatism, or indigestion."—Morning Post.

"It is now demonstrated, beyond possibility of doubt, that the water supplied by the existing London companies is uniformly impure, and that, notwithstanding the exorbitant rates at which it is delivered, the quantity furnished is insufficient to meet the general wants of the community. The Thames and the Lea, at present the principal sources of supply, are well known to be extensively polluted with organic impurities from the effluents of towns and hamlets contiguous to their banks; and, although some improvement has been effected in this respect by the removal of the 'intakes' of the companies to greater distances from the metropolis, and by the adoption of more efficient methods of filtration, there is still ground for complaint that the quality of the water derived from the rivers mentioned is unfit for drinking and culinary purposes."—Daily Telegraph, Aug. 20, 1877.

A POLLINARIS WATER. "Free from any organic or inorganic impurity."—Professor J. A. WANKLYN, Public Analyst, County of Buckingham.

"Again, London is wretchedly supplied with potable water. The statistics on this point are decisive, but the citizens of the capital do not need the evidence of statistics. They have much more direct proof of the nature and extent of the evil. All the world knows unless London water is carefully filtered it cannot be safely consumed. It contains an alarming amount of organic matter, and it is not only disagreeable to the taste, but undoubtedly spreads abroad disease and death."—Globe, Aug. 22, 1877.

A POLLINARIS WATER. "Purity, freshness, persistent effervescence, and agreeable taste, alone or mixed with wines or spirits."—Practitioner.

THE LONDON WATER SUPPLY.—Next to pure air, pure water is all-important. In spite of the unceasing efforts of our eight Water Companies, the water we get increases in impurity rather than the contrary. The reports of Dr. Frankland are becoming less assuring to the water consumer, and in respect of one or two of the companies supplying the southern districts of the metropolis the analyses and reports show decidedly alarming conditions of the sources of supply. On several occasions we have sounded the note of alarm that the great source of our water supply must become less pure as the demands of the metropolis yearly become greater. This fact must be apparent to everybody who considers the criterion of our land drainage, and the land above the intakes of the companies in the upper reaches of the Thames, which are now irrigated with sewage. In spite of the precautions taken by the Water Companies to store and filter the water, it is impossible to keep pure water from passing through areas that now pour their volumes into the stream, and the question recurs daily with more force, What are Londoners to drink?—Echo, Aug. 22, 1877.

A POLLINARIS NATURAL MINERAL WATER.

"THE TYPE OF PURITY."—Professor BARTLETT, F.R.S. "A PURE NATURAL EFFERVESCENT WATER."—THE FALL-MALL GAZETTE. "REFRESHING, ANTACID, EXHILARATING—the sworn enemy of Gout, Rheumatism, and Indigestion."—THE LONDON MEDICAL RECORD.

PRICES.—50 Glass Quarts, 26s.; 100 Glass Pints, 42s.; 1a. London.

PRICES.—50 Glass Quarts, 29s.; 100 Glass Pints, 44s. Carriage paid to any railway station in the United Kingdom. Bottles allowed for on return, 2s. 8d. for 50 quarts; 4s. for 100 pints.

SMALLER QUANTITIES ARE RETAILED by the Trade at 2s. per Dozen Quarts, and 4s. per Dozen Pints.

SOLE IMPORTERS, APOLLINARIS COMPANY (Limited), 19, Regent-street, London, S.W.

CITY DEPOT, INGRAM and CO., 119, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Agents for Scotland, A. Brown and Co., Glasgow.

D. R. DE JONGH'S

(KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR, KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM).

LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.

Proved by twenty-five years' medical experience to be

THE PUREST.

THE MOST PALATABLE.

THE MOST EASILY DIGESTED.

THE MOST RAPIDLY EFFICACIOUS.

DR. DE JONGH'S

LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.

THE ONLY KIND which produces the full curative effects in CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST,

THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY,

AND WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,

Physician Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.

"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. DR. DE JONGH'S OIL is now the only Cod-Liver Oil used in the Royal National Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest."

LENNOX BROWNE, Esq., F.R.C.S.E.,

Senior Surgeon Central London Throat and Ear Hospital.

"The action of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil has proved, in my own experience, particularly valuable, not only in those diseases for which it was originally employed, but also in many cases of weakness of the Singing and Speaking Voice, dependent on Bronchial or Laryngeal Irritation, and in all forms of Strumous Enlargement of Glands, and Discharges from the Ear."

DR. GILL,

Consulting Physician Royal Asylum of St. Anne's Society.

"Professor Trousseau remarks:—'Cod-Liver Oil constitutes at the same time a food and an agent of stimulation perfectly suited to the organism when it is more or less debilitated.' Before I noticed these observations by a eminent authority as Trousseau, I had been led to a similar belief by a considerable number of cases in which I had found an opportunity of watching the good effects of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL."

DR.

MAHOMET ALI PASHA.

The present Serdar, or Commander-in-Chief of the Turkish armies in Bulgaria, is a German by birth, Mahomet Ali Pasha, whose real name is Jules D  troit, his father being of French extraction. He was born at Magdeburg, in Prussia, in the year 1829. When he was fifteen years old, after having passed through the schools of his native town, his father, who was a musician with a very limited income, unable to provide for the further education of the boy, took him to Hamburg, where he obtained an engagement as sailor-boy upon a German merchant-ship. The captain being a cruel and brutal master, and the crew treating the boy equally ill, young D  troit resolved to avail himself of the first opportunity that should offer in order to escape. This occurred while the ship was at anchor in the Bosphorus. D  troit reached the European shore at Balta Liman, and soon found a generous patron and kind friend in the then Minister of Foreign Affairs, subsequently Grand Vizier, Ali Pasha. This was in 1847. Ali Pasha received the young German into his household. While in Ali Pasha's palace D  troit embraced Islamism and adopted his present name. In 1849 Ali Pasha placed him as a pupil in the Military College, in which pupils were taught, fed, and supported by the State. The masters were the most efficient that high salaries could attract, some French officers and some Prussian. Mahomet speaking both French and German fluently, and being a sharp and active lad, became a general favourite, and the masters did their best to help him on. In 1853 he passed the final examination with credit and obtained a lieutenantcy. The prospect of speedy promotion was held out to him if he would remain at the school as an assistant-master, but he preferred active service, and had the good fortune to be attached to the staff of Omar Pasha, with the rank of Captain, in 1854. In that position he took part in the campaign on the Danube and the Crimean War, and had a good opportunity of observing what was going on and, at the same time, improving his mind; for there were distinguished officers of various nations—English, French, Italian, and Spanish—at Omar Pasha's head-quarters, with whom Mahomet cultivated a friendly intercourse. He especially delighted in the company of the late General Prim and the French Colonel Dieu. Ali Pasha continued to afford Mahomet his friendly protection, and, in truth, was the means of his rising rapidly in his military career. He was appointed Major-General in the year 1868, when only thirty-nine years old, and became Mushir, or Field Marshal, in the early part of the present year.

THE SERDAR MAHOMET ALI PASHA, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE TURKISH ARMY.

General Strecker, whom Mahomet Ali Pasha has appointed his Chief of the Staff, is a very competent officer, who served formerly in the Prussian army, and entered the Turkish service as Military Instructor, having been recommended for the office by his Prussian superiors. Blum Pasha also served in the Prussian army, leaving it with the rank of Captain, when he took service with the Porte as Military Instructor. In the year 1870, although then a Pasha, he applied to the Prussian War Office for leave to re-enter the Prussian army, even with his former rank of Captain. But this request was refused; and it was intimated to him that it was not for the interest of Germany that officers who had taken service in the Turkish army should quit it. Blum Pasha is now Commandant of Varna, and ought to be well qualified for that charge, having been for several years Inspector-General of Ordnance in the fortresses. Mahomet Ali Pasha is not on a footing of great intimacy with his fellow-countrymen. It is even said that the former ship-boy, who had to endure so many indignities in his old vocation, feels that Prussian officers will scarcely look upon him as socially their equal, whatever his present military rank may be. He seems studiously to avoid as much as possible all intercourse with them. Strecker and Blum have remained Christians, while some say Mahomet Ali affects a Musulman fanaticism which he does not feel, and that he has thus acquired an authority and respect to which otherwise he could not pretend. His wife belongs to an Osmanli family of high rank, and such ladies confer an honour on a man of inferior station whom they may marry. It is, in any case, a fact that Mahomet Ali

THE RUBENS FESTIVAL AT ANTWERP: INAUGURATION OF BUST AT THE MUSEUM.

Pasha is now received within the clique of the Stamboul Effendis, and treated by them as one of themselves. There can be little doubt that he owed his promotion more to the influence of Turkish personal friends than to the accident of his Prussian birth.

THE RUBENS FESTIVAL AT ANTWERP.

The ceremonial and festive celebration, at Antwerp, of the Rubens Tercentenary, which has been mentioned in two past weekly Numbers of this Journal, was successfully accomplished. The grandest show was on Monday week—that of the street procession, called “The Ommegang,” which annually takes place at the “Kermesse,” or municipal, religious, and popular yearly festival of Antwerp. It was combined, on this particular occasion, with an allegorical pageant, which had been prepared by a local committee, to illustrate the historical and artistic glories of that city. There was a savage-looking horde of wild horsemen, attired in the skins of beasts, who escorted a car in which sat two gigantic figures of pasteboard, male and female, to represent the rude antiquity of Belgium and Batavia in prehistoric times. Then came a huge sea-monster, as big as a whale, surrounded by a herd of dolphins, each bestridden by a saucy imp, emblematic of the maritime situation of the country. An old-fashioned ship, manned by sailors in the dress of the middle ages, and followed by two galleys with a number of men labouring at the oar, signified that the skill of Flemish mariners was renowned all over the world. The commercial and municipal Guilds, wearing their doublets, frills, plumed beavers, and swords, and guarded by halberdiers and crossbowmen, were next in array; the Burgomaster, and the Echevins or Aldermen, in their worshipful robes of office, bore the most conspicuous part. Several trades connected with the progress of letters and the fine arts, such as the printers, engravers, and musical instrument-makers, with an organ and a band of musicians, appeared in this procession. They led on the second part of it, belonging more specially to the Rubens Festival. This displayed first the triumph of the “Chamber of Rhetoric,” with its various standards of the Olive-branch, the Violet, and the Marigold, emblematic of the revival of learning in the sixteenth century. The printing press of Plantin and Moretus, which refers to a noted incident of Antwerp literary history, was borne along with due honours. It was succeeded by trophies of the artistic glories of Flanders, the banner of St. Luke, and that of every famous artist of the country; and then came the triumphal car of Rubens. In this car was placed the bust of Rubens, with a copy of his great picture “The Descent from the Cross.” Garlands of laurel were held forth to the bust, as in token of homage, by personages supposed to represent the chiefs of the Italian, Spanish, and Dutch schools of painting, while other actors, seated beside the bust, seemed to personify his Flemish teachers, and there were figures of Genius and Fame placing a crown on the head of the great man of Antwerp.

Our Illustration shows the scene at the Antwerp Museum, when they presented and unveiled the bust of Rubens. The municipal and academical authorities had arranged that they would proceed to the cathedral to hear a Te Deum in honour of the anniversary of Rubens, and that they would march to the Church of St. Jacques, where he was buried, to make a solemn visit to his tomb. The cortege met early in the forenoon in the Place Verte. It was preceded by a detachment of Pompeurs and the bands of the Garde Civique. Then followed the Governor of Antwerp, the Burgomaster, and delegates of the Government, and the Echevins and Communal Council, all in official costumes. Next came the council of the Antwerp Academy, and four of their youngest pupils carrying a brancard covered with a white gold-fringed sheet crowns of gold and bronze. The delegates of the French Academy, in their academical robes, and headed by a mace-bearer, formed another link in the long cortege. Then followed the delegates from foreign countries—French, German, English, and Scandinavian, and the artists of Antwerp. The procession closed with various members of the administrative and judicial bodies and the officers of the Garde Civique, who pretty much resemble our own volunteers. The bust, which is from the chisel of M. Pecher, when uncovered was highly praised, and will form a fine ornament to the entrance-hall of the gallery of ancient pictures. The inauguration ceremony did not last long, but speeches were made by MM. de Wael, de Laborde, the secretary of the institute, and M. Charles Blanc.

The other proceedings of the Rubens Festival, with a torchlight procession, a regatta on the Scheldt, and music and fireworks, have been highly attractive to the multitude.

THE INFLEXIBLE COMMITTEE.

Instructions have been sent by the Admiralty to the Committee appointed to inquire into the stability, &c., of H.M.S. Inflexible. They are contained in a letter to Admiral Sir James Hope, G.C.B., informing him of his appointment as president of the Committee, which is composed of Dr. J. Woolley, Mr. G. W. Rendel, C.E., and Mr. W. Froude, F.R.S. The letters of Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., to the Director of Naval Construction of April 11 and May 16, 1877, and his letters of May 18 to the Controller of the Navy, and of June 9 to the Secretary of the Admiralty, are referred to the Committee, and all the drawings and official papers in connection with the design of the ship would also be furnished to them.

The Admiralty desire the Committee to report their opinion on the following points:—(1) As to the possibility or probability of the occurrence of the contingencies contemplated by Mr. Reed as being likely to happen very early in an engagement—namely, the complete penetration and water-logging of the unprotected ends of the ship, and the blowing out of the whole of the stores and cork by the action of shell fire. (2) As to whether there would be any risk of the ship capsizing if she were placed under the conditions mentioned in the previous paragraph. Supposing that the water ballast, for which provision has been made, were admitted into the double bottom of the armoured citadel; or whether she would retain a sufficient amount of stability to enable such temporary repairs to be executed as would enable her to reach a port. (3) Whether, all points considered, the ship is, so far as can be ascertained from the design and calculations, a safe seagoing vessel, and whether, when the amount of damage to which her unprotected ends would be exposed in action is borne in mind, sufficient provision has been made to ensure, in all human probability, her safety under such conditions.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr. Briggs, M.P., laid the foundation-stone of new day and Sunday schools at Blackburn, which will be erected at a cost of £4000. Mr. Briggs remarked that education is no longer the monopoly of the few at the expense of the many. Grammar schools have been remodelled so as to supersede sectarian bigotry and abolish sinecures. Facilities and opportunities for acquiring education are within the reach of all, and there is no excuse for persons being unable to write their names on being married.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Notwithstanding very unfavourable weather, the field-day which had been arranged some time since came off at Wimbledon last Saturday. The 49th Middlesex (Post Office) paraded in the quadrangle of Somerset House at three o'clock under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Du Plat Taylor, assisted by Major Porter and other officers, and, headed by the band, marched to Waterloo station, where it was joined by the 26th Middlesex (her Majesty's Customs and Docks). Both regiments were then conveyed by a special train to Wimbledon, where the new attack formation was carried out under Colonel Du Plat Taylor.

We give some particulars of the principal prize-meetings which were held last week.

The annual meeting of the 2nd City of London finished on Wednesday week. The Merchant Taylors' Challenge Cup was won by Colour-Sergeant Millard, the Salters' Challenge Cup by Sergeant Brown, the Jones's Challenge Cup by Private Reeves, and the Rivington Challenge Cup by Captain Hardy. The Regimental Challenge Cup was taken by B company. In the chief series of prizes the winners were:—Corporal White, Colour-Sergeant Harris, Colour-Sergeant Rayner, H. Houghton, Private Reeves, Colour-Sergeant Millard, Lance-Sergeant Lymes, Private T. Horley, Sergeant Hall, Staff-Sergeant Long, and Private Biscoe.

At the prize-meeting of the 11th Surrey the chief winners were:—The Ladies of Merton Challenge Cup, Private H. Downes. The Challenge Prize of the Ladies of Wimbledon, Bugler J. Marlow. The Peek Challenge Cup, Private G. Marlow. The Roehampton Challenge Prize, Private G. Shrimpton. Aggregate Prizes—Private H. Downes, Bugler J. Marlow, and Private G. Marlow. In other series the highest scorers were Messrs. H. Downes, Shrimpton, Oaks, Harmer, C. Pain, Chappell, Osborne, Rolt, Gillham, and Penner.

The prize-meeting of the 19th Surrey was also concluded. The principal winners were:—Competition No. 1—£7, Private Foster; £5 each, Pioneer Nicholson, Sergeant Hattersley, and Lieutenant Richards; £4 4s. each, Colour-Sergeant Sexby and Corporal Collis; £3 3s. each, Sergeant Redford and Sergeant Fruen; £2 2s. each, Sergeant Hood, Sergeant-Major Laverock, and Sergeant Hearden. Challenge Cups—First, Private Foster; second, Sergeant Richards. A match, Married v. Single, was won by the Married by 46 points. Competition No. 2, for members who had never won a prize:—First, Private H. Clifford, £1 10s. Competition No. 3—£5 5s. each, Colour-Sergeant Russell, Private Hall, and Sergeant Garland. The Battalion Monthly Challenge Cups were won by Sergeant Hattersley and Sergeant Fruen.

A match was fired at Rainham for the Inland Revenue Challenge Cup, between the K (Bank of England) company Civil Service and the H company London Rifle Brigade (the holders), which resulted in a victory for the latter by fifty-nine points, the aggregate scores being—London Rifle Brigade, 414; Civil Service Rifles, 355.

The annual competition of the members of the City of Oxford took place on Thursday and Friday. There were twelve aggregate prizes shot for. The first prize, £10, was won by Private T. Houghton; and the second, £6, by Private Elliott.

The annual prize-meeting of the Berks Volunteers was held at the Reading butts. The regimental prizes, shot at Queen's ranges, were decided as follows:—County Challenge Cup, with £20, and N.R.A. bronze medal, Private Deacon; £15, Private Bedford; £12, Private Gilkes; £10, Private Eagle; £9, Corporal Burling; £8, Corporal Witherington; £7, Private Badcock; £6, Private Warwick; £5, Private G. W. Hicks; £4, Private T. Turner; £3, Colour-Sergeant Hunton; £2, Private Wye; £1, Sergeant Portsmouth. Princess Christian's prize (cup and £5 5s.), fell to Sergeant Moore; the second prize (£3 3s.) was won by Captain Brooks. The skirmishing competition resulted in some good scoring, the winners of the prizes being Sergeant Soper (£10 10s.), Private J. Wye (£5 5s.). A prize of £5 5s. for a military breech-loading competition fell to Private Gilkes.

On Friday and Saturday the Border Rifle Association held their sixteenth annual gathering on Bawden Moor, Melrose, when prizes to the value of £420 were fired for. The bronze medals of the National Rifle Association (entitling the owners to compete for the Prince of Wales's prize at Wimbledon next year) for Roxburgh and Selkirk were won respectively by Private W. Veitch, 1st Roxburgh, and Sergeant G. Rankine, 1st Selkirk. The next highest scorer was Lieutenant Pott, of the Border Mounted Rifles, who, it will be remembered, led the squad of that corps in the Loyd-Lindsay competition at Wimbledon, having previously gained the distinction of the “sixty” badge, and afterwards obtained ninth place for the second stage of the Queen's Prize.

SATELLITES OF MARS.

Mr. R. A. Proctor writes to the Times expressing his surprise that so little attention has been as yet publicly drawn to the discovery just made, that Mars has two satellites. “This discovery (he says) has been made with the great Washington refractor by Professor Asaph Hall, who has recently made many valuable observations on that exceedingly difficult object, Hyperion, Saturn's seventh satellite (eighth and last in order of discovery). It might be worth while, by-the-way, with so powerful a telescope as this, to look for other Saturnian moons in the space between the orbits of Titan and Japetus, or even for small satellites of these satellites. Mars can no longer be called, as by the Poet Laureate, ‘Moonless Mars,’ though his moon's must be very little ones; for Jupiter's least, though so much more remote, and no larger than our own moon, is among the easiest of telescopic objects, and can even be seen in a good opera-glass. From the brief telegram sent to Leverrier from Washington, it would seem that the period of the two moons are about thirty hours and about fifteen hours; their distances about 13,800 and 8600 miles respectively from Mars's centre. I deduce these values from the statement that on Aug. 18 (11 Washington time) the outer attained its westerly elongation, distance 80 min., and that the distance of the inner is 50 min.; period of outer 30 hours, whence distance of inner follows by Kepler's third law. From the period and distance of the outer satellite, the mass of Mars would appear to be only 94-thousandths of the earth's mass, instead of 118-thousandths, as heretofore estimated. The apparent diurnal motion of the outer satellite, as seen by Martians, must be from east to west, and very slow, the planet itself rotating in 24 hours 37 min. 22.7 sec. The inner satellite presents the unique peculiarity of gaining by its revolutionary motion on the planet's rotational motion, thus rising in the west and setting in the east. Moreover, it moves faster, in appearance, this way than the other moon moves in the usual way.”

An additional scheme in connection with the Cotton Districts Convalescent Fund, which was formed some time ago out of the balances remaining from the Fund for the Relief of Distress in the Manufacturing Districts and the Cotton Districts Relief Fund, has been approved and issued by the Charity Commissioners of England and Wales.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA

The following telegram has been received at the India Office from the Governor of Bombay, dated Gunnesbakhind, Aug. 27, 1877:—

Since my telegram of the 17th there has been good rain in the eastern part of Kattywar, in districts of Surat, Khandeish, and part of Nasik, also showers in parts of Poona, and Sholapore; light rain only in Concan; and one rainstorm in Dharwar. All this constitutes clear improvement in situation in Bombay Presidency; but monsoon still irregular, and distress considerable. Crops far from secure, but may yet be mainly saved if more rain comes.

The Times correspondent at Calcutta, telegraphing on Sunday, says that the weather and crop reports continue gloomy. The general remarks for the week ended Aug. 23 are to the following effect:—

From Madras it is reported that there has been good rain in Malabar, the Nilgherries, Kistna, and part of Chingleput; that the rain has been insufficient in Visagapatnam; and that it has been slight elsewhere, although general.

As to Bombay, it is stated that there has been no sufficient fall anywhere, except in Canara. The need is urgent in the Northern Deccan, Kattywar, Gujerat, Khandeish, Nasick, and Konkan.

Great anxiety is caused by the extreme lowness of the river in Scinde. In the Central Provinces there has been little rain, except in Sumbulpore and Raipore. The break in the weather is injurious to the rice crops, but they will be saved if rain falls within ten days. In Berar and Central India no rain is reported to have fallen.

In Rajpootana there have been only slight showers. In Ajmere, Jeypore, and Uwar the condition of the crops is critical, and there is a general want of fodder and pasture.

As regards Bengal, the general prospects are good, but more rain is wanted for transplantation in parts of Behar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpore. In Assam the prospects are favourable.

With regard to the North-West Provinces and Oude, there have been good showers in Fysabad, and slight rain in the Eastern districts, and also in Jhansi, Agra, Meerut, and Bareilly; but the Western districts are suffering severely from drought.

In the Punjab the prospects are bad. Rain is reported to have fallen in Umballa, Rawul Pindie, and parts of Lahore.

Mr. Hope, who has occupied the post of Famine Secretary since the end of last year, has resigned. Rumour attributes this to serious differences with the Viceroy regarding the proper method of dealing with the crisis. Mr. Bernard, who was Sir G. Campbell's and Sir R. Temple's Famine Secretary in Bengal, succeeds Mr. Hope, and accompanies the Viceroy on his visit to the affected districts.

Lord Lytton, on his journey from Simla, has had a long interview with the Maharajah of Jeypore at Toonga, when measures were concerted in view of a possible scarcity in Rajpootana. The Government is said to be making plans for the Native States to work upon in order to meet the crisis.

The Political Agent in Kattywar has held a meeting of representatives of the various States of that Province to consider the situation. All of them promised help by remitting the duties on food supplies and encouraging importation. The general opinion seemed to be that there was about six months' stock of food in the Province.

The Viceroy was to have held a conference yesterday at Poona with Sir R. Temple and the Bombay Railway authorities to consider the question of reducing the grain block on the railway. Bombay can now send 1100 tons daily to Madras, but the Madras Railway can carry on only 800. Arrangements are being made to lend the Madras Railway engines and waggons from other lines. The Great Indian Peninsula Company has ordered sixty new engines from England to enable it to meet the increased traffic.

The Viceroy was to leave Poona last night. Instead of going direct to Mysore, as at first arranged, he will now proceed in the first instance to Bellary, where he will arrive to-morrow, and thence he will go to Madras on Wednesday. After some days' stay at Madras he will go to Bangalore.

Private trade appears to be active in importing food into the distressed districts, and the Government will interfere with it as little as possible.

The Madras famine must last till January, and a failure of the October rains may prolong it till next August. In view of this and of the probable scarcity in Gujerat, the North-West Provinces, and Rajpootana, the Government is determined to exercise the utmost care in expenditure. The Madras famine alone has already cost eight millions sterling, and is costing half a million per month. The next Budget will certainly show a deficit, which will probably necessitate a large amount of fresh taxation.

Yesterday week a meeting was held at the residence of the Chief Justice of Bengal to consider the propriety of calling a public meeting and opening subscriptions to relieve the distress in Madras. Nothing, however, was done, as the Chief Justice had received a communication from the Lieutenant-Governor to the effect that the Supreme Government did not wish any appeal to be made to private charity at present. It was itself determined to avert death by famine so far as the resources of the whole Empire would enable it to do so. The importation of grain would be left to private trade, which the Government believed would do the work better than the Government could; but the Government would reinforce the railways and arrange for tramways where cart power failed. It would give subsistence and relief wages, graduated according to the prevailing prices, and it hoped to construct great and permanent works by means of relief labour. It would buy grain locally, and give gratuitous support in various forms to the helpless poor, and it deprecated appeals to private charity, as having a tendency to interfere with public organisation and to increase the panic.

The Government has, of course, the warmest sympathy of the public in the heavy task it has undertaken. At the same time, the general feeling here is one of regret that it should have seen fit to decline charitable aid which the public is ready to give. It is difficult to see how that aid would interfere with the Government plans. I cannot but think it a mistake on the part of the Viceroy thus to throw cold water on the first attempt to open a subscription here; and I believe this is almost the universal opinion.

The Pall Mall Gazette has received a telegram sent last Saturday evening from a correspondent in the famine districts in Bombay, as follows:—

Of the official return of 500,000 deaths in Madras since Jan. 1, 200,000 are due to ordinary mortality, 300,000 to accelerated death-rate from the famine. The doctors report the people in the Bombay famine districts to be in good condition on the original subsistence wages. The Madras doctor reports the insufficiency of the wages in Madras even at the enhanced rates. The supervision in Madras is here believed to be bad, as there are now 2,250,000 on gratuitous relief in that Presidency. This is supposed to indicate a necessity for establishing the relief works in Madras under proper supervision by the Public Works Department. At the present rate, the famine expenditure will amount before the end of the financial year to two thirds of the cost of the mutiny in 1857. Madras has spent up to date at the ratio of four fifths of this outlay, as compared to one fifth expended by Bombay. At these rates the famine will have cost fourteen millions sterling before the close of the financial year, and will necessitate heavy additional taxation, with the probable reimposition of the income tax.

By telegram from Bombay, dated Aug. 28, received through Reuter's agency, we learn that rain has fallen in Kandeish, the Deccan, Guzerat, and Kattywar, and the general prospects are considered more encouraging.

Scarcity, says a Calcutta telegram of Tuesday's date, is expected in Rajpootana, in the North-West of the Punjab, and in Scinde.

It has been estimated that half a million persons died in the Madras districts between December and July, and that a million and a half are receiving relief.

The Corporation of Glasgow have agreed to fit up thirteen electric clocks, in order to remove a grievance regarding the disparity of time indicated by the public clocks. It is to be hoped that other large towns will not be slow to follow this commendable plan.

The Rev. Canon Cholmondeley, of Chester, after laying the foundation-stone of St. George's Roman Catholic School Chapel, Claypit-street, at Whitechurch, Salop, on Tuesday, gave a long address on education and other topics bearing on the Church. About £50 was laid on the stone. There was afterwards a luncheon at the Victoria Hotel.

The freedom of the city of Cork was presented last Saturday, on board the Cunard steamer Bothnia, in Cork harbour, to Chief Justice Shea, of the Mari. Court, New York. The presentation took place in the presence of the Mayor; the Most Rev. Dr. Delaney, Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork; Mr. Murphy, M.P., and some members of the Corporation. Chief Justice Shea is a Cork man.

Mr. John Sinclair, of New York, laid the foundation-stone of Townsend-street Presbyterian Church, Belfast, on Saturday last. The Rev. George Bellis, Moderator of the General Assembly, presided; and there was a large assemblage. The new church and schools will cost about £10,000. The schools have been erected, and congregations will worship in them until the completion of the church.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

It was somewhat tantalising to read in the Times report of the meeting of the British Archaeological Association that Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, in closing his speech, "dwelt upon the fact of his having, when a youth, known and visited the house where the good 'Ladies of Llangollen' used to live." It was more tantalising to be told that, on the day following the delivery of Sir Watkin's speech, the President and officers of the Association, with a large number of ladies and gentlemen, proceeded to Plas Newydd, formerly the residence of the "Ladies of Llangollen" aforesaid, and were met by Lieutenant-General Yorke, the present proprietor of the interesting residence, lately and with great taste put into thorough order and repair. Why did not the Times reporter tell us who the good "Ladies of Llangollen" were, and what they had to do (besides being old and good) with British archaeology?

One cannot know everything; and several very erudite friends whom I have consulted with regard to these excellent ladies have either confessed entire ignorance on the matter or have returned me an evasive answer. I asked a sweet niece of mine, who has just finished a polite education, and is full of Darwin and Herbert Spencer. She shook her head; blushed and murmured that there was no information to be found in Collins or Dr. Brewer with reference to the Llangollen ladies. I asked my (and all the world's) old acquaintance, the "merest schoolboy," and in reply he preferred to me a perfectly irrelevant request for the sum of five shillings. Declining to "tip" him, I turned up Chambers's "Book of Days," but could find nothing that was Llangollesque-ladylike in that generally inexhaustible repository of out-of-the-way knowledge. Who were the good "Ladies of Llangollen?"

Stop: I have a dim memory of having seen, many years ago, in a print-shop window in Wardour-street, a lithograph representing two little old ladies attired in riding-habits. In the background of the picture there were two white ponies and a mountainous landscape. There comes over me, also, a hazy remembrance of a chapter in Miss Martineau's History of England, in which she traces the biography of two ladies of noble birth who lived a hermit life in the Principality early in the present century. Were these the Ladies of Llangollen?

"Cut it short!" is about one of the rudest and most inelegant admonitions which one person can address to another; but such is the gist of the counsel which the Right Hon. the Postmaster-General has been impelled to give to the senders of telegrams. "Be as short as you can," says Lord John Manners. Don't add your address to your name at the top of the telegram if the person to whom you are writing knows where you live. Don't call people "Mr." or "Messrs.," and omit the affix "Esq." Ay, my Lord; but would it not be disrespectful if I telegraphed to you simply as "Manners"? And if I am in correspondence with a family consisting of Mr. Smith, Mrs. Smith, four young Mr.'s and six young Misses Smith, with their paternal grandfather and grandmother into the bargain, may I not be permitted to discriminate in wording my telegrams?

Was it not Bishop Blomfield, ripest of Greek scholars and mildest of London diocesan, who defined the duties of an Archdeacon as consisting in "the performance of archidiaconal functions." The commanding officer of a corps of Yeomanry Cavalry in training at Uxbridge seems to have had Bishop Blomfield's definition in his eye when, in issuing an order intended to repress some tendencies to "fancy dressing" among his gallant troopers, he sententious remarks that "the only use of uniform is to procure uniformity." There is nothing like the terse and comprehensive enunciation of an abstract principle; and there are a great many people, both lay and clerical, addicted to "fancy dressing" who might profitably lay to heart the sage dictum of the commanding officer of the Middlesex Yeomanry Cavalry.

A correspondent of the World tells a story of how, during the Crimean War, a certain well-known Yorkshire Baronet, who had lost his way between Balaclava and Kamiesch, met a Zouave, and inquired of him, in French, the road. The "Zou-Zou" replied in excellent English; and, as the Baronet expressed his surprise, he added, "There is nothing wonderful about it, Sir X.; I was at Eton with you." The Baronet would have conferred further with his quondam schoolmate, but the "Zou-Zou" shook his head sadly, and went on his way.

This anecdote is ben trovato; but, at the same time, it is necessary to point out that in 1855-6 it was no more probable that a born Englishman should be found in the ranks of the French Zouaves than that a born Spaniard should be admitted into the ranks of one of our Highland regiments. I have, indeed, the honour of the acquaintance of a gentleman of English extraction who in 1870 was thought eligible to serve in the Zouaves. This was M. Robert Mitchell, some time of the Constitutionnel, who, with his friend, M. Paul de Cassagnac, carried a musket for some few weeks at Metz and elsewhere. But M. Robert Mitchell, notwithstanding his British paternity, was born in France, is a French subject, and speaks very little English. The soldier whom "Sir X." met in the Crimea belonged, in all probability, to the French Foreign Legion, a corps raised in 1832 for service in Algeria, and which subsequently did very good service in the Chersonese. A son of Thomas Moore, the poet, served at one time in the Légion Etrangère, the ranks of which comprised warriors of all nationalities, among which the country of Bohemia was predominant. The Zouaves, on the other hand, formed (and still form) a portion of the regular army; and ere a man could be enrolled therein it would be necessary for him to be a Frenchman, and to produce his "papers" from his birth-time upwards.

The tailors of Germany have been holding a congress at Berlin; and the outcome of their deliberations has been, I understand, to the effect that all foreign fashions should be discarded, and that a "German fashion" in wearing apparel should be introduced. The last congress of tailors that I have read of was held in Lisbon so long ago as the year 1699. Catherine of Braganza, widow of Charles II. of England, returning to her own country after an absence of nearly forty years, brought with her a number of English ladies who, like her Majesty herself, were dressed in the Anglo-French mode. These fashions mightily pleased the Queen of Portugal and her ladies; and the King Don Pedro was petitioned to allow the introduction of Western fashions at the Portuguese Court. His Majesty reluctantly acceded to the request, and a number of "women's tailors" (the confection of ladies' dresses being then in masculine hands) were sent for out of England and France to confer with the Lusitanian sartors. But the man-milliners quarrelled among themselves; the Portuguese clergy opposed the projected innovations; and the Congress ended in inimical brandishing of scissors and snappings of thimble-topped fingers. It was the second time in her life that poor Donna Caterina had got into trouble about tailoring. When she first came among us she had tried to introduce Portuguese fashions in England, and the result was a series of popular riots.

According to the Academy, Mr. Evelyn Jerrold is busy on an extended study of the life and works of Honoré de Balzac, which is to be published at the end of this year or the beginning of 1878. Mr. Jerrold intends that his work should constitute the first connected chronicle of Balzac's life and the most complete revelation of the Comédie Humaine. The undertaking seems to be one of great magnitude; but, thoroughly worked out, would be a valuable boon to contemporary literature. Very little is known about Honoré de Balzac in this country. A few enthusiastic students treasure, as the apple of their eye, all that the great Thinker has written; but the vast majority are inclined to class the author of the "Peau de Chagrin" with Eugène Sue, and even with Paul de Kock.

I am obliged to Punch of this week and to the correspondents of more than one daily newspaper for re-echoing the suggestion made some weeks since in this column to the effect that the courtyard of the British Museum would be the most appropriate site for the erection of the monolith from Alexandria. But "Parliament Square," or "St. Stephen's Green," must, I fear, carry the day. I have conversed with some eminent engineers on the subject, and they tell me that the pavement of west-central London is, as a rule, so abominably bad, and is undermined by so much sewer, gas, water, and telegraph-wire pipeage that the traction of this vast mass of stone uphill from the shore of the Thames into Bloomsbury would be surely attended by very great danger. I went to see the "dummy" model in Parliament Square one evening, recently. One effect it certainly produces. It completely "kills" the tower of St. Margaret's, and virtually blots that venerable edifice from the view. G. A. S.

MUSIC.

THE TRIENNIAL GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

The festival to take place next week will be the 154th meeting of the three choirs of that city, of Hereford, and Worcester. The origin and antecedents of these festivals have been so frequently detailed, and are now so familiar, that slight reference thereto is necessary. At first consisting of friendly meetings of the choristers, in triennial alternation at each of the three cathedrals, the proceedings were limited to the performance of Church services and anthems, in amicable rivalry. They very soon, however, took a wider scope, and assumed a distinct purpose of benevolence and charity. Oratorios were performed, with the aid of an orchestra and eminent singers from London; sermons were preached and collections made in aid of the widows and orphans of the poorer clergy of the three dioceses—a very large amount of relief having been thus diffused, and special opportunities afforded to provincial audiences for hearing such performances as otherwise are not obtainable out of the metropolis.

By a certain party among the clergy, and some powerful supporters, efforts have for many years been made to suppress these performances in their extended aspect, and to restore them to their primitive form. These endeavours at last succeeded, in the case of the festival due at Worcester in 1875, when the performances consisted merely of cathedral music by choristers, with organ accompaniment. There are, however, already signs of a reaction, by which probably the Worcester Festival of next year will resume the importance which has long been given to each of the yearly meetings there, as at the other two associated cathedral cities.

To return, however, to the Gloucester Festival of next week. The arrangements are on a scale of similar extent and efficiency to those of past occasions. The Duke of Beaufort is president of the festival; the Lord Lieutenants of the three counties and the Bishops of the three dioceses being the vice-presidents. A very long list of stewards offers a sure guarantee, in the improbable event of the expenses exceeding the amount realised by tickets. And here it must be stated that no money is taken at the doors for admission, which can only be obtained by vouchers previously purchased. Whatever loss is incurred by the festival performances is shared by the stewards, the number of which has been gradually increased, in consequence of large deficits having resulted on some (long past) occasions. In recent years opposite results have sometimes been obtained; in some cases a considerable surplus. The benefits sought to be realised for the widows and orphans are exclusively derived from the collections made at the doors of the cathedral after the early services of each festival day and at the close of the morning performances therein, besides many donations made during and immediately after the festival week.

The solo singers announced are Mdlle. Albani, Madame Sophie Löwe, Misses Adela Vernon, and Bertha Griffiths, Madame Patey, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Cummings, Mr. Maybrick, and Mr. Santley. Mdlle. Titieni had been engaged both for the Gloucester and the Leeds Festival, but, as already stated, the continuance of her severe illness renders her appearance impossible at either.

The orchestra will be on a very full scale. M. Sainton is principal first violin and soloist, Mr. J. T. Willy is at the head of the second violins, Mr. R. Blagrove is principal viola, Mr. E. Howell principal violoncello, and Mr. A. C. White principal contra-basso. Mr. Radcliff is the first of four flutes, Mr. G. Horton being the principal of the same number of oboes. Mr. Lazarus is first clarinet and Mr. Hutchins first bassoon. Four horns are headed by Mr. C. Harper, and two trumpets by Mr. T. Harper. Three trombones, contra fagotto, harp, ophicleide, and drums completing the band.

According to precedent, the cathedral organist of the city in which the festival is held is, ex officio, conductor of the performances. This year it will be Mr. C. H. Lloyd, who succeeded the late Dr. Wesley. Another death, of more recent date, in association with these meetings, was that of Mr. G. Townshend Smith, organist of Hereford Cathedral. This gentleman was, as heretofore, to have presided at the organ at next week's festival, and had been so announced in the programmes, but his sudden death—as lately recorded by us—has caused the substitution of Mr. Done, organist of Worcester Cathedral, who would otherwise have been (as heretofore) pianoforte accompanist. This latter office is now divided between Mr. S. G. Hayward and Mr. C. H. Lloyd.

The festival will be inaugurated, as usual, on Tuesday morning, by a service in the cathedral, the musical portion of which will be sustained by the associated choirs; the sermon, with special reference to the occasion, to be preached by the Bishop of Gloucester, early morning services being also arranged for the other days of the festival. At a quarter to two o'clock on Tuesday "Elijah" will be given in the cathedral. The other day performances will begin at half-past eleven. On Wednesday they will consist of Bach's St. Matthew Passion Music and Beethoven's "Egredi" ("The Mount of Olives"); on Thursday Brahms's German Requiem will be given, preceded by Mr. Arthur Sullivan's overture "In Memoriam" and a "Kyrie Eleison" by Mr. B. Luard Selby; and followed by Gounod's air "There is a green hill." Dr. Wesley's anthem "The Wilderness," and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." On Friday "The Messiah"—the usual Festival climax—will be performed.

On Wednesday evening Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" and a selection from Haydn's "Creation" will be given in the cathedral, where a supplemental evening service will take place on Friday evening.

Tuesday evening will be appropriated to a miscellaneous concert in the Shirehall, the principal features in the programme being a selection from Schumann's "Paradise and the Peri," Mendelssohn's violin concerto performed by M. Sainton, Beethoven's C minor symphony, and a concert overture composed by Mr. Montague Smith. The second and last miscellaneous concert on Thursday evening will include performances of Gade's cantata, "The Crusaders;" a festival overture, composed for the occasion by Mr. C. V. Stanford; and Weber's "Concert-Stück," with Miss Agnes Zimmermann as pianist.

The series of performances of operas in English at the Crystal Palace by the Rose Hersee Opera Company closed on Saturday afternoon, when "Dinorah" was given. Madame Rose Hersee, as the heroine, sang with much effect, particularly in the "Shadow song;" in which, as in several other instances, she was much applauded. Misses Villiers and Florence St. John were efficient representatives of the two Goatherds, as were Mr. Parkinson and Mr. Temple, respectively, of Corentin and Hoel; the small part of the Hunter having been filled by Mr. Marler. The fine playing of the band was a special feature in the performance, which was ably conducted by Mr. Sidney Naylor.

A series of performances of operas, operettas, and musical plays is to be begun at the Crystal Palace on Tuesday next, conducted by Mr. Isidore di Solla.

The Covent Garden Promenade Concerts are still running a prosperous career. Madame Rose Hersee has recently appeared there with marked success, and the refined violin-playing of Mdlle. Pommereul continues to be one of the prominent attractions. Wednesday was a Mendelssohn night, and yesterday (Friday) was to be a ballad night.

A series of musical performances, entitled "Liebhart's Grand Concerts," began at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Tuesday evening, when a very large attendance gave signs of a successful issue to the scheme. The hall has been elaborately decorated with plants and flowers, affording an agreeable relief and variety that are peculiarly welcome in so large a space. Madame Liebhart was one of the vocalists, and sang with great effect in Wallace's "Sweet spirit, hear my prayer" and a new ballad by Mr. G. B. Allen, "Far from home." Madame Anna Bishop made her reappearance after a long absence from England, and sang "Let the bright seraphim" (with Mr. T. Harper's trumpet obligato) and Bishop's ballad, "Home, sweet home." Madame Antoinette Sterling was encored in two songs—Mr. Arthur Sullivan's "Lost Chord" and "Callers Herrin." Other effective vocal performances were contributed by Miss Frances Brooke, Mr. Vernon Rigby, and Mr. Maybrick; and Signor Tito Mattei executed, with much brilliancy, his pianoforte piece (with orchestral accompaniment), "Preludio et tempo di Valzer." Jullien's British Army Quadrille, rearranged, formed an item of the programme. This was given by the orchestra, and four supplementary bands, who introduced foreign national airs. A very full orchestra has been engaged, with Mr. Pollitzer as principal first violin; and this is occasionally reinforced by the band of the Royal Horse Guards, under the direction of Mr. C. Godfrey. Yesterday (Friday) was to be a Benedict night; and for to-day (Saturday) a harvest-festival performance of "The Messiah" is announced. These concerts are under the direction of Mr. F. Kingsbury.

The Leeds Festival (which will open on Sept. 19) promises to be a great success, the applications for tickets being very numerous. The chorus-singing is expected to be unusually fine, many rehearsals having been held, some at Leeds and some at Bradford. Mdlle. Albani is to be the principal vocalist; and the new works to be produced (as we have already stated) are Professor G. A. Macfarren's oratorio, "Joseph," and Mr. Walter Austin's dramatic cantata, "The Fire King." Of the detailed arrangements for this great music meeting we shall speak hereafter.

According to our contemporary the Choir Mr. C. E. Tinney is the successor to Mr. Thurlay Beale, who has resigned his post of Vicar Choral at St. Paul's Cathedral.

THEATRES.

The principal change in the programme of the week is simply the transference of the revival of Mr. Boucicault's drama "After Dark" from the Princess's to the Adelphi. Mr. Emery now takes the part of Old Tom, and Miss Edith Stuart that of his daughter Eliza. The scene of the music-hall is retained, and Mr. Mackney is engaged for its chief illustrator.

The business of the week has undergone no alteration. The Haymarket prospers with "The Garden Party" and Mr. G. F. Rowe's comedy of "Brass." The Gaiety continues to be satisfied with Byron's "Weak Woman" and the "Bohemian Gyrl." The Globe is successful with "The Husband's Secret," "Stolen Kisses," and "The Lion's Tail." "Our Boys" is still being played at the Vaudeville. At the Crystal Palace "The School for Scandal" maintains its place. The Criterion perseveres with "The Porter's Knot" and "The Pink Dominoes." The Alhambra rejoices in its new grand ballet, "Yolande." At the National Standard "Clancarty" has been performed, and "The Flying Scud" at the Grecian.

The Lyceum reopened on Wednesday for a brief season with a new drama, founded on Mr. Wilkie Collins's novel, "The Dead Secret," in which Miss Bateman proposes to occupy the time until the commencement of her provincial engagements.

A new drama by Mr. F. O. Burnand will signalise the reopening of the Strand for the winter season in September.

Mr. Slater-Booth, M.P., has directed a memorandum to be prepared and circulated explaining fully the manner in which out-door relief should, in his opinion, be administered in order to diminish pauperism, and promote thrifty and saving habits among the working classes of the community.

A conference of delegates representing town councils and other bodies in Kent was held at Maidstone yesterday week, under the presidency of Sir Edmund Filmer, Bart., to discuss the question of the proposed amalgamation of the South-Eastern and the London, Chatham, and Dover Railways. A committee was appointed to watch any bill for the fusion of the companies that may be introduced into Parliament.

Captain Verbist, the well-known commander of the London and Antwerp steam-boat Baron Ozy, did a brave and humane action on Sunday week at St. Katherine's Wharf. Horses were being taken on board: to avoid a kick from one a man stepped backwards, and fell into the Thames. Captain Verbist did not stop to pull off his coat, but leaped into the river, and saved the man's life. The passengers signed an address or memorial, testifying their high opinion of this good deed.

TURKISH REFUGEES FROM THE DISTRICT OF TIENOVA COMING INTO SHUMLA.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

FUGITIVES FOR BY C.

ONSCIENCE SAKE.
ANILAND.

A WARM CORNER IN THE MUKHLIS PASHA TABIA: SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST AT KARS.

DAMAGE BY BOMBARDMENT IN THE GIURGEVO THEATRE.

FUGITIVES BEGGING WATER FROM ENGINE TENDER.

IN THE GYMNASIAC SOCIETY'S CLUB-HOUSE, GIURGIYO.

NEW BOOKS.

It seems to be an age since attention was drawn to the first volume of A History of Crime in England, by Luke Owen Pike, M.A. (Smith, Elder, and Co.); but we know that "tout vient à bout à qui sait attendre," and whoever has managed to live through the interval may reap the benefit of such vitality by a course of mental exercise among the pages of the second volume, which pages are many and large and well stocked with instructive facts and comments. Nor is the book, fortunately, of an ephemeral character; its contents are solid and its interest enduring. As to its purpose, some little refreshment of memory may be advisable, lest anybody should be led away by the title upon a wrong scent, and should harbour a groundless apprehension of something similar to the Newgate Calendar. Far from the author being any idea of pandering to diseased minds, of tickling depraved palates, or catering for morbid appetites. His object is to illustrate "the changes of the laws in the progress of civilisation." In the present volume he commences from the accession of Henry VII., and carries his work down so far into our own times as to find himself in a position for drawing a "contrast between the reign of Queen Elizabeth and the reign of Queen Victoria," to the advantage, it is scarcely necessary to add, although not to the wholly unalloyed advantage, of the latter. Seven chapters are filled with a series of dissolving views, in which we see passing before our eyes a succession of various crimes and punishments with such modifications as have been brought about by more or less salutary changes of habits, customs, sentiments, and of whatever else is influential and formative, during the period specified above, and we then come to the last chapter, which is likely to be considered the most interesting, if not the most important, of all. In that chapter the author delivers himself of his own personal opinions upon certain points connected with the general subject of crimes and punishments; and no reader can fail to be struck with the amount of thought, knowledge, lucid statement, forcible argument, and happy illustration employed. The conclusions may not always command agreement; but they will certainly compel respectful consideration. In the first place, the author gives "the historical definition of crime" as "that which the law declares to be crime, or for which the State recognises a punishment, at any period over which the history extends," although by such a definition we should become involved in the paradoxical necessity of regarding as a crime that which the moralist would include in the category of virtues. Which is, after all, only the converse of what was said long ago by St. Paul: "where no law is, there is no transgression." In the next place, the author proceeds to enlarge upon such questions as "crime in relation to past events;" "the influence of inherited tendencies upon crime;" "crime in relation to contemporaneous education;" and "crime and pauperism in immediate relation to the laws—to preventives, punishments, incentives, and the administration of justice." Not only does he exhibit that mastery of his subject which was to be expected from his learning, study, and practical experience, but he shows the most unmistakable signs of strong, innate common sense. What he says about the restriction which some worthy persons would place upon the sale of alcoholic liquors is well worth reading; and so are his remarks touching vaccination. One of the arguments he uses must have occurred to others besides himself; and there is room for wonder that it has not been more generally urged. "The reason for enforcing vaccination," he says, "is that it entirely prevents infection from smallpox, or greatly mitigates where it does not prevent. The unvaccinated, therefore, can do but little injury to those who are vaccinated, and are dangerous only to themselves and to one another." And he asks, with some show of reason consequently, whether, when "we force parents to vaccinate their children, though the parents truly and conscientiously hold the belief that vaccination is injurious," we do not "in the name of civilisation or public policy enforce laws which savour a little of mediæval and theological intolerance." It must not be assumed that he himself opposes vaccination; there is no appearance of any such hostility. Of course, one weak spot in his argument is this—it is found by experience that people who do not "conscientiously hold the belief that vaccination is injurious" would, from sheer carelessness, neglect it if there were no legal penalty; and other weak spots will, no doubt, suggest themselves. As regards his observations upon the infliction of the lash, he argues against it very calmly but very persuasively. What he has to say about a public prosecutor also deserves to be carefully perused.

The conclusion of a "stormy and chequered career" is reached in the third volume of The Life of William, Earl of Shelburne, afterwards First Marquess of Lansdowne, by Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice (Macmillan and Co.), a volume commencing with the death of Lord Chatham and ending with that of Lord Lansdowne, which latter took place on the morning of May 7, 1805. The biographer and editor appears to have neglected nothing which could help to give the reader an adequate idea of the public services rendered and the private character exhibited by Lord Shelburne, both as they really were and as they were represented or misrepresented: public records, private correspondence, and the caricatures of the day, have all, with that view, been put under requisition. It has before been remarked that the method which the biographer has adopted of commingling matters which might have been kept separate, so that the pieces composing the man have to be picked out, as it were, from a superincumbent mass of political materials, gives to the whole work a somewhat patchy appearance, and is calculated to repel the majority of readers, for whom the man, rather than the politician, would be an object of interest; but there were probably good reasons for the plan of conglomeration. On the whole, it may be said that the first Lord Lansdowne leaves upon the mind the impression of a man whose ability was extraordinary, whose impulses were good, whose independence was sturdy, whose opinions were sound, whose conduct was manly, whose fearlessness was exemplary, whose services were great and might have been greater had they been better appreciated, who did his work heartily, though his heart was not naturally set upon the work he had to do. And the last part of this view receives some little confirmation from what he said about his son. "Henry," he wrote, "promises to be a very great resource to me, so far as private life goes; and as to public life, I have seen so much of it, that I shall consider it as no misfortune if he fails in it." A curious anecdote is told in this third volume about a negro-servant in the household of Lord Shelburne. Lord Shelburne, it may be remembered, was supposed to know who "Junius" was; and the said negro, who had received the nickname of Junius, died, and was buried, in Calne churchyard, in a grave over which some wag caused a handsome stone to be placed, with the inscription, "Here lies Junius." It was now thought that "the great secret" would be revealed; and Lord Lansdowne was appealed to for information as to "the person lying underneath the gravestone." But, when an inquiry took place, no tombstone was to be found; the Vicar, knowing who lay beneath, having caused the "surreptitiously introduced" stone to be removed.

It is pleasant to know that the reception given to the "Ancient Classics for English Readers," published by Messrs. William B. Eekwood and Sons, has been so cordial that the publishers have been encouraged to "carry out a kindred series," under the style and title of "Foreign Classics for English Readers," of which the first volume, devoted to the subject of Dante, has been intrusted to the competent editorship of Mrs. Oliphant, whose book about "the makers of Florence," not long ago published, is sufficient guarantee of the knowledge and enthusiasm with which the trust would be discharged. It is probable that the "Foreign Classics" will attain a popularity even greater than that which has attended the publication of the "Ancient Classics." As for the latter, the volume which claims immediate notice is Aristotle: by Sir Alexander Grant, Bart, LL.D.; and one is appalled at the difficulty of the task which the editor has accomplished. So much that is biographical, critical, explanatory, romantic, and altogether wonderful, had he to compress within a comparatively small compass. On the other hand, it is probable that there are few of the "ancient classics" whose names and influence are better known and acknowledged than Aristotle's among all classes of "English readers," so that the editor must have had the consolation of feeling that his labours were likely to be rewarded by the unusual interest which would be felt in his subject. Such readers would flock to Plato in thousands, to Aristotle in ten thousands. They have already some vague notion that Aristotle, completely for many centuries and, until quite lately, to a considerable extent, held the empire of the whole philosophical, if not of the whole intellectual, world; and they will, no doubt, gladly have recourse to the able dissertation contained in Sir Alexander Grant's little book for information which will help them to appreciate the genius of the man and to account for the strange phenomenon.

Fascinating books are of many kinds, and their fascination arises from many causes; but in the number of such books may certainly be comprised Biographical Sketches and Anecdotes of Celebrated Violinists, by Dr. T. L. Phipson (Richard Bentley and Son), a volume which, having been taken up, it is very difficult to lay down, and having been laid down, it is impossible to dismiss without a sigh of regret and a great longing for more. So forcible a hold does it take of one's sympathies. And yet there is very little, if any, literary charm about it; the style of writing is simple, unpretentious, and even commonplace, although the writer's tone does him infinite credit, bearing witness, as it does, to the genuine admiration, without any sort of guile or any vestige of an envious, detractive spirit, for those whose art he loves and practises and whose career he has studied and sketched. His sketches, moreover, are noticeably meagre; but, nevertheless, they are remarkably attractive. It is astonishing, however, how many violinists he has managed to introduce into his few pages—violinists who have long passed away and violinists who are still among us. His method is to give a prominent place to some great master, and then to add some slight account of that master's less famous pupils, rivals, or successors. He dwells most, then, though not sufficiently to satisfy the reader's desire, upon the lives of Lulli, Corelli, the Bannisters, Tartini, Viotti, Paganini, De Bériot, and Ole Bull; and he has a word or two to say about such contemporary favourites as Herr Joachim, Mr. Carrodus, and Madame Norman-Néruda. And he conciliates one's goodwill by showing that he can appreciate the talents of his fellow-countrymen. A whole chapter, the last in the book, is devoted to the interesting and touching story of Fraulein Schmöhling, better known as Madame Mara, a violinist as well as a prima donna, "whose romantic existence extended from the year 1747 to 1831." It may be that all he has written is already very widely known, and that some of the anecdotes are neither new nor true; but that is a question which concerns those who have sufficient knowledge to speak with authority upon those points. It must suffice here to bear witness that if there be any readers, and there must be many, upon whom the contents of his volume will come with all the freshness of novelty, they can hardly fail to be delighted with it and to wish that it were thrice as long.

Among the series of "Chandos Classics" appears a volume entitled The Talmud, translated from the original by H. Polano (Frederic Warne and Co.), being "selections from the contents of that ancient book, its commentaries, teachings, poetry, and legends," together with "brief sketches of the men who made and commented upon it." The translator, a little inconsistently, dates his English preface Hebraically, so that it is difficult for persons not familiar with the Hebrew calendar to know at what date it was that he was writing when he represents himself to have been incited to his work by being asked "how it was that no English translation of the Talmud was in existence." But, if "Tamuz, 5636," be rightly interpreted by "July, 1876," it certainly is curious, if it be the fact, that we should have gone so long without an English translation of the Talmud or of selections from it. There is no intention here of insinuating that the fact is not so; but, in the absence of personal knowledge, it may be permissible to express surprise, especially as it is by no means uncommon for English writers to quote from that "ancient and wonderful work." The translator makes no pretension to any higher position than that of a collector and translator of "specimens;" but he "believes that a perusal of his work will not only aid in informing the reader of what the Talmud is, but excite an interest in the same, which will make this book, and others of a similar character following it, of interest and demand." His belief is likely to be justified; and, if his modesty had not stood in his way, he might have said that his interesting introduction, in which he appears as an expounder and pioneer, and not as a mere compiler and translator, will be found to be an excellent, and almost a necessary, preparation for a proper examination of the "specimens." The "incidents in the lives of the Rabbis," and the "proverbs and sayings of the Rabbis, &c.," form a portion of the book upon which close attention may be profitably bestowed.

The author of "The Fern Paradise," Mr. F. G. Heath, presents us with a more complete study of that beautiful class of plants, the English scenery of their wild natural growth, and the methods of culture in our homes or gardens. His new volume, The Fern World (published by Sampson Low and Co.), is both instructive and delightful in the highest degree, combining exact botanical description with the most inviting and enchanting accounts of many a ramble in the sweetest rural haunts. We may linger with him in woodlands all curtained with leafy masses of living greenery; we may stroll with him through deep lanes, between the luxuriant tall hedgerows of Devonshire, or beside the clear waters of a stream flowing down some moorland or forest glen, or among the shattered rocks and cavernous clefts of the south-western seacoast. All this is so delicious that one is tempted to forswear city life, with its sordid cares of pelf, and to choose henceforth a sequestered dwelling in those silent haunts of his graceful favourites, the Ferns and Brakes. It is more especially in the West of England, both on the shores of the Bristol Channel, from the Quantocks and Exmoor, down by Lynmouth, to romantic Clovelly, and on the banks of the Dart, and around charming Torbay, and at the stern promontory of the double Point, near Salcombe, that Mr. Heath shows us the double pleasure of revelling in scenes of wondrous beauty and grandeur and of examining the finest specimens of these plants in the richest variety of their kinds. He discourses of every such perfect treat for the eye and imagination and understanding of a naturalist, with an enthusiastic eloquence that may not have the literary merits of Ruskin or Charles Kingsley, but that is a worthy expression of feelings in which he is sure to command the hearty sympathy of his readers. From an early personal acquaintance with some of the places above named, we can vouch for it, in general, that his local descriptions are by no means exaggerated; and there are doubtless many other parts of our country, in Wales, in the New Forest and in the Isle of Wight, and in the northern counties, or in Scotland and in Ireland, which exhibit similar features of surpassing loveliness. Mr. Heath gives practical directions for gathering and collecting ferns; both the entire plants, in order to pursue their cultivation in the garden, the glass case, or the simple pot or box, and the detached fronds, to be kept in portfolios with sheets of paper. He gives also due instructions for the arrangement of a fern-garden, rockery, cavern, or fern-house, which seems to require much careful imitation of the natural conditions of fern-growth, position and shelter, temperature and moisture, as well as proper soil, and should be an agreeable exercise of ingenuity for a contriving man in his leisure hours. It is not, indeed, in every situation that out-door fern culture may be attempted with hope of success; and, perhaps, the inhabitants of the healthiest dwelling-houses, with dry and open ground about them, have the least chance of doing anything in this way. But the miniature in-door fernery, inclosed within a glass frame in the window or on the table, is a household joy and thing of beauty, which may be had in any room of any house in London. It is the most elegant and interesting ornament of a lady's drawing-room; and one would like to see it, as a refreshing consolation, in the chambers of a lawyer in Lincoln's Inn, or in the private office-room of a City man of business, or in a tradesman's back shop. A box, or frame, or pot of ferns will yield more lasting pleasure and relief to the jaded mind and starved senses of the toiling townsman than a costly picture or statuette, which has been admired once for all, and the significance of which has been exhausted. We are less competent to speak of the scientific merits of Mr. Heath's work, in that portion of his volume, exceeding half the total number of its pages, which contains brief and precise botanical descriptions of forty-five different species of ferns that grow in the British Islands. It is evident, however, that he knows perfectly what he is writing about, and even the unscientific reader with ordinary attention may comprehend his extremely minute accounts of the peculiarities of each different species, the structure of its frond, the arrangement of the pinnae, with their pinnules again subdivided into lobes, or notched or serrated, and other details of the prettiest characteristic variation. But in this delightful book—to mention last of all its greatest charm, that is to say, its Coloured Illustrations—the study of botanical generic and specific varieties has obtained a fascinating and most helpful method of representation. This is done by means of twelve of the finest Plates, printed by Messrs. Leighton Brothers, from photographs of fronds collected and grouped by the author, which are unquestionably the most beautiful, vivid, and faithful pictures of plant-life that have ever yet appeared in any work of this class. They have all the freshness of the living hues of nature; and the indescribably minute peculiarities of each individual specimen, in its tiniest features visible to the eye, are copied with marvellous fidelity, so that we could scarcely know it more accurately by scrutinising a frond just plucked from the real plant in its sweet native wilderness, or in the conservatory of a rich and tasteful owner. Indeed, these pictures at first sight may often be mistaken, as we have actually seen, for real pieces of fern laid or transferred on the paper; and if other botanical subjects, the foliage and flowers of every kind of plant, can be illustrated by the same process, we predict a new era for this branch of natural science. There is the more to be hoped, for popular use and enjoyment, from the very moderate price at which Mr. Heath's publishers are enabled to offer this present volume. It is further embellished with a frontispiece, a permanent photograph of a certain fernery in town, and with three fine wood-engravings of Devonshire coast scenery, from which we are loth to turn away.

The tedious hours of unemployed attendance in the Law Courts, which must be endured by juniors at the Bar till they get a bagful of briefs, have sometimes been cleverly beguiled with literary quips and cranks, aimed at the solemn absurdities of forensic and judicial procedure. Scintille Juris is the title, both pretty and apt, of a neat little jest-book which may easily be hidden in the sleeve or in the folds of a "bogus brief," so that the bored professional youngster, weary of nothing to do, can snatch a furtive bit of fun by a glance at its amusing pages without incurring the frowns of any superior bigwig or the tacit disapproval of any solicitor's clerk. It is published (of course, on the sly) by Davis and Son, of Carey-street, and has already reached a second edition; but the author, who hails from the Inner Temple, will only be known to fame by three letters, "S, N, and G," mixed with a dozen asterisks, which are what he chooses to give of his name. The contents of this humorous little treatise on legal rules and practice may prove diverting even to the simple lay reader, who is, nevertheless, advised not to believe all that it tells him, but rather to give the Bench and the Bar credit for average common sense. "Of Laws, of Judges, of prisoners, of telling a story, of examining-in-chief, of witnesses, of cross-examination, of evidence, of sentences, of advocacy, and of maxims," the learned author makes bold to discourse with an unflinching flow of ironical humour. This sort of merry treatment of those grave subjects has, indeed, been attempted by several previous writers. Some of them have done it better, and we must say that, in our opinion, some have not done it so well.

A considerable amount of pains has evidently been taken in the compilation of a small work entitled The Cottage Hospital, by Henry C. Burdett (Churchills). The history of this valuable institution from the foundation of the first at Cranleigh by Mr. Napper, nearly twenty years ago, down to the present time, is given, with a great variety of statistical information. The chapters that follow explain the proper constitution of the medical staff, the best forms of construction for the cottages and modes of ventilation, the system of nursing that should be adopted, and a vast variety of hints as to hospital management generally. There are also sectional sketches of hospitals, which, according to our notions of the cottage hospital proper, are somewhat too pretentious and costly for the purpose. But Mr. Burdett's book will be welcome to all who are directly or indirectly aiding the organisation or superintending the arrangement of these small rural refuges for the sick.

The autumn congress of the Sanitary Institute of Great Britain will begin on Oct. 3, at Leamington.

NEW MUSIC.

THE FIRE KING. New Cantata. By WALTER AUSTIN. To be produced at the Leeds Festival on Wednesday Evening, Sept. 19. Artists—Mrs. Osgood, Madame Patey, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Signor Foll. Piano and Vocal score, price 6s. post-free. Messrs. and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S NEW VOCAL MUSIC. All post-free at half price. I AWAKE AND DREAM. Song. J. BLUMENTHAL. 2s. SUMMER RAIN. Vocal Duet. F. A. B. 4s. THE VILLAGE QUEEN. Song. CH. SCHREIBER. 2s. THE CITY BELLS. Vocal Duet. F. A. B. 4s. THE CUCKOO'S CONCERT. Song. H. F. DANKS. 2s. SPRING MORNING. Song. F. A. B. 4s. BIDDY MALONE. Irish Ballad. W. C. RUSSELL. 2s. New Burlington-street; and of all Musicians.

MUSICAL PRESENTS.—High-Class Music for Amateurs, Students, and Others.—To be had gratis and postage-free, a LIST of 400 CLASSICAL WORKS, bound, at greatly reduced prices. GRATIS AND POSTAGE FREE.—LATEST LIST OF MUSICAL NOVELTIES (Vocal and Piano) just issued by Messrs. Robert Cocks and Co., Publishers to the Queen and H.M. the Prince of Wales.

HALF-HOURS WITH THE ORATORIOS and other SACRED COMPOSITIONS. Arranged for the Pianoforte by GEORGE F. WEST. Elegantly illustrated title. Six Books, 4s. each; post-free at half price in stamps. "These solemn yet beautiful pieces cannot be too highly praised." Brighton Times. "Excellent companions for Sundays at home." Vide The Graphic. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

BATISTE'S admired ANDANTE in G. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by WILLIAM SMALLWOOD. 3s. Also, by William Smallwood, Handel's Grand March from "Sisile," 2s.; Duet, 4s.; and his Home Treasures, 2s. Numbers, 2s. 6d. each; 12 as Piano Duets, 2s. each; and his Little Buds, 2s. Numbers, 1s. each; 12 as Piano Duets, 1s. each. All post-free at half price. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

THE ELEMENTS OF THE THEORY OF MUSIC. By F. B. SUTTON. In cloth, price 2s. Art of Singing. By Bohner. 4s. Hamilton's Piano Tutor. New Edition. 4s. Appendix to Hamilton's Piano Tutor. By G. F. West. 2s. Hamilton's Tutor for Singing. 4s. Appendix to Ditto, by Franz Abt. 4s. Questions on the Theory of Music. Eighteenth Edition. By G. F. West. In cloth, 1s. 6d.; in paper covers, 1s. Clarke's Catechism of the Elements of Music. 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Order everywhere.

LOVED and LOST (Geliebt und Verloren) WALTZES. By OTTO MULLER (performed at the Promenade Concerts, Theatre Royal, Covent-Garden). These celebrated Waltzes, the most charming and fascinating that have been published for many years, may be had of all Music-sellers. Solo or Duet, 2s. net. DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street, W.

THE Popular Song, LOVED and LOST. The Words by Percy Fitzgerald, adapted to Müller's beautiful Waltzes, "Geliebt und Verloren." Sold by every Music-seller in the United Kingdom. Post-free, 2s. DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

REVE D'AMOUR. LAMOTHE'S charming Waltz, performed with great success at the Promenade Concerts, Covent Garden Theatre. May be had, Solo or Duet, 2s. net, of all Music-sellers. DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

FONTAINEBLEAU. LAMOTHE'S New Waltz. Performed at the Promenade Concerts, Covent Garden Theatre. Now ready, price 2s. net. Orchestra Parts may be had.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS' IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS. "The best and most substantial instrument produced." 9, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET, W.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarinets, Flageoles, Guitars, Banjos, Accordeons, Cornets, Saxhorns, Drums, and Musical Instruments of every description. Largest assortment in the Kingdom. BUTLER'S Manufactory, 29, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free.

THE SOCIETY OF ARTS' ONE SHILLING MOIST COLOUR BOX. Unadulterated pigments. Box in Japanese style, in leather, Barbe, and Co., 60, Regent-st., London; and local Artists Colourmen and Stationers.

MONOGRAMS.—RODRIGUES' Novelties in Monograms, Crests, and Addresses. Steel Dies engraved as gems. Note Paper and Envelopes stamped in colour relief and illuminated in gold, silver, and colours.—42, Piccadilly.

VISITING CARDS at H. RODRIGUES'. A Card-Plate elegantly engraved and 100 superfine Cards printed for 6s. 6d. Book-Plates designed and engraved in modern and medieval styles, at Rodrigues', 42, Piccadilly, London, W.

BALL PROGRAMMES at RODRIGUES'. All the New Patterns of the Season, arranged, printed, and stamped in the latest fashion. Bills of Fare, Guest Cards, and Invitations in great variety.—42, Piccadilly, London.

TRAVELLING BAGS. Write for their catalogue (illustrated). MAPPIN and WEBB, 76, 77, & 78, OXFORD-STREET, } London. W.; 2, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, CITY.

MR. STREETER'S DIAMOND ORNAMENTS.

LONDON-MADE JEWELLERY, of exquisite design and workmanship. The only Jeweller in England whose stock consists solely of 18-Carat Gold.

ENGLISH KEYLESS LEVER WATCHES, with all the latest improvements.

Of Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street.

"GOLD." By EDWIN W. STREETER. Second Edition will shortly be ready.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches from 44s. 6d. Gold, from 46s. 6d. Price Lists sent free.—68, Cornhill; 230, Regent-street; and 75, Strand.

£10. BENNETT'S WATCHES. In return for a £10 Note, free and safe per post, one of BENNETT'S LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship, with keyless action, air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.—68, Cheapside, London. Good Chains at manufacturers' prices. P.O. to John Bennett. BENNETT, 65 and 64, Cheapside.

E. DENT and CO., 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange, London, Manufacturers of CHRONOMETER WATCHES, CLOCKS, &c. (Catalogues free), to her Majesty the Queen and H.M. the Prince of Wales, and Foreign Sovereigns. Makers of the Great Westminster Clock and of the New Standard Clock of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

LAWN TENNIS. ASSER & SHERWIN. The Revised M.C.C. Laws, with Diagrams, post-free. No. 1. Net 24 feet by 3 feet 6 inches, standard, grey ropes, 4 bats, half a dozen balls, and rules, in plain deal box. 21 11 6 No. 2. Net 24 feet by 3 feet deep, standard, grey, 4 bats, half a dozen balls, and rules, in plain deal box. 2 2 0 No. 3. Net 24 feet by 4 feet deep, standard, and grey ropes, 2 full-sized tennis bats, 2 ladies' bats, 6 balls, rules, &c., in plain deal box. 3 13 6 No. 4. Net 24 feet by 4 feet, polished standard, grey ropes, 2 full-sized tennis bats, 2 ladies' bats, 1 dozen M.C.C. balls, and rules, in polished box, with lock and key. 4 4 0 No. 5. Full-size net, with standard, grey ropes, 4 full-size superior tennis bats, 12 covered balls, rules, in polished box, with press for bats. 5 5 0 Tennis bats. 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 15s. Ditto balls. 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 11s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 13s. 6d., 14s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 16s. 6d., 17s. 6d., 18s. 6d., 19s. 6d., 20s. 6d., 21s. 6d., 22s. 6d., 23s. 6d., 24s. 6d., 25s. 6d., 26s. 6d., 27s. 6d., 28s. 6d., 29s. 6d., 30s. 6d., 31s. 6d., 32s. 6d., 33s. 6d., 34s. 6d., 35s. 6d., 36s. 6d., 37s. 6d., 38s. 6d., 39s. 6d., 40s. 6d., 41s. 6d., 42s. 6d., 43s. 6d., 44s. 6d., 45s. 6d., 46s. 6d., 47s. 6d., 48s. 6d., 49s. 6d., 50s. 6d., 51s. 6d., 52s. 6d., 53s. 6d., 54s. 6d., 55s. 6d., 56s. 6d., 57s. 6d., 58s. 6d., 59s. 6d., 60s. 6d., 61s. 6d., 62s. 6d., 63s. 6d., 64s. 6d., 65s. 6d., 66s. 6d., 67s. 6d., 68s. 6d., 69s. 6d., 70s. 6d., 71s. 6d., 72s. 6d., 73s. 6d., 74s. 6d., 75s. 6d., 76s. 6d., 77s. 6d., 78s. 6d., 79s. 6d., 80s. 6d., 81s. 6d., 82s. 6d., 83s. 6d., 84s. 6d., 85s. 6d., 86s. 6d., 87s. 6d., 88s. 6d., 89s. 6d., 90s. 6d., 91s. 6d., 92s. 6d., 93s. 6d., 94s. 6d., 95s. 6d., 96s. 6d., 97s. 6d., 98s. 6d., 99s. 6d., 100s. 6d., 101s. 6d., 102s. 6d., 103s. 6d., 104s. 6d., 105s. 6d., 106s. 6d., 107s. 6d., 108s. 6d., 109s. 6d., 110s. 6d., 111s. 6d., 112s. 6d., 113s. 6d., 114s. 6d., 115s. 6d., 116s. 6d., 117s. 6d., 118s. 6d., 119s. 6d., 120s. 6d., 121s. 6d., 122s. 6d., 123s. 6d., 124s. 6d., 125s. 6d., 126s. 6d., 127s. 6d., 128s. 6d., 129s. 6d., 130s. 6d., 131s. 6d., 132s. 6d., 133s. 6d., 134s. 6d., 135s. 6d., 136s. 6d., 137s. 6d., 138s. 6d., 139s. 6d., 140s. 6d., 141s. 6d., 142s. 6d., 143s. 6d., 144s. 6d., 145s. 6d., 146s. 6d., 147s. 6d., 148s. 6d., 149s. 6d., 150s. 6d., 151s. 6d., 152s. 6d., 153s. 6d., 154s. 6d., 155s. 6d., 156s. 6d., 157s. 6d., 158s. 6d., 159s. 6d., 160s. 6d., 161s. 6d., 162s. 6d., 163s. 6d., 164s. 6d., 165s. 6d., 166s. 6d., 167s. 6d., 168s. 6d., 169s. 6d., 170s. 6d., 171s. 6d., 172s. 6d., 173s. 6d., 174s. 6d., 175s. 6d., 176s. 6d., 177s. 6d., 178s. 6d., 179s. 6d., 180s. 6d., 181s. 6d., 182s. 6d., 183s. 6d., 184s. 6d., 185s. 6d., 186s. 6d., 187s. 6d., 188s. 6d., 189s. 6d., 190s. 6d., 191s. 6d., 192s. 6d., 193s. 6d., 194s. 6d., 195s. 6d., 196s. 6d., 197s. 6d., 198s. 6d., 199s. 6d., 200s. 6d., 201s. 6d., 202s. 6d., 203s. 6d., 204s. 6d., 205s. 6d., 206s. 6d., 207s. 6d., 208s. 6d., 209s. 6d., 210s. 6d., 211s. 6d., 212s. 6d., 213s. 6d., 214s. 6d., 215s. 6d., 216s. 6d., 217s. 6d., 218s. 6d., 219s. 6d., 220s. 6d., 221s. 6d., 222s. 6d., 223s. 6d., 224s. 6d., 225s. 6d., 226s. 6d., 227s. 6d., 228s. 6d., 229s. 6d., 230s. 6d., 231s. 6d., 232s. 6d., 233s. 6d., 234s. 6d., 235s. 6d., 236s. 6d., 237s. 6d., 238s. 6d., 239s. 6d., 240s. 6d., 241s. 6d., 242s. 6d., 243s. 6d., 244s. 6d., 245s. 6d., 246s. 6d., 247s. 6d., 248s. 6d., 249s. 6d., 250s. 6d., 251s. 6d., 252s. 6d., 253s. 6d., 254s. 6d., 255s. 6d., 256s. 6d., 257s. 6d., 258s. 6d., 259s. 6d., 260s. 6d., 261s. 6d., 262s. 6d., 263s. 6d., 264s. 6d., 265s. 6d., 266s. 6d., 267s. 6d., 268s. 6d., 269s. 6d., 270s. 6d., 271s. 6d., 272s. 6d., 273s. 6d., 274s. 6d., 275s. 6d., 276s. 6d., 277s. 6d., 278s. 6d., 279s. 6d., 280s. 6d., 281s. 6d., 282s. 6d., 283s. 6d., 284s. 6d., 285s. 6d., 286s. 6d., 287s. 6d., 288s. 6d., 289s. 6d., 290s. 6d., 291s. 6d., 292s. 6d., 293s. 6d., 294s. 6d., 295s. 6d., 296s. 6d., 297s. 6d., 298s. 6d., 299s. 6d., 300s. 6d., 301s. 6d., 302s. 6d., 303s. 6d., 304s. 6d., 305s. 6d., 306s. 6d., 307s. 6d., 308s. 6d., 309s. 6d., 310s. 6d., 311s. 6d., 312s. 6d., 313s. 6d., 314s. 6d., 315s. 6d., 316s. 6d., 317s. 6d., 318s. 6d., 319s. 6d., 320s. 6d., 321s. 6d., 322s. 6d., 323s. 6d., 324s. 6d., 325s. 6d., 326s. 6d., 327s. 6d., 328s. 6d., 329s. 6d., 330s. 6d., 331s. 6d., 332s. 6d., 333s. 6d., 334s. 6d., 335s. 6d., 336s. 6d., 337s. 6d., 338s. 6d., 339s. 6d., 340s. 6d., 341s. 6d., 342s. 6d., 343s. 6d., 344s. 6d., 345s. 6d., 346s. 6d., 347s. 6d., 348s. 6d., 349s. 6d., 350s. 6d., 351s. 6d., 352s. 6d., 353s. 6d., 354s. 6d., 355s. 6d., 356s. 6d., 357s. 6d., 358s. 6d., 359s. 6d., 360s. 6d., 361s. 6d., 362s. 6d., 363s. 6d., 364s. 6d., 365s. 6d., 366s. 6d., 367s. 6d., 368s. 6d., 369s. 6d., 370s. 6d., 371s. 6d., 372s. 6d., 373s. 6d., 374s. 6d., 375s. 6d., 376s. 6d., 377s. 6d., 378s. 6d., 379s. 6d., 380s. 6d., 381s. 6d., 382s. 6d., 383s. 6d., 384s. 6d., 385s. 6d., 386s. 6d., 387s. 6d., 388s. 6d., 389s. 6d., 390s. 6d., 391s. 6d., 392s. 6d., 393s. 6d., 394s. 6d., 395s. 6d., 396s. 6d., 397s. 6d., 398s. 6d., 399s. 6d., 400s. 6d., 401s. 6d., 402s. 6d., 403s. 6d., 404s. 6d., 405s. 6d., 406s. 6d., 407s. 6d., 408s. 6d., 409s. 6d., 410s. 6d., 411s. 6d., 412s. 6d., 413s. 6d., 414s. 6d., 415s. 6d., 416s. 6d., 417s. 6d., 418s. 6d., 419s. 6d., 420s. 6d., 421s. 6d., 422s. 6d., 423s. 6d., 424s. 6d., 425s. 6d., 426s. 6d., 427s. 6d., 428s. 6d., 429s. 6d., 430s. 6d., 431s. 6d., 432s. 6d., 433s. 6d., 434s. 6d., 435s. 6d., 436s. 6d., 437s. 6d., 438s. 6d., 439s. 6d., 440s. 6d., 441s. 6d., 442s. 6d., 443s. 6d., 444s. 6d., 445s. 6d., 446s. 6d., 447s. 6d., 448s. 6d., 449s. 6d., 450s. 6d., 451s. 6d., 452s. 6d., 453s. 6d., 454s. 6d., 455s. 6d., 456s. 6d., 457s. 6d., 458s. 6d., 459s. 6d., 460s. 6d., 461s. 6d., 462s. 6d., 463s. 6d., 464s. 6d., 465s. 6d., 466s. 6d., 467s. 6d., 468s. 6d., 469s. 6d., 470s. 6d., 471s. 6d., 472s. 6d., 473s. 6d., 474s. 6d., 475s. 6d., 476s. 6d., 477s. 6d., 478s. 6d., 479s. 6d., 480s. 6d., 481s. 6d., 482s. 6d., 483s. 6d., 484s. 6d., 485s. 6d., 486s. 6d., 487s. 6d., 488s. 6d., 489s. 6d., 490s. 6d., 491s. 6d., 492s. 6d., 493s. 6d., 494s. 6d., 495s. 6d., 496s. 6d., 497s. 6d., 498s. 6d., 499s. 6d., 500s. 6d., 501s. 6d., 502s. 6d., 503s. 6d., 504s. 6d., 505s. 6d., 506s. 6d., 507s. 6d., 508s. 6d., 509s. 6d., 510s. 6d., 511s. 6d., 512s. 6d., 513s. 6d., 514s. 6d., 515s. 6d., 516s. 6d., 517s. 6d., 518s. 6d., 519s. 6d., 520s. 6d., 521s. 6d., 522s. 6d., 523s. 6d., 524s. 6d., 525s. 6d., 526s. 6d., 527s. 6d., 528s. 6d., 529s. 6d., 530s. 6d., 531s. 6d., 532s. 6d., 533s. 6d., 534s. 6d., 535s. 6d., 536s. 6d., 537s. 6d., 538s. 6d., 539s. 6d., 540s. 6d., 541s. 6d., 542s. 6d., 543s. 6d., 544s. 6d., 545s. 6d., 546s. 6d., 547s. 6d., 548s. 6d., 549s. 6d., 550s. 6d., 551s. 6d., 552s. 6d., 553s. 6d., 554s. 6d., 555s. 6d., 556s. 6d., 557s. 6d., 558s. 6d., 559s. 6d., 560s. 6d., 561s. 6d., 562s. 6d., 563s. 6d., 564s. 6d., 565s. 6d., 566s. 6d., 567s. 6d., 568s. 6d., 569s. 6d., 570s. 6d., 571s. 6d., 572s. 6d., 573s. 6d., 574s. 6d., 575s. 6d., 576s. 6d., 577s. 6d., 578s. 6d., 579s. 6d., 580s. 6d., 581s. 6d., 582s. 6d., 583s. 6d., 584s. 6d., 585s. 6d., 586s. 6d., 587s. 6d., 588s. 6d., 589s. 6d., 590s. 6d., 591s. 6d., 592s. 6d., 593s. 6d., 594s. 6d., 595s. 6d., 596s. 6d., 597s. 6d., 598s. 6d., 599s. 6d., 600s. 6d., 601s. 6d., 602s. 6d., 603s. 6d., 604s. 6d., 605s. 6d., 606s. 6d., 607s. 6d., 608s. 6d., 609s. 6d., 610s. 6d., 611s. 6d., 612s. 6d., 613s. 6d., 614s. 6d., 615s. 6d., 616s. 6d., 617s. 6d., 618s. 6d., 619s. 6d., 620s. 6d., 621s. 6d., 622s. 6d., 623s. 6d., 624s. 6d., 625s. 6d., 626s. 6d., 627s. 6d., 628s. 6d., 629s. 6d., 630s. 6d., 631s. 6d., 632s. 6d., 633s. 6d., 634s. 6d., 635s. 6d., 636s. 6d., 637s. 6d., 638s. 6d., 639s. 6d., 640s. 6d., 641s. 6d., 642s. 6d., 643s. 6d., 644s. 6d., 645s. 6d., 646s. 6d., 647s. 6d., 648s. 6d., 649s. 6d., 650s. 6d., 651s. 6d., 652s. 6d., 653s. 6d., 654s. 6d., 655s. 6d., 656s. 6d., 657s. 6d., 658s. 6d., 659s. 6d., 660s. 6d., 661s. 6d., 662s. 6d., 663s. 6d., 664s. 6d., 665s. 6d., 666s. 6d., 667s. 6d., 668s. 6d., 669s. 6d., 670s. 6d., 671s. 6d., 672s. 6d., 673s. 6d., 674s. 6d., 675s. 6d., 676s. 6d., 677s. 6d., 678s. 6d., 679s. 6d., 680s. 6d., 681s. 6d., 682s. 6d., 683s. 6d., 684s. 6d., 685s. 6d., 686s. 6d., 687s. 6d., 688s. 6d., 689s. 6d., 690s. 6d., 691s. 6d., 692s. 6d., 693s. 6d., 694s. 6d., 695s. 6d., 696s. 6d., 697s. 6d., 698s. 6d., 699s. 6d., 700s. 6d., 701s. 6d., 702s. 6d., 703s. 6d., 704s. 6d., 705s. 6d., 706s. 6d., 707s. 6d., 708s. 6d., 709s. 6d., 710s. 6d., 711s. 6d., 712s. 6d., 713s. 6d., 714s. 6d., 715s. 6d., 716s. 6d., 717s. 6d., 718s. 6d., 719s. 6d., 720s. 6d., 721s. 6d., 722s. 6d., 723s. 6d., 724s. 6d., 725s. 6d., 726s. 6d., 727s. 6d., 728s. 6d., 729s. 6d., 730s. 6d., 731s. 6d., 732s. 6d., 733s. 6d., 734s. 6d., 735s. 6d., 736s. 6d., 737s. 6d., 738s. 6d., 739s. 6d., 740s. 6d., 741s. 6d., 742s. 6d., 743s. 6d., 744s. 6d., 745s. 6d., 746s. 6d., 747s. 6d., 748s. 6d., 749s. 6d., 750s. 6d., 751s. 6d., 752s. 6d., 753s. 6d., 754s. 6d., 755s. 6d., 756s. 6d., 757s. 6d., 758s. 6d., 759s. 6d., 760s. 6d., 761s. 6d., 762s. 6d., 763s. 6d., 764s. 6d., 765s. 6d., 766s. 6d., 767s. 6d., 768s. 6d., 769s. 6d., 770s. 6d., 771s. 6d., 772s. 6d., 773s. 6d., 774s. 6d., 775s. 6d., 776s. 6d., 777s. 6d., 778s. 6d., 779s. 6d., 780s. 6d., 781s. 6d., 782s. 6d., 783s. 6d., 784s. 6d., 785s. 6d., 786s. 6d., 787s. 6d., 788s. 6d., 789s. 6d., 790s. 6d., 791s. 6d., 792s. 6d., 793s. 6d., 794s. 6d., 795s. 6d., 796s. 6d., 797s. 6d., 798s. 6d., 799s. 6d., 800s. 6d., 801s. 6d., 802s. 6d., 803s. 6d., 804s. 6d., 805s. 6d., 806s. 6d., 807s. 6d., 808s. 6d., 809s. 6d., 810s. 6d., 811s. 6d., 812s. 6d., 813s. 6d., 814s. 6d., 815s. 6d., 816s. 6d., 817s. 6d., 818s. 6d., 819s. 6d., 820s. 6d., 821s. 6d., 822s. 6d., 823s. 6d., 824s. 6d., 825s. 6d., 826s. 6d., 827s. 6d., 828s. 6d., 829s. 6d., 830s. 6d., 831s. 6d., 832s. 6d., 833s. 6d., 834s. 6d., 835s. 6d., 836s. 6d., 837s. 6d., 838s. 6d., 839s. 6d., 840s. 6d., 841s. 6d., 842s. 6d., 843s. 6d., 844s. 6d., 845s. 6d., 846s. 6d., 847s. 6d., 848s. 6d., 849s. 6d., 850s. 6d., 851s. 6d., 852s. 6d., 853s. 6d., 854s. 6d., 855s. 6d., 856s. 6d., 857s. 6d., 858s. 6d., 859s. 6d., 860s. 6d., 861s. 6d., 862s. 6d., 863s. 6d., 864s. 6d., 865s. 6d., 866s. 6d., 867s. 6d., 868s. 6d., 869s. 6d., 870s. 6d., 871s. 6d., 872s. 6d., 873s. 6d., 874s. 6d., 875s. 6d., 876s. 6d., 877s. 6d., 878s. 6d., 879s. 6d., 880s. 6d., 881s. 6d., 882s. 6d., 883s. 6d., 884s. 6d., 885s. 6d., 886s. 6d., 887s. 6d., 888s. 6d., 889s. 6d., 890s. 6d., 891s. 6d., 892s. 6d., 893s. 6d., 894s. 6d., 895s. 6d., 896s. 6d., 897s. 6d., 898s. 6d., 899s. 6d., 900s. 6d., 901s. 6d., 902s. 6d., 903s. 6d., 904s. 6d., 905s. 6d., 906s. 6d., 907s. 6d., 908s. 6d., 909s. 6d., 910s. 6d., 911s. 6d., 912s. 6d., 913s. 6d., 914s. 6d., 91

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 1991.—VOL. LXXI.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1877.

WITH } SIXPENCE.
TWO SUPPLEMENTS } By Post, 6d.

ARRIVAL OF MAHOMET ALI PASHA, THE NEW TURKISH COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, AT THE HEAD-QUARTERS, RASGRAD.

TROOPS ON THE MARCH FROM RASGRAD TO THE FRONT.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

BIRTHS.

On the 29th ult., at Newcastle-on-Tyne, the wife of the Hon. Reginald Peaker, of a son.
On the 29th ult., at Holme Priory, in the Isle of Purbeck, Lady Selina Bond, of a son.
On the 4th inst., at Chatsworth, Lady Edward Cavendish, of a son, stillborn.
On the 31st ult., at Langley, the Hon. Mrs. R. V. Dillon, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 4th inst., at Raithby, in Lincolnshire, Harriet, third daughter of the late Rev. William Morley, Rector of Enderby, to John Maister, Esq., of Beverley.
On the 30th ult., George William Hutton Riddell, late Captain 16th Lancers, to Lady Evelyn Mary Coventry, second daughter of William, second Earl of Craven.
On the 4th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, the Rev. Frederick Anthony Hammond, of Lameston House, Dover, only son of the late Colonel Hammond, to Blanche Catherine, eldest daughter of Henry Alexander, Esq., of Forkill, in the county of Armagh, and Lady Louisa Alexander.
On the 1st inst., at the British Legation at the Hague, Captain Francis Baillie, only son of the Right Hon. H. Baillie, of Redcastle, Ross-shire, to Blanche, second daughter of Admiral the Hon. Sir Edward Harris, K.C.B., her Majesty's Minister at the Hague.
On the 3rd inst., at St. Sidwell's Church, Exeter, Lewis Shapter, M.D., The Barnfield, Exeter, to Charlotte, youngest daughter of Captain E. Bayly, Friars Lodge, and granddaughter of the late Lord Charles Beauchamp Kerr.

DEATHS.

On the 28th ult., at Paxton Park, St. Neots, Hunts, Sir Williamson Booth, Bart., in his 67th year.
On the 29th ult., at 34, New Cross-road, Hatcham, Mary Ann, the beloved wife of G. L. Shand, of Pickle Herring, Southwark, aged 64 on that day, deeply regretted.
On the 2nd ult., at Poonah, Henry M. Grant, Esq., of the Bombay Revenue Survey, in his 37th year.
On the 4th inst., at Blairhoolachan, Stirling, William Henry Heap Hutchinson, Esq., of Cottingham Hall, Yorkshire, aged 58.

*. The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 15.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 9.
Fifteenth Sunday after Trinity.	Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m., and St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m.
Rev. Michael Gibbs, Rector of Christ Church; 3.15 p.m., Rev. Canon Lightfoot; 7 p.m., Rev. J. C. Whitley, missionary in Chota.	St. James's, noon, Rev. S. Flood Jones.
	Whitehall, closed for repairs.
	Savoy, closed for alterations.
MONDAY, SEPT. 10.
Ramsgate Harbour Yacht-Matches.	Avebury, Wilts, Coursing-Matches.
TUESDAY, SEPT. 11.
Ramsgate Poultry Show (three days).	Warwickshire Agricultural Society Show, Market Drayton.
North Shropshire Agricultural Society Show, Market Drayton.
WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 12.
Society of Engineers: inspection of Great Eastern Railway Company's works, Stratford, 12.30.	London Rowing Club: Matches (three days).
	Races: Doncaster St. Leger.
THURSDAY, SEPT. 13.
Northampton Agricultural Society Show, Market Harborough (2 days).	Yare Sailing Club: second Cantley Regatta.
Farnworth Agricultural Society Show.	Argyleshire Regatta, Oban.
FRIDAY, SEPT. 14.
Moon's first quarter, 11.8 a.m.	Salmon-fishing in Scotland ends.
Buck-hunting begins.
SATURDAY, SEPT. 15.
Twickenham Rowing Club: Handicap Sculls.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOM.		WIND.		General Direction.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum, read at 10 p.m.	Minimum, read at 10 a.m.	Miles.	In.
Sept. 8.	29.942	61.0	48.8	66	5	69.8	56.8	163	0.010
9.	29.814	58.4	52.7	83	6	64.6	53.8	243	0.120
10.	29.860	54.8	45.0	72	4	62.8	49.6	277	0.055
11.	29.853	52.9	41.0	68	5	63.0	44.2	126	0.000
12.	29.899	53.4	43.9	72	—	63.8	45.5	135	0.190
13.	29.744	52.2	48.1	87	10	66.2	47.6	—	0.130
14.	30.280	52.8	42.0	60	5	61.2	47.6	—	0.000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:-
Barometer (in inches) corrected ... 29.938 29.818 29.800 29.779 29.757 29.647 30.280
Temperature of Air ... 63.0° 61.3° 58.0° 55.9° 59.7° 55.6° 51.2°
Temperature of Evaporation ... 56.2° 57.3° 52.0° 49.7° 49.3° 53.7° 49.8°
Direction of Wind ... w.w. w. w.w. w. w. w. w.w.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 15.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
2 45	3 7	3 28	3 47	4 7	4 27	4 47
5 6	5 18	5 27	5 46	5 56	6 16	6 36

DORE'S GREAT WORKS, "THE BRAZEN SERPENT,"
"CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," and "CHRIST ENTERING THE TEMPLE," each 22 in. x 28 in., with Gallery, 18. Christian Martyrs, &c., at the DORE GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, W. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

ELIJAH WALTON.—EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, chiefly ALPINE and EASTERN, ON VIEW and for SALE a very moderate price.—NOW OPEN, at BURLINGTON GALLERY, 191, Piccadilly, Ten to Six. Admission (including Catalogue), 1s.

CRYSTAL PALACE PICTURE-GALLERY.—Open all the year round for the RECEPTION and SALE of PICTURES by the British and Foreign Schools. For Particulars apply to Mr. C. W. Wase.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS
will introduce an ENTIRELY NEW PROGRAMME. The whole of the songs contained in the first or musical portion of the Entertainment will be changed. New dances, New Whimsicalities, and New Burlesque Sketches. The New Programme will be given EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT, and on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at THREE and EIGHT.
Furniture, &c.: Sofa, 22 in. x 28 in., with Gallery, 18. Doors Open at 2.30 for the Day Performance; at 7.30 for the Evening Performance. No fees. Ladies can retain their bonnets in all parts of the Hall.

TWO HOURS AT HOME.—GREAT ST. JAMES'S HALL.—TWELVE NIGHTS ONLY, commencing MONDAY, SEPT. 24. Every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, at Eight. Mr. Kennedy, the Scottish Vocalist, will give his Entertainments on the Songs of Scotland, assisted by the following members of his family:—Miss Helen Kennedy, soprano; Miss Marjory Kennedy, contralto; Mr. David Kennedy, tenor; Mr. Robert Kennedy, tenor; Mr. James Kennedy, baritone. Change of programme each evening. Tickets, 3s., 2s., and 1s., at Austin's and principal Music-sellers.

MASKELYNE and OOOKE. Daily at Three and Eight o'clock. EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Fifth year in London. The present programme embraces Psycho and Zoo, the twin automatic mysteries; the sensational science, in exposure of so-called Spiritualism, in which Mr. Oooke floats about the room taking the cabinet with him—the most astounding feat ever accomplished; and many other illusory items of novel and original character. Such is the success of the entertainment that it is advisable to book seats in advance, for which there is no charge. Admission, 5s., 3s., 2s., 1s. W. Monro, Manager.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—Great Success.—HAMILTON'S RUSSO-TURKISH WAR. Vivid representations of the most important Events of the Campaign. Magnificent Scenes in Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Vienna, Belgrade, &c. EVERY EVENING at Eight; Wednesday and Saturday, at Three and Eight.

LEEDS MUSICAL FESTIVAL, 1877.

TOWNHALL, LEEDS.
WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY, SEPT. 19, 20, 21, and 22, 1877.
Conductor ... SIR MICHAEL COSTA.
Principal Vocalists:
Mlle. ALBANI, Madame SINICO, Madame EDITH WYNNE, Mrs. OSGOOD, Madame PATEY, Mlle. REDEKER, Mrs. MUDIE-HOLLINGBROKE, Mr. EDWARD LLOYD, Mr. W. M. SUAKES-PEARE, Mr. SARTLEY, Mr. CECIL TOVEY, and Signor FOLLI.
BAND AND CHORUS OF 400 PERFORMERS.
Organist—Dr. SPARK. Chorus Master—Mr. BROUGHTON.
OUTLINE PROGRAMME.—Wednesday: "Elijah." Evening: "The Fire King" (new Cantata), by Walter Austin, and Miscellaneous Selection. Thursday: Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night," Beethoven's Symphony (No. 8), and Miscellaneous. Evening: "Solomon." Friday: "Joseph," by G. A. Macfarren (written for this Festival). Evening: Beethoven's Symphony in G minor, and Miscellaneous. Saturday: Bach's "Magnificat" in D. Mozart's "Requiem," and Beethoven's "Mount of Olives."
FRONT SEATS and GALLERY TICKETS (Reserved) at the Festival Offices.
Single Ticket for the Seven Performances (transferable) ... £3 0s.
Single Ticket, Morning ... 1 1s.
Single Ticket, Evening ... 0 1s.
SECOND RESERVED SEAT TICKETS only at Hopkinson Brothers and Co., Commercial-street.
Morning ... 10s. 6d.
Evening ... 10s. 6d.
Festival Ticket-Holders will be permitted to travel by ordinary trains at reduced fares. FULL FESTIVAL PROGRAMMES may be had gratis at the Festival Offices, and at the Music Warehouses.
Cheap Editions of the Oratorios and Cantatas can be purchased at the Festival Offices.
JOHN WM. ATKINSON, } Hon. Secs.
FRED. R. SPARK, }
Festival Offices, Great George-street (Townhall), Leeds.

MOONSTONE. By WILKIE COLLINS. A New Drama, altered from the novel of "The Moonstone," on MONDAY, the 17th inst. Box-Office open on the 10th. No booking fees. OLYMPIC THEATRE.

Now ready,
THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK for 1878.
Containing Twenty-Four Engravings from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—viz., Gates of Constantinople, Forts on the Bosphorus and the Black Sea, Old Modes of Locomotion, &c.; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Licences; Eclipses, Remarkable Events, Post-Office Regulations, and a great variety of useful and interesting information. The Trade supplied by G. VICKERS, Angel-court (172), Strand; and H. Williams, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1877.

The sudden death of M. Thiers early in the week took the world by surprise, and gave occasion for universal regret. He was an old man, it is true, having entered upon his eighty-first year, but he still retained the vigour of his intellect, the clearness of his judgment, and the extraordinary influence of his character over his countrymen. For France his unexpected decease has been peculiarly untimely, for he centred in himself more than any living statesman the unwavering trust of her citizens. Whilst they had M. Thiers with them, still willing and active in the service of their public interests, they felt that, whatever might happen, they possessed a tower of strength to which they might betake themselves with confidence in the event of whatever confusion might arise from the conflict of parties. He was par excellence the representative of his country. He moderated with almost undisputed authority its political passions. He calmed its fears. He gave it assurance in its most troubled experience. He provided a basis for its hopes when everything else appeared to be giving way. And now he himself is gone, just when his life seemed to be most necessary to the political well-being of his country. President MacMahon and the De Broglie Ministry can now, without yielding an iota of their schemes, secure sympathy by the honour which they pay to his remains. To no small extent, they can make his name and fame a word to conjure with, and wield the deathless reputation of the man they most feared, and had most reason to fear, for the furtherance of their designs.

The personal characteristics of M. Thiers seem to have specially fitted him for the part which he had to play. He was unselfish, genial, witty, energetic, and large-hearted. His domestic relations kept his heart warm, whilst his education trained his mind, within a certain sphere, to devote himself with rare success to political service. He was fascinating in spite of physical contrarieties. What to other men would have been impediments in the way of progress he turned to account by the mode in which he used them for obtaining special hold upon those with whom he was brought into contact. His tastes were simple, his enjoyments lay almost throughout life within his own reach. He was passionately fond of flowers and of animals, though he does not seem to have been partial to children. He was cautious in forming friendships and steadfast in adhering to them. He was catholic in his feelings, but throughout his life had a strong backbone of conviction. With intellectual scepticism as to religion he combined a conspicuous power of religious, or, perhaps it may be termed, superstitious sentiment. But the greatness and glory of France were his master passion. No personal interest was allowed to stand in the way of her supposed advantage. He had no love for mankind, in comparison of his love for France. His zeal for constitutional liberty was, perhaps, rather intellectual than moral in its character—the fruit of observation and experience rather than of intuition. He was not a theorist, except in so far as theory comes out of practical life. His world was France. His maxims were adapted to French ideas. His sphere of sympathy and affection and, to a considerable extent, of moral action was bounded by geographical limits. But within those limits his ambition was uniformly restrained. He knew his own power, but he cared not to exercise it for his personal elevation to the detriment of his country's welfare. It was this which gave him so strong a hold upon Frenchmen; this which in the end raised him above all temporary political parties; this which seated him in that chair of moral arbitration in which he commanded such extraordinary deference; and this which will deepen the pang of sorrow with which his countrymen view his departure from among them.

As a politician, the memory of M. Thiers will be cherished far more for the temper and spirit in which he acted, than for the ends which he sought to achieve.

Until the fall of Napoleon III. his policy would seem to us to have been a series of mistakes—especially his policy in regard to foreign nations. To diminish them in order to the glorification of France appears to have been the main secret of his measures and counsels. He liked not that France should have strong and independent neighbours. He disapproved of the unification of Italy. He was intensely inimical to that of Germany. He was opposed, it is true, to the war which brought upon France her great humiliation, but he was so simply on the ground that she was not fully prepared. To the last of his life he remained an ardent Protectionist. His literary remains—upon which he spent so large a portion of his time, indicate an admiration of military adventure and military success little conformable to the inspirations of truth, and hardly to be reconciled with a conscientious regard for facts. He fortified Paris, and was destined to prove the worthlessness of his undertaking. He would have gone to war with England with a view to the establishment of French interests in Egypt had he not been prevented by the selfish prudence of Louis Philippe. He sanctioned, if he did not suggest, the expedition to Rome under the Republic of which Louis Napoleon was President. But when the billows of affliction broke over the head of his country in the Franco-German War, he identified himself with her in her trouble as he had done in her glory. His journey to the different Courts of Europe to obtain for her an efficient ally, although utterly unsuccessful, illustrated the purity and strength of his patriotism. It was recognised by his countrymen at the subsequent elections to the General Assembly. The number of constituencies for which he was returned prove the sincerity of that trust which was placed in him by his fellow-citizens—a trust, we may add, which he fully redeemed as Chief of the Executive power in France.

Who can forget the political wisdom with which he restored his country from its downfallen position? the mode in which he paid off the heavy indemnity which Bismarck had imposed upon it? the promptitude with which the military occupation of several of its provinces was got rid of? the persuasive eloquence with which he succeeded, until then, in suppressing party differences? and the patient acquiescence with which he met the deposition from office which the ingratitude of the Monarchists inflicted upon him? They altered his position, but they could not destroy his influence. If Republican Institutions be permanently established in France the event will be greatly owing to the effect of his counsels and to the power of his name. Being dead, he yet speaketh. And it is to be hoped that in the coming elections, and in the settlement of those problems which will then have to be dealt with, the name of M. Thiers will still remain a power for good.

THE COURT.

The Queen, with Princess Beatrice and Prince Leopold, continues at Balmoral Castle. Her Majesty and their Royal Highnesses attended Divine service on Sunday at Crathie church. The Rev. Archibald Campbell officiated. Mr. Gathorne Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Forbes, of Newe, and Lieutenant-Colonel Farquharson, of Invercauld, dined with the Queen on Tuesday. The Queen, accompanied by the Royal family, has made various excursions during the week. Prince Leopold has visited Alt na Guithasach and Loch Callater. The Queen did not attend the Braemar Gathering this year, as is her custom, owing to the stormy weather prevailing. The Hon. Alexander Yorke has arrived, and Mr. Collins has left the castle.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales arrived at Trouville yesterday week, and proceeded to the Hôtel des Roches Noires. The Princess of Wales, with her children, are at the Isle of Wight. Her Royal Highness, as soon as Prince Albert Victor's health is completely restored, is expected to go on a visit to her parents, the King and Queen of Denmark, at Copenhagen; but the Copenhagen correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette gives an authoritative contradiction to the statement that the Princess intends to pay a long visit to Denmark. The Prince and Princess of Wales have been invited to be present at the opening of Nottingham Castle as an Art-Museum in connection with South Kensington next year, which invitation, should circumstances permit, they will accept.

Their Royal Highnesses, with the members of the Royal family, are deeply grieved at the death of the Rev. W. Lake-Onslow, Rector of Sandringham and Chaplain to the Prince.

General Meredith Read, American Minister at the Court of Athens, dined with the Prince and Princess on board the Royal yacht Osborne last week.

An Athens telegram in the Times says:—The Duke of Edinburgh arrived here last Saturday on board the Sultan, and visited their Majesties. He left the same evening.

Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, who for the previous ten days have been the guests of the Marquis of Albury at Jerveaux Abbey, attended Divine service at the newly restored parish church of East Wotton on Sunday. The Rev. H. H. Stewart, the Vicar, officiated. Their Royal Highnesses have visited the various places of interest in the neighbourhood, including Middleham and the racing stables on the moor and the remains of Fountains Abbey, and one day lunched with the Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon at Studley Royal.

The Duke of Connaught visited Mr. Widenham Smyth, and was present at a garden party last week at Castle Widenham, in the county of Cork. On Tuesday last he arrived at Valentia, on a visit to the Knight of Kerry. His Royal Highness met with an enthusiastic reception.

The Duke of Cambridge has had a severe attack of gout during his sojourn at Homburg, but is now recovered.

The Prince Imperial, to whom the Pope had sent his congratulations on the occasion of the fête of Aug. 15, has forwarded to the Holy Father his portrait set in diamonds.

His Excellency the Minister of the United States has been at Oxford, the guest of the Rev. Dr. Sewell, Vice-Chancellor.

His Excellency the Danish Minister and Madame de Bilow have left town for Ragley Hall, Alcester, on a visit to the Marquis and Marchioness of Hertford.

His Excellency the Marquis de Casa Laiglesia, the Spanish Minister in England, who has been staying at Spa, has been summoned to Spain in consequence of the death of his father.

The Duke and Duchess of Abercorn and Lady Georgiana Hamilton have arrived at Baronscourt.

The Duke and Duchess of Cleveland have arrived at Raby Castle, Darlington, from Ems.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Tweeddale have left for Scotland.

The Earl and Countess of Dudley left Dudley House, Park-lane, on Monday, for Black Mount, his Lordship's shooting-quarters in Scotland.

Earl and Countess Granville have left Studley Royal for Bolton Abbey, on a visit to the Duke of Devonshire.

The Earl and Countess Delawarr have left their residence on the coast of Hampshire, and have proceeded westward in their yacht Edeline.

The Earl and Countess of Bessborough have arrived at Bessborough House, Kilkenny, from Malvern.

The Earl and Countess Sydney have arrived at Frognall, near Foot's Cray.

The Earl of Durham has arrived at Fenton, near Wooler, Northumberland.

The Earl and Countess of Dalkeith left town on Saturday last for Langholm, Dumfriesshire.

The Earl of Warwick has arrived at Warwick Castle.

The Earl of Roden has gone to Tullymore Park, in the county of Down.

The Earl of Clanwilliam has returned from Germany.

The Earl of Limerick and Viscount Glentworth have arrived at Dromore Castle, Limerick, from London.

The Countess of Ashburnham has accompanied Lady Katherine Bannerman to Crimonmogate, Aberdeenshire.

Sir Ivor and Lady Cornelia Guest have arrived at Muckross Abbey, Killarney, from the Viceroyal Lodge, Dublin.

Lord Houghton and the Hon. Misses Milnes have left Fryston Lodge, Torquay, for Fryston Hall, Yorkshire.

The Bishop of Carlisle has returned to the episcopal palace, Rose Castle, from Germany and Switzerland.

The Right Hon. John Bright, M.P., and Mrs. Bright have left for the Continent.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Burnard, Arthur Chichester, to be Rector of Beer Hackett, Dorset.
Carpendale, William Henry; Curate of Motcombe, Dorset.
Cornish, J. R.; Examining Chaplain for the Diocese of Truro.
Daniell, J. J.; Vicar of Berwick St. James and Winterborne Stoke, Wilts.
Gedge, H. S.; Incumbent of St. Paul's District, Northampton (not Vicar of St. Luke's, as stated last week).
Kinchant, Richard Cator; Curate of St. Marylebone.
Macdonald, William Coules; Curate of Christ Church, Poplar.
Marshall, H. B. D.; Vicar of Norton Canon, Diocese of Hereford.
Oliver, Henry F.; Curate of Holy Trinity, Frognal.
Wilcox, Arthur Marwood; Vicar of Knowbury, Salop.
Wilkinson, G. H.; Examining Chaplain for the Diocese of Truro.—Guardian.

Earl Spencer has given £500 towards the fund for the repair and restoration of the nave of St. Albans Abbey.

The Bishop of Rochester intends as soon as the vacation is over to invite his clergy to meet him at convenient centres in the diocese for informal conference and for devotion.

The parish church of Stapleford, having been restored and enlarged, was reopened last week, when a special service was held, at which the sermon was preached by the Bishop Suffragan of Nottingham, Dr. Mackenzie.

The annual festival of the choral association in connection with the deaneries of Frodsham East and Frodsham West, Cheshire, took place recently in the parish church of Frodsham. There were 354 singers, of whom 238 were surpliced. There were a large number of clergy present, and the sermon was preached by Canon Walsham How.

The balance-sheet, showing the cost of the restoration at present effected of Rochester Cathedral, has been issued by Dean Scott. The total amount received in subscriptions was £11,396, and £11,264 has been expended. Further subscriptions are asked to enable the Dean and Chapter to complete the restoration of the cathedral.

The Bishop of Manchester, preaching at the Halifax parish church last Sunday, said the scheme of religious instruction adopted by the Manchester School Board was universally accepted, and his own diocesan inspector of schools said that if it was honestly carried out the children of the board schools would know quite as much of the necessary elements of Christianity as the children in any denominational or Church school with which he was acquainted.

Replying to a series of resolutions passed at a rural deanery chapter at Brixworth, Northamptonshire, condemning the practice of systematic confession, the existence of secret societies in the Church, and disobedience to the diocesan in disputed matters of external order, the Bishop of Peterborough says:—"I shall be much obliged if you will assure those of the clergy who agreed to them of my entire concurrence in the views which they have expressed, and of my great satisfaction in knowing that sentiments so thoroughly loyal to the Reformed Church of England are entertained by them."

Yesterday week the Bishop of Worcester reopened the church of Claverdon, which, with the exception of the tower, has been entirely rebuilt, the old one being described in his Lordship's speech at the luncheon as being "as bad a church as there could be." The offertory was about £80. The architect was Mr. Christian, and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have repaired the church. His Lordship has likewise reopened the church of Birtsmorton, and at a luncheon it was stated that church building had progressed in the Worcester diocese as rapidly as in any in the kingdom.

Mr. W. Grant, of Peckham, has written to the Bishop of Rochester with reference to his Lordship's late sermon at Hatcham, in which he stated that "if the Church of England was not a Protestant Reformed Church she was in a shameful schism, and ought not to have an existence." Mr. Grant says that as an English Churchman he has been required all his life to profess his faith in the "Catholic Church," but has never been required to profess himself a "Protestant," nor to acknowledge himself a member of a "Protestant Church." He asks the Bishop to give him some authority for his being, as an English Churchman, a "Protestant," and that the Church of England, in any official Church document, calls herself a "Protestant Reformed Church." Bishop Thorold writes in reply:—"My dear Sir,—I much regret to have pained you by the use of the word 'Protestant' in my sermon on Sunday morning, but I must tell you I used it with perfect deliberation, and that I inflexibly abide by it still. It may be perfectly true that the word 'Protestant' does not occur in our authorised formularies, but it is equally true that the word 'Trinity' does not occur in Holy Scripture; yet I never heard of an English Churchman objecting on that account to the doctrine it implies and declares. That the English Church is a Reformed Church is simply a matter of history, and if you differ from me in thinking so I fear there is but little advantage in our continuing the argument. That she is 'Protestant' in the attitude she assumes towards the Roman Church is, I conceive, indisputable, and I have never before heard it contradicted. If she does not still protest against the doctrinal errors of that Church her existence as a separate communion is an inexplicable and gratuitous schism. But I say she does, and her Articles are an evidence of it. Of the Thirty-nine Articles no less than seventeen are, directly or indirectly, in controversy with Roman error; and so long as the clergy and laity of the Church of England accept the substance of the Articles, just so long do they protest against the errors they expose." Mr. Grant makes a long rejoinder, but the Bishop says he has not time to discuss the matter further.

AID TO THE VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

Mr. Layard has addressed, under date of Aug. 21, a despatch to Lord Derby calling attention to the misery among the Turkish people, Moslem and Christian, and the inadequate efforts which are being made to relieve it. Mr. Layard says that in Adrianople there must be altogether nearly 13,000 fugitives, for the most part women and children, including many wounded. At Philippopolis there are 7000 or 8000 fugitives, principally Mussulman and Christian women and children, many wounded, and all in the greatest distress and want. In Constantinople the number of refugees is increasing every day, and the Sultan has placed one of his palaces at their disposal. A great many, too, have been taken into private houses. Mr. Layard, in conclusion, says he cannot doubt that an appeal to British charity on behalf of the women and children and old men who are suffering from the invasion of their country would not be without its effect, and he hopes that Lord Derby will accordingly allow the substance of his despatch to be made public.

A further sum of £2000 was telegraphed by Messrs. Coutts to Mr. Layard on Thursday week, making £10,000 transmitted to him up to that time for the purpose of the Turkish Compassionate Fund. His Excellency Musurus Pasha has transmitted to the Baroness Burdett-Coutts a telegram, received by him from the Turkish Minister for Foreign Affairs, conveying the contents of the following letter written by Turkish ladies at Constantinople:—

My Lady,—We have been deeply touched by the news of your magnificent donation for the unfortunate refugees—men, women, and children—who have been able to get out of our cruel enemies' reach, and we feel profound admiration and gratitude. Allow us, my Lady, to offer you on behalf of all the persons whose sufferings are being relieved through your liberality, our most sincere thanks, and to give you the assurance that we—mothers, wives, or sisters—now suffering for our beloved country, will never forget your kindness and generosity towards the innocent victims of our traditional enemy.

A correspondent of one of the Constantinople newspapers, writing from Adrianople, gives details of the measures which have been taken there for the administration of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts's Compassionate Fund, that of the Jewish Alliance, and of the Central Committee. According to this writer's statement, there had, at the above date, been opened by an official of the Ottoman Imperial Bank a hospital and an asylum in which 86 fugitive Mussulman women and children, of whom 24 were wounded, were being tended. Another place of reception for Bulgarian wounded contained 44 women and children. Altogether, the committee were relieving—of wounded fugitives, 35 Moslems and 44 Bulgarians; of fugitives not wounded, 270 Moslems, 80 Jews, and 56 Bulgarians: in all, 485 persons, a total which it was expected would be raised to 800 a few days later. In addition to relief thus administered by the British Committee, gifts of clothing have been made to about 200 persons, and the funds of the Sisters of Charity, affording assistance to fugitives at Karagatch, had been contributed to.

Baroness Burdett-Coutts, writing to the Daily Telegraph on Monday, says the Turkish Compassionate Fund amounted to more than £10,000, and adds:—

Save for the existence of the Compassionate Fund, hopeless suffering of innocent women and children, victims of a savage warfare, would have been unrelieved; but of the £4000 which had reached Mr. Layard by Aug. 24 £2000 was at once sent to Adrianople, where Mr. Consul Blunt and a committee are engaged in applying it to the constantly increasing distress. Two asylums, together holding nearly one hundred people, have been established, the expenses of which will be about £45 per month. Out-door relief is given at the rate of two piastres (4d.) per day to each woman, and one piastre (2½d.) to each child. Besides this, light, firewood, or charcoal, &c., is supplied. The nature of the relief is very meagre, but the native members of the committee consider it just sufficient for Turkish peasants, to which class the destitute mostly belong. Later on, clothing will be given to the most necessitous; but the present system is only to afford shelter and food, as the greatest suffering is anticipated on the approach of winter. From all accounts the number of the fugitives is increasing daily. Colonel Lennox, the Military Attaché of the Embassy at Constantinople, has informed Mr. Layard that there are many thousands bivouacking in the open country in East Bulgaria, and that at Eski Djuma (near Shumla) alone there are 15,000 families. The number of wounded women and children is very great, for in this war neither age nor sex is spared. What the Russians and Bulgarians spare the Circassians and Bashibazouks destroy. Happily, the Turkish regular troops, authorities, and population have hitherto behaved exceedingly well. The helplessness is increasing in intensity and widening in area. Thousands of helpless fugitives are lying in the open plains, or floating in, wounded and starving, to the centres where relief, such as it is, is given. To meet the sufferings of these unhappy creatures further funds are needed, and whatever is received will continue to be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Layard, whose discretion, energy, and devotion in this matter are beyond praise. They are aided by the disinterested and untiring efforts of ladies and gentlemen who, both at Constantinople and at the centre of suffering, labour unremittently to devote the money entrusted to them to the most effectual purpose; and every subscriber, either of the largest or smallest amount, may rest assured that the means so promptly, so kindly given, will in some measure mitigate sufferings as severe, distress as overwhelming, as any history records.

Mr. Charles Meynell has sent £2000 to the Committee for the Relief of Sick and Wounded Russian Soldiers, with the request that it may be appropriated as follows:—£1000 to the Sick and Wounded Russian Soldiers' Relief Fund, and £1000 in aid of widows and orphans of Russians slain in battle. The committee, at their last meeting, ordered that a further sum of 2000 roubles should be at once forwarded to the Chancellerie of her Majesty the Empress, the patroness of the Russian Red Cross Society. We understand that the Duke of Westminster has joined this committee, and has subscribed £100.

At a meeting of the Stafford House Committee, held on the 1st inst., appeals were received from Mr. Barrington Kennett for further assistance for the constantly increasing number of wounded, owing to the continued desperate fighting in Turkey. It was consequently resolved to dispatch at once five more surgeons and ten dressers to the seat of war, making up the staff of surgeons maintained by the committee to twenty-one, with ten dressers; while it also assists with stores Lord Blantyre's ten surgeons and others. The strain on the resources of the fund has reduced it to a very low ebb. In order, therefore, to be able to keep up their medical staff, and if possible to increase it, the committee appeal for further assistance.

THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

In the course of Thursday week the Lord Mayor received a telegram from the Madras Relief Committee expressing the grateful thanks of the people of Southern India for the sympathy evinced for them in England. They add that local committees were being formed throughout the affected districts; that the claims on the fund, which were already great, were being distributed through mission and other agencies; that Government agency could not reach destitute children; that in assisting orphans and other special objects the utmost care was being exercised by committees; that Government operations did not clash; that many of the crops were withered; that the death rate was rising and disease increasing; and that, in short, the state of the country was almost as bad as it could be. Among the principal donors on that day were the borough of Brighton (by the Mayor), £900; Guildford, £100; Southampton, £100 (third instalment); the Goldsmiths' Company, £500; the Dowager Duchess of Cleveland, £300; Messrs. Brown, Shipley, and Co., £250; J. Hubbard and Co., £100; Messrs. John Keiller and Co., £100; Mr. D. Carnegie, £100; Mr. J. Melrose, £100.

Information was received at the Mansion House yesterday week representing that the number of persons receiving relief was a million and three quarters, 600,000 receiving gratuitous relief. The price of grain had risen until it was equivalent to a quarter loaf in England rising from 6d. to 2s. 6d. Meetings were held in a number of towns yesterday week, measures being taken to collect funds. At a meeting at Sheffield the Master Cutler, Alderman Tozer, stated that it had been decided to undertake a great railway development in Southern India, and that contracts had been made with several firms—his own being one—for the supply of railway material.

Among the donors at the close of last week were Messrs J. and R. Morley, £105; Mr. Samuel Morley, £105; Taunton, by the Mayor, £100; the Rev. S. E. R. Jodrell, £100. Meetings in aid of the fund were held at various places on Saturday; and on Sunday collections for the same object were made in many places of worship. At Exeter there was a special service in the cathedral, and the sermon was preached by the Bishop, who urged the congregation to contribute, as there would still be a necessity for private benevolence when the Government had done its utmost.

At a meeting of the sub-committee of the Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund on Monday—Sir Nathaniel de Rothschild, M.P., presiding—it was resolved to send to the Governor of Madras a further sum of £35,000, making in all £80,000 sent out. It was stated by Mr. Dowden, an Indian merchant lately returned from the famine districts, that every £2 subscribed would keep a man alive for the next six months. General Sir Henry Norman, lately a member of the Viceroy's Council, said there had not been such a famine in India for a century or more. Meetings in aid of the fund were held on Monday at Liverpool, Birmingham, Lichfield, Sheffield, Edinburgh, Plymouth, Wolverhampton, Lincoln, and other towns. At Plymouth a resolution was passed that the Government should be asked to make a grant in aid out of the Consolidated Fund. At Liverpool it was stated that the total sum raised up to Monday night was £7443. At Birmingham the subscriptions amounted to £1000, and at Sheffield to £2000. Among the principal sums received on Monday at the Mansion House were the following:—Norwich, £200; York (second instalment), £100; the Marquis of Bristol, £100; Lady Rolle, £100; Sir R. B. Harvey, M.P., £50, and Lady Harvey, £50; Mr. Albert Brassey, £100; Earl Fortescue, £20; Hon. Mark Rolle, £20; Messrs. Lea and Perrin, £100; Messrs. Spalding and Hodge, £105; Devonport, £100; Sir Mordaunt Wells, £50; Earl Cadogan, £50; Messrs. Blundell, Spence, and Co., £100.

It was made known at Tuesday's meeting of the committee that the Lord Mayor had received upwards of a hundred collections made in various churches last Sunday. The Vicar of Colgate, Horsham, in sending a cheque for seven guineas, writes:—"To show the great sympathy felt for the famine-stricken, I may remark that our population is under 500, that our little church only holds 200, that our squire and his family were from home, and that the collection was composed of 169 pieces of money, ranging from one sovereign to a farthing." More than £8000 was paid in on Tuesday. The Mayor of Birmingham forwarded a first instalment of £1000; and among the other larger sums received during the day were the following:—The Duchess of Cambridge, £100; the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, £30; Wolverhampton, £400; Margate, £100; Lord Aveland, £100; Messrs. Debenham and Freebody, £100; the Earl of Ilchester, £50; Lord Skelmersdale, £50; the Hon. H. B. and Mrs. Devereux, £110; Messrs. Johnson, Matthey, and Co., £100; Messrs. James Spicer and Sons, £100; H. M., £100; Mr. Abel Smith, M.P., £100; the Earl of Redesdale, £100; Launceston, £60; the Earl of Kimberley, £20; the Dowager Marchioness of Exeter, £20; Mr. Charles Meynell, £100; Commercial Sale-Rooms (further instalment), £120. Several meetings were held on Tuesday in different parts of the country. At Blackburn £850 was given on the platform. A meeting in support of the fund was held in the Mansion House, Dublin, on Tuesday. The High Sheriff presided. An influential committee to raise subscriptions for the Indian Famine Fund was formed on the motion of Sir Arthur Guinness, seconded by Mr. R. W. Boyle. Sir Arthur Guinness gave a second contribution of £100, and £50 from Lady Olive Guinness. Judge Kernan stated that the fourth instalment of £500 from Dublin had been sent off that morning, and they would send the fifth instalment in the evening. This included £125, from a congregation at Kingstown.

The Lord Mayor received on Wednesday evening from the Central Relief Committee at Madras a telegram, in which it was stated that no differences now existed between the Supreme Government and the committee, and that the Viceroy had promised a subscription. The telegram also stated that the prices of food were still rising, and that, on the whole, the distress was increasing, and must continue for months to come. The Mansion House Relief Fund amounted on Wednesday to £96,000. Of this sum £80,000 has been already remitted to India. Among the larger amounts received on Wednesday were the following:—Dublin (third instalment), £500; Exeter, £500; Shrewsbury, £300; the Leathersellers' Company, £210; Reigate (including £100 collected at St. Mark's), £200; Bath, £200; Baltic Coffee-House (second list), £280; Scarborough, £146 5s. 6d.; Wigan, £125 2s.; York (second instalment), £200; Messrs. Alexanders and Co., £105; Mr. C. B. Wandesford, £100; Messrs. W. Dickinson and Co., £105; Mr. F. H. Dutton, £105; Congregational Union of South Wales, £105; Messrs. Culverwell, Brooks, and Cotton, £100; Messrs. Thomas Gabriel and Sons, £100; Mr. John Eden, £100; Messrs. C. M. Lamson and Co., £100; the Lord Chief Baron, £52 10s.; the parish of Ashton-on-Mersey, £60 9s. 1d.; Woking Parish, £53 10s. 7d.; Doveridge Church, £34 10s. 3d.; St. Andrew's Cathedral, Inverness, £80 19s.; Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson, £100; Granard Chapel, Rochampton, £80 3s.; Lord Rendlesham, M.P., £50; and the Earl of Harrowby, £25.

At the quarterly communication of Grand Lodge of English Freemasons, held on Wednesday night at Freemasons' Hall, a grant of £1000 to the relief fund was voted.

Notice has been given of a motion at the next meeting of the Court of Common Council to grant £1000 to the fund.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

HEAD-QUARTERS OF SULEIMAN PASHA, ARMY OF THE BALKANS.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR.

Our Special Artists with the Russian and Turkish Armies in Bulgaria, as well as in Asia, and those at Constantinople and on the Black Sea coasts, have continued to furnish an abundance of Sketches illustrating the scenes and incidents of the desperate warfare now raging on all the borders of the Ottoman Empire. The presence at Shumla, and subsequently at Rasgrad, of the new Turkish Commander-in-Chief, Mahomet Ali Pasha, whose Portrait and Memoir appeared in our last, has given a powerful impulse to the system of defensive operations. One of the Sketches presented on our front page shows the arrival of Mahomet Ali Pasha at his head-quarters of Rasgrad; another represents the marching of a body of his troops from Rasgrad to the front, where they have since been in fierce collision with the Russian forces. The army of Suleiman Pasha, by its advance northward from the Tundja Valley across the Balkans, and by its pertinacious struggle, during many days of incessant fighting, to gain possession of the Shipka Pass, has effected an important diversion, though it has finally been obliged to withdraw from the attempt to storm the Russian positions. We are indebted to Captain Gambier, R.N., for our Illustrations of Suleiman Pasha's head-quarters and the positions lately held by his troops to the south of the Balkans. The extreme simplicity of the Turkish General's personal accommodation, in something like a gipsy tent, formed of a single blanket stretched on a raised pole, has been noticed before. But the losses of this army, in dead and wounded, cannot be reckoned at less than ten thousand men; and very large numbers of wounded soldiers have been sent down by railway to Adrianople, and thence to Constantinople, which is the subject of one of our Illustrations.

The regular Turkish soldiery, to the best of our information, must be acquitted of sharing in those horrible orgies of wanton cruelty and foul outrages on women and children, of which we hear such deplorable accounts. It is mostly the Circassians and other Asiatic barbarians, imported for the purposes of this war by the Sultan's Government, that have perpetrated these atrocities in Bulgaria. On the seacoast north of Varna, towards the Kaliakra promontory, multitudes of distressed fugitives, Greeks and Bulgarians, have been collected during several weeks past, awaiting the first opportunity of removal from the country. We lately published Herr Schönberg's narrative, with two illustrations, of an expedition by sea from Kustendje to relieve some of these unfortunate people, who had sought refuge amidst the lagoons and marshes along that shore. A sketch engraved for the present Number shows the embarkation of a large number of Greek women and children at the port of Baltschik, to go on board the Austrian Lloyd Company's steamer Austria, which was engaged by the European Consuls to convey them to Varna. They were all that survived of the Christian population of Kavarna, a small town about ten miles east of Baltschik, which had been inhabited partly by Turks and partly by Greeks. We are informed that in July, when the Russian troops entered the Dobrudscha, large parties of Circassians and Nogay Tartars, retreating from the Dobrudscha, came down upon these seacoast towns, which had been abandoned by the Turkish Governors. They were armed with Henry-Martini or Winchester rifles, for the service of the Turkish Government; but, instead of using these against the Russian invader, they chose to pillage the Sultan's Christian subjects. The Turkish inhabitants of Kavarna would not exert themselves to protect their Christian neighbours. These made a vain attempt at resistance, but were soon overpowered; the men were either slaughtered or put to flight, their houses were plundered and burnt, but their women and children, as many as could escape from the town, found refuge in the caves along the seashore at Cape Kaliakra. These are the people whom we see at Baltschik, crowding the boats in the harbour, eager to quit the land in which they have suffered terribly from the ferocious and licentious rage of their fellow-subjects, under the Sultan's reign.

The ruins of Nicopolis, on the Danube, after its bombardment and capture by the Russians, are the subject of two of our Illustrations, drawn by Herr Schönberg, our Special Artist, who lately passed through that town on his way to join the Russian army before Plevna. It is expected that in the future progress of the war, if it be prolonged through the winter, Nicopolis and the opposite Roumanian shore at Turnu-Magurele will become far more important, as commanding the most secure passage of the river. The Turkish prisoners of war taken at Nicopolis were, on the 21st ult., removed from the fortress there, to be confined in Roumania or Bessarabia; and their departure, under a guard of the Russian soldiery, is shown in one of our Artist's Sketches. From the seat of war in Asia we present, on this occasion, but one Illustration,

THE ARMY OF SULEIMAN PASHA IN THE VALLEY OF THE TUNDJA, BALKANS.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS RETURNING FROM THE FRONT BY RAIL TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

REMOVAL OF TURKISH PRISONERS OF WAR FROM THE FORTRESS OF NICOPOLIS.

which is that of a dreadful scene at Bayasid after its recapture by the Sultan's forces. The massacres at Bayasid were exclusively the work of the savage Kurds, and it is due to the fair fame of the Turkish General, Moukhtar Pasha, to state that he inflicted severe punishment on their leaders when his attention was called to the matter by Sir Arnold Kamball.

We refer to another page for some observations on our Map of the Shipka Pass, and that of the country about Kara-Hassankoi, on the river Lom, where a battle was fought on Thursday week. The bulk of Suleiman Pasha's forces are stated to have now withdrawn from the Shipka Pass, but the Turkish and Russian batteries continue to exchange an occasional cannonade, and Suleiman Pasha may have come over the Balkans, during the last week, by one of the neighbouring passes, for he is reported to have obtained some success on the road to Gabrova, north of the Shipka Pass. The victory of the Turks on the Black Lom has since compelled the Russian abandonment of Popkoi, on the road between Rustchuk and Osman Bazar, which allows Mahomet Ali Pasha to extend his left wing southward, ready to form a junction with Suleiman Pasha. They will perhaps then advance together, in a combined movement westward, against the Russian central positions of Biela and Timova.

The Russians have retaken Lovcha or Lovatz from Osman Pasha. The position was carried by assault on Monday last by the troops under Generals Meritinsky and Skobelev. One of the first things which Osman Pasha did when he had taken Plevna was to make sure of Lovcha. The place is on the road from Plevna to Gabrova by Selvi, and it is in this south-eastern direction that Osman Pasha has sought to advance. Lovcha is also on the line of road from Rahova or Nicopolis by Trojan to Philippopolis, south of the Balkans, and gives its name to the Pass. On Aug. 6, a week after the Russian repulse at Plevna, General Skobelev pushed a reconnaissance against Lovcha, having with him only five battalions of infantry, a brigade of cavalry, and two batteries of horse artillery. He planted sixteen pieces of artillery on a hill a mile from the town and opened fire. It was found, however, that the low hills surrounding the town were strongly entrenched, and that Lovcha was occupied by from 15,000 to 20,000 Turks, whose tents were standing. There was a strong redoubt on a low hill overlooking the Plevna road, and a high hill on the Selvi side was found covered with trenches. It was thus a well-intrenched position which the Russian troops carried on Monday, and there is no reason to suppose that the place was not well defended. In any operations that may be projected against Plevna the possession of Lovcha will be of great value to the Russians.

There was a third battle fought at Plevna yesterday week, at the extreme right wing of the Russian army, where our Special Artist, Herr Schönborg, is now plying his vocation. Prince Charles of Roumania has been appointed to the chief command of the Russo-Roumanian army before Plevna, while General Zottoff takes the post of second in command. Osman Pasha greeted the new appointment on Friday by assuming the offensive, and directed a serious and well-sustained attack against the Russian left centre, almost directly in front of Poredin. At six o'clock in the morning a large force of Turkish cavalry advanced beyond the Turkish foreposts between Radisovo and Grivitza, and drove in the Russian advanced posts on the line between the villages of Pelisat and Zgalince. This done, the Turkish leader developed a regular attack in force in a direction already prepared by his cavalry. The Turkish infantry engaged were estimated at 25,000 men, with more than a proportionate quantity of artillery. The Russian force engaged consisted of three regiments of the Sixteenth Division, which was not engaged in the previous Plevna battle, and two battalions of the Thirtieth Division in reserve, which division took part in the battle of July 30. The Uhlans and Hussars of the 4th Cavalry Division arrived in time to be of service. The Turkish attack was in some degree a surprise. General Zottoff was away from Poredin, making a formal visit to Prince Charles, but returned before the fighting was over. It was stubborn, and in places desperate. The village of Zgalince, and another village near it, four times changed hands, but ultimately remained in possession of the Russians. The Turkish attack was thus far repulsed, but the previous forepost line of the Russians was not recovered, and the Turks have thus established an indentation on the semicircle of the Russian environment.

It is also announced that on Tuesday last Ahmed Pasha repulsed a Russian attack at Kadikoi, near Rustchuk. The Russians are stated to have lost one thousand men in this affair.

It is exceedingly probable that Serbia will at once declare war and take the field. Everything is ready, and all are waiting the instructions of the Grand Duke Nicholas as to where the Serbian forces will first strike. One corps of 20,000 men is at Negotin, with General Horvatovitch as Commander-in-Chief. He has thirty cannon. The other, the second corps, also of 20,000 men, is at Alexinatz, under Leschanin. Prince Milan himself is with the Russian Commander-in-Chief. It is understood that the Negotin force at once crosses the frontier, and, passing Widdin, operates in the rear of Osman Pasha. The second corps will meantime stand fast, with the intention to act in support.

The Turks have finally evacuated Soukhoun Kaleh, on the Russian coast of the Black Sea. It is long since their military expedition was abandoned as a failure, and of late they have been carrying off the Abhasian population by thousands to land them at Trebizonde.

Next week the magnificent building erected in Albert-square, Manchester, for the transaction of the municipal business of that city will be opened, and the event is to be celebrated by a round of festivities. The cost of the building, with its site, is estimated at £800,000.

An open competition for thirty-five situations of out-door officer in Her Majesty's Customs will be held in London, Edinburgh, Dublin, Liverpool, Bristol, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Hull, Leeds, Portsmouth, Plymouth, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Cork, Belfast, and Limerick on Oct. 26.

At a meeting of the Manchester City Council on Wednesday Sir Edward Watkin, M.P., on behalf of himself and Messrs. Hugh Mason, N. Buckley, W. Agnew, B. Whitworth, W. McMurchy, H. D. Pochin, and S. Watts, presented to the Corporation a marble statue of the Right Hon. C. P. Villiers, M.P., which has been subscribed for by these gentlemen, and executed by Mr. Theed. The statue has been placed in the large hall of the new building, which will also in a short time be adorned by statues of Mr. John Bright and Mr. Gladstone, executed by the same sculptor, and subscribed for by the same donors. A magnificent service of plate, which has cost £6000 gs., and is the result of a private subscription, was presented the same day to the Manchester Corporation by Mr. Alderman Curtis, the ex-Mayor (during whose mayoralty the subscription was promoted), and will be used at the banquet in celebration of the opening of the new Townhall next week. The plate was manufactured by Messrs. Elkington and Co.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The death of M. Thiers, which occurred on Monday, occasioned a great shock, coming, as it did, quite unexpectedly, notwithstanding his being in his eighty-first year. He had been staying for the last few weeks at the Pavillon Henri Quatre, Saint-Germain-en-Laye, and had caught a slight cold, but nothing led to the anticipation of so sudden a close of his eventful career. Several accounts are current respecting the last hours of M. Thiers. It appears that for some days past, without being positively ill, he had not felt quite himself; nevertheless, he did not change anything in the routine of his well-ordered life. On Monday morning he rose as usual at five o'clock, and after dressing he took a short walk in the terrace, then went home and sat down to write and read his letters, until half-past seven, when he took a turn on the stables to have a look at his horses. He then took once more his place at his desk, and continued to work steadily until noon, when he sat down to breakfast with Madame Thiers and her sister, Mlle. Doane. He ate with his usual appetite, but towards the close of the meal his features underwent a sudden change. He said, "I do not feel well." His wife and sister-in-law took him to his bed-room—the same room in the Pavillon Henri Quatre where Louis XIV. was born—and he was laid on the little camp bed which he always took with him in his travels. Two local practitioners were sent for, and they immediately applied sinapisms and leeches, which failed to relieve the increasing difficulty of breathing and the paralysis which was coming over the brain. Dr. Barth, M. Thiers's old friend and private physician, was telegraphed to, but it was late when he reached St. Germain, and when he saw his illustrious patient the latter had already lost consciousness, and it was evident that the end was at hand. The state of coma lasted until six o'clock, and ten minutes later a faint sigh announced to the bereaved wife and sister that life had departed.

The Moniteur states that Marshal MacMahon, who was at Montbrison, on receiving the news of the death of M. Thiers, immediately sent a telegram of condolence to Madame Thiers. He telegraphed also to Paris to summon a Cabinet Council for the purpose of concerting measures for causing the funeral to be solemnised with the greatest pomp. Wednesday's Official Journal contains a report of the Minister of the Interior to Marshal MacMahon, proposing that the funeral of the late M. Thiers should be a public one, at the expense of the State. A decree of Marshal MacMahon is appended, sanctioning this proposal. The body was removed from St. Germain to Paris on Wednesday. An immense crowd collected along the line of route through the city. The funeral is to take place at the Invalides to-day (Saturday). After the ceremony the corpse will be placed in the family vault at Père-la-Chaise. Marshal MacMahon will attend the funeral. The Republican ex-Deputies are coming up from the country in considerable numbers, and nearly all the 363 are expected to join the procession.

A public subscription has already been opened for the erection of a statue in memory of the deceased.

An address from the Left of the Senate to the country has been issued, and concludes with the words—"M. Thiers leaves us the example of consummate experience—the example of the purest patriotism. All Republicans will desire to remain faithful to both, and that will be the worthiest tribute we can pay the illustrious French patriot." Some hundreds of telegrams expressing condolence and sympathy with Madame Thiers have been addressed to her, as well as messages from crowned heads, statesmen, and celebrities of all sorts. Throughout Wednesday there was a continuous stream of visitors to the house of the late M. Thiers, where they subscribed their names—to the number of some thousands—in six large registers prepared to receive their signatures, amongst which appeared those of some of the most illustrious men of France, as well as those of her humblest citizens. All the French papers were occupied on Wednesday with the subject of the death of M. Thiers, to the exclusion of almost every other public topic; and the great majority admit the grievous loss which France has sustained by the demise of the ex-President.

A portrait of M. Thiers, accompanied by a memoir of the illustrious deceased, is given in the present Number.

General Noyes, who succeeds Mr. Washburne as the United States Minister to France, on being officially received by Marshal MacMahon, stated that his compatriots remembered with gratitude the assistance rendered by France to their ancestors when fighting for national independence, and remarked that a hundred years had passed away without the friendship then inaugurated meeting with any interruption. Marshal MacMahon, in reply, said he was sensible of the recollections called up, and gave the assurance that he would be always found ready to assist in maintaining and strengthening the ancient friendship which unites France with the United States. Mr. Washburne had a farewell audience of the Marshal on the same day.

M. Gambetta appeared before the Juge d'Instruction yesterday week and took upon himself the entire responsibility of his speech at Lille and of its publication in the newspaper, while at the same time he denied that it contained any passage upon which a criminal prosecution could be based.

It is confirmed that the elections will take place on Oct. 14. A representation has been given at the Italian Theatre, Paris, for the benefit of the Russian wounded in the Eastern war. The idea originated with a number of Paris actresses. The performance passed off with great success, and the receipts are said to have been about 16,000fr.

A new Jewish synagogue was consecrated in the Rue Buffault on Monday. There was a large number of people present at the solemn ceremony, including M. Grémieux, Senator, and Barons Alphonse and Gustave de Rothschild.

SWEDEN.

King Oscar and the Crown Prince of Sweden arrived at Upsala on Tuesday. A number of students at the University who had taken their stand before the station greeted his Majesty with a song. The King spoke a few words of thanks. Half an hour later another express-train from Stockholm brought the invited guests, amounting to nearly 200.

An International Astronomic Congress was held in Stockholm last week, in the Royal Swedish Academy for Science.

AMERICA.

Advices from Utah state that the Government of the Mormon Church has passed into the hands of twelve elders called Apostles, and that the President will probably not be appointed for some time. A portrait of Brigham Young, and an engraving of his residence in Utah, appeared in our Number for Nov. 16, 1861.

Hales's piano manufactory in New York has been destroyed by fire. Three bodies have been found amongst the ruins, and many persons were injured by jumping from windows.—A great fire, supposed to be the work of an incendiary, has taken place also in the town of Paris, Texas. Many persons are reported to have perished.

In Tuesday's rifle practice at Creedmoor, the American team made 1641 points, against 1584 scored by the British.

CANADA.

In an international rifle-match, held at Toronto, a New York team of six men beat six Canadians by 1082 points to 1061.

THE CAPE COLONIES.

On the 8th ult. the Cape Parliament was prorogued by Sir Bartle Frere. In his speech he referred to the annexation of the Transvaal as an important event, tending to ensure peace, security, and prosperity not only to the people of the country, but to South Africa generally. Sir Bartle Frere was about to start on a tour of inspection of the eastern provinces and the frontier.

INDIA.

A telegram from the Viceroy of India, dated Madras, Aug. 30, states that while the famine prospects are nowhere improved in Southern India, they are distinctly worse in Madras, Salem, Coimbatore, and Nellore. The Deccan prospects are, on the whole, better. In the Allahabad and Benares divisions and in the Punjab the condition of the crops is said to be critical. Employment is being given on public works to 919,771 persons, and gratuitous relief to 1,326,971.

The Times' correspondent at Calcutta, telegraphing on the 2nd inst., says that there is little change in the aspect of the famine districts. The Viceroy visited the Madras relief camps on Thursday, and goes to Bangalore next Wednesday. The Supreme Government (the correspondent says) deem it prudent not to invite public subscriptions until the Viceroy, in consultation with the Madras and Bombay Governments, fixes the organisation by which the sums collected are to be distributed and the special objects to which they are to be devoted. Some channel must be agreed upon beforehand by which the charity may be wisely distributed without demoralising the people or interfering with the policy of the Government. Two methods are suggested by the Government as possibly affording useful employment for charity—namely, the care and support of orphans and the support of relief camps in large towns where a sufficiently strong volunteer organisation is possible; but the Government deems it the wisest course to wait till these and other methods have been fully discussed and settled. In consequence of this expression of opinion, no steps have been taken to raise subscriptions in Bengal or Bombay.

The Pall Mall Gazette received a special telegram from Madras, dated Wednesday evening. The result of the Viceroy's visit is briefly as follows:—The Duke of Buckingham and the Viceroy are agreed upon all points. The whole famine operations will now be placed, as in Bombay, under the Public Works Department. General Kennedy, the Bombay secretary, is appointed personal assistant to the Duke, who, under section 28 of the Indian Councils Act, takes the famine portfolio temporarily. All famine correspondence will henceforth go direct to the Duke through the special famine secretary and General Kennedy, and not through the intermediate Board of Revenue. General Kennedy has the full confidence of the Supreme Government, and acts as its representative at Madras. While the Supreme Government withdraws the control in details from the Board of Revenue, the Board will travel and inspect. Sixty engineer officers and one hundred young Staff Corps officers have been appointed to Madras for famine operations. All here agree in the expediency of the above action. It will gather the reins into fewer hands and infuse greater promptitude and unity of action. The principles laid down by the Viceroy are the same as those given to Sir Richard Temple last January, and so successfully adopted by the Bombay authorities, but not accepted here till now.

The India Office has received the following telegram from the Viceroy, dated Madras, Wednesday:—"Season telegram as follows: Madras, one to one and a half inches of rain in Bellary, Cuddapah, Kurnool; much benefit. Good rain in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Kistna. Thunderstorm and one inch rain in Madras on 4th; only half an inch elsewhere, save occasional heavy showers. Crops improved by rain, except South Arcot, Coimbatore, Salem, Madras. Prices dearer. On works, 901,227; on gratuitous, 1,430,875. Grain importations large. Railway transport improving. Bombay, showers throughout the week everywhere; four inches of rain all over Guzerat; continuous heavy rain all Koncan districts; good rain throughout Khandish, Nasik, Sattara, Belgaum and greater part of Poonah and Sholapur. Partial rain in Dharwar; prospects much improved; prices not yet cheaper. Numbers on works, 278,731; on gratuitous, 125,960. Mysore, bad week; occasional light showers; good rain in Bangalore in night of Sept. 2, gauging one inch and a half. Dry crop, prospects worse in all districts. Gratuitous numbers, 213,000; works number, 49,000. Hyderabad, three days' good rain, over four inches; much benefit; good rain in Berar, Rajpootana; heavy rain in Aboo and south-west States; good rain in Jeypore, heavy showers in Ajmere, Meywar, and east States. Lyaal telegraphs:—General prospect very materially improved; more rain needed in Ulwar, Meywar, Central India. Good rain in Rutlam, Indore, and all Malwa; two inches rain in Neemuch, Gwalior, Bundelkund. Too late to save much autumn crop in Gwalior; still prospects everywhere improved. North-Western Provinces, moderate rain in Allahabad, Benares divisions, four inches in Jhansee division, half an inch in Agra; good rain, one day, in Meerut and Bareilly; rest slight partial showers. Autumn crop lost in many parts. Punjab, dry hot weather up to 2nd, then heavy universal rain over province, gauging 9½ inches at Loodhiana, too late to save autumn crops in parts. Lieutenant-Governor telegraphs—prospects immensely improved, spring crop sowings secured over the important grain-producing districts. Bengal, Central Provinces, Burmah, Assam, seasonable weather, good prospects.

AUSTRALIA.

The Agent-General for South Australia, Sir Arthur Blyth, K.C.M.G., has received the following telegram from the Government at Adelaide, dated Sept. 1:—"The harvest prospects continue good, and seasonable rains have fallen. The Governments of the Australasian Colonies have jointly engaged a steamer to run between Banjoewangie and Port Darwin if the telegraph cable should at any time break. In view of the increase and increasing trade and population, the Government of South Australia are urging the other Australasian Governments to secure a fortnightly mail by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's route, to be delivered within thirty-six days."

An International Law Congress has been held at Antwerp during the past week.

From information received at Liverpool from the Arctic Ocean, it appears that this season's whaling promises to be in every way a success.

The Geographical Magazine for September states that the project for dispatching an English expedition to Lhasa, the sacred capital of Tibet, has now definitely fallen through.

The name of the Hon. Alfred Henry Thesiger, Q.C., has been added to the Royal Commission recently appointed to inquire into the working and effect of the law and treaties relating to the extradition of persons accused of crime.

The Therapia correspondent of the Times writes:—"M. Menelas Negropontes asks me to contradict emphatically the statement made by a London paper that he has published a letter written to him by Mr. Gladstone. I can confidently state that such a letter has not been published here."

The Krishna lighthouse, which marked a dangerous shoal near the entrance to the Rangoon river, has been destroyed. The lighthouse was an iron structure, built on piles. It has entirely disappeared. The cause of the disaster is unknown, but the impression is that a vessel has fouled the structure.

The Russian Government is fitting out five sailing-vessels at Tromsø for the purpose of proceeding to Nova Zembla with Samoide families to establish a colony there. This measure has been undertaken in consequence of the marked diminution of the Russian fisheries off that island, owing, it is alleged, to the advantages enjoyed by the Norwegians, whose ports are open three months earlier than those of Russia.

Particulars of the death of Yakoob Khan, the ruler of Kashgar, have reached India through Cashmere. The Ameer was assassinated by Hakim Khan Torah, son of Buzurg Khan, the former ruler of Yarkand, whom Yakoob deposed, and who died shortly after. Yakoob's eldest son was also slain. His second son is now at Kashgar. It is also stated that Hakim Torah has been recognised by the troops and the people as Ameer, but it is hardly likely that Yakoob's surviving son will quietly acquiesce. Probably a furious civil war will break out, which will go far to lighten the task of the invading Chinese army.

A water highway from St. Paul, Minnesota, to New Orleans, a distance of 2000 miles, has been opened, the last obstruction to navigation—the Des Moines Rapids—having been overcome by the building of a Government canal, now nearly completed. The canal is seven and six tenths miles long, 300 ft. wide in embankment, and 250 ft. wide in excavation. The water in the canal will be from five to eight feet deep, which is sufficient to float the steam-boats of the Upper Mississippi. The two lift-locks and one guard-lock, which are built of cut stone masonry, consumed most of the money expended on the work.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

To linger over the returns of the Warwick and Richmond meetings would indeed be "stale, flat, and unprofitable," and it is best to turn at once to the future. An unusually interesting Doncaster week will commence on Tuesday next, and the following will be found a tolerably correct list of the starters and jockeys for the St. Leger:—Silvio (F. Archer), Lady Golightly or Sleipnir (Morris), Fontainebleau (Hudson), Plunger (Goater), Strachino (Constable), Brown Prince (Custance), Strathmore (J. Osborne), Hidalgo (Luke), Norwich (T. Chaloner), Kingsclere (Cannon), and Sunray (T. Osborne). Of course the field may be swelled by the appearance of such outsiders as Covenanter, Morier, Shillelagh, and Swing; and Glen Arthur, though he has done no work to speak of for nearly three weeks, might be sent to the post as a sort of forlorn hope; but it is impossible to reckon confidently on more than the eleven that we have enumerated. At the time of writing, Silvio is established in the proud position of first favourite, and anything over 2 to 1 is snapped up about him. His very meritorious Derby victory quite wiped out the stigma attaching to his brace of defeats at Newmarket, and, at Ascot, his superiority to Glen Arthur was more than confirmed. Those connected with him have not the smallest doubt but that he is much superior to Lady Golightly; indeed, it is reported that Lord Falmouth may possibly withdraw the filly from the St. Leger, and reserve her for her other engagements during the week, and this rumour fully accounts for her ladyship's retrogression in the market on Wednesday last. Fontainebleau has arrived safely at Doncaster, but we have not yet heard how he acquitted himself in his first gallop on the town moor. His two performances this season possess the highest merit. In the French Two Thousand he cantered home six lengths before Verneuil; and then, when dead amiss from influenza, he ran the great Jongleur to half a length, St. Christophe, the subsequent winner of the Grand Prix, being a tad third. Fontainebleau, who, by-the-way, is by Dollar—Finlande, and is therefore an own brother to St. Cyr, is now in the best of health again; he has undergone a thorough preparation, and is believed to be very much superior to any horse they have had in France since the days of Gladiateur. Plunger, who was a mere shadow when he ran in the Derby, is once more fit and well; but he goes unsteadily in the market, and it is never wise to rely upon a patched-up animal for a great race. We may pass over Brown Prince, who has been beaten in his trial, and does not seem to have made any improvement since the spring; but Strathmore will run far better than his York performance indicated, though it is almost impossible to fancy that he can do more than finish about fourth. The remainder are mere handicap horses; and now that Chamant is scratched, it having been found quite impossible to train him, the race reads like a match between the two favourites. Lord Falmouth has never won a St. Leger, and it is needless to say how wonderfully popular his success would be; but we shall go to Doncaster with the somewhat gloomy anticipation of witnessing a decisive French triumph.

The feast of St. Partridge began last Saturday, though there is still so much corn standing that sport was by no means general, and a good many enthusiasts were reluctantly compelled to defer a commencement for a week or ten days. The accounts that have been received, however, are wonderfully promising, as the coveys seem unusually large and the birds strong and healthy. In Kent, Surrey, Cambridge, Berks, and Hants the sport generally has been splendid, and the only places from which we hear complaints are parts of Yorkshire and Derbyshire and the neighbourhood of Bicester.

Rain has greatly spoilt the conclusion of the cricket season, and the last county match of the year has resulted in a draw, owing to the curtailment of the time of play from this cause. At the end of last week Gloucestershire, which has taken a stronger lead than ever this season, beat Surrey by ten wickets. The heavy state of the ground was all against long scores; however, Messrs. A. P. Lucas (not out, 36) and W. Lindsay (41) made their mark, as did Messrs. W. R. Gilbert (15) and F. Townsend (53) on the other side, while Mr. W. G. Grace and Midwinter once more bowled with deadly effect. Yorkshire v. Notts has ended in a draw, greatly in favour of the "big county." The only noticeable individual score was that of R. Daft (53); but, as Yorkshire only required 60 runs to win, and had nine wickets to go down, the Notts captain's efforts would scarcely have averted defeat had there been time to play the game out.

At the regatta of the Royal Dart Yacht Club yesterday week the principal race was for the Royal Dart Challenge Cup, which was held by the Raven yawl. The Jullianar won the cup and the yawl prize; the Corinne taking the schooner prize, and the Neva (which beat the Vol-au-Vent by time allowance) the cutter prize. A race for cutters only, not exceeding 40 tons, was won by the Bloodhound. For the race for the Kingswear Cup, with the gold medal of the club to the second yacht of a different rig from the winner, only the Enriquita and the Pixie competed, and they finished in the order named.

ARCHERY.

The old-established Bockingfold Archery Society, which numbers amongst its members several of the leading families of Kent, has brought its season to a close. At the first match, which took place at Addington Park, the seat of Mr. J. Wingfield Stratford, the ladies' prize for the 60-yards' shooting was won by Miss Grace Gregory, the gentlemen's prize for 80 yards by Major Lempiere, the ladies' for 50 yards by Miss Hall, and the gentlemen's 60-yards' by the Rev. Mr. Williams. Miss Timms won the prize for the ladies' best gold, and Mr. D. Moffatt (the hon. secretary) the gentlemen's ditto. The second contest came off at Vintner's Park, Maidstone, the seat of Mr. James Whatman; and on this occasion the gentlemen's 80-yards' prize fell to the Rev. Mr. Williams, the ladies' 60-yards' to Miss Grace Gregory, the gentlemen's 60-yards' to Mr. D. Moffatt, and the ladies' 50-yards' to Miss Timms. The gentlemen's prize for the best gold was won by Major Lempiere, and the ladies' ditto by Miss Gregory. At the final meeting, held last week at Preston Hall, the seat of Mr. H. A. Brassey, M.P., the gentlemen's 80-yards' prize was carried off by the Rev. J. H. Timms, the ladies' 60-yards' by Miss Grace Gregory, the gentlemen's 60-yards' by the Rev. Mr. Williams, and the ladies' 50-yards' by Miss Gregory. The Rev. Mr. Parrington made the best gold in the gentlemen's competition, and Miss Best the best in the ladies' ditto. Miss Grace Gregory and Mr. Williams received the annual prizes as the best aggregate scorers.

The Highclere Park archers held their annual prize meeting on Thursday week on the excellent ground near Highclere Castle, which Lord Carnarvon places at the disposal of the club. Since the last meeting a commodious pavilion has been erected. The competition resulted as follows:—Ladies: Highest score at all the meetings, Mrs. Waters. First prize, highest score, Mrs. Chichester; second prize, Miss Fowler; third prize, Miss A. Bulkeley; fourth, best gold, Miss Annie Fowler; fifth, consolation prize, Miss Davis; sixth, strangers' highest score, Miss Benwell; seventh for ninth score, Miss Strong; eighth, most blues, Miss Brummers; tenth, most blacks and whites, Miss Valpy; eleventh, most reds, Mrs. Waters. Gentlemen's prizes: Highest aggregate score, Commander Hodgson; first prize for highest score, Commander Hodgson; second prize, Mr. George Fryer; third, the Rev. E. T. Waters; fourth, for best gold, Mr. Gerard Sloper; fifth, for lowest score but one, Mr. A. B. Heath; sixth, for most blacks, Mr. F. Fowler. Eleven of the prizes were given by the club, and the remainder by the secretary (Commander Hodgson), Mr. F. G. Saunders, Miss Davis, Mr. Fryer, Mr. Bulkeley, and Mr. E. Gibson. Mrs. A. B. Heath, one of the founders of the club, presented the prizes.

Mr. R. N. Philipps, the Recorder of Pontefract, died on Thursday morning at Sheffield.

Mr. David Ward, a local manufacturer, was installed Master Cutler at Sheffield on Thursday with the customary ceremony.

The Home Secretary has issued an order under the new Winter Assize Acts, directing a winter assize for the trial of prisoners to be held in November next at Leeds, for the whole of the county of York.

On a vacancy being recently advertised for the office of gate porter at one of the London charities, written applications were received from upwards of 850 candidates, the wages offered being 28s. a week.

The weaving branch of the Glasgow Technical College was opened on Monday by the Lord Provost, in presence of a number of gentlemen connected with the manufacture of textile fabrics in the city. About a dozen looms—several of them the gift of those interested in the welfare of the institution—have already been fitted up.

The fourth annual exhibition of modern pictures at Brighton was opened on Thursday in the Royal Pavilion Picture Gallery. Between 800 and 900 are hung, oil paintings and water-colour drawings being about equally represented. Amongst the exhibitors are E. W. Cooke, R.A., P. R. Morris, A.R.A., Neil, A.R.A., J. A. Houston, R.S.A., and several local artists.

The Scarborough hunters were on Wednesday sold at the residence of the late Mr. James Hall, near Beverley. The stud consisted of forty hunters, eight hacks, two carriage horses, and two phaeton mares. The highest price realised was 700 guineas, for Leotard.—The Guildford coach having been taken off the road for the season, the horses are announced to be sold at Tattersall's next Monday. They are mostly young hunters of good blood.

A package was on Tuesday discovered by the officials in the Edinburgh Post office containing nearly a score of Colorado beetles. The discovery was made in consequence of one of the dreaded insects having escaped from the package, which was consigned from America. The beetles were in a lively condition when exposed to view. The order by the Privy Council for the destruction of the insects was put into force. On Wednesday the Dublin Post Office officials found six live Colorado beetles in a packet which had come by the mail from Canada. The insects were killed in spirits of wine, and the packet was then forwarded to its destination.

The report of the Select Committee of the House of Lords appointed to inquire into the general question of the prevention of floods has been issued. The Committee recommend that tributary streams be entrusted to district committees, except near the junction with the principal stream, where they should be under the jurisdiction of a representative body of conservators of the main channel. The rates for works should, in the opinion of the Committee, be distributed over the whole area of a watershed, including towns and houses, on the basis of rateable value, lands and houses, however, below the flood-level being rated at a higher amount than those above it.

The Pall Mall Gazette correspondent at Plymouth states that the annual sale of stock from the Dartmoor prisons farm having just taken place, it has now been ascertained that, deducting the cost of convict labour, the establishment has gained nearly £1000 as the result of last year's agricultural operations. For some years the convict farm was unremunerative, but now 1000 acres on Dartmoor have been reclaimed and profits are made. Black-poll heifers from Scotland have been introduced, and more extensive operations are contemplated. The convicts employed are men whose sentences are nearly expired, and who, therefore, have less inducement to escape.

MUSIC.

THE TRIENNIAL GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Having last week commented fully on the antecedents of these festivals and the arrangements for that which has just terminated, we have now merely to speak of the performances as far as possible—leaving necessarily some for next week's notice.

The inaugural early service on Tuesday morning included the performance of Croft's Service in A, and Sir F. G. Ouseley's anthem, "O, sing unto God," by the associated choirs of the three cathedral cities (Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester) in which the festivals are held in yearly rotation. Mr. Done presided at the organ. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Gloucester, who took for his text the 9th verse of the 16th chapter of St. Luke, on which he founded an eloquent discourse, with special reference to the festival.

Soon after the close of the service, the doors of the cathedral were reopened and the festival began, shortly before two o'clock, with "Elijah." A special feature in the performance of the oratorio was the admirable singing of Mdlle. Albani in the soprano solo music of the second part. This excellent artist produced a marked impression by her fine rendering of the air, "Hear ye, Israel;" another great effect having followed the delivery of the unaccompanied trio, "Lift thine eyes," in which Mdlle. Albani had the valuable co-operation of Mesdames Sophie Löwe and Patey. The soprano music of the first part of the oratorio was divided between Miss Adela Vernon and Madame Sophie Löwe. Madame Patey having sung admirably in the principal contralto music (especially "O rest in the Lord"), as did Mr. Santley in all that of the Prophet, in both parts of the work. Mr. Cummings gave the tenor solos of the first part with his usual refined expression; and Mr. E. Lloyd rendered those of the second part with his well-known excellence. A word of praise is due to Miss Bertha Griffiths for her rendering of the air "Woe unto them," and her co-operation with Miss Vernon in the duet (with chorus), "Zion spreadeth." The chorus singing was very good throughout.

The concert of Tuesday evening in the Shire Hall opened with a selection from Schumann's cantata, "Paradise and the Peri," the vocal solos by Madame Sophie Löwe, Miss Bertha Griffiths, Mr. Cummings, and Mr. Maybrick. This was followed by Mendelssohn's violin concerto, brilliantly played by Mr. Sainton, the first part of the concert having closed with a cleverly written overture by Mr. Montague Smith, which was performed for the first time in England, conducted by the composer. The work was greatly applauded. Beethoven's symphony in C minor opened the second part of the concert, which closed with Wagner's overture to "Tannhäuser," both finely played. The evening's programme also included a miscellaneous selection of vocal music, the singers having been Madame Sophie Löwe, Miss Adela Vernon, Miss Bertha Griffiths, Madame Patey, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Mr. Maybrick.

On Wednesday performances were given in the cathedral both in the morning and in the evening. On the earlier occasion two great works of very opposite styles were comprised in the programme—Bach's sublime "Passion Music" (St. Matthew) and Beethoven's oratorio "Engedi" ("The Mount of Olives"). The programme for the evening comprised the first part of Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," and a selection from Haydn's "Creation."

The "Passion Music" was heard to peculiar advantage amid the solemn surroundings of the cathedral, and its magnificent choral writing and the grand old Lutheran chorales introduced by Bach produced a very profound impression, finely sung as they were. The solo music was very efficiently rendered by Mesdames Sophie Löwe and Patey, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Maybrick, and Mr. Santley.

In Beethoven's oratorio the co-operation of Mdlle. Albani was a special feature, her splendid voice and refined style having told with great effect in the soprano air, "Praise ye Jehovah's goodness;" in the solo (with chorus), "Oh! praise Him;" in the duet (with Mr. Cummings), "I love the Lord;" and the trio (with that gentleman and Mr. Maybrick), "The hour of vengeance cometh." The chorus singing was again of a very superior order.

Of the remaining performances we must speak next week.

Nearly thirty Promenade Concerts have now been given at Covent-Garden Theatre. Last Wednesday was a Mozart night, the programme having included an interesting selection from the works of the great composer.

The new series of opera performances at the Crystal Palace—under the direction of Mr. Henry Corri, and conducted by Mr. Isidore di Solla—began on Tuesday with Mendelssohn's operetta, "Son and Stranger." For Thursday "Lucrezia Borgia" was announced.

The Crystal Palace Saturday afternoon classical concerts will be resumed on the 29th inst.

The new season of the Monday Popular Concerts will begin on Nov. 12.

The Carl Rosa Opera Company have presented several English operas to large audiences at Hull and Middlesbrough during the past fortnight. Mr. Rosa finishes the present week at Sunderland, and visits Newcastle-on-Tyne next week. The musical critics of each town appear to be unanimous in their approval of the care and completeness of these operatic performances. Indeed, their eulogistic notices make us wish that Mr. Rosa could begin his eight weeks' season of English opera in town much earlier than Feb. 11 next, which is the date fixed for the first appearance of the Carl Rosa Company at the Adelphi.

It is the intention of the Board of Trade to appoint inspectors of mercantile training-ships for the districts of the Clyde, Leith, Hull, Harwich, Kingstown, and Liverpool.

At the sale of Mr. Cochrane's Canadian shorthorns one animal, the Fifth Duchess of Hillhurst, realised 4500 guineas, Lord Bective being the purchaser. The Third Duchess of Hillhurst sold for 4100 guineas. The sale resulted in a total of £17,150.

At the concluding meeting of the Institution of Naval Architects at Glasgow on Thursday week Mr. Martell read a paper on "Water Ballast," which was criticised by Mr. Scott Russell and Mr. Reed, M.P. Mr. W. H. White read a paper on "The Course of Study in the Royal Naval College, Greenwich," with the special object of showing that its advantages were not enough appreciated and used by the country. A gold medal for the best paper on "Marine Boilers" was awarded to Mr. James Milton of Lloyds'. The next meeting of the society will take place in Newcastle-on-Tyne.—The members followed up their first meeting in Scotland by joining in an excursion on Friday to Arran, the arrangements for the trip having been made by the Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders in Scotland, at whose invitation the London society have come north at this time. As it happened, the day was one of the finest of the season, and the outing was thoroughly enjoyed by about 150 ladies and gentlemen.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR: GREEK REFUGEES FROM KAVARNA EMBARKING AT BALTSCHIK, ON THE BLACK SEA.

THE LATE M. THIERS.

The Extra Supplement.

"MORNING HYMN AT SEBASTIAN BACH'S."

The patriarch of German sacred and classical art, in the department of musical composition, who died in the year 1750, is remembered with a sentiment of personal veneration by many persons of cultivated taste, and of a serious and reverent mood. Johann Sebastian Bach, the son of a miller at Eisenach in Saxony, stands next to Handel, his countryman and contemporary, in the esteem of learned and critical students of what we may perhaps call "the Music of the Past," if Wagner's is to be recognised as "the Music of the Future." This hypothetical contingency, indeed, seems rather too much like the ironical compliment which Byron once paid to Southey's poetical genius, by assuring him that his poems would be read "when Homer and Virgil are laid on the shelf; but not, my dear Southey, till then." We have no occasion, however, to hazard any opinion at present regarding the merits of Sebastian Bach, as the author of many fine cantatas, chorales, and the "Passion Music" for vocal performance, and of ingenious fugues, graceful sonatas, preludes, and other instrumental pieces. It is more to the purpose, with reference to Herr Rosenthal's picture of an interesting domestic scene, that we should observe Sebastian Bach's eminent virtues as a family man. The worthy Kapellmeister of Weimar, and Director of St. Thomas's School at Leipzig, had the happiness to be the husband of two wives (one after another, of course) and father of eleven sons and nine daughters. Three at least of his sons, Friedmann, Karl Emanuel, and Johann Cristian, became notable musicians in their time; the last-named, Christian Bach, was in England from 1763 to 1782, under the patronage of our Queen Charlotte. We are scarcely prepared to identify these, among the young persons represented around their father, as he sits at the harpsichord, all joining (except the baby that plays with the kitten) in the singing of their "Morning Hymn." But it is a very pleasant family party; and we trust that it will remind not a few of our readers that part-singing, especially of sacred music on Sunday evenings, is a delightful kind of social amusement for the well-regulated English household. Its practice requires a less amount of technical instruction than is commonly supposed; and every young lady of proper education should know how to train and direct the voices of her brothers and sisters, as well as to supply the pianoforte accompaniment, for a simple chant or anthem. The picture has been engraved by permission of the Berlin Photographic Company.

THE LATE M. THIERS.

The sudden death, on Monday evening last, of this eminent French statesman and historian, who had seemed in full health and activity on the morning of that day, has rather taken the world by surprise. But he was eighty years of age last April, and had accomplished an amount of work, and attained a degree of reputation, quite enough for any man's lifetime. His removal at the present moment leaves an apparent blank in the circle of contemporary French politicians, the more conspicuous because he had seemed to stand midway between the Reactionary and the Democratic parties. Their mutual antagonism, which has been intensified by the recent arbitrary demeanour of Marshal MacMahon and the Duc de Broglie, in the conduct of the Presidential Government since the abrupt dismissal of M. Jules Simon, now threatens to assume an increased bitterness through the official prosecution of M. Gambetta. It was hoped that the influence of M. Thiers, if not the alternative of his re-election to the Presidency, might yet avert the dangers that have lately seemed to menace the Republican Constitution. We trust that all such dangers may still be warded off or wisely avoided by a spirit of judicious compromise on both sides. M. Thiers was perhaps too old, if his life had been further prolonged, ever to have been a future candidate for the chief administrative power. But his counsels and admonitions had not lost their force, and he will be seriously missed in the parliamentary ranks of Moderate or Conservative Republicans in the impending crisis of political affairs.

Louis Adolphe Thiers was son of a working locksmith at Marseilles, where he was born on April 16, 1797. As a boy he displayed great intelligence, making rapid progress at school, where he studied geometry with a view to the military profession; but, his friends afterwards determining that he should learn the law, he became a pupil of M. Arnaud at Aix. When he became a member of the French Bar, he met with no success, and determined to go to Paris, and enter the ranks of literature. Once in the capital, he became acquainted with the leading men of letters there, and distinguished himself as a political contributor to the Constitutionnel. The greater part of his time, however, for nine years, was devoted to his "History of the French Revolution," the first volume of which appeared in 1823, and the last in 1832. After the Revolution of July, 1830, he held various minor official posts, and under Laffitte's Administration became Under-Secretary of State. He was elected Deputy for Aix, and earned a reputation for financial ability, oratorical power, and capacity for hard work. Two years after the Revolution we find him Minister of the Interior; he also held for some time the portfolios of Commerce and Public Works. Every office seemed one in which he found an opportunity of gaining distinction; and in 1836 he became President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs—an office he again held in March, 1840. During this Ministry he was held responsible for the serious aspect which the Syrian question assumed, France being nearly involved in war with England through his policy. He was therefore called upon by the King to retire from official life. M. Thiers accordingly disappeared for a time from the political world, but used the leisure of his retirement by commencing his "History of the Consulate and Empire." It was his chief literary work, comprising twenty volumes, the first of which appeared in 1845, and the last in 1862. During this time, it is scarcely necessary to say, there had been some exciting episodes in the history of France. In 1848 the French Revolution shook France to its base. When the Republic was proclaimed Thiers was to be found in the uniform and bearing the musket of a National Guard; he presently figured as a member of the Constituent and of the National Assembly. When Louis Napoleon was proclaimed President, M. Thiers declined to take office. He was banished during the coup d'état of December, 1851, when he went to Switzerland, and remained there for some time, studying painting and the fine arts. In 1863 he again interested himself in the political affairs of his own country. He was elected Deputy for the department of the Seine by the Liberal Opposition. Taking advantage of every opportunity that presented itself for attacking the administration of the finances, the municipal control of Paris by Baron Haussmann, and the foreign policy of the Emperor, M. Thiers was soon a power in himself. After 1866 he sarcastically taunted the Government with the loss of its prestige. When, however, war was inevitable in 1870 he earnestly protested against it, and warned the Government that it was rushing headlong to destruction. But his warning came too late. War was proclaimed, and France soon met with reverses which brought M. Thiers to the front in a most remarkable manner. He delivered a speech in the Corps Législatif in which he called upon Paris to offer an invincible resistance to the enemy. He was appointed a member of the Paris Defence Committee, but declined to share the responsibilities of the Government of the National Defence on the downfall of the Empire. Still, he continued to do what he could for his unhappy country, and visited the Courts of England, Russia, Austria, and Italy to implore aid for France. In this mission, however, he was unsuccessful, and in October, 1870, he returned to Tours, whence he proceeded to the headquarters of the King of Prussia at Versailles to open negotiations for peace, in accordance with the suggestion of the four neutral Powers. He had several interviews with Count Bismarck in order to obtain an armistice of twenty-five days, so as to enable elections to be held throughout the country and a National Government to be thus regularly established. But the German Chancellor would not allow Paris to be revictualled during the interval, and these negotiations also fell through. M. Thiers then returned to Tours and placed his services at the disposal of the Delegate Government. After the capitulation of Paris, the country recognised his services in trying to restore peace by electing him to the National Assembly by the voice of one third of the nation; and he was in February, 1871, elected the head of the Provisional Government, with the privilege of taking part in the deliberations of the Assembly whenever he pleased. The value of this privilege was especially observable when the Government held its sittings at Bordeaux, as M. Thiers was then able to take part in the debates. Soon after his election as chief of the executive power he introduced the preliminaries of the Treaty of Peace to the Assembly, and, after an animated debate of two days' duration, they were voted by 546 ayes against 107 noes. By this treaty France renounced, in favour of the German Empire, the fifth part of Lorraine, including Metz and Thionville, and Alsace without Belfort; whilst she had to pay to Germany five milliards of francs, in instalments ranging over three years. It was stipulated that, as soon as the treaty was ratified, the German troops should begin to evacuate the interior of Paris and some departments of the western region, other departments to be rendered free from the presence of the German soldiers as the money was gradually paid. On March 18, 1871, however, soon after the National Assembly moved to Versailles, Paris fell into the hands of the Communists, one of whose acts was to destroy M. Thiers's house. It was not until May 22 that Marshal MacMahon's army recovered possession of the capital. When order had been in some degree restored, the supplementary elections were held, and in July M. Thiers, by a large majority of the Assembly, was voted a prolongation of his office, and his designation was changed from "Chief of the Executive Power" to that of "President of the French Republic." The energetic President devoted all his energies to raising the money to pay the war indemnity, and to the reorganisation of the French army. But in consequence of a hostile vote in the Assembly on May 24, 1873, he resigned, and was succeeded by Marshal MacMahon, who proceeded to form a Conservative Administration, and who has since remained President of the Republic. M. Thiers resumed his place as a member of the National Assembly, and intended to have been a candidate at the forthcoming elections. His intellect was as clear as ever to the last moment of his busy career. He had been out walking on the day of his death, which took place at St. Germain; its cause was a fit of apoplexy. The body has been removed to his late residence in the Place St. George, Rue Notre Dame de Lorette, at Paris. There is to be a state funeral at the Invalides, by order of the President of the French Government; but the final interment will be in the cemetery of Père-la-Chaise.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The road between Buckingham-gate and Storey's-gate will be closed on the 10th for a few days for repairs.

The Camberwell Vestry is going to plant the Old Kent-road, Camberwell-road, Camberwell New-road, and Peckham-road with trees, which are to be five-and-thirty yards apart.

The Caxton Exhibition closed at six o'clock last Saturday evening, notwithstanding the efforts made by some few of the committee to arrange that it should be kept open during September.

The Hospital Saturday collections in London were made last Saturday, when a hundred and fifty ladies sat in the streets in various parts of the metropolis with collecting-boxes to receive subscriptions. At the close of the day the boxes were taken to Messrs. Hoares' bank, where the contents were counted.

The third battalion of the Grenadier Guards left the Tower of London on Tuesday morning, and proceeded by special Great Western train to Windsor, to furnish the Castle guard. At the same time the first battalion of the same regiment left Windsor for the Tower, which they will garrison for the next few months.

New editions have just been issued of two most useful little works—the Royal Guide to the London Charities, edited by Herbert Fry, and published by Hardwicke and Bogue; and Low's Handbook to the Charities of London, edited by Charles Mackeson, and published by Sampson Low and Co. Having the same subjects to handle, their modes of treatment differ somewhat; but which is the better plan it would be difficult to decide.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism for the fourth week of August shows that the number of paupers was 77,029, of whom 36,386 were in workhouses and 40,643 received outdoor relief. Compared with the corresponding weeks of 1876, 1875, and 1874, these figures show a decline of 159,5597, and 14,342 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 733, of whom 455 were men, 219 women, and 59 children.

A meeting of the volunteer fire brigades of the north of London, comprising Alexandra Palace, Barnet, Hendon, Tottenham, Wood-green, Hornsey, Kilburn, Highgate, Willesden, and Tufnell Park, was recently held at the Tufnell Park Hotel, Holloway, to consider the propriety of forming a committee to represent the brigades in an amalgamated form. Captain Shean, of the Tufnell Park Fire Brigade, presided, and several gentlemen were elected to form the committee.

Last Saturday evening the second firework competition at the Alexandra Palace took place between Ruggieri, pyrotechnist to the late Emperor Napoleon III. and to the present French Government, and Pain of London. The contest began about 8.45, the competitors firing alternately from each end of the south terrace. In most matters there was not much to choose between them; but Ruggieri's shells and colours were perhaps the better, while Pain excelled in floating stars and the finale.

In the case against the three detectives and Mr. Froggatt, the solicitor, at Bow-street, yesterday week, the cross-examination of Benson was concluded, and the evidence of two minor partners in the De Goncourt fraud, Charles Bale and Frederick Kurr, was taken. The convict Murray was the last witness for the day, and he gave a detailed account of his interviews with Mr. Froggatt, and of the efforts made by the latter to get the Clydesdale Bank notes changed for Benson and Kurr. Last Saturday the examination of the convict Murray was resumed and concluded. Henry Stenning, who is at present undergoing sentence of twelve months' imprisonment for having obstructed a constable in arresting Kurr, for having attempted to suborn a witness to swear falsely on a charge of fraud, and for having in his possession a plan for securing the release of Kurr, was also examined. The further hearing of the case was adjourned till Thursday last, when Stenning was cross-examined by Mr. Lewis. Mr. George Flintoff, civil engineer, Northumberland-street, of whom offices had been rented by Kurr and Co., and other witnesses, having given evidence, the Court adjourned. The public interest in the case continues, the court and its approaches being as crowded as on the first days of the hearing.

The prize-meeting of N (Tower Ward) company of the London Rifle Brigade was held last week at the range at Rainham. The company Challenge Cup, and £7 (Tower Ward prize), was won by Sergeant P. Preston; Company Challenge Vase, and £6 (given by Captain Miller), by Sergeant Cornell; £5 5s. (given by Mr. Alderman Finnis), by Private G. E. Jenkinson; £5 5s. (given by Alderman Sir Charles Whetham), by Private Gunyon; £4 (Tower Ward prize), by Private Desmond; £3 (given by Lieutenant Whetham), by Lieutenant Titford; £2 (Tower Ward prize), by Colour-Sergeant Preston; £1 10s. (given by the members of the company), by Private W. H. Rankin; £1 (Tower Ward prize), by Sergeant Clarke. Of the recruits' prizes, £4 (given by the non-commissioned officers), was won by Private Maude; £3 (given by Lieutenant Titford), by Private Bethell; £2 10s. (Tower Ward prize), by Private Ruffe; £2 (Tower Ward prize), by Private Blackett; a Cup, value £2 (given by William Spiller, Esq.), by Private Saward; £1 10s. (given by the members of the company), by Private Dray; £1 (Tower Ward prize), by Private Bury; £1 (Tower Ward prize), by Private Edmonds. Consolation prize, a Case of Champagne (given by J. N. Bishop, Esq.), was won by Private Fox.

There were 2469 births and 1238 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 169, whereas the deaths were 215 below, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths from smallpox, which had been 21 and 11 in the two previous weeks, rose again to 20 last week. The number of smallpox patients in the Metropolitan Asylum Hospitals, which in the fourteen preceding weeks had steadily declined from 964 to 279, further decreased to 246 on Saturday last. The Highgate Smallpox Hospital contained 26 patients on Saturday last, against 31 on the previous Saturday. The deaths referred to diarrhoea, which had been 194 and 158 in the two previous weeks, were 154 last week, and 55 below the corrected average weekly number. There were 17 deaths from measles, 26 from scarlet fever, 5 from diphtheria, 19 from whooping-cough, and 18 from different forms of fever. Thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 259 deaths were referred, against 346 and 260 in the two preceding weeks. These deaths were 137 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. In Greater London 2993 births, and 1511 deaths were registered, equal to annual rates of 35.8 and 18.1 per 1000 of the population. The mean temperature was 59.5 deg., or 0.6 deg. below the average. The duration of registered sunshine in the week was 37.8 hours out of the 96 hours that the sun was above the horizon.

The Metropolitan Board of Works has decided upon the following alterations in the names of streets:—Park-street, Victoria Park, will be re-named Freemont-street, E. Rosoman-street and Upper Rosoman-street, Clerkenwell, will be incorporated under the former name, and the houses re-numbered. The subsidiary names in Hampton-street, Newington, will be abolished, and the houses re-numbered. Westmorland-place, Southampton-street, Clerkenwell, will be re-named Sidge-moore-place, and the houses re-numbered. Corporation-lane, Clerkenwell, will be incorporated with Corporation-row, E.C., under the latter name, the subsidiary names abolished, and the houses re-numbered. The houses in Denmark-street, St. Giles's, will be re-numbered with consecutive numbers. Compton-mews, Canonbury, will be called Compton-avenue, N. The Board will adhere to their idea of May 18 last, incorporating Hanover-street, Long-acre, with Endell-court, under the latter name. Little King-street, King-street, and Upper King-street, Newington, will be incorporated under the name of Kinglake-street, S.E. The subsidiary names in Canterbury-road, Camberwell, will be abolished, and the houses re-numbered. The names of Neva-street, S.W., and of Surtees-street, S.W., have been sanctioned for new streets to lead out of Trafalgar-square, King's-road, Chelsea, on condition that no barriers be at any time erected or other obstruction caused to the free use by the public of the said streets. Great Warner-street and Little Warner-street, Clerkenwell, will be incorporated under the name of Warner-street, and the houses re-numbered. The irregularly numbered houses in Kimberley-road, Nunhead-green, will be re-numbered and the subsidiary names abolished.

The opening soirée of the Artisan's Institute, Upper St. Martin's-lane, was held last Saturday evening. Major-General Marriott presided, and spoke highly of the institute and of its prospects of usefulness. He then distributed the South Kensington prizes and the institute's certificates of merit. The Rev. H. Solly described the work before the institute during the fourth session, and stated that the trustees had resolved in renewing the lease of the premises for three years and on making sundry alterations for the improvement of the place. He urged the students and members to do their part in supporting the trustees and the institute, not only by diligent study but by bringing others to share in the advantages offered there. Mr. Alsager H. Hill also addressed the meeting, and spoke of the labour troubles in America, which such institutions would do much to avert in this country. The introductory lecture of a series announced to be given during the autumn for the benefit of the members of this institute was given on Tuesday evening at the rooms in Castle-street, St. Martin's-lane, by Mr. R. Ballo Brett, B.A., the subject being the "History of the Nineteenth Century." The lecturer sketched the salient features of the political and social history of the period, and urged upon his hearers the value of an intimate acquaintance with the events of the present century in assisting them to frame a correct judgment on contemporary statesmanship, and to discharge properly the political duties of a citizen. The lecture was followed on Thursday by an address on the "Principles of Government," by Mr. J. C. Tarver, B.A.; and the syllabus comprises, besides the technical class-teaching, which recommenced last Monday, courses of lectures "On Political Economy," and questions connected with capital and labour, and a fourth course "On English Political and Social History," by the Rev. H. Solly.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Withdrawn. This life is only a puppet-show, a fantoccini-stage in which the dancing dolls dangle from hidden wires or are dandled by unseen hands. Now and then we see a noticeable marionette, with a face and form somewhat out of the common, and who jigs more nimbly than his fellows. On him the caricaturists speedily pounce, and draw him in every attitude and gesture. For how many years did "H. B.," John Leech, Kenny Meadows, Richard Doyle, John Tenniel, make merry with the leonine mane, the portentous nose, the mobile mouth, the vast black stock, the unvarying plaid pantaloons of Lord Brougham? But the clock struck "eighty-seven," and the puppet was withdrawn. Then all the gibes and jeers of the lampooners and the comic draughtsmen faded away in reverent admiration for the most illustrious legist, orator, and philanthropist of his age.

The clock struck "eighty" at the Pavillon Henri Quatre, St. Germain-en-Laye on Monday afternoon last; and one of the most famous figures this century has seen has been withdrawn. The humorous artists will not caricature Louis Adolphe Thiers any more. Grandville, Bertall, Daumier, Cham, Gill, and the rest, had been parodying the great statesman's face and form for ever so many years. I have seen caricatures of M. Thiers dated so far back as 1828. He made his first appearance in our own Punch about 1843-4. All the world over the diminutive figure, the "Brutus" tuft of hair, the spectacles, the "Polichinelle" profile were known. He was caricatured to the day of his death; but now all France is sorrowing for the loss of her most eloquent historian and her ablest and honestest politician.

The late M. Thiers was, it must be candidly admitted, no great friend to this country; and more than once during his tenure of office he was within an ace of persuading Louis Philippe to go to war with us. Years softened down his Anglo-phobia; but in 1840 he was very angry indeed with "perfidious Albion." I have always fancied that his animosity to John Bull was originally due to the circumstance that in 1815, when he was a lad of eighteen, his native city, Marseilles, was garrisoned by British troops, in command of which was Major (afterwards Lieutenant-General) Sir Hudson Lowe. It was from Marseilles that Sir Hudson was summoned to assume the governorship of St. Helena and the custody of Napoleon. I wonder whether Thiers ever saw the stern English officer of whom he was afterwards to write so exhaustively in the "History of the Consulate and the Empire." The well-abused Sir Hudson seems to have been popular enough during his brief rule at Marseilles, for, on his going away, the municipality voted him a piece of plate. Mr. Forsyth, in his "Captivity of Napoleon," says that the testimonial was a silver urn; but in the newspapers of 1815 I read that it was a "golden rose."

The Daily News, writing on the subject of the Postmaster-General's "cut-it-short" circular, on which I touched last week, reminds its readers that what may be termed "address reform" was suggested many years ago by Albert Smith and by the genial French littérateur, Alphonse Karr. Albert drew public attention to the absurdity of adding "Esquire" to the name of a person abroad to whom we were writing; and he gave an amusing instance of a foreign postmaster detaining a letter addressed to "Albert Smith Esq.," on the ground that his passport showed him to be "Monsieur Smith," and not "Monsieur Esq." Alphonse Karr suggested that, in addressing a letter, the name of the country should first be written; next, the town; next, the street; and, lastly, the name of the person for whom the letter was intended. But, if I remember aright, the recommendations of the lively author of "Les Guêpes" did not end here. He proposed that the number of the house should be placed both before and after it in the address. Thus—198, Strand, 198.

The densest of postmen, he maintained, could not make a mistake in delivering letters if these hints were attended to.

Why should M. Jacques Laffitte, the famous Parisian banker (he was Napoleon's), who was one of the earliest friends and patrons of M. Thiers, be robbed of one of the f's in his name? In all the necrological notices of the illustrious French statesman which I have seen in the London newspapers the incidental allusions to M. Laffitte make him Lafitte. I gave him his two f's in an article which I myself contributed to one journal; but the printers carefully retrenched a letter. It is curious to remark that the blunder is nearly fifty years old. Sir Walter Scott, in his life of Napoleon, cites the codicil to the Emperor's will, in which he speaks of the six millions of francs left, in 1815, in Laffitte's custody; but Sir Walter translates the name with a single f. Turn to the French text of the will, and you will find there are two f's. This, you may think, is a small matter; but how should we like to see the hero of Waterloo spelt "Wellington," the statesman who abolished the Corn Laws "Sir Robert Pel," or "Charles Dickens" set down as the author of "David Coperfield?"

The which question naturally suggests the subject of phonetic orthography, of which, it may not be generally known, there was once a Royal advocate, in the person of Prince Charles Edward Stuart, who always used to write of his father, the Old Pretender, as "King Gems" (see the "Stuart Papers," edited by the late Mr. Glover, her Majesty's Private Librarian). It has been made a matter of complaint that the admirable Caxton Exhibition contained no illustrations of the phonetic printing of Charles Butler, whose "English Grammar" and "Feminine Monarchy" were printed in 1634. Mr. Alexander J. Ellis, the celebrated palæotypist, states that Butler had many predecessors in phonetics—notably Meigret, whose French grammar was published in 1550; and Sir Thomas Smith, John Hart, and William Bullocker, between 1568 and 1580.

The oddest specimen of "reformed" orthography, or, as Southey calls it, "uglygraphy," that I have ever met with is the Commendatory Verses prefixed to Barnabe Riche's "Allarme to England," 1578, quoted in the British Bibliographer. Here is a taste of Master Churchyard's quality:—

If chylid thatt goes to skool dyd any warning tack
At fellows fawtts who fells the rod when they offence do mack,
Himself should skape the skorge, and construe many a lye,
And law'ghe to skorn the whiskein whip that macks the skollars whyn.
But neyther chylid nor man wyl warning tack you se
Tyll tempest comes wyth thunder crak and strykes down statly tree.

One line is remarkable as not containing one word spelled according to the existing code:—

Owr nebers howse after lywde wywes to lock about.

This is (happily) not only the Parliamentary recess but the Long Vacation. The M.P.'s are giving the House, and the lawyers the Courts, the widest of berths; yet, I presume, that there must be a sufficient staff of "cleaners" and charwomen kept up to sweep and scrub and dust the Great Hall of Pleas and its alcantours. If there be any foundation for the curious tradition I am about to notice, one portion of the dusters' duties in Palace-yard must be a sinecure. I read in "Goodman's Fall of Man," p. 69:—"Thus it hath been the complaint of all ages leges esse telas aranearum. . . . But I am not of their mind, for I think that Providence hath so fitly ordained it, as prophesying or prescribing a lesson, that the timber in Westminster Hall should neither admit cobweb nor spider; and Heaven make us thankful for the free course of our justice." Is this a fact? If it be so, I can only hope that similar good luck may attend the roof of the Great Hall of the new Law Courts which Mr. Street is building in the Strand; still, the neighbourhood, it must be admitted, is a desperately cobwebby one, and I have known some terrible spiders' webs clustering round the tin boxes in offices between Clement's Inn and Chancery-lane.

I beg to return my humble and hearty thanks to the correspondents (their name is legion) who have been good enough to enlighten my darkened mind with respect to the "Good Ladies of Llangollen." The communications rained down on me are couched some in angry, some in reproachful, some in scornful, some in mildly compassionate terms; but one anonymous counsellor has been made so virtuously indignant by my wicked ignorance that he has been compelled to send me, to my private residence, a halfpenny post-card with a stern reminder that the story of the Good Ladies is a "universally-known fact constantly referred to and quoted both by poets and by prose-writers." I am very glad to hear it. The Universe is a large place; and it appears that I was the only being in it who didn't know all about the Ladies of Llangollen. Having now been made as wise as the rest of the Universe it would be impertinent in me to impart knowledge to those who know as much about the matter as I do. I hope the Universe is satisfied; still, I must own that the receipt of the post-card did make me, as the Americans say, "feel bad." The punishment of the pillory has been abolished; but post-cards may be made "renovare dolorem." I shall blush purple in future whenever I meet my local letter-carrier. No doubt he has told the housemaid by this time all about it; she has told the cook, perchance, and the baker and the policeman. Beathrew these post-cards!

At the same time, I fancy that everybody does not know everything. M. Thiers used to tell a story of how, after he had resigned the premiership of France, he revisited Marseilles, his native city, and there met an ancient Protestant pastor, the friend of his earliest childhood. "And what have you been doing all these long years, my dear Adolphe?" blandly asked the pastor. "I have been a Minister," replied, with modest self-consciousness, the ex-chief of the French Cabinet. "A minister—of what persuasion, may I ask?" returned the venerable ecclesiastic. He imagined that M. Thiers had gone into the Church. G. A. S.

LIFE-BOAT SERVICES.

A meeting of the Royal National Life-Boat Institution was held on Thursday, at its house, John-street, Adelphi, when rewards amounting to £150 were voted to the crews of different life-boats of the institution for services rendered in the course of the past month, in which period they saved the following shipwrecked crews:—Schooner Wave, of Guernsey, six; boat Jane, of Hunstanton, six; barque Azow, of Christiansand, eight; fishing-boat Vigilant, of St. Andrew's, one; schooner Fuchsia, of Goole, eight; smack Ebenezer, of Bideford, three; and yacht Linda, of Carnore, two: making a total of thirty-four lives saved by the life-boats during the month.

The thanks of the institution, inscribed on vellum, were voted to Mr. James Howlin, J.P., for promptly taking an oar in the Carnore life-boat on the occasion of the last-mentioned service, some difficulty having been experienced in making up the crew of the boat. Several rewards were granted to the crews of shore-boats for saving life from wrecks on our coast, and payments amounting to £700 were made on some of the 266 life-boats of the institution. Other works at life-boat stations were ordered to be carried out, at an expense of £1340.

A contribution of £2000 has been received by the institution from the Countess de Morella for the permanent endowment of a life-boat, to be named the "Ramon Cabrera," in memory of her late distinguished husband, the Count de Morella and Marquis del Tor, who had held the rank of Field Marshal in the Spanish army. Other contributions and legacies have been received by the institution.

New life-boats have recently been sent by the institution to Newhaven, Sussex, and Portlidenlaen, Carnarvonshire. The first-named boat was the gift of the Jewish boys and girls of the United Kingdom, and is named the Michael Henry, after the originator of the fund; the other life-boat was presented to the institution by the employes of Messrs. Copestake and Co., in memory of their late respected employer, Mr. George Moore, after whom the boat is named.

The institution's instructions for the restoration of the apparently drowned continue to be most extensively circulated; they have recently been translated into Chinese by Dr. McGowan, of Shanghai, the expense of stereotyping them being met by Mr. Tong Kinsing of that place.

Reports were read from the inspectors of life-boats to the institution on their recent visits to the coast.

Some photographs of Mr. Gladstone, excellent likenesses, have been taken by Mr. S. A. Walker, of Margaret-street, Cavendish-square.

Military operations were carried out at Wouldham yesterday week by the troops of the Chatham garrison, strengthened by a party of the Royal Artillery, and nearly twenty guns, which were placed at the most commanding points of the surrounding country. About five thousand troops took part in the movements. The force was divided into two parties, the object of the assailants being the capture of the Royal Engineer Camp of Instruction. The attacking party crossed the river Medway by means of pontoon bridges, under what would have been in action a deadly artillery fire. The fight lasted about three hours, and at the finish a march-past took place before General Erskine and a staff of officers. The rapidity with which the pontoon-bridges were constructed was a matter of much comment.

There was a show of honey and hives last week in connection with the West of England Apian Society, the display being in connection with the establishment of the Sherborne Horticultural Society, and Mr. G. D. Wingfield Digby, the owner of Sherborne Castle, lent his grounds for the day. As on a similar occasion at Dorchester, there was a considerable gathering of apianists from both Somerset and Dorset, and prizes were competed for. Mr. Abbott, of the School of Apiculture, Southall, attended, and made experiments with bees, various apparatus for obtaining honey without destroying the bees being explained. Two silver medals were awarded to Mr. W. H. Dunman, Troytown, near Dorchester, for superior honey in comb, and bronze medals fell to the lot of the same exhibitor and Mr. Masters. Mr. C. Tite, of Yeovil, took the prize for the best collection of natural objects connected with bee-keeping, and Mr. Vatcher, of Dorchester, had the first prize for the best hive observatory. About £40 was distributed in prizes at Dorchester and Sherborne.

"RUTH."

In this picture by a French artist, which we have engraved from a photograph published by Messrs. Goupil and Co., a graceful and characteristic figure is designed to represent the dutiful Moabitish widow of a Jewish widow's son, who, clave to her mother-in-law as a daughter to her mother, with a constancy of affection enhanced by their mutual sympathy in a similar bereavement. "Entreat me not to leave thee," so went her sweet womanly protest; "nor to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people is my people, and thy God my God." So they travel home together from the Land of Moab to Bethlehem-Judah, at the beginning of barley-harvest; and Ruth goes forth, as we see, into the fields of Boaz, the kinsman of her deceased husband, to glean between the sheaves without fear of shame or rebuke. Then comes by her the lord of the harvest, and speaks his gracious word of approval, and takes her under his protection. "And Naomi said unto her daughter-in-law, 'Blessed be he of the Lord, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead.'"

TORPEDO WARFARE.

We continue this week a series of Illustrations of the apparatus and methods used in torpedo warfare. This subject is now often mentioned. We hear constantly of attempts being made by one or other of the belligerents to destroy their adversary's vessels and bridges. One of our Engravings shows the manner in which this may be done in a rapid stream such as the Danube. Torpedoes of one form or another are suspended from logs of wood, clumps of brushwood, or some other device which may, from their natural appearance, possibly escape the enemy's attention. These are set afloat above the position where the vessel or bridge to be attacked is likely to be. On coming into contact with any obstacle the mine explodes by means of percussion, the blow being delivered by a projecting arm or other contrivance driven back upon some detonating substance within. The next two Illustrations represent two forms of this species of torpedo. The first is Punahon's floating torpedo, made of copper, and containing a large explosive charge. This is ignited by the outside circle, which carries plungers at intervals, being driven in. The immediate effect is that a needle-point enters a small portion of the composition, creates a flame, and explodes the charge. The other torpedo is of a species which has been used by the Turks. The action is brought about by any one of the surrounding arms being pressed close to the side of the case containing the charge. Where there is a rapid stream, such as the Danube, a log of wood with one of these suspended from it, floating across the bows of a vessel, pontoon, or boat, would be brought to a standstill. The current would, however, still act on the suspended torpedo, which would be washed up under the bottom of the vessel, and immediately on its coming into contact one or more of the arms would be pressed in and the torpedo would be fired. There is, however, a good deal of danger in the use of such weapons, as they may possibly float down against a friendly vessel and do it that amount of damage which they were intended to exert upon the enemy.

The next Engraving represents the dock of a vessel employed in towing Harvey's torpedoes against an enemy. These in action are very similar to those already described, being exploded by a system of levers acting on a bolt which is driven downwards and inwards on coming into contact with a vessel's side. Our fifth Illustration represents the Harvey Torpedo, with the levers ready for action. The sixth Illustration shows the position of the levers when pressing downwards on the bolt which ignites the charge. These torpedoes are towed at the end of a long hawser, connected to a span, so arranged that the torpedo itself, instead of following immediately in the wake or trail of the vessel towing it, diverges in the same manner that an otter float does, from which device Captain Harvey took his idea. Attached to the torpedo are two large buoys, for the purpose of supporting the torpedo when the vessel is not moving through the water, or when the towing-line is slackened. Thus, on meeting a friendly ship, or if not wishing to explode the torpedo, the line is at once let go, the torpedo sinks below the vessel instead of touching her side or bottom. On the line being tightened again, the torpedo sinks and at once diverges; and with a little clever manipulation it may be moved about very nearly at the will of the operator. Up to the present time no specimen of this torpedo has actually taken effect in active warfare, although it may be said to be in general use on both sides. The seventh Illustration shows the position of the torpedoes as regards the towing-ship, and the manner in which they are carried into contact against an approaching enemy. They can be used with equal facility from a large ironclad or from one of her small steam-launches, and are often fitted with electric wires so that they can be exploded at will and when not actually in contact with an adversary. We next give a representation of one form of the electric battery which is used for firing the outrigger or Harvey's torpedoes. It is intended for boat service, and can be put together in a few minutes. It generally consists of from eighty to 120 wires or set plates, copper and zinc, with the sulphuric acid introduced by means of squares of cloth, flannel, blanket, or other similar material. It is built up in four columns, which are kept distinct by means of wooden uprights in a circular wooden box, all kept together by means of a wooden top screwed down. The whole is then covered over with a cap to protect it from the splash of the water or other damp which might interfere with the action of the battery. This is an extremely simple and portable style of battery, and is only built up a few minutes before being required for actual service. It is taken to pieces again when no longer required, and the plates immersed in water and carefully cleaned and freed from the acid, which has a strong decomposing effect on the metal plates. This battery is most useful on boat service, where a certain amount of rough usage must be expected, and it would be difficult to operate with violent acids.

The next Illustration is that of the new Hall-Macdonald War Rocket, with a sectional view of the same. It shows the tube formed of iron guide-rods, by which means it is proposed to fire these projectiles from the Thorneycroft steam torpedo-launches, when called upon to protect themselves from the attacks of boats of similar construction. These rockets are a very great improvement on the only pattern used in warfare. They have recently been introduced to the naval and military authorities in a very interesting lecture delivered by Commander Cole, R.N., at the Royal United Service Institution, when they met with the support of many officers and civil engineers well calculated to give an opinion as to the merits of this new weapon. They possess a great advantage over other species of artillery, owing to the ease with which they can be used at sea from small boats which could not possibly carry the smallest kind of gun in service. For military operations they also claim the great advantage of being easily used in mountainous passes or marshes, where it would be impossible to take artillery. Another Engraving illustrates the carriage for firing volleys of these rockets. It is so arranged that, by means of a handle, the guiding-troughs may be made to diverge so that the rockets, when fired, shall sweep over an extended area. The rockets themselves are constructed to carry large and destructive bursting charges of gun-cotton and gun-cotton powder, and they have in another form been also utilised as torpedoes for short distances.

"RUTH." BY C. LANDELLE.

The last two Engravings represent different forms of the outrigger torpedo. The first is the one in use from Messrs. Thorneycroft's torpedo-launches, in which two or more are carried. They are exploded by means of an electric arrangement, which acts either at will of the operator or when in contact with an enemy's side. The second represents an improvised torpedo, constructed on board ship, and very generally used hitherto in experiments. They are constructed of iron casks, which contain an explosive charge quite large enough for any operations required to be performed, and are also exploded by means of an electric fuse fired by the boats' battery before mentioned. A very large demand has been sent in to all the arsenals for torpedoes of different kinds, but chiefly the Whitehead and the Harvey's. The former are chiefly constructed at Fiume, on the Adriatic, and are very expensive, costing as much as £500 apiece. They are also now being manufactured in our own arsenals; but as yet no foreign nation except the Austrians have ventured to procure them otherwise than from the inventor direct.

The Lords of the Admiralty have approved and issued the following regulations for the establishment of torpedo lieutenants, instructors, and artificers for service in the Royal Navy:—Torpedo Lieutenants.—Officers selected to qualify as torpedo lieutenants must have previously served one year at sea as lieutenants, with the exception of those already appointed, and have completed a full term of instruction at the Royal Naval College at Greenwich. They will subsequently undergo a thorough course of training on board the Vernon, at the expiration of which they will be finally examined; and those who are found qualified to be awarded first or second class certificates will receive the same extra pay as gunnery lieutenants—viz., First-class certificates, 3s. 6d. a day; second-class certificates, 2s. 6d. a day. Torpedo lieutenants will be employed on the staff of the Vernon and in flagships on foreign stations, or in any other ships as may be directed; but they will not be in addition to the ordinary complement of the ship.—Torpedo Instructors: First-class petty officers to be selected from the seamen gunner torpedo-men of the Fleet to undergo a thorough course of training, and when qualified to be placed in the same relative position with reference to rank and pay as gunnery instructors.—Chief Torpedo Artificers: One chief torpedo artificer to be allowed for service in the Vernon, to rank with a chief engine-room artificer, and to receive the pay of 2s. 6d. a day. His uniform to be that of a chief engine-room artificer.—Torpedo Artificers, trained in the Vernon: To be employed in the Vernon and in the flagships on foreign stations, or in any other ships as directed. These men are to be selected from the armourers of the Fleet, and when duly qualified are to receive the following rates of pay, retaining their former rank and uniform of first-class petty officers—namely, 5s. a day for the first three years, 5s. 6d. a day for the next three years, and 6s. a day after six years.—Gunner Instructors of Vernon to be paid the same as the gunnery instructors in gunnery ships. When appointed to seagoing ships they will receive the pay of warrant officers in charge of stores, and if employed in lieu of torpedo lieutenants, they will be allowed 1s. 6d. a day in addition to their usual pay.

1.—Suspended Torpedoes in a rapid river.
 2.—Funcheon's Floating Torpedo: a, Side view; b, View from above.
 3.—Turkish Self-Acting Torpedo: a, Base of same; b, Central detail.
 4.—Deck of vessel employed in towing Harvey's Torpedo against an enemy: a, Torpedo exploding; b, Torpedo, with buoys attached, being lowered into the water.
 5.—Harvey's Torpedo.
 6.—Showing action of levers.
 7.—Towing Torpedoes against enemy approaching: a, Torpedo-boat in two positions; b, Torpedoes, with two buoys attached; c, Enemy's vessel.
 8.—Boat's firing battery, constructed of a quadruple voltaic pile: a, Plan of same.
 9.—a, Hall Macdonald Rocket, for use in and against torpedo-boats; b, Sectional view; c, Instrument for firing rocket from torpedo-boat (drawn to a smaller scale).
 10.—Carriage for firing volleys of rockets.
 11.—Outrigger Torpedo, as fitted to the Thornycroft Steam Torpedo-Boat, showing arrangement of wires.
 12.—Improvised Outrigger Torpedo, as used from ships' boats.

ARCHDEACON DENISON'S HARVEST HOME.

The Venerable Archdeacon's harvest home, which was held on Thursday week, was greatly favoured by the weather. The proceedings began with morning prayer at 7.30 and holy communion at eight and nine a.m. The harvest service began at 11.30, when the church was filled to overflowing. The preacher was the Rev. R. Porter, Rector of Kenn, Exeter.

At the conclusion of the service a procession was formed, headed by two bands, and marched to the Vicarage, where a monster tent had been erected, and tables laid out and food provided for 500 persons. The bill of fare included 500 lb. of beef and mutton, one hundred quarters of bread, four hogsheds of beer and cyder, and fifty puddings of at least ten pounds weight each. The Archdeacon presided, and appeared in excellent health and spirits. The first course over, fifty ladies entered the tent, each bearing a plum-pudding, headed by the band, playing "The Roast Beef of Old England." Subsequently a loaf, weighing ninety-four pounds, and a cheese, weighing ninety pounds, were brought in, each borne on the shoulders of four men.

This completed the menu; and, all having thoroughly enjoyed the substantial repast, the Queen was duly honoured, after which Archdeacon Denison responded to the toast of "The Clergy." Having spoken of his brethren as men whose hearts were full of care and love for the people, he proceeded to allude to what he designated the food and drink question. Cider (he said) appeared green in the bottle, and beer made people's faces red, but a mixture had been recommended to him by a gentleman of Cheshire as a delightful beverage, consisting of oatmeal and water, flavoured with a little acid. It was not intoxicating, but was strengthening, and, he was told, made people's bones three times as big as before. He, however, could not say he preferred it to their Somerset cider (Cheers). With regard to food, he had made up his mind not to plant another potato as long as he lived. To do so was simply to waste the seed and poison the ground, and the more they planted that tuber the more would they poison the ground, until it stank in their nostrils. They had far better plant peas and beans, beet-root, and such other vegetables that were not subject to the disease, and, with the profit of the surplus crop, purchase potatoes from elsewhere. He concluded by assuring his hearers that as long as God spared his life he would do all he could to promote all the cheer and happiness possible at the harvest-home festival, the twenty-first anniversary of which they celebrated that day (Cheers).

Other toasts of a complimentary nature followed, after which the tent was cleared for tea, of which some eight hundred women and children partook.

At six o'clock there was evensong at the parish church, at the conclusion of which dancing began, and was kept up with unflagging spirit until eleven o'clock.

SIR W. GREGORY ON THE CONDITION OF CEYLON.

Sir William Gregory, the late Governor of Ceylon, was entertained at a banquet by his friends in Galway on Tuesday night, on the occasion of his return to his native country, after an absence of five years.

Lord Clonbrock presided, and proposed the toast of the evening, in reply to which Sir W. Gregory said that the work which he had been engaged in for the last five years differed very much from abstract political questions. He had to apply his attention to the construction of railways, the erection of public buildings, and the construction of works for the irrigation of the country. He had to look after the organisation and the reorganisation of different departments, and he confessed that these subjects had more interest for him than any public questions likely to arise at the present time. When he spoke of abstract political questions he referred to such questions as the assimilation of the county and the borough franchise, and the redistribution of seats. He cared more for the extension of railways throughout the county, the construction of a breakwater in the Galway Bay, and the sanitary condition and improvement of the town (Hear, hear). What, however, he now looked forward to was rest. For the sake of rest and peace he resigned an appointment which, in many respects, was full of interest, having regard to the nature of the work he had to accomplish. To accomplish those works he had the means at hand, he had a flourishing exchequer, and he was not embarrassed by those difficulties of the circumlocution office which they had to contend with in more civilised climes. He saw the work which he had himself designed growing up around him. When a want was brought before his eyes he was able to meet it. Nothing could be more gratifying than to see this, and to know that he had been the medium through which these works were carried out. But there was another side to the picture, for every single thing that went wrong was attributed to the Governor. If a bridge broke down, or a ship came in collision with a rock, it was all the fault of the Governor. Schemes, however crude or foolish, however expensive or useless, were brought before the Governor, and if he did not adopt them he was abused; but no man would be fit to be a Governor unless he could bear such things with equanimity. Their noble chairman had observed that he (Sir W. Gregory) had been able to encourage works of great public utility. When he went to Ceylon he found the whole of the northern part of the island a complete jungle. The people were dying from bad food, bad air, bad water. In former days these vast tracts had been the granaries of the land, and they were now absolutely in want. Under their own Cingalese kings the people had a perfect system of irrigation. Sir William Gregory then referred to the measures which were adopted during his administration to restore the great works which had in former times been constructed for the irrigation of the country. He dwelt with satisfaction on the visit of the Prince of Wales to Ceylon, and mentioned that he took occasion then to observe to his Royal Highness the advantage it would be to Ireland if he visited this country frequently.

CURIOSITIES OF THE POST OFFICE.

The report of the Postmaster-General for 1876, issued on Wednesday, states that the total number of letters which passed through the post-offices in the United Kingdom during that year was 1,018,955,200, equal to thirty-one letters per head of the population; the number of post-cards was 92,935,700, and of newspapers and book packets 298,790,800, of which the newspapers alone numbered 125,065,800. The number of registered letters was 5,095,116. One of these letters, addressed to a bank, and containing £3000, was found to be unfastened. The number of returned letters was 5,897,724. Upwards of 33,100 letters were posted without addresses; and of these 832 were found to contain nearly £399 in cash and bank-notes, and nearly £5000 in cheques. 78,575 postage-stamps were found loose in different post-offices, having been insecurely fixed, and 14,346 articles were found without covers.

The report continues:—"In Aberdeen a person was observed to deposit a letter in a disused street hydrant, and on the cover of the box being removed three other letters were found, the senders of which had similarly mistaken the water-pipe for a pillar letter-box. The letters had been passed into the box through the space formerly occupied by the tap-lever."

"It is to be regretted that, while great facilities are given under the Money Order system and by the registration of letters for the safe remittance of money and valuables through the post, the public will sometimes avail themselves of the most insecure methods of transmission. In a newspaper which reached the Returned Letter Office were found to be inclosed four sovereigns, and in another a gold locket. Nor does this kind of recklessness appear only in connection with newspapers; for a letter having a very large seal at the back was observed in course of transit, and on the seal, which had become slightly chipped, being examined, gold coins of the value of £1 10s. were discovered to be embedded in the wax. The senders of newspapers very often infringe the regulations by sending unauthorised articles of various kinds concealed between the folds. Of such inclosures the following, amongst others, were observed:—Cigars and tobacco, collars, seaweed, ferns and flowers, gloves, handkerchiefs, music, patterns, sermons, stockings, lace, postage-stamps, and money. During the fifteen months ended March 31 last no less than 593 registered letters were returned to the countries of origin in consequence of their containing coin or jewellery, contrary to the provisions of the General Postal Union. Of these more than three fourths were from the United States."

"The Post-Office continues to be made the medium for the transmission of small articles of almost endless variety. Amongst others the following articles were observed:—Musical instruments and cutlery, artificial teeth and eyes, wigs, flowers, fruit, and vegetables, game and fish, medicine and perfumery, articles of dress, leeches, frogs, snakes, and lizards. Several of these, however, being prohibited articles, were sent to the Returned Letter Office. A live snake which had escaped from a postal-packet was discovered in the Holyhead and Kingstown Marine Post-Office, and at the expiration of a fortnight, being still unclaimed, it was sent to the Dublin Zoological Gardens. A packet containing a live horned frog reached Liverpool from the United States, and was given up to the addressee, who called for it. Another packet, also from America, reached the Dublin Post-Office containing two live lizards, and was similarly given up to the addressee on personal application."

"Complaints of the alleged loss of letters are not infrequently made, and much trouble given to the department in investigating them, when the letters inquired for have not been posted at all. In one case it was stated that a letter containing £95 in bank-notes had been lost; but, upon the complainant being closely questioned, he admitted that his statement was untrue, and that it was invented to stave off for a few days the importunities of a creditor. In another case complaint was made that a letter addressed to a 'Naturalist' had failed to reach its destination, but it was afterwards found in a cage on the premises of the addressee, where it had been placed by a monkey."

"A person in a fair position of life, residing in one of the eastern counties, having obtained a money order from his postmaster payable at a neighbouring town, called again a few days afterwards and complained that his correspondent could not obtain payment in consequence of some irregularity in the advice. Thereupon a second advice was sent, but a few days later the sender called again, stating that the payee was still unable to obtain payment. The sender added that he was quite sure that he had sent the money, as he had the receipt in his pocket. On being asked to show it, he produced the original order, which should, of course, have been forwarded to the payee, and without which the money could not be obtained."

The report also gives a number of very curious applications made to the Post Office for information upon all kinds of subjects.

A depositor in the Post Office Savings Bank wrote to the department as follows:—"Having lost my parents, I am desirous of taking a housekeeper's situation where a domestic is kept. Must be a Dissenting family—Baptist preferred. Thinking that such a case might come under your notice, I have therefore taken the liberty of sending to you." Another depositor, apprehensive lest some person might withdraw money from his account, proposed to send his likeness, to be used for identifying him, and then made the following curious request:—"There are some little articles I would like to get from London, and one of them is some natural leaf tobacco, which I would be glad if you sent an ounce of and charge me for it—it is only to be bought in the largest tobacco stores." In a further letter, the depositor expressed surprise that his request was not complied with, observing that "the commonest person in America (my country) can speak to General Grant, and there is nothing said wrong about it." In another case, a woman forwarded her will, and requested to be informed whether it was "correct in case of death."

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHEAP EDITION OF MISS BRADDON'S NOVELS. Now ready, price 2s. cloth, 2s. 6d.

WEAVERS AND WERT. A Novel. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," &c.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS. Now ready, at all the Libraries.

GLORY. By Mrs. G. LINNÆUS BANKS, Author of "The Master of the House," &c.

ONLY A LOVE STORY. By IZA DUFFUS HARDY, Author of "Glencroft," &c.

A THING OF BEAUTY. By Mrs. ALEXANDER FRASER, Author of "Her Flighted Troth," &c.

ANNETTE. By the Author of "St. Olave's," &c.

TWO TALES OF MARRIED LIFE: HARD TO BEAR, by GEORGINA M. CRAIK; and A TRUE MAN, by M. C. STYLING.

PAINTING ON CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c. Practical Lessons by Mme. la Baronne Delanellière, Translated from the French by G. A. BOUTIER. Price 1s. 6d. free. L. CHAMBERLAIN, BARRIS, and Co., 60, Regent-street, London, W.

NEW EDITION, pp. 300, bound, 1s., or 14 stamps.

HOMOEOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By RICHARD EPPS, M.D., M.R.C.S. This handbook describes and prescribes for a hundred diseases. James Epps and Co., No. 48, Threadneedle-st., and 170, Piccadilly.

CANCER—ITS CONSTITUTIONAL AND SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT: an Experience of Twenty-five Years. By the late Dr. J. PATTISON. Prefaced and Edited by Sir JOHN MONCRIEFF PATTISON, M.D. (Edin., New York).—KEENE and ASHFIELD, 74, New Bond-street, London, W. Price One Shilling, post-free.

DEMAREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE. The Model Magazine of the World. The Attractive Novelties, Entertaining Matter, Household Utilities, Exquisite Engravings, Fancy Work, Music, and numerous other valuable features, including the latest and most reliable Fashions, with full-size patterns, furnished in DEMAREST'S MONTHLY, make it the largest, cheapest, and best Magazine ever published. Do not fail to see the splendid September Number, now ready, price 1s., or, by post, 1s. 2d.

THE WILLIAMS and ROGERS NEWS COMPANY, 11, Boulevard-street, Fleet-street, London; and sold by Booksellers and News-agents everywhere.

CONSUMPTION: its Proximate Cause and Specific Treatment by the HYPOPHOSPHITES, upon the Principles of Stoechiological Medicine. By JOHN FRANCIS CHILDRILL, M.D. With an Appendix on the Direct Treatment of Respiratory Diseases (Asthma, Bronchitis, &c.) by Stoechiological Inhalants; and Reports of nearly Two Hundred Cases by Drs. Churchill, Smith, Hall, Sterling, Bird, Santa Maria, Gomes, Maestre, Parrot, Heilmann, Galtier, Lefevre, Denoblet, Feldman, Pfeiffer, Vintars, Bongard, Tiratshy, Lenzl, Fabhr, Pannegrosch, Cerasi, Guadri, Todini, Ascani, Regnoli, Valentini, Casati, Blas, Borromeo Fiorilli, and Fedelli. Price 2s. London: LONGMANS and Co.

VITREMANIE.—An Easy Method of Decorating Windows in Churches, Public Buildings, and Private Houses, equal to Real Stained Glass. Illustrated Handbook of Instructions, post-free, 1s. 2d. Particulars free. London: J. BARNARD and SONS, 330, Oxford-street, W.

THE SOCIETY OF ARTS' ONE SHILLING MOIST COLOUR BOX. Unadulterated pigments. Box in japanned tin.—J. Lechertier, Barbe, and Co., 60, Regent-st., London; and local Artists' Colourmen and Stationers.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS. Sold by all Stationers THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

BRITISH EMPIRE MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY. 22, New Bridge-street, London. Established 1844.

Incorporated under Special Acts of Parliament. The Average Cash Bonus (Triennially) exceeds 25 per cent on the Premiums paid.

Policies in Force £3,514,000

Accumulated Fund 655,985

EDWIN BOWLEY, Secretary.

ROYAL DUBLIN SOCIETY. TAYLOR ART SCHOLARSHIPS AND PRIZES.

The Trustees and Judges appointed to effect the Trusts of the Will of the late George Archibald Taylor, Esq., in reference to the income arising from the sum bequeathed by him for the promotion of Art in Ireland, have settled the terms upon which a year will be awarded (in 1878) in Two Scholarships and One Prize to Irish Art Students.

Particulars will be furnished on application to Wm. EDWD. STANLEY, M.D., Esq., Kildare-street, August, 1877.

LONDON HOSPITAL, Whitechapel-road, E.—FUND IS GREATLY NEEDED, and Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received.

Nearly 800 Beds maintained. Fixed Income, about £24,000. Unavoidable Expenditure, about £40,000 yearly.

Wards and other parts of the Institution always Open to the Inspection of Visitors.

Reports, with full information as to privileges of Subscribers and of the work effected by this Hospital, sent (free) on application. A. G. SAKLOVA, Secretary, Bakers—Roberts, Lubbock, and Co., 1, Giltspur-street, and Co.

ST. SAVIOUR'S CANCER HOSPITAL, North-end, Fulham, West Kensington Station, S.W., for the Treatment of Cancer and External Tumours by the Michel and other processes, WITHOUT THE KNIFE. Out-Patients sent from Ten to Twelve. Bankers—Cocks, Biddulph, and Co., 45, Chancery-lane, London, W.C. Victoria-street, S.W. King's Arms-yard, E.C. FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED. Report sent free. L. WATKINS, Secretary.

NATIONAL INSTITUTION for DISEASES OF THE SKIN. Gray's-inn-road, London, W.C. Established 1864. Physician, Dr. BERT MEADOWS, 47, Victoria-street, S.W. Free to the necessitous. Payment required from other applicants.

HOMOEOPATHIC HOSPITAL (SELECT) for LADIES. Bolton House, 192, Clapham-road, Surrey. Established 1877. A Private Home, where Patients suffering from serious diseases, and requiring special supervision, can obtain the best Medical and Surgical Treatment without incurring anxiety in their own homes. Treaties of successful cases forwarded for twelve stamps. Physician, DAVID JONES, M.D. Consultations daily. Eleven till One (Tuesday and Friday excepted), at 25, Woburn-street, London.

NEW MUSIC.

RÊVE D'AMOUR. LAMOTHE'S charming Waltz, performed with great success at the Promenade Concerts, Covent Garden Theatre. May be had, price 2s. net. Sole or Duet, of all Music-sellers. DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

PONTAINEBLEAU. LAMOTHE'S New Waltz. Performed at the Promenade Concerts, Covent Garden Theatre. Now ready, price 2s. net. Orchestra Parts may be had.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

DER LETZTE KUSS ("The Last Kiss"), the New Waltz, by OTTO MULLER, Composer of the celebrated "Gull and Yelverton." ("Love and Lost") Waltz. Price 4s.; sold at half price. Order of all Music-sellers in town and country.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

A BIRD SANG IN A HAWTHORN TREE.—J. L. HATTON'S most successful New Song for Soprano. "Exceedingly original, quaint, and truly charming; a song that will add to the composer's fame."—Queen. Sent for 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS' IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS. "The best and most substantial instrument produced." 9, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET, W.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageoles, Guitars, Banjos, Accordions, Flutinas, Cornets, Saxhorns, Drums, and Musical Instruments of every description. Largest assortment in the kingdom. BUTLER'S Manufacturing, 29, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free.

MUSICAL-BOX DÉPÔTS, 56, Chapside, and 22, Ludgate-hill, London.—Nicole's celebrated Musical Boxes, playing best secular and sacred music. Prices, £4 to £120. Suffices from 18s. to 60s. Largest Stock in London. Catalogue gratis and post-free. Apply to WALES & McCULLOCH, as above.

MR. STREETER'S DIAMOND ORNAMENTS. LONDON—MADE JEWELLERY, of exquisite design and workmanship. The only Jeweller in England whose stock consists solely of 18-Carat Gold.

ENGLISH KEYLESS LEVER WATCHES, with all the latest improvements. Of Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street.

"GOLD." By EDWIN W. STREETER. Second Edition will shortly be ready.

£10. BENNETT'S WATCHES. In return for a £10 Note, free and safe per post, one of BENNETT'S LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship, with keyless action, anti-rattle, damp-tight, and dust-tight.—65, Chapside, London. Good Chains as manufacturers' price. P.O. to John Bennett, BENNETT, 65 and 64, Chapside.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—68, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

JEWEL ROBBERIES.—CHUBB'S SAFES for JEWELS give the greatest security from the attacks of burglars, and are also Fire-Resisting. All sizes, with various fittings. Chubb's Locks and Lockets, London. Price-List sent free.—CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, St. Paul's, E.C.; and 68, St. James's-street, S.W.

JOHN MORTLOCK begs to call attention to the "EVERY-DAY" DINNERS SERVICES, complete for 12 Persons, £4 10s. Colours are indestructible. The Pottery Galleries, 205 and 204, Oxford-street; 30 and 31, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT. OETZMANN & CO., HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT. OETZMANN and CO., 87, 89, 71, 73, 77 and 79, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street; Bedding Factory, Eagle-place, London, N.W. Carpets, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing, Ironmongery, China, and Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout.

THE IMMENSE RANGE OF PREMISES formerly the EAGLE BREWERY having been REBUILT and added to their SHOWROOMS, it is now one of the largest Furnishing Establishments in the world. Comparison of price and quality respectfully solicited before deciding elsewhere. OETZMANN and CO. are enabled to offer special advantages to Country Customers in delivery of Goods by their own large PANTECHNICON VANS, and fixing in position by competent persons. Descriptive Catalogue, the best Furnishing Guide extant, post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free. OETZMANN & CO., HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE. TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNITURE. New ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the Price of Every Article required, post-free. MAPLE and CO., 148, Tottenham-court-road, London.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE. 100 Suites of various designs in stock, from 6½gs. to 250gs. MAPLE and CO., 148, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CARPETS. British and Foreign, of every description. 500 Pieces best Brussels, old patterns, &c. 8d. per yard. MAPLE and CO., 147, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CRETONNE CHINTZ. Just received from Mulhouse a Manufacturer's Stock of about 1000 Pieces, at prices varying from 10d. per yard. These goods are about half the price they were. MAPLE and CO., 148, Tottenham-court-road, London.

SILK DAMASKS. The largest and most varied assortment at old prices. Satins, Silks, Cotelines, Silk Reps of all Colours, in Stock. MAPLE and CO., 149, Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO. CARPETS. TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

LEWIN CRAWCOUR and CO.'S complete ILLUSTRATED FURNITURE CATALOGUE new and enlarged Edition, gratis and post-free contains nearly 800 Designs of useful, artistic, and well-seasoned Furniture, and also Estimates for completely Furnishing any class of House. Orders for completely Furnishing in any part of England, upon cash terms, are delivered, fitted, and fixed, inclusive. 71, 73, and 75, Brompton-road, London.

SPOONS and FORKS.—SLACK'S SILVER ELECTRO-PLATE is a coating of Sterling Silver over Nickel. The fact of twenty years' test is ample proof of its durability. Table Spoons or Forks, 30s. and 35s. per dozen; Dessert, 25s. and 30s.; Tea, 2s. and 18s. Catalogues gratis. Orders above 25 sent by post.—Richard and John Slack, 285, Strand.

Digitized by Google

They require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM OF HIRE.

PIANOFORTES of every description by all the most celebrated makers from Two Guinea's a Quarter.

HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, from One Pound Five Shillings per Quarter.

SECOND - HAND PIANOFORTES, at Immense Reductions for Cash, or on the Three-Years' System.

CHAPPELL'S ENGLISH 20-GUINEA or SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, in Canadian Walnut or Mahogany. This instrument combines good quality of tone and excellence of workmanship. Has a lovely touch, and is capable of enduring hard practice without going out of order. Owing to its size, it is admirably adapted for the boudoir or any room where space is an object. In Solid Oak or White Ash, 22 ga.; Rosewood or Walnut Case, 27 ga.

NEW POLKA by CH. D'ALBERT.
THE FANFARE POLKA. By CHARLES D'ALBERT. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. net; Orchestra, 2s.; Septet, 2s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NEW DANCE MUSIC.

SWEETHEARTS. Waltz on Arthur Sullivan's popular Song. "One of the best waltzes ever written by the above favourite Composer." 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY LANCERS, on Airs from Sullivan's popular Song. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY QUADRILLE. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY WALTZ. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY POLKA. 2s. net.
RINK GALOP. 2s. net.
FLUR DE THE QUADRILLE. 2s. net.
FASCINATION VALSE a Trois Temps. 2s. net.
SULLIVAN'S POLKA (New Edition). 2s. net.
The above, arranged for Full Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. each. N.B. A Complete List of M. D'Albert's Popular Dance Music will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LIST of NEW SONGS.

THOU'ST PASSING HENCE. By ARTHUR SULLIVAN. 2s. net.
MY BROTHER (sung by) ARTHUR SULLIVAN. 2s. net.
IF (sung by B. McQuinn). PINSUTI. 2s. net.
THE CAPTIVE SKYLARK. PINSUTI. 2s. net.
THE SKYLARK FLOES. PINSUTI. 2s. net.
BOOKS AND FLOWERS. PINSUTI. 2s. net.
OH! FOR THY WINGS. PINSUTI. 2s. net.
THE EVERLASTING SHORE. PINSUTI. 2s. net.
SWEETHEARTS. By ARTHUR SULLIVAN. 2s. net.
CRADLE SONG. By CARRINGTON LEE. 2s. net.
THE LAST LETTER. By CARRINGTON LEE. 2s. net.
FOR EVERMORE. By H. GADSBY. 2s. net.
WHEN THOU ART NIGH. By GOUNOD. 2s. net.
I'LL SING THESE SONGS OF ARABY. By F. CLAY. 2s. net.
THE FATE OF A ROSE. By HENRY SMART. 2s. net.
MY LOVER ACROSS THE BLUE SEA. By S. ADAMS. 2s. net.
THE MEN OF WALES. By D. RICHARDS. 2s. net.
THE DAY MY LOVE WENT AWAY. By L. GRAY. 2s. net.
NOT FAR AWAY. By B. TOURS. 2s. net.
TIME AND THE STREAM. By EDWIN HARPER. 1s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TRIAL BY JURY. Dramatic Cantata. Written by W. S. Gilbert. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed with immense success at the Strand Theatre. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d. net. TRIAL BY JURY. Pianoforte Solo. 2s. 6d. net.
THE JUDGE'S SONG. 2s. net.
THE LOVE-SICK BOY. Defendant's Song. 1s. 6d. net.
KUIPER'S FANTASIA. 2s. net.
SMALLWOOD'S FANTASIA (easy). 1s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

L'ORGANISTE PRATIQUE. 240 Easy Pieces for Organ or Harmonium, by J. LEYBACH. In 2 vols., price 6s. each; or in eight parts, each 2s. net. The above will supply a want long felt by amateur performers on the organ or harmonium, as all the pieces are very pretty without being difficult.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES HALLE'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. Section 1.—No. 1. Pianoforte Tutor. FORTSH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

CHARLES HALLE'S NEW EDITION of POPULAR WORKS. For List of Pieces already published Catalogues will be forwarded, post-free, on application to FORTSH BROTHERS, 272a, Regent-street, Oxford-street, London; and Cross-street, South King-street, Manchester.

THE FIRE KING. New Cantata. By WALTER AUSTIN. To be produced at the Leeds Festival on Wednesday Evening, Sept. 19. Artists—Mrs. Osgood, Madame Patey, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Signor Foll. Piano and Vocal score, price 5s.; post-free, 6s. 4d. stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

SUNG BY MR. BARTON MCGUCKIN.
MINE OWN. A New Song. By H. GADSBY. Words by F. E. Weatherly. "If you were at your window As I passed up the street." Price 4s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MADAME LIEBHART.
FAR FROM HOME. New Song. By G. B. ALLEN. Sung with the greatest success at Madame Liebhart's Concerts. Price 4s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

EDITH'S SONG. From Tennyson's "Harold." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 2d. stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

A WINTER'S TALE. From Tennyson's "Harold." Two young lovers in wintry weather." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 2d. stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WAR SONGS OF THE EAST. By H. B. FARNIE. In handsome cover, price 1s.; post-free, 13 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA SERENADE. Waltz. By METRA. A most attractive and popular waltz. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 2d. stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA VAGUE. Waltz. By METRA. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 2d. stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

W. SMALLWOOD'S NEW PIECES for PIANOFORTE. Illustrated Titles. CRYSTAL DEWDROPS. AVELETTE. Gondola Song. FAIRY DREAMS. Post-free, 18 stamps each. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 235. Nine Stops. Viola Dolce, Seraphone, &c. Post-free. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 312. Ten Stops. With Octave Coupler and Sub-Bass. Price 40 ga. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 312. Ten Stops. With Octave Coupler and Sub-Bass. Price 40 ga. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

W. T. BEST'S FIRST ORGAN BOOK. Forty pages, music size. An Elementary and Practical Guide for Organ Students. This day, price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

J. W. ELLIOTT'S NEW HARMONIUM TUTOR. Containing everything necessary to be learnt for playing the Harmonium. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day, price 1s.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

HENNING'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLIN. A celebrated German Method. Now for the first time published in English. It includes 103 Progressive Exercises. Forty pages, music size. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

EDWARD HOWELL'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLONCELLO. Founded on Romberg's Method. A Complete and Practical Instruction Book, for the use of all Students who wish to master the instrument. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day, price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

DR. CALLCOTT'S GRAMMAR OF MUSIC. Boosey's New Shilling Edition. This day.

VACCAJ'S SINGING METHOD, and BALFE'S BALLAD TUTOR. Boosey's New Shilling Editions. This day.

MUSIC FOR THE SEASIDE. BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET. New Numbers. Price 1s. each; post-free, 1s. 1d. Arthur Sullivan's Ten Songs. Rubinstein's Piano Album. Sanley's Ten New Songs. Brahms's Piano Album. Virginia Gabriel's Ten Songs. Lamothe's Waltz Album. A. S. Gatty's Twelve Ballads. Waldeufel's Waltz Album. Longfellow & Balfe's Ten Songs. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street, London.

TRUE HEARTS. New Song, by the Composer of "Nancy Lee." This day. Sung by Miss Ellen D'Alton.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

ONE ONLY. By WEKERLIN. This exquisite Romance, sung with equal success by Mr. Edward Lloyd and Mr. Sanley, may be had of all Musicians in town and country. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

STILL WATERS RUN DEEP. By PINSUTI. Price 2s. each net.
ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE. By PINSUTI. Price 2s. each net.
AS YOU LIKE IT. By PINSUTI. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

FAIR IS MY LOVE. By HATTON. Mr. Sanley will sing this celebrated song at all the concerts during the approaching tournee with Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

IF YOU WERE AT YOUR WINDOW. By MOLLOY. The Words by Weatherly. Price 2s. net. "If you were at your window, I would be passing by, I wonder would you greet me, And smile to see me nigh." Molloy's version must be ordered. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. On the Celebrated Song. The Waltz of the Season. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by HAMILTON AIDÉ. Remember or Forget. The Fisher. Spanish Boat Song. Maid I Love is Six Years Old. Let us Dream of Happy Days. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ALFRED SCOTT GATTY. Rothsay Bay. Old Sweet Story. One, Morning, oh! so early. Hay is in the Mow. Apart. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. The Lost Chord. Let me Dream Again. Living Poems. Sleep, my Love, Sleep. Golden Days. Looking Back. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by F. H. COWEN. It was a Dream. Almost. Spinning. Marguerite. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by DOLORES. Destiny. The Fairies. Clear and Cool. Seaweed. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

ASHDOWN and PARRY'S CATALOGUES of MUSIC. PART 1. PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONIUM. PART 2. VOCAL. PART 3. HARP, CONCERTINA. PART 4. VIOLIN, VIOLONCELLO, ORCHESTRA, &c. PART 5. FLUTE, CORNET, CLARINET, &c. Sent gratis and post-free to any part of the world. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square, London.

SIR WILLIAM STERNDAL BENNETT'S BARCAROLLE (from the Fourth Concerto).—This beautiful Composition is now published in the following forms:—Piano Solo. 4s. Piano Duet. 4s. Organ, arranged by Dr. Stegall. 4s. London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

GAVOTTE, in E Minor. By SILAS. Played by Madame Esipoff at her Concerts in England and America with immense success. A new edition of this celebrated Gavotte is now ready. Price 3s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square.

OLIVIA. New Waltz. By CHARLES COOTE, Jun. Played by Coote and Tinney's band at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace, June 23. Piano Solo, 4s.; Duet, 6s.—London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

RALPH THE RANGER. By J. P. KNIGHT. Ready this day. Highest note E. Third. Then to his charger swiftly sprang, And dashed the gates asunder, verse. And tramp, tramp, tramp, the hoof-beats rang Across the bridge like thunder. Post-free, 18 stamps.—W. MORLEY, Jun., 70, Upper-street, N.

PEPITA, Merry Gipsy Maid. J. P. KNIGHT. THE WATCHMAN. J. P. KNIGHT. Post-free, 2s. each.—W. MORLEY, Jun., 70, Upper-street, N.

PIANOS for HIRE, 10s. per Month. Seven octaves. No hire charged if purchased at any time within 12 months. THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, London, W.

PIANOS, 17s. 6d. per Month, on the Three-Years' System. Becomes the property of the hirer if the payments are kept up. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free, on application.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street.

PIANO, $14. Seven-Octave PICCOLO PIANOFORTE. Second-hand, in good condition, for ready money.—May be seen at 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 ga. upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, No. 23, Great Pultney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, No. 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S VOCAL QUARTETS, for the Use of Schools, Choral and Glee Societies, &c. Numbers 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 33. A List gratis and post-free.

THE CITY BELLS. New Vocal Duet. By FRANK ABT. For Soprano and Contralto. Poetry by C. J. Rowe. 4s.; post-free, 2d. stamps.

SUMMER RAIN. New Vocal Duet. For Soprano and Contralto. By FRANK ABT. Poetry by C. J. Rowe. 4s.; post-free, 2d. stamps.

THE ENGLISH FLEET. New Quadrille on Favourite Melodies. Illustrated. Composed for the Piano by J. PRIDHAM. Post-free for 2d. stamps.

A SINGING QUADRILLE. Illustrated. Composed for the Pianoforte by COTSFORD DICK. Post-free for 2d. stamps. And his new Galop, "L'Eclair," for Piano, 18 stamps. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

HENRY F. LIMPUS' NEWEST SONGS. Evermore. 3s. Slumber Song. 3s. The Skylark. 3s. The Life-Boat. 3s. Free for 18 stamps each.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

THE ELEMENTS OF THE THEORY OF MUSIC. 1p. 12. Especially adapted for use in Training Colleges and Schools. By E. SUTTON. In cloth, price 2s. Art of Singing. By Bohner. 4s. Hamilton's Piano Tutor. New Edition. 4s. Appendix to Hamilton's Piano Tutor. By G. F. West. 5s. Hamilton's Tutor for Singing. 5s. Appendix to Ditto, by G. F. West. 5s. Questions on the Theory of Music. Eighteenth Edition. By G. F. West. In cloth, 1s. 6d.; in paper covers, 1s. Clarke's Catechism of Music. 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d. London: Sole Publishers, ROBERT COCKS and Co. Order of all Musicians and Booksellers.

BOOSEY and CO.'S BRASS INSTRUMENTS FOR AMATEURS. THE DISTIN CORNET, from 23 10s. THE DISTIN CELEBRATED LIGHT VALVE CORNETS, 1 and 9 ga., are the best Cornets manufactured. THE DISTIN MINOR KEY CORNETS, A-PISTONS, 9 ga. THE DISTIN BALLAD HORN in C, 9 ga. THE DISTIN DRAG AND POST HORNS and BAND INSTRUMENTS at all prices. THE DISTIN MONTHLY BRASS BAND JOURNAL, 10s. 6d. per annum.

The above instruments were exhibited by Boosey and Co., at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and were awarded a Prize Medal "For power and good quality of tone, fine workmanship." Estimates for all sizes also sent, and prices, to be had of the sole manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 235, Regent-street, London.

DRUMMER-BOY'S POLKA. By ARDITI. Great success. Re-demanded nightly with acclamation. "The Drummer-Boy's Polka," by the same composer, introducing the drummers of the Goldstream, was likewise uproariously re-demanded. Daily Telegraph. Price 3s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LE TORTORELLE VALSE. By ARDITI. Also encored nightly. "A delightfully flowing and melodious valse, from the pen of Signor Arditi. Le Tortorelle obtained a hearty encore." Daily Telegraph. Aug. 15. Price 4s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, W.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES. GOLDSMITH'S ALLIANCE, Limited, request the attention of Purchasers to their PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are being manufactured on the Premises, are confidently recommended for accuracy and durability.

Prices of Silver Watches. Patent Lever Watch, jewelled, enamel dial, and seconds 44 14 0 Ditto, jewelled in four holes, and capped 6 8 0 Ditto, the finest quality, jewelled in six holes 8 8 0 Silver Watches in Hunting Cases, 10s. 6d. extra. Gold Watches.—Size for Ladies. Patent Lever Watches, with gold dial, jewelled 11 11 0 Ditto, with richly engraved case 12 12 0 Ditto, with very strong case, and jewelled in four holes 14 14 0 Gold Watches.—Size for Gentlemen. Patent Lever Watches, jewelled, seconds, and capped 13 13 0 Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance 18 18 0 Gold Watches in Hunting Cases, 43 3s. extra. Lists of Watches, with remarks on value, price, and post-free. The Goldsmiths' Alliance (Limited), 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

SELLING OFF! SPLENDID DIAMONDS and GOLD JEWELLERY. Great Bargains. For a short time only. Will positively Close on the 25th inst. Reductions in Plain Figures. Must be cleared.—51, BURLINGTON-ARCADE, Piccadilly, W.

NOTICE.—Manufacture of SPOONS and FORKS.—Messrs. ELKINGTON and CO. beg to announce that, having succeeded in carrying out several important improvements in the above manufacture, they are now enabled to offer their guaranteed qualities at such prices as, while fully maintaining their high quality, place them within the reach of all classes. Revised Illustrated Price-Lists can be had on application. Address—ELKINGTON and CO. LONDON—22, Regent-street, W. LIVERPOOL—25, Church-street. MANCHESTER—St. Ann's-square; or to the Manufactory, NEWHALL-STREET, BIRMINGHAM.

MAPPIN and WEBB, MANUFACTURERS. Mansion House-Buildings, City, London. The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

MAPPIN and WEBB'S TABLE CUTLERY.—BEST QUALITY DOUBLE SHEAR STEEL. Table. Dessert. Carver. 3-inch ivory, per doz. 15s. 0d. 11s. 0d. 7s. 0d. 3-inch ivory, balance, per doz. 18s. 0d. 15s. 0d. 7s. 0d. 3-inch ivory, balance, per doz. 22s. 0d. 18s. 0d. 7s. 0d. 3-inch ivory, stout, per doz. 32s. 0d. 22s. 0d. 9s. 0d. 4-inch fine ivory, per doz. 34s. 0d. 24s. 0d. 10s. 0d. Oak. Always kept ready for stock. Illustrated Catalogues post-free.

MAPPIN and WEBB, MANUFACTURERS. 75, 77, and 79, Oxford-street, West End, London. The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

GASOLIERS, in Crystal, Glass, Ormolu, or Bronze, Medival Fittings, &c. A large assortment always on view. Every article marked with plain figures. D. HULETT and CO., Manufacturers, 65 and 66, High Holborn.

WIPE YOUR FEET.

TRELOAR'S MATS, 69, LUDGATE-HILL.

TRELOAR'S Catalogue of Decorative and Durable Floor Coverings, free by post.—Address, 69, Ludgate-hill.

STORY, G. M. and H. J. CABINETMAKERS and WHOLESALE and RETAIL. LARGEST IN CITY. LONDON-WALL. COMBINATION SPRING MATTRESS. BEST. PUBLIC. PRICE, from COLLEGES, COLONIES, HOSPITALS, LODGINGS, SCHOOLS, SHOOTING-BOXES, DESIGNERS. IMMENSE STOCK OF COLEMAN-ST., 1, 2, and 3; 33, LONDON-WALL. STORY, G. M. and H. J.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD has stood the test of years. It has established its reputation through its wonderful efficacy in all diseases which have their origin in a torpid liver.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD IS NATURE'S OWN LAW, the principle of absorption.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD is twofold in its action: it gives and takes, it extracts and absorbs from the system all bilious, malarious, and medicinal poisons. It throws a healthy, gentle, vegetable tonic into the system by way of the circulation, exactly where needed, being placed over the liver and stomach and centre of the nervous system which pervades the digestive organs, leaving no uncertain results, and avoiding the circuitous route of the circulation that internal medicines must always take before reaching the liver.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD is not a patent medicine, but a SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLE.—This comparatively new method of curing disease by absorption, rather than by the stomach, is a principle so well understood in this country that a Committee appointed by the Royal Medical Society to investigate the hypodermic method of administering medicine, reports as follows:—"We may safely take as a broad guide in practice the rule, that the physiological activity of nearly every substance which can be used, is three, if not four, times greater when it is given by the skin than when it is swallowed."

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD is pronounced by all honest men in the medical profession to be the TRUE REMEDY.—The pad is worn where there is but a slight partition (the skin) between the internal organs and the outward world, and there should be no difficulty in treating disease promptly and effectually through this method, provided the true properties are found. That they have been found in HOLMAN'S PAD is proved beyond a doubt.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD is honest, effective, harmless, and is a WAR AGAINST NOSTRUMS.—Its introduction means an honest war against thousands and one nostrums that have been peddled on the public within the last twenty years, which, with rare exceptions, are but little short of stupendous frauds and humbugs; so much so that there is scarcely a man of science or of common sense in men and things called doctors, who do not

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD works directly upon the liver through the pores of the skin, quietly, thoroughly, and without inconvenience, performing a most important function; and we may add the remarkable statement, challenging refutation, that in its extensive use by and including all classes of persons, from old age to helpless infancy, not a single case of injury has occurred.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD is the most important discovery of the age.

THE PRESS say:—"Not since the INTRODUCTION of VACCINATION by JENNER has any medical discovery equaled in importance and in the application of the principle of absorption as illustrated in the HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD."

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD cures without medicine, by the PRINCIPLE OF ABSORPTION. Is a war against nostrums. Twofold in its action. Gives and takes. No poisons are used. Is Nature's own law. It is the true treatment endorsed by thousands. Is honest, effective, harmless, and certain cure for all liver, stomach, biliousness, constipation, diarrhoea, neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, paralysis, sciatica, kidney difficulties, typhoid, intermittent, ague, Roman, and all other fevers.

THE HOLMAN BODY and FOOT PLASTERS are the only Medicated Plasters in the world, and are instantaneous in their effect.

THE HOLMAN LIVER and STOMACH PAD and MEDICATED PLASTER is the most wonderful discovery of the nineteenth century, and marks a new era in the history of medicine. Read every word of the Lecture and Pamphlet on this treatment, sent post-free on application. The Pads and Plasters can be obtained of all Chemists and Druggists throughout the United Kingdom, or at the office of WALSH and COMPANY, Proprietors, 10, Argyl-street, Regent-street, London, W.

Price of the regular-sized Pad 10s. Same size and strength, covered in satin . . . 12s. Price of special (extra size and strength) . . . 15s. Same size and strength, covered in satin . . . 20s. Holman's Medicated Body Plasters 2s. 6d. each. Holman's Medicated Foot Plasters 2s. 6d. each. Sent by mail free on receipt of cheque or P.O.O., payable to Walsh and Co., Vere-street Post-office, London, W. Consultation and Explanation free of Charge.

PAINLESS DENTISTRY. Mr. G. H. JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST, will be glad to forward his New Pamphlet, gratis and post-free, which explains the most unique system of the adaptation of artificial and extraction of natural teeth without pain, from his only London address: 57, Great Russell-street (opposite the British Museum).

My dear Sir—Allow me to express my sincere thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which renders my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained Her Majesty's Royal Letters patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry, the recognition of your valuable services, you are at liberty to use my name.

G. H. HUTCHINGS, By Appointment Surgeon-Dentist to the Queen. To G. H. Jones, Esq.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE. PULVERMACH'S "GALVANISM, NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER OF EXHAUSTED VITAL ENERGY." In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the wonderful curative power of Galvanism. Patent Galvanic Chain Bands, Belts, &c., in Rheumatic, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three stamps, on application to J. L. PULVERMACH'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT, 124, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

NEURALINE gives instant relief in TIC DOLOREUX, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Toothache, Rheumatism, Gout, and all Nerve and Local Pains.—Mr. Edgar, Butt Lighthouse, Island of Lewis, thus writes to Sir James Matheson:—"Mrs. Edgar cannot express her thanks to Lady Matheson for sending her the Neuraline. It proved the most successful remedy she had ever applied. The relief experienced was almost instantaneous."—Dated Nov. 23, 1869.

HAY FEVER, COLDS, and all Disorders of the Mucous Membrane promptly cured by GLYKALINE.

LEATH and ROSS, Homoeopathic Chemists, 1, 8, St. Paul's-churchyard, and 9, Vere-st., W.; and sold by all Chemists, in Bottles, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 6d.; by post, 1s. 3d. and 2s.

CONSUMPTION! CONSUMPTION! SILPHIUM CYRENAICUM (this celebrated plant of the Ancients) has now been acknowledged by the principal celebrities of the French Faculty to be the only cure for Consumption and all affections of the Pulmonary Organs, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c. Its effect is magical, and the cure certain. To be obtained from all Chemists, with pamphlets, full instructions, &c. Wholesale from London Patent Medicinehouse.

TAMAR INDIEN.—Owing to the marked success of this fruit-essence—so agreeable to take and universally prescribed by the Faculty, for constipation, headache, biliousness, hemorrhoids, &c.—Base imitations containing drastic irritants are being foisted on the public. The genuine preparations bear the title "Tamar Indien." Price 2s. 6d. per Box.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE." CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases (its effects are marvelous), 2s. 6d. each, and in cases containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 120 stamps, by the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, London.

LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE. Have it in your house, and use no other. This saline is the true Antidote in Fevers, Eruptive Affections, &c., or bilious sickness, having peculiar and exclusive merits. For the protection of the public against fraudulent imitations, I have applied for and again obtained a perpetual injunction, with costs, against the defendant. Observe the genuine has my Name and Trade Mark on a Buff-Coloured Wrapper.—115, Holborn-hill, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, cure all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 138, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 138, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1877.

THE LATE DR. CONNEAU.

We lately announced the death, in Corsica, of a most faithful and devoted personal friend of the late Emperor Napoleon III., Dr. Henry Conneau, physician, a Senator of the French Empire. He was born in 1803, at Milan, where his father, a native of the department of the Hérault, was a paymaster in the army of Napoleon I. The father, after holding several other posts in the civil service, was appointed Receiver for the Crown at Arezzo, in the department of the Arno, then part of the French Empire. On the downfall of Napoleon he retired with his family to Florence, where he possessed some property. His son, Henry Conneau, after finishing his education in 1820, was appointed by the ex-King of Holland, Louis Bonaparte, father of the Emperor Napoleon III., to temporary employment as his secretary. In the nine months thus occupied Henry Conneau earned the affection and esteem of Louis Bonaparte, and that of his son, Prince Louis Napoleon. In 1821 he commenced his medical studies, and was admitted, after competition, a pupil-boarder in the large hospital of Santa Maria Nuova, at Florence. There, in four years' time, he obtained the office of surgeon of "medicheria," and, two years later, gained his diploma and the rank of first surgeon in that establishment, and of first assistant clinical surgeon. From 1828 till the commencement of 1831 he practised his profession at Rome. While doubtless sharing the enthusiasm which the Revolution of July, on the fall of Charles X., excited in Italy, he yet withstood the temptation to enter into the Secret Societies of the Carbonari, but enrolled himself in a battalion of volunteers in the Romagna. Being forced by their defeat soon to quit Italy, he came to France, where he received a letter from Prince Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, offering him, on the part of Queen Hortense, an asylum in Switzerland, and the office of her private physician, which proposal he accepted with gratitude. After passing five years in this capacity, Dr. Conneau, on hearing of the death of his father at Leghorn, went in September, 1836, to join his mother at Florence; but had scarcely arrived there when he heard of the attempt at Strasbourg. Unhappy at not being with Queen Hortense, when her only son was taken from her, and hearing that she was ill, he returned in all haste to offer his care and consolation. Though his efforts to preserve her life were ineffectual, it was sufficiently prolonged to see her son again before she died. "I give," said Queen Hortense in her will, "to Dr. Conneau a watch as a souvenir of his devotion in coming to take care of me; and I greatly desire," she added, "that my son should keep him near him." Dr. Conneau was with Louis Napoleon when he disembarked on the beach at Boulogne, and when he was arrested and brought before the Chamber of Peers. Far from disowning the part he had taken in the preparations for the expedition, Dr. Conneau avowed it with boldness, desiring to be condemned, in order to share the fate of the Prince. The President of the Court and the Attorney-General expressed their respect for these sentiments of personal fidelity and generous self-devotion; and the brilliant address of M. Barillon so deeply interested the Court in Dr. Conneau's favour that he was only condemned to five years' imprisonment. When Prince Louis Napoleon had been sentenced, they gave him the choice of a companion in captivity; and he asked for Dr. Conneau. They were confined in the fortress of Ham. Four years had passed when, on the occasion of a visit of Louis Philippe to England, an amnesty was granted to all political prisoners condemned to five years or less; but, though included in this measure, Dr. Conneau asked as a favour to remain with the Prince. This was granted him, upon condition that his imprisonment should be perpetual, which condition he accepted. After seven months more as a prisoner at the Castle of Ham, Prince Louis Napoleon complained to the Minister of the injustice of Dr. Conneau's imprisonment, and he was declared free, but was permitted to live near the Prince. Some months afterwards Louis Napoleon, learning that his father was dying, resolved to make his escape, and, assisted by M. Charles Thelin and Dr. Conneau, passed the doors of the prison, disguised in a workman's dress. Dr. Conneau succeeded in keeping the escape concealed for thirteen hours, so that when the commandant discovered it the Prince had passed the French frontier. A criminal indictment was commenced against Dr. Conneau, and he was condemned; but the Judges, allowing for extenuating circumstances, only sentenced him to three months' imprisonment. This he underwent at the prison of Péronne; after which he rejoined the Prince in London. The Prince sent Dr. Conneau to deposit the remains of his father and brother in the family vault at Saint-Leu-Taverny. After performing this service, he again rejoined the Prince, and accompanied him to France in 1848, after the Revolution, when, recalled by the votes of ten departments, Louis Napoleon took his seat in the National Assembly. On the establishment of the Empire, in 1852, Dr. Conneau was appointed First Court Physician. He was made a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour, and was elected deputy for the Somme in the Corps Législatif. In 1868 he was created a Senator. In 1870, Dr. Conneau was taken prisoner with the Emperor at Sedan, and was with him at Wilhelmshöhe and at Chislehurst till his death; after which he still retained his position there as the trusted counsellor and friend of the Empress and Prince Imperial. Dr. Conneau was married, and has left a wife and two children. Louis Conneau, the eldest, is about the same age as the Prince Imperial, and was for many years his playmate. He is now in the French army.

THE LATE DR. CONNEAU.

THE WALKER FINE-ART GALLERY, LIVERPOOL.

CASKET PRESENTED TO MR. A. B. WALKER, THE MAYOR OF LIVERPOOL.

The portrait is from a photograph by L. Crémère and Co., of Paris; it represents Dr. Conneau attired in the uniform of a Senator of the late French Empire.

THE WALKER FINE-ART GALLERY, LIVERPOOL.

The ceremony of presenting to the Corporation of Liverpool, and opening for the public enjoyment, a new building erected there by Mr. Andrew Barclay Walker, the Mayor of Liverpool, at his sole cost, for a gallery of fine art, took place on Thursday afternoon. It is nearly four years since Mr. Walker, entering upon the first year of his mayoralty, announced this munificent gift to his fellow-townsmen; and the portrait of that gentleman, which appeared in our Journal about the end of 1873, was accompanied with a due acknowledgment of his signal act of liberality and public spirit. The building, which has been completed at a total cost, we believe, much exceeding £40,000, is represented in one of our Illustrations this week. It is situated in William Brown-street, adjoining the Free Library and Museum presented to the town by the late Mr. William Brown, M.P., and nearly opposite to St. George's Hall. The new Fine-Art Gallery is opened with an exhibition of pictures, added to which there is a valuable and interesting collection of rare china, belonging to Major Walter. Some account of the proceedings on Thursday, in which the Earl of Derby was invited to take part, may be given in our next publication, with a description of the Fine-Art Gallery. The address of thanks to the Mayor, voted by the Corporation, in the name of the town of Liverpool, is inclosed in an ornamental casket, manufactured by Messrs. Elkington and Co., the design of which includes a representation of the building.

THEATRES.

LYCEUM.

In undertaking to adapt "The Dead Secret" of Mr. Wilkie Collins for the boards, the playwright met with a peculiar difficulty. In the estimation of the novelist's admirers the romance was already sufficiently dramatic, and alterations for the sake of stage convenience not needful. It is seldom, however, that a subject can be transferred from one art to another without accommodation. A picture but illustrates a poem indirectly, and demands its own specialty of treatment. No doubt the adapter had good reasons for the changes he thought it expedient to introduce. He resolved to make a ghost-drama of it, and, as in "Hamlet," to multiply the entrances of the apparition. Unfortunately, his ghost is a silent ghost, and therefore merely a stage convention, appearing and disappearing, exciting no terror, but rather contempt, as a poor mechanical thing, supposed to frighten Sarah Leeson, but not at all alarming the audience. What the ghost wanted, however, Miss Bateman, as the representative of the haunted heroine, had to supply. The supernatural was adjunct to her acting, and this, it must be confessed, is remarkably fine. Miss Bateman's attitudes and gestures, together with the tone of her speech, were all admirably studied and powerfully executed. The poor housekeeper, too, exhibits as a mother; and her interview with her three years' old child is, as we might have expected, unexceptionably pathetic. Credit, moreover, is due to the child, named on the bill Little Nelly, who performed her part charmingly. But Rosamond Frankland has a second representative, in Miss Virginia Francis, who duly appears as the adult heiress of Porthgenna, and contributes greatly to the pathos of the last scene. The adapter has taken some trouble with the butler, Mr. Munder, whose conversation is pedantically burdened with synonymous words. Of these Mr. Odell made the utmost, and insisted upon the audience laughing, which they did. Another character was also made impressive—that of Andrew Treverton, a misanthrope, thoroughly well interpreted by Mr. Clifford Cooper. Nor must we omit the part of the kind-hearted German artisan, Joseph Buschmann, most livingly portrayed by Mr. Edmund Lyons. The scene-painter, Mr. Hawes Craven, had done his best to make the situations attractive, and nothing might be added to the effectiveness of the Myrtle Room, in which "the dead secret" is for so long a time concealed.

The new melodrama was preceded by a new comedieta, entitled "A March Hare Hunt," by Mr. Frankfort Moore, which is not without merit.

OPERA COMIQUE.

This theatre was opened last Saturday for a brief season by Mr. John Radcliff with a new drama founded on Mrs. Burnett's Lancashire story, "That Lass o' Lowrie's," and named after her "Liz." The adapters are Messrs. Joseph Hatton and Arthur Matthison, who have, on the whole, abridged the tale judiciously, yet left here and there a superfluity of dialogue. Phil Lowrie, a drunken blackguard, serves as a foil to the brave and generous heroine, his daughter, whose love for the young mining engineer, Frederick Derry, becomes the motive for the dramatic action. The incidents of the piece are few, but striking. Through the ignorant obstinacy of the proprietor of the mine, Derry's life is placed in jeopardy; but the youth is saved by the vigilance of Liz, who subsequently becomes his wife. There is a considerable amount of character-painting in the persons of the scene. Among these is one "Owd Sammy," carefully realised by Mr. J. G. Taylor. Miss Rose Leclercq personates the heroine, and acts with a picturesque effect that adds much to the interest of the part. The new drama is successful.

Among the attractions of the Agricultural Hall, that of Mr. Hamilton's novel exhibition is not the least. The series consists of his "New Excursions to Russia and Turkey," starting from London Bridge and including the scenes and events at the seat of war, in which the public naturally now take so much interest. We have no fewer than forty-eight grand pictures, some of them deserving to be considered as regular theatrical sets, accompanied with dramatic action, representing, for instance, the attack of travellers by wolves on the road to Moscow, or the bombardment of the city and fortress of Kars. The lecture is pronounced by Mr. Charles Serrone, an elocutionist and vocalist of great power, whose patriotic songs are sufficiently exciting. One slight error, however, he made as to the Mohammedan cry of "Allah!" with which the Turks rush to battle. "Allah" he described as "the name of their god," as if it were that of an idol. It is nothing of the kind; it is simply the Arabic word for God, and not the name of any. The same word, differently pronounced, is used in the Hebrew Bible with the same meaning. Jew, Christian, and Turk worship the same God, or Allah; and the last, so far from being an idolater, figures in history as an iconoclast. Mr. Serrone might do well in correcting this slight mistake, and perhaps remove a serious prejudice prevalent among ignorant people into the bargain. This Russo-Turkish panorama is calculated to become exceedingly popular, and already attracts thousands of visitors at each representation.

The prize-meeting of the Oxfordshire Rifle Association took place on Monday at the hinksey Butts, near Oxford, in a continuous rain. The first prize of £16 and the bronze medal of the National Rifle Association were won by Sergeant Bennett, of Deddington, with a score of 58.

NEW BOOKS.

A burning question of the day, as was to be expected, is handled in A Woman-Hater, by Charles Reade, D.C.L. (William Blackwood and Sons), and handled with all that force and skill which the author has invariably displayed since his "Never too late to mend" fairly electrified the public. The three volumes, containing a story originally printed in Blackwood, will be found to fully sustain a reputation won long ago and maintained by a succession of masterly productions. Had the author only a little more invention, and a little more of the poetic faculty, he would be an English Victor Hugo, without the blemishes, too, which detract from the lustre of the French genius. If there be any virtue in scholarship, if in dramatic power, if in vigorous portraiture, if in artistic construction, if in knowledge of men and the world, if in picturesqueness, if in many-sidedness, if in lucid treatment of facts and theories, if in the gift of creating interest, if in a somewhat sardonic humour, if in command of language, if in nobility of sentiment, if in a striking and attractive quaintness, assuredly Mr. Reade excels in all these, and so applies them as to captivate his readers. Some, indeed, weak brethren as they are, he may occasionally appal and shock; but his strong meat is not for babes. His tone is above all things manly; and his manliness has sometimes about it a savour of the rough and rude. And yet he is pre-eminently a cultivated writer, though it may sometimes serve his purpose best to sink a little of his culture. And herein he shows his art; herein he faithfully reproduces the true condition of our social existence, in which the coarse and the refined are found together in all classes. As for the theme of the novel under consideration, it may be set forth in a single word, whether it seem better to use the compound term "she-doctors," or Mr. Reade's own simple term "doctresses." He, it can hardly be necessary to state, is a passionate advocate of a specious novelty, and urges his advocacy with almost irresistible warmth of conviction, cogency of argument, multiplication of carefully collected evidence, statistics, illustration, declamation, scorn, invective, abuse. His example, one Rhoda Gale, M.D., is, of course, an impossible incarnation of various faculties and talents, with more sense than all our Judges put together, more wisdom than Solomon, more professional knowledge than Æsculapius, more decision and fertility of resource than a veteran commander of armies, though she is but a very young woman; only he very wisely makes her an American, and so shelters himself from any serious charge of exaggeration. This is not the place for sustentation or refutation of his reasoning; but it may be allowable to offer a few remarks upon one or two points. It is open to those who differ from him to draw conclusions other than he has drawn from his collection of facts; to plead that if, as is certainly established, there lived skilful and famous doctresses before Miss Elizabeth Blackwell and Mrs. Garrett-Anderson, but their number, instead of increasing in the course of generations, dwindled down till a doctress came to be considered a monstrosity, the phenomenon would be reasonably regarded as a proof quite as much of failure in an experiment already tried as of encouragement towards a continuation or renewal of the experiment; and that if, as he himself declares, "the intellect of the average male is to the average female as ten to six," the question of equality between men and women is at once settled by the acknowledged superiority of the former. For it is by averages that we must be ruled in such matters; else (if it may be said without prejudice) we may have the learned pig, or other prodigious animal, thrust forward by enthusiasts as deserving of promotion out of its own species. He, it is true, maintains that the intellect of the average male is to that "of the picked female as ten to a hundred and fifty, or even less;" but then we have our picked male to fall back upon, who, if proportion is to be kept up, should excel the picked female by as much as the average confessedly excels the average. But the majority of us, perhaps, would prefer to drop such odious comparisons, to cheerfully grant that, on the whole, though not as regards some disputed matters, woman is vastly superior to man, and to agree, with a sigh, that women have a perfect right to turn doctresses, whether of medicine, or of law, or of philosophy, or coachwomen, or footwomen, or anything in the world, so long as their own instincts do not revolt against the conversion. At the same time, the majority of us will undoubtedly protest against the assumption that one swallow makes a summer, that an instance here and there of special fitness or peculiar ambition is to be received as indicating general aptitude and a common desire among the sex. However all this may be, Mr. Reade has once more presented us with a very powerful and very interesting novel. Ina Klossing, the queenly; Zoe Vizard, the lovely and lovable; Fanny Dover, the piquant and pinchable; Rhoda Gale, the practical and impossible;—these are all characters which will live for long in the reader's heart and memory. Vizard and Uxmoor are emphatically men, and noble men; Severne is an admirable and an unusual villain; Ashmead, the theatrical agent, is a gem, described with much drollery. That the style should be remarkable for abruptness, and that the first meeting between Vizard and Rhoda Gale should be unconventional, even to the verge of caricature, will surprise nobody to whom the author's bold treatment is familiar. He thinks nothing of making total strangers, of the opposite sexes, talk, from the very first, as only intimate acquaintances would talk in a lively comedy upon the stage. Indeed, banter is his chief seasoning; and a very agreeable seasoning it is.

An Italian, at the present juncture, struggling to do justice to Turkey and the Turks, is a spectacle no less edifying than that which is proverbially presented to the gods by an honest man struggling with adversity; and such a spectacle is exhibited in the two large volumes entitled Two Years of the Eastern Question, by A. Gallenga (Samuel Tinsley). The author and his style are too well known to render any observations upon his performance, regarded from the literary point of view, at all necessary; he has long been among the accepted correspondents of the Times, and that is almost sufficient of itself to testify that, so far as the mere art of writing is concerned, he is a master of the craft, and puts what he has to say before his readers in the most telling fashion. Nor has he disdained to go over old ground. He appears to have been as innocent as the unborn babe, before he started in 1874 from Rome for Constantinople, of any personal acquaintance with the land he was about to visit; and he could not, therefore, be expected to resist, as indeed he has not resisted, the temptation of re-describing what has been so often described, from the Sultan proceeding to his prayers at the mosque down to the scavengery performed by the multitudinous and masterless dogs. His description is, of course, very skilful and readable. But something more important lies at the bottom of the Eastern Question; and one is a little impatient until he enters upon that. He professes to view it and the events connected with it not so much in the character of "an advocate" as in that of "a judge or jurymen;" but some little doubt is thrown upon his profession by a quotation which he adopts as his motto. The quotation is from Ariosto, who asks why the "dirty Turk" is allowed to hold Constantinople and the fairest portion of the world, and who recommends that the monster should be packed bag and baggage out of Europe. Oh! that Ariosto's advice had been acted upon in Ariosto's own day! Then we should have been spared the horrors and difficulties of the present. But it must be admitted that the quotation does not look promising for the impartiality of a gentleman who undertook to watch the course of affairs in the East during "the best part of the period elapsing between the outbreak of the Herzegovinian insurrection and the declaration of the Russian War." And yet that gentleman manifestly tries hard to play the part of Justice. His work, however, is by this time somewhat antiquated; and he himself must be more astonished and, perhaps, cast down than anybody else at the difference between what he has seen, in common with the rest of the world, and what he was at the outset led to believe that he should see. For, what went he out for to see? He was told that he would witness "the agony and death of a Sick Old Man—older and more sick than the Pope himself," that he "should be present at the reading of his last will and testament," and that he should "report any squabbles which might arise as to the settlement of his inheritance." So bad a prophet was the Times: and he had to come home without seeing any of the promised sights, without having the opportunity of performing the chief part of his commission. In the meanwhile, he had, apparently, been led to become a sort of adherent of General Ignatieff, and he had certainly managed to make himself distasteful to Sir Henry Elliot. How both those results were brought about he explains at some length; and his explanation will probably be found generally interesting. In other respects his volumes, as a record of travel and observation, are pretty sure to be read with satisfaction; as a contribution towards a better appreciation of the past and a sound forecast of the future, as regards the settlement of the Eastern Question, they are hardly calculated to meet with much acceptance. He is an Italian, Anglicised it is true, but still an Italian; and, though his English is excellent, he naturally betrays the influences of his nationality, so far as it is inimical to whatever the Pope is believed to favour.

This is a country famous for "expeditions" in search of a north-west passage; and in such a country the stout volume entitled Danish Greenland: its People and its Products, by Dr. Henry Rink, edited by Dr. Robert Brown, F.L.S., F.R.G.S. (Henry S. King and Co.), is not likely to lack readers. For not only is the subject one which is calculated to attract the general attention of Englishmen, but the author, who has already won golden opinions by his "Tales and Traditions of the Eskimo," was peculiarly if not uniquely fitted for the task he has accomplished, and the editor is the very gentleman who so ably edited the aforesaid "Tales and Traditions." The volume contains a useful map, and is profusely illustrated. And of the illustrations, if it cannot be truly said that they adorn the pages, it may be most certainly predicted that they are more acceptable than they would be if they fulfilled the mere purpose of adornment. They are, in fact, specimens of the not very high standard which the Eskimo have reached in pictorial art; "the lithographs," we are assured, "are exact copies of pictures made by natives." It must be admitted that the natives, though perhaps they could not help it, have not represented their beauties of face or limb in such flattering fashion as might render them liable to an accusation of self-conceit. A caricaturist could scarcely have made them look, with a few exceptions, more disproportionate, insignificant, grotesque, and idiotic. The volume is distinguished by another peculiar and interesting feature. "As regards Greenland life," says the author, "no one will deny that it would be very interesting to see it pictured by the Greenlanders themselves." Now, "in a journal published among them in the Ekimo language articles have been now and then inserted written by natives, chiefly on adventures in their hunting and travelling life;" and, accordingly, "a selection from these is inserted in the present book, literally translated, and only abridged in some places." As for the author's own share in the work, it is easy to give an idea of the elaborate scale upon which he has proceeded. He commences with some historical remarks, including a notice of the events which led to the "foundation of the present European stations in Greenland by the well-known missionary, Hans Egede." He then devotes some chapters to observations upon the physical features of the country, the climate, the water-courses, lakes, and sea. The "products and resources of the land" are then discussed. He afterwards treats of the "capture of seals and whales," and, generally, of "the fishes and fisheries of Greenland." The inhabitants, their means of subsistence, their habits, manners, laws and customs, together with their condition of knowledge and enlightenment, are subsequently dealt with. Ultimately many pages are occupied in an exposition of many things, if not everything, connected with the "Royal trade monopoly," founded in 1774, with European life in Greenland, and with the "topography of the trade stations and their appertaining districts." Added to all this are voluminous appendices and an index, the former relating to glaciers and the origin of the floating icebergs, to geological and mineralogical questions, to the Eskimo language, and to the flora and fauna of Greenland. It must be pretty clear, therefore, that, so far as Danish Greenland is concerned, there is a very full meal prepared for those who hunger after information upon the subject, and the meal is set before them in a very quaint and appetising fashion.

Information, such as would be expected from the title, cannot truthfully be said to abound in the pages of Service in Serbia Under the Red Cross, by Emma Maria Pearson and Louisa Elizabeth MacLaughlin (Tinsley Brothers), although the hope expressed at the end of the volume that "some amusement, and possibly some instruction," may be found therein, is not unlikely to be fulfilled. It is obvious, however, to remark that amusement is not exactly what one would look for in a record of the certainly benign, but as certainly disagreeable and even disgusting, duties discharged by brave and philanthropic ladies who adopt the noble badge of the Red Cross. Perhaps to that very desire of providing amusement may be attributed the scanty account which Miss Pearson, who appears to have spoken or written "for self and friend," has thought proper to give of the details appertaining to their special functions. But she has chosen rather to write in the character of one who was a mere traveller and general observer than as a nurse and comforter of the sick and wounded, during the late war between Turkey and Serbia; though it is true that she omits no opportunity of picking holes and finding fault in the work and with the personal conduct of persons whose ideas of administration, as regards ambulances and their accessories, differ from her own. Against a certain pretty widow she makes insinuations, and against Colonel Loyd-Lindsay and the National Aid Society she brings charges which, however just their foundation may be, are put forward in a manner irresistibly suggestive of the spite commonly called feminine. She deliberately and frequently mentions the gentleman without any title of courtesy or military rank; a course which, no doubt, she had a perfect right to adopt if she thought it becoming in a lady, but which is decidedly offensive. And she may appear to some readers to parade a little ostentatiously the personal discomforts, annoyances, and indispositions from which she and her companion suffered. Those readers will probably think within themselves that a lady would do well to weigh her liabilities before she starts upon an errand of mercy and philanthropy, and make up her mind to preserve a dignified silence. To complain of dirty sheets on a pleasure-trip is reasonable enough; but in a campaign, in a matter of life and death, such things are beneath consideration. The writer, no doubt, made light of them at the time, and only treasured up the memory of them with a view of filling her pages; but to chronicle such comparative trivialities at all is to run a risk of having it suspected that her heart was not wholly in her grand and sacred mission. Some few statements she has advanced which are really important and worthy of serious attention, based as they are either upon trustworthy authority or upon her own personal experience. For instance, she asserts that in the last battle of the Servian campaign "four thousand Russians fell," the number given to her "afterwards by the Russian adjutant" whom she "had met on board the Deligrad, and who burst into tears as he told the tale." Now, if memory may be trusted, it has been declared over and over again that there were not more than two thousand Russians altogether in the Servian army. She states, moreover, at p. 172, that "no quarter was given" as if that were the general rule. She relates that the Servians, "gentle and courteous fellows," were "kicked about by the Russians with oaths and blasphemy," and that when it was objected, "You come here to help; why override the natives thus?" the answer, which she heard, was, "Help! help a set of curs? No; we come to open our road to Constantinople; and you English cannot and shall not prevent it." She draws a very displeasing picture of General Tcherniaeff and his aides-de-camp, haughty and bullying; and she gibbets a "Russian officer" who "had kicked a poor woman with his spurred boot because he thought she had cheated him of a piastre." Of another Russian, presumably an officer, she says: "One of them, on hearing we were English, spat at my feet, and on my asking if he did that on purpose to insult my country he did it again." However, she has hardly a higher opinion of the Turk than of the Russian, or of Colonel Loyd-Lindsay, apparently, than of either. Turk is pot, she seems to think, and Russian is kettle; and, as regards both of them, she seriously asks, "Is it right to send assistance to such savages?" The assistance she means is such as she and the societies of the Red Cross afford; and the ground on which she would withhold it is that "no quarter is given" on either side, the proof being that "in all Servia there was but one wounded Turk, and we have reason to believe there were no wounded Serbs or Russians in the Turkish ambulances." And, if anyone should ask how this is to be reconciled with what is said of the "Turkish prisoners" at p. 253, the answer is that they were taken at a very early date; for "the Servians did give quarter till the Russians came." But are no prisoners taken now, in Europe or Asia, on either side? And, even if there were not, it would be surely the more reason for teaching humanity by example. Yet our sister of the Red Cross says:—"A man whose hands are red with the blood of some helpless and wounded enemy—is he to come back, possibly wounded himself, and be treated with every care and kindness? Humanity itself revolts against it." Yet one would say that humanity, Christian humanity, asks no questions, judges no man; it does but relieve suffering, the suffering of the wild beast as well as of the civilised being, hoping from gratitude a transformation not otherwise, perhaps, to be effected. Moreover, example is better than precept. On the whole, our sister of the Red Cross has written a book which is more likely to commend itself to the public for its brief sketch of Servian history and for its descriptions of places and persons and adventures in Servia than for its writer's spirit and tone.

Anybody who proposes to visit any of the places treated of in South by East, by G. F. Rodwell, Science-Master in Marlborough College (Marcus Ward and Co.), may be strongly recommended to take a preliminary canter through the pages of that interesting and instructive volume, abounding with evidences of intelligent study, profound appreciation, refined taste, and general cultivation. Take the volume bodily, as a delightful companion, one would say, if it were not that the book is too large to be comfortably stowed away among such baggage as the ordinary tourist is wont to carry. In a lady's trunk, however, it would go easily; and it would help to pass away most agreeably those hours of evening which are found to hang so heavily within the walls of the dreary hotel. It is well said to be provided "with numerous illustrations;" for in number they exceed a hundred, and for excellence they are as noticeable as for number. The author qualifies his work as "notes of travel in Southern Europe;" and he has neither studied continuity nor laid himself out for such formal description as may be found in the guide-books, but he has "jotted down ideas and impressions which presented themselves" from time to time as he journeyed from spot to spot. Let us glance at a few of the themes upon which he discourses. He commences with his "general impressions of Northern Italy;" and, on his way thither, he has an opportunity of judging whether he shall side with those who find the passage through the tunnel of Mont Cenis oppressive or with those who do not. It is a disputed point; and it is pleasant to be able to agree with him that the tunnel "is perfectly ventilated," and that "no discomfort is experienced in passing through it." The many celebrated Italian cities, of course, furnish him with many an occasion for expressing his views and sentiments, and for an unpretentious exhibition of his learning; and it is astonishing that he should have been able to invest an old subject with so much novelty. It is not everybody who will agree with him, however, that "the Campo Santo of Pisa is certainly the most remarkable and beautiful cemetery in Italy." If the pre-eminence in remarkability be granted, yet, especially if site and the consequent prospect count for anything in the choice, the cemetery at Genoa is not unlikely to be preferred for sheer beauty. Monte Cassino and its monastery evidently engraved themselves upon his heart; and he opines that, if a certain combination, which he mentions, of honourable conditions, "conduce most to individual happiness, and to the sum total of earthly felicity," then "the monks of Monte Cassino must be the happiest of men." Indeed, they seem to have inspired him to an outburst of blank verse; at any rate, the pages so filled are not attributed to any hand but his. Then follows a chapter concerning Naples, a chapter to which some of the most striking among the illustrations are attached. After this we are carried off to Messina, Taormina, Catania, Syracuse, Palermo, and Girgenti, Athens, and Cairo. As regards Girgenti, he made it his business to test "the acoustic peculiarity of the cathedral, which has given rise to a good story," a story connected with "the priest in absolutism," and he comes to the conclusion that the story, like most good stories, must have owed its origin rather to a good invention than to truth. In the chapter relating to Athens the author, referring to the progress which the Greeks have lately been making in literature as well as in other things, gives some interesting specimens of the manner in which certain plays of Shakspeare have been translated into modern Greek. He concludes with a funny anecdote, not based upon anything very new and spun out unconsciously; and indeed, throughout the volume, whenever he indulges, and he does now and then indulge, his facetious vein, he is ponderous and long-winded to the verge of irritation.

The same objection that was made to the "Balacava" volume of The Invasion of the Crimea, by A. W. Kinglake (William Blackwood and Sons), applies also to its successor, the sixth of the "cabinet edition;" and that objection is that, if you once begin to read, you are as helpless in the author's hands as the wedding-guest was in those of the Ancient Mariner, you must go on reading, you cannot refrain from poring over the wonderful story of "Inkerman." This is all very well, and more than very well, for those who have never had the privilege before; but for those whose duty it is simply to announce the appearance of an old favourite, in a new and revised form, it is, though by no means a waste of time, a decided hindrance. Howbeit, the hindrance is of not only a tolerable but a very agreeable kind. Inkerman was in some respects more wonderful than Balacava; less magnificent, perhaps, but more like war. And yet the former was more prolific than the latter in those examples of individual prowess, of British tens withstanding Russian hundreds, which remind one of the feats performed by David's mighty men, or of the exploits sung by Homer to the everlasting renown of Achilles, Diomed, Ajax, Hector, Deiphobus, Æneas, and other Grecian and Trojan heroes, and which modern science might have been supposed to have rendered obsolete and irremovable. We hold our breath as we read of the stupendous charge delivered by Colonel Daubeny and his thirty men against a battalion some six hundred strong; or, before that event took place, as we contemplate the incidents which occurred in the neighbourhood of the Sandbag Battery, the peril and the constancy of the Guards, the agony of the Duke of Cambridge, and the rescue of the threatened colours. Well may we "remember, remember the fifth of November," not for the perpetuation of religious animosity but for the commemoration of gallant deeds, when "our thin English lines" strove against the "huge Russian masses," and when our French allies stood manfully by us. The volume just now derives additional interest from the bearing it has upon the charges and counter-charges of "atrocities;" for it shows how General Canrobert and Lord Raglan were led to combine "in denouncing to Prince Mentschikoff the atrocious acts of his soldiery." One of their victims was an officer, who was at the time Adjutant of the 95th, and whose experience must have led him to form a high idea of a human being's vitality, but a low one of either his foes' or his friends' humanity; for it appears that after he, though wounded, had been fired at, prodded with bayonets, belaboured with musket-butts, and left for dead by the Russians, he was lifted up and "banged down heavily on the ground" by some well-meaning English soldiers, just to discover if he were still alive. That officer is believed to be living yet; and it is, perhaps, as much owing to his experience of friendly treatment as to anything else that "he speaks with no savageness of his assailants, and is quite ready to make full allowance for the excesses of a soldiery excited and fighting in brushwood."

MUSICAL EDUCATION IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Dr. Hullah has laid before the Committee of Privy Council on Education the report of his fifth annual inspection of the training colleges in Great Britain, and of his examinations of the students in music. The number of students who presented themselves was unprecedentedly large, being 1964, or 116 in excess of the largest number in any previous year; and the quality of the instruction given in the colleges has continued to improve. There is, however, Dr. Hullah states, no sensible decrease in the number of students who enter the colleges without any musical skill or science whatever; and, as a proof of this, out of the 1964 students who presented themselves at his examinations, and the majority of whom had been pupil teachers, 803 admitted that they had entered their colleges wholly ignorant of music.

As to the possibility of enabling such students to become satisfactory teachers of singing by note, the inspector points out that it would involve a sacrifice of time which the colleges are unprepared to make, and an amount of labour on the part of the students which it is unreasonable to expect should be long sustained. In other words, Dr. Hullah holds that, if the future teachers in the elementary schools of the country are to be really competent to instruct their pupils in the art of singing at sight, their own musical education must be commenced when they are themselves at school, instead of being left to the short period of their stay in the colleges.

Dr. Hullah reports, as to the actual results of his examinations, that there were very few failures, and of these the majority were in students from Scottish colleges; but this he ascribes not to any inferiority, incapability, or disinclination for music on the part of the Scottish people, but to the fact that the students had come up to Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Aberdeen from distant rural districts, where it is almost impossible to obtain instruction. In the Scottish training colleges, the inspector says that not only is vocal music taught skilfully and zealously, but instrumental music also, and far more systematically and generally than in the English.

In regard to instrumental music, the number of students able to "accompany" themselves is reported to be steadily increasing, and at Liverpool, Wandsworth, Lincoln, and York, all the students receive instruction in instrumental music, while at Culham College there is a band of wind instruments. On the other hand, Dr. Hullah mentions a case in which the musical instructor of a female training college, a professor of the highest rank, had offered, without cost to the college, to instruct the students in the pianoforte; but his offer was declined.

The experience of another year's work leads the inspector to adhere to the scepticism he had already expressed as to the existence of entire musical incapacity, even in persons who have attained middle life without giving any attention to music, and he holds to his absolute disbelief in its existence among young persons. As an instance, he cites a case where students were presented to him as "voiceless and earless," but who possessed, as he found on investigation, contralto voices in as yet unformed conditions, so that they had consequently great difficulty in using their "second registers" at all, and greater in passing from one register to the other.

A part of Dr. Hullah's system of examination consists in hearing each student sing a solo previously studied, and here he notes an improvement not only in execution but in the selection—"the list of songs to be sung in some of the colleges might," he adds, "have satisfied the most critical taste, including, as they often did, fairly representative compositions of the very best masters."

Dr. Hullah concludes by insisting upon the importance of teaching the children in the elementary schools to sing by note, instead of, as at present is generally the case, to sing only "by ear." One means of effecting an improvement in this respect would, Dr. Hullah urges, be by the extension of musical inspection from the training colleges to the elementary schools, and he submits to the Committee of Council a plan for carrying out his suggestion.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

EXAMINATION FOR HONOURS IN LONDON UNIVERSITY.

FIRST CLASS B.A. ONLY.

ENGLISH.—First Class: J. W. Greig (Exhibition), University College; W. T. A. Barber, Caius College, Cambridge; and A. G. Leonard, University College (equal). Second Class: A. Barker, Borough-road Training College and private study; T. Coppock, Owens College; R. A. Freeman, private study. Third Class: A. M. Shelverton, King's College and private study; H. F. Ede, Owens College; T. Capsey, Lanc. Indep. and Owens College; G. E. Ford, University and Harrison's Coll.; P. H. Lockhart, University Coll.

LATIN.—First Class: H. H. C. Thurston (Exhibition), Stonyhurst College; T. F. Althaus, University College; J. P. Crowley, St. Stanislaus College, Tullamore; A. Hillard, New College, Eastbourne, and T. Slater, Stonyhurst College (equal); J. Browne, Stonyhurst College, and W. H. Findlay, Merton College, Oxford (equal); C. T. Galton, Beaumont College; J. De Courcy Atkins, private study; J. Priestley, Owens College. Second Class: A. W. Ward, Wesley College, Sheffield; H. M. Shelverton, King's College and private study; A. Hughes, Owens College; T. Hickson, private study. Third Class: E. D. Stern, private tuition; T. Coppock, Owens College; O. E. Bodington, Giggleswick School.

FRANCE.—First Class: T. F. Althaus, University College (prize); J. J. Beusmaker, private study, obtained the number of marks qualifying for the Exhibition or for the Prize. Second Class: E. D. Stern, private tuition. Third Class: J. Taylor, Didsbury College and private study; W. T. A. Barber, Caius College, Cambridge; W. H. Findlay, Merton College, Oxford; O. E. Bodington, Giggleswick School.

GERMAN.—First Class: T. F. Althaus, University College (prize); J. J. Beusmaker, private study; C. T. Galton, Beaumont College.

FIRST B.A. AND FIRST B.Sc. JOINTLY.

MATHEMATICS.—First Class: W. H. Gunston, first B.A. (Exhibition), St. John's College, Cambridge; J. Larmor, first B.Sc., St. John's College, Cambridge, obtained the number of marks qualifying for the Exhibition or for the Prize. Second Class: A. E. Steinthal, first B.A., Owens College; W. T. A. Barber, first B.A., Caius College, Cambridge. Third Class: W. Deffries, first B.A., University College; A. Hughes, first B.A., Owens College; J. De Courcy Atkins, first B.A., private study; J. M'Grath, first B.A., St. Stanislaus College, Tullamore.

FIRST B.Sc. AND PRELIMINARY M.B. JOINTLY.

CHEMISTRY.—First Class: C. F. Cross, first B.Sc. (Exhibition), King's and Owens Colleges, and W. H. Thomas, first B.Sc. (disqualified by age for the Exhibition), Royal College of Chemistry (equal). Second Class: A. H. N. Lewers, first B.Sc., University College; A. Barron, first B.Sc., Owens College. Third Class: C. E. Cassal, first B.Sc., University College; H. I. Bell, first B.Sc., private study; H. Marriott, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc., Owens College, and H. Pearce, first B.Sc., University College (equal); F. W. Stoddart, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc., University College, Bristol.

EXPERIMENTAL PHYSICS.—First Class: J. Larmor, first B.Sc. (Arnot Medal), St. John's College, Cambridge; M. J. Jackson, first B.Sc. (Arnot Medal), University College. Second Class: H. E. Harrison, first B.Sc., University College, and H. Pearce, first B.Sc. (equal), University College. Third Class: E. L. Adeney, first B.Sc., Guy's Hospital, and O. J. Currie, first B.Sc., Guy's Hospital.

BOTANY.—First Class: P. N. Bose, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc., University College. Second Class: W. H. Horrocks, first B.Sc., Owens College; H. Edmonds, first B.Sc., private study; E. Jones, first B.Sc., St. Bartholomew's Hospital; H. H. Hoole, first B.Sc., Charing-cross Hospital, and G. H. S. Pearson, first B.Sc., private study (equal). Third Class: W. H. Hill, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc., University College; D. J. Rygate, first B.Sc., London Hospital.

ZOOLOGY.—First Class: S. J. Hickson, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc. (Exhibition), University College; S. H. C. Martin, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc., University College. Second Class: D. D. Day, first B.Sc., St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Third Class: P. N. Bose, first B.Sc. and first B.Sc., University College; H. Edmonds, first B.Sc., private study; A. G. Salmon, first B.Sc., St. Bartholomew's Hospital; G. H. S. Pearson, first B.Sc., private study.

A scheme for the foundation of the Langton Fellowship at Owens College was agreed upon at a meeting of the subscribers yesterday week. The fund, which already amounts to £4286, will be divided into two parts—five sixths to be appropriated to the Langton Fellowship, and the other one sixth to the Langton History Scholarship.

The Gazette announces the issue of letters patent declaring that the degrees of Bachelor and Master of Arts and Bachelor and Doctor of Laws and of Medicine, hereafter to be granted or conferred by the University of the Cape of Good Hope, shall be recognised as academic distinctions and rewards of merit, and be entitled to rank, precedence, and consideration in the United Kingdom and in the colonies and possessions of the Crown throughout the world, as fully as if the said degrees had been granted by a University of the United Kingdom.

The division lists of the Oxford local examinations have been issued. There has been a large increase of candidates over the number examined last year, the total this year being 2304—namely, 1671 juniors, and 633 seniors; 990 passed in the junior division and 412 in the senior. Of the seniors 21 passed in the first division. The first named in the order of merit is that of H. T. Lilley, of Bermondsey, aged eighteen, from St. Olave's Grammar School, Southwark; 33 were placed in the second class, and 358 in the third. Of the juniors, 99 passed in the first division. F. W. Kellett, of Liverpool, aged fourteen, from Kingswood School, Bath, is the first in order of merit; 177 were in the second division, and 714 in the third.

The following is a list of the candidates for her Majesty's Indian Medical Service who were successful at the competitive examination recently held at Burlington House:—Messrs. Alexander Thom, Samuel John Thompson, Edward Salisbury Brander, Robert Manser, Robert Neil Campbell, George Augustus Emerson, Henry Adey, Fakir Chundra Chatterjee, Edmund Tulley, Alfred William Frederick Street, Charles Henry Bennett, David Charles Davidson, Henry Preece Jarvis, Henry Charles Harding Peacocke, Beranji Nasarvangi Koyaji, William Henry Thornhill, Arthur Francis Sargent, Maneckjee Eduljee Reporter, and Robert Henry Robinson. Twenty-eight candidates competed for nineteen appointments. Twenty-six were reported qualified, and two retired from the examination.

The attention of students for the Bar is called to the following rules for the Michaelmas examination for pass certificates:—Students admitted after Dec. 31, 1872, are required to have passed a satisfactory examination in the subjects of Roman civil law, the law of real and personal property, common law, and equity. No student shall be examined until he shall have kept nine terms, except that students admitted after that day shall have the option of passing the examination in Roman civil law at any time after having kept four terms. Each student proposing to submit himself for examination in October will be required to enter his name personally or by letter at the treasurer's or steward's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs on or before Wednesday, Oct. 10 next; and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to obtain a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar, or whether he is merely desirous of passing the examination in Roman civil law under the above-mentioned rule. The examination will commence on Monday, Oct. 22 next, at ten, on "The Law of Real and Personal Property;" Tuesday morning, Oct. 23, at ten, on "Common Law;" Wednesday morning, Oct. 24, at ten, on "Roman Law;" and in the afternoon, at two, on "Constitutional Law and Legal History;" Thursday morning, Oct. 25, at ten, on "Equity." Only students admitted prior to Jan. 1, 1873, and who are candidates for a pass certificate, have an option in passing in constitutional law, &c.

Under the new scheme of the Charity Commissioners for the Administration of the King's School, Canterbury, the boys will attend religious services at the cathedral as heretofore, unless exemption from such attendance be claimed by the parent or guardian. The Head Master, who must be a member of the Church of England, and a graduate of some University in the United Kingdom, will receive a fixed stipend of £200 a year, and a capitation grant on a scale for the attendance of boys.

RUINS OF NICOPOLIS AFTER THE BOMBARDMENT—SKETCHED FROM THE SHORE OF THE DANUBE.

NICOPOLIS: LOWER PART OF THE CITY, NEAR THE DANUBE.
SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

MORNING HYMN AT SEBASTIAN
BY PERMISSION OF THE BERLIN

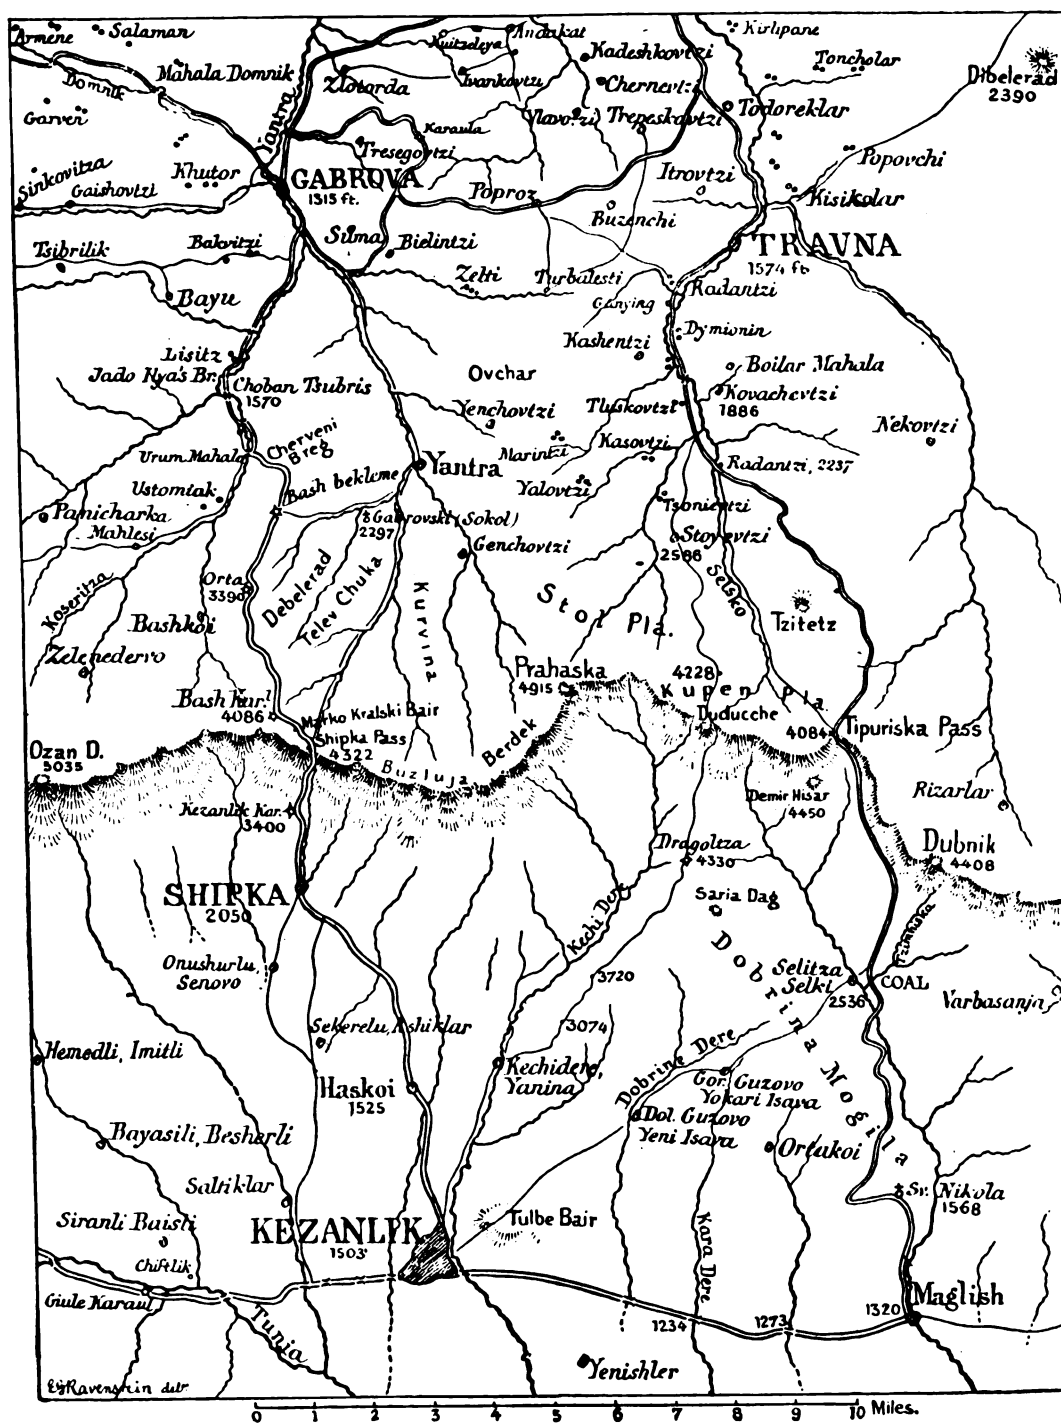

BACH'S. BY T. E. ROSENTHAL.
PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPANY.

THE WAR: MASSACRES AT BAYAZID, IN ASIA.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE SHIPKA PASS.

Our Map of the country extending about twenty miles north and south of the Balkan range of mountains, between Gabrova and Kezanlik, including the road over the Shipka Pass and those which cross the mountains farther eastward, descending south into the Tundja Valley, will assist the comprehension of recent military actions in that part of the seat of war. The advance of Suleiman Pasha from Kezanlik, with his army of thirty thousand men, after the retreat of the Russians to the north of the Balkans, occasioned some of the most obstinate and sanguinary conflicts that have yet taken place. The Russians had left but weak defences in the Shipka Pass; and on the 21st ult., when their positions up there hardly withstood the first attack of Suleiman Pasha, they had great cause to fear the result. Next day, however, only a musketry engagement took place, the Turks constructing batteries and shelter trenches. On the 23rd a violent attack upon the Pass was made from three sides, but during the day the first Russian reinforcement, consisting of a brigade of Rifles, arrived, and these troops succeeded in capturing a height on the right flank. The eclipse of the moon put an end to the fighting. On the 24th a lively cannonade was maintained against the Russians, who, however, still held all their positions. On the 25th a heavy artillery fire was directed upon the Pass; and on the same day Suleiman Pasha was reinforced by the Philippopolis division. He had then, apparently, only one redoubt to take in the Pass; but to reach this would be a fearful difficulty, as the outworks were situated very high up, at an almost inaccessible point. The redoubt, too, could scarcely be reached with shell from ordinary artillery, and it was found necessary to bring up mortars. The water supply to the fort, however, had been cut off by the Turks. They were by this time in possession of three points commanding the inlet, the centre, and the outlet of the Pass. The fighting had been terrific, and it continued altogether seven days. The Turks assaulted the positions with reckless bravery, such as has seldom been recorded in the history of any war. The Russians, too, struggled desperately, firing all kinds of mitraille, showing that they were short of ammunition. The bayonet was freely used, charges and counter-charges being made within twenty yards of the position. Reinforcements were arriving throughout the engagement, fresh men were constantly brought into the fight, the Turks down in the valley and along the steep ridges maintaining an incessant struggle, one moment repelling an attack and the next making one. The carnage was something fearful. No exact plan or account of the battles has been issued, and no description is possible except this—that the fighting took place over the tops of the mountains, and that many thousands of troops were struggling desperately for the final possession of one of the highest summits. Unhappily, the moonlight permitted the combat to be carried on by night as well as by day, thus lending additional horror to the struggle. At last, one day about the middle of last week, Suleiman Pasha desisted from the attempt to storm the positions of the Shipka Pass. He left five thousand Turkish dead between the Shipka village and the fringes of Mount St. Nicholas. Cannonades have since been exchanged. There remain still formally confronting the Russians a few battalions of Egyptians, with some cannon on the heights, and a few miscellaneous battalions in Shipka. The Russian commander, General Radetsky, is now holding the Pass with the 14th Division, a brigade of the 9th Division, the Rifles, the Bulgarians, and a detachment of Foot Cossacks, with strong artillery. From an expression attributed to him, we infer that he thinks it quite possible that he may be again attacked. But General Nepokoitchitzky, the Chief of the Staff, having examined the positions last week, refused to change them, and has sent the Second Division and the detachment of the Eleventh Division away from Shipka, as being no longer required there. The figures in our Map show the height above sea level.

MAP OF THE SHIPKA PASS OVER THE BALKANS.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

The Liberal clubs of Leigh and Tyldesley had an excursion to Hawarden on Saturday last. In responding to a vote of thanks, Mr. Gladstone spoke of the advantages of co-operation, especially in reference to working-class amusements. Turning to public affairs, he said that he had been accused of using violent language; but he denied that he had used stronger language than the circumstances required. He spoke of the Turkish Government as one that had put itself beyond the pale of belief, except where its statements were confirmed in other quarters; and he referred to the evidence of Colonel Wellesley as disproving the charges which had been brought against the Russians by the Turkish Government at the very time that the cruelties perpetrated by its own armies had caused the German Government to remonstrate with it. Cruelties had, however, been committed by the Bulgarians in revenge; but he trusted that the Russians would treat the guilty persons in a way exactly the reverse of that in which the Turkish Government treated the Mohammedans who committed the atrocities in Bulgaria last year. He hoped the Russian Government would deliver the oppressed provinces without turning the work to selfish aims, and then it would earn immortal glory.

A great demonstration of the members of the Lancashire, Yorkshire, and Cheshire Conservative Associations was held in Manchester last Saturday. Resolutions of complete confidence in the policy, past and present, of the existing Government were passed, and the meeting was addressed by several members of Parliament and prominent local Conservatives.

General Sir A. H. Gordon, M.P., was present at the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone for a public hall at Old Meldrum on Saturday last. At the banquet which followed, replying to a toast, the gallant General said he considered the Ministerial statements which had been made were tantamount to an assurance that this country would not go to war until Parliament had decided the question. Subsequently, replying on behalf of the House of Commons, he referred to the obstruction which had been offered to the transaction of public business by Irish members, and said it was absolutely necessary that next Session such rules should be passed as would prevent the recurrence of the obstruction, and if Irish members lost the privileges which minorities now had, it was entirely their own blame. He expressed himself in favour of continuing the Scotch Board of Education as a permanent institution.

Mr. Thomson Gibson Bowles, the Conservative candidate for Darlington at the last election, addressed a public meeting there last Monday night on the Eastern Question. The acts of Russia were, he contended, largely tinged with savagery, cruelty, and brutality. Russia had stirred up this war by fomenting rebellions in Herzegovina and Serbia. The Bulgarian atrocities were exaggerated by Mr. Baring, who said there were 2000 more people killed at Batak than was actually the case. India was menaced by the war. Turkey was the outside shell of the barrier to India, and if that was pierced then the road to India, which lay through Turkey, would be open. He deprecated the proposal that England should seize Egypt. The Turks, he said, were fighting our battles. If the Russians succeeded they would take Armenia and the Euphrates Valley, the direct road to India. Every Englishman should hope, for the sake of his country, that the Turks would succeed in repelling the invasion of Russia.

Dr. Kenealy addressed a meeting of his constituents at Hanley on Monday. He praised the conduct of the Irish obstructives, and said that they had done more public service during the past Session than the whole of the Liberal Opposition. He denounced the Russians as guilty of far greater cruelties than ever had been committed by the Turks. The object of Russia in invading Turkey was, he said, to destroy our rule in India.

At a meeting of Home Rulers held at Hull on Monday night—Mr. Parnell, M.P., in the chair—a lecture on the Irish Parliamentary policy was delivered by Mr. J. O'Connor Power, M.P. The speakers contended that the policy of obstruction in Parliament, if continued, was calculated to bring about good results and to increase the feeling in favour of Home Rule. Resolutions in support of Home Rule and of the obstructive policy were passed.

Sir Charles Dilke, M.P. for Chelsea, addressed a meeting of his constituents on Tuesday night in the vestry hall of that borough. Lord Kensington, M.P., took the chair. Sir Charles Dilke reviewed the past Session, and urged the necessity for a redistribution of political power. On the Eastern Question he said he blamed the past conduct of negotiations by the Government, but could not sympathise with the eulogists of Russia. It seemed unlikely that the war would end this year, and it was, therefore, the less necessary that they should discuss the future of the Turkish Empire. Should the break up of the Turkish dominion in Europe come, he hoped that the claims of Greece would not be overlooked, or, in the interests not so much of England as of the Egyptian people, the claims of England to hold rule in Egypt. A vote of confidence in Sir Charles Dilke was passed.

The leaders of the Conservative party in Bradford and in the Northern Division of the West Riding have resolved upon establishing a club which will be known as the Bradford and County Conservative Club. The president of the club is the Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy, M.P., and the vice-presidents Mr. F. S. Powell and Mr. W. Fison. Many leading Conservatives have already joined the club.

WORK AND WAGES.

A meeting took place last Monday, at Bolton, between representatives of the master cotton-spinners and of the operatives—12,000 of the latter being now unemployed, owing to a proposal to reduce wages 5 per cent. The operatives offered to work for two years at the old wages if the masters would engage that no reduction shall be made. The masters, however, insist that the present state of trade demands a reduction, and declined the proposal. The strike, therefore, continues.

At Barnsley, a largely attended meeting of the South Yorkshire and North Derbyshire Miners' Council was held on Monday to consider the demand of the coalowners of South Yorkshire and North Derbyshire for a reduction of 5 per cent. made at Sheffield. A long discussion took place, the question being debated from every possible standpoint; and it was unanimously resolved not to submit to any reduction whatever, or to refer the matter to arbitration.

The manager of the Silkstone and Dodworth Collieries has offered certain terms to the men on strike at one of the pits under his management. The terms were considered by the York Miners' Association, and a decision was made to refer the dispute to arbitration. The strike affects 4000 men, and has lasted sixteen weeks.

The limestone miners in the district of Staffordshire have resolved to strike against the reduction of 6d. per day of which the masters have given notice.

At a meeting of the Manchester master builders on Tuesday it was stated that no member of the association had conceded the demands of the men on strike, and that over 2300 were at work for the associated employers. The following resolution was agreed to:—"That no other wages or rules be offered to the men than those now in force; that the non-union workmen be retained in preference to the old society men; and that efforts be continued to fill the shops with non-union labour."

The Clyde lock-out still drags along. Dulness pervades all the shipbuilding yards, the majority of the men being still idle. The men state their willingness to resume work in a body whenever a satisfactory basis for arbitration shall have been agreed to.

After fourteen weeks of a partial strike, followed by a general lock-out, the miners of Fife and Clackmannan have yielded in face of an empty exchequer, and have resolved, by a vote by ballot, to accept the terms offered them a week ago by the masters.

THE BATTLE ON THE LOM.

The small map we have engraved will enable our readers to follow the accounts of the Battle on the Lom, which was fought on the 30th ult. (Thursday week). At the commencement of the engagement the Russians occupied Karahasankoi, in advance of the Black Lom, and Popkoi, behind that river. The Turks held Haidarkoi and Sarna Suflar in force, but had also occupied the Sakar Tepe, opposite Yazlar (Ayaslar). The fight resulted in the whole of the Russian forces being driven beyond the river; and, finding their positions there untenable, they have since evacuated Popkoi and Gagovo, and concentrated their forces further to the rear.

The battle was commenced in the morning by a forward movement of the divisions of Medjid Pasha, who formed the right wing, and Fuad and Sabit Pashas, who formed the centre. Medjid Pasha attacked the village of Karahasankoi. His troops advancing with great determination drove the Russians through it. His right also attacked the village of

PLAN OF THE BATTLE-FIELD OF THE LOM, THURSDAY, AUGUST 30.

Bekirin Yenikoi, where severe fighting took place in the woods. The Russians were driven pell-mell down the heights into the valley of the Lom beneath. The Turkish field artillery was splendidly handled. It pushed through the village to the end of the bluffs, and fired on the retreating columns. Meanwhile Sabit Pasha fiercely assaulted the village of Bashislar with equal success, from his position on a lofty hill crowned by a three-gun battery overlooking the whole country. Mahomet Ali then ordered the bugler to sound cease firing along the whole line; and three tremendous cheers for "Allah" rang along the whole line of the triumphant troops. A general advance was then sounded amid renewed cheers. Turkish skirmishers then swarmed into the valley of the Lom, across the bridge, and advanced eagerly to attack the large village of Haidarkoi, on the left bank of the Lom, which was occupied without severe opposition, bringing the action to a close. At five in the afternoon all the captured villages burst into flames. It was a magnificent spectacle when night fell. The Russians had a heavy battery of three guns in position on the road between Haidarkoi and Popkoi, and during the battle had two batteries of heavy field guns. The Turkish three-gun battery on the hill with the head-quarter staff made splendid practice at the Russian battery. A plunging fire from a great elevation dismounted one of the Russian guns. The other two limbered up and retired when the village fell. The field batteries covered the retreat of the Russian troops, while the whole of the Turkish guns on the heights and in the valley opened a tremendous fire. The Turkish artillery pushed the retreat till the Russians evacuated Popkoi, and the tents of their camp were struck. During the action General Baker Pasha was reported missing; he had two horses shot under him.

The Russian troops attacked formed part of the army designated in Russian despatches the Rustchuk column, which is under the command of the Czarewitch. The Turkish forces were strong columns of Eyyoub Pasha's army, which had been brought up from Rasgrad. The severest struggle of the day took place at the village of Karahasankoi. Mahomet Ali Pasha says it was of a desperate character, and that the village was taken and retaken several times—the Russian report says six times—before the Turks finally obtained possession of it. The true character of the engagement was not that of a battle in which forces that may be deemed tolerably equal tried their strength, but rather that of a stubborn resistance offered by a small to a vastly superior force, continued long after the hope of a successful issue of the struggle had passed away. General Leonoff had only 3000 infantry, 500 cavalry, and ten guns, and was attacked by 12,000 Turks, more than that number not taking part in the engagement. The Russians were continually outflanked, and, as often as they hoped they had defended a position against the enemy in front, saw battalions passing on the right hand and the left to positions in their rear. The commander of the 13th Corps did not think fit to send troops to the support of General Leonoff, who therefore fell back, with a loss of not more than five hundred men.

GENERAL GRANT IN SCOTLAND.

The freedom of the city of Edinburgh was presented yesterday week to General Grant, ex-President of the United States of America, in the Free Church Assembly Hall, in the presence of a large concourse of the citizens, nearly 2200 tickets having been issued for the ceremony. An enthusiastic reception was accorded to General Grant. The burgess ticket was written on parchment and inclosed in a silver casket. On the ticket was an inscription stating that the honour was conferred in testimony of the respect entertained for General Grant both as a great soldier and as a statesman, and in appreciation of the line of policy pursued by him to establish and maintain friendly relations between the United States of America and Great Britain. The Lord Provost presided, and made the presentation. General Grant briefly acknowledged the honour conferred on him, which, he said, he regarded also as an honour done to his country. The American nation was proud of Scotland, and of the citizens it sent to them. At the close of the proceedings cheers were given for General and Mrs. Grant. Over the choir were hung the national flags of Britain and the United States.

General Grant, Mrs. Grant, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh and Lady Falshaw, and a party of other ladies and gentlemen visited the Tay Bridge and the Mars training-ship Dundee, on Saturday, returning to Edinburgh in the evening. The General, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and Mr. Skinner, Town Clerk of Edinburgh, afterwards attended the officers' mess of the 78th Highlanders, in Edinburgh Castle, to which a large number of officers in the district were also invited.

On Sunday forenoon General Grant and his party attended Divine Service in the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, along with the Lord Provost and Lady Falshaw. The Rev. Mr. Bush preached. They afterwards had luncheon at the Town Clerk's residence in George-square, and in the afternoon were present at the service in St. Giles's Church, when the Rev. Professor Flint preached.

On Monday the General and his party paid a visit to Melrose. He arrived at Dunrobin Castle on Tuesday evening, and remained the guest of the Duke of Sutherland for a few days. At Perth he breakfasted, and at Inverness had a conversation with the Provost in reference to the proposal to present him with the freedom of the borough. All along the route to Golspie the ex-President was warmly welcomed.

General Grant has arranged to pay another visit to Dundee in the course of next week. The town has extensive trade, principally in jute fabrics, with the United States, and it is understood that General Grant wishes to see some of the great manufactories at which the cloth is produced.

ARCHAEOLOGY.

The British Archaeological Congress went on Thursday week up the Vale of Glynidryd, to the site of the house of the famous Welsh chieftain, Owen Glendower, and afterwards visited Corwen, and made the ascent of the Gaer. On Friday the archaeologists went to Dolgelly by a special train. Thence they proceeded, some in carriages, and some on foot another way, to the ruin of Cymmer, or, as it is now called by the people of the place, Vanner Abbey, in the lonely and secluded valley of Glanllyd. This was a Cistercian monastery, and was founded in 1198 by Griffith and Meredydd, lords of Merioneth, and sons of Cynan, who was the son of Owain Gwynedd, Prince of North Wales. After luncheon at Dolgelly, visits were paid to the parish church and to the supposed Parliament House of Owen Glendower—the said house, according to Mr. Brock and other antiquaries, being certainly not earlier than the reign of Henry VIII. After visiting Pale, where they were most hospitably entertained by Mr. Henry Robertson, M.P., and Mrs. Robertson, the party returned to Llangollen. Saturday's excursion was to the fertile and lovely Vale of Clwyd. The chief archaeological feature at Denbigh is the ruined castle, which was visible crowning the summit of the hill, on the slopes of which the town is built, long before the train reached the station. The walls of the castle are in fair preservation, especially the entrance gateway, over which is a statue of an Earl of Lancaster. The return to Llangollen was made by special train in the evening. Monday was the last day proper of the Congress. The excursion was to Mostyn and Holywell. A goodly contingent left by special train and arrived at Mostyn about eleven, proceeding to Mostyn Hall, where, by the courtesy of Lord Mostyn, they inspected his choice store of Welsh manuscripts and other relics, all full of interest. An interesting document on view was a charter granted by Queen Elizabeth to hold the Bisteddoff at Caerwys in 1568. From Mostyn the party proceeded to Holywell, and visited Winifred's Well and the remains of Basingwerk Abbey; but the inclement weather very much interfered with the day's programme. In the evening, on the return to Llangollen, several papers were read. By invitation of Sir W. W. Wynn, the president of the year, the members visited Llangedwin on Tuesday.

The Wiltshire Archaeological and Natural History Society has recently been making excursions in various parts of the county; and on Wednesday week a similar society of Dorsetshire visited Lulworth and examined the objects of interest in that neighbourhood. The meeting of the Wiltshire archaeologists, which began on the 23rd ult., extended over three days, Warminster being the general rendezvous. The Marquis of Bath (the society's president), Sir J. Lubbock, M.P., Sir J. E. Phillips, Sir G. Arney, Lord Heytesbury, and Canon Jackson took part in the proceedings. Among those who read papers on the occasion was Canon Jackson, choosing as his subject "The Vale of Warminster." The Rev. Canon concluded by giving a few peculiarities of language found in the county; and, referring in passing to population, said he was of opinion, from old rent-books he had seen, that there were more people in the rural districts 500 years ago than there are at the present time. The Rev. A. C. Smith read a paper giving an account of the origin of tavern signs in Wiltshire, of which there are some 700, which were enumerated. The Rev. W. W. Ravenhill, Recorder of Andover, read a paper on "Justice in Warminster in the Olden Time;" while the Rev. H. T. Kingdom read one on "An Early Service in the Vernacular."

The annual meeting of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society at Cirencester was concluded on Thursday week, under the presidency of Earl Bathurst. At the evening meeting on the first day Professor Rolleston gave an address on "The Pre-historic Interments of Gloucestershire." Besides visiting the interesting antiquities of the town, the party made excursions to the Roman villa at Chedworth and the church windows at Fairford. The next meeting will be held at Bristol.

The Braemar gathering was held on Thursday week at Mar Castle, in presence of a large number of spectators. Viscount Macduff headed the Fife Highlanders, and Lieutenant-Colonel Farquharson was in command of the Farquharson men. Both clans mustered in force; but the Queen and the members of the Royal family, in consequence of bad weather, did not travel from Balmoral. The rain fell heavily nearly all day.

WOMANKIND IN TURKEY.

BY GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA.

The description of a Turkish lady in her carriage, given in the last number of the Illustrated London News, would be incomplete without mention of the exquisitely lovely little children, boys and girls, who accompany the grown-up ladies on their shopping expeditions. I know no more angelic-looking little darling than a Turkish boy or girl of from three to six years old. The girls, in particular, are very often quite as fair as the golden-haired little sylph crouching on the Persian rug, and peeping into an illuminated manuscript, in Mr. Leighton's admirable picture of "Study" in the Royal Academy. Since that disastrous Eastern Question has once more come to the front, and war's alarms have been mingled with the muezzin's cry from the minarets of Stamboul, the Turkish mammas have become addicted to dressing up their little boys as soldiers; and often, during December and January last, I used to wonder that General Ignatieff and the personnel of the Russian Embassy were not frightened out of their wits by the spectacle of so many little Osmanli boys in military surtouts with stand-up collars, stiff with embroidery, or with little gilt-hilted scimitars and emblazoned sabretaches trailing at their heels. That Turkish ladies should ride in broughams is quite a recent innovation. Formerly when they went abroad they were conveyed, either in close-curtained horse-litters or in arabas—the latter huge waggons, with latticed panels, gaudily painted, but clumsily built, and without springs, which were drawn by oxen with gilded horns and with yokes decorated in crimson and gold. In these primitive equipages they were wont to ride to the Sweet Waters of Europe; and in the summer there were always plenty of arabas full of Turkish ladies to be seen at Scutari or on the Asiatic shores of the Bosphorus, where the wealthy Osmanlis have their yatis or country houses. Nowadays the Pashas and Beys send to Vienna, and even to Paris, for broughams, but you never see a Turkish lady in a Victoria. Islam would be in danger if a Khanoum appeared in an open carriage. There is something else which is sternly forbidden to the Gentle Sex when they come to Pera on Saturdays: All their shopping must be done at the doors; and the shopman—generally a Greek or an Armenian who speaks Turkish—must come to the carriage window with the gloves, or the silks and lace, or the nicknacks which the ladies wish to purchase. An ordinance of the Minister of Police prohibits a Turkish lady from entering any shop in the Frank quarter; and, in the face of this preposterous restriction, I should like to meet with anyone who had the hardihood to assert that the Gentle Sex in Turkey are not de facto in a state of slavery. The Pro-Turks (who are more Osmanli than the Osmanlis themselves) will tell me that it is contrary to the manners of the East for a Mohammedan woman to enter the shop of a Giaour; but I maintain that the women of a country should properly influence that country's manners, and that they are entitled to change them for the better when they choose. I do unfeignedly believe that no important reform in the social customs of a people is possible without the acquiescence, active or tacit, of the female sex; and thus I am equally of opinion that if the English ladies had persistently and inflexibly set their faces against the beard and moustache movement and the practice of smoking among male humanity, we should still be fain to go clean shaven or "mutton chop" whiskered, and to invent all kinds of cowardly fables whenever we wished to enjoy a cigar by stealth. English ladies are, in the main, very like English Tories. For awhile they are terrible Protectionists, and will not hear of the expansion of the Suffrage; but when they once find that the concession of Free Trade and Reform can no longer be delayed without danger to the Republic, there are no more ardent Free-Traders and no more advanced Reformers possible.

I am quite aware that there is a great deal to be said about the material comfort and, in degree, about the social liberty enjoyed by the women in Turkey. Although Madame Kibrisi Pasha in her memoirs has very distinctly hinted that a whip of hippopotamus hide is a common instrument of discipline in a Turkish harem, I believe that neither ladies nor slaves are systematically ill-treated by the male Turks, and that the days of the bastinado, the bowstring, and the sack are gone for ever. Let me briefly state the very best points of the case which the Pro-Turks might strive to make out to show that an Ottoman lady has little, if anything, to complain of. She is certainly secluded from the eyes of strangers; but she has a very luxurious and very comfortable home; she has plenty of outdoor amusements, in which she can indulge in the society of her own sex; and she has little to fear from the tyranny or the jealousy of her husband. She may smoke all day, and consume, if she likes, unlimited quantities of confectionery. She may hire parties of female dancers, jugglers, and story-tellers to perform at home for the delectation of herself and her guests. She has the liberty of embroidering, of knitting, of playing on the mandolin or the santour (a kind of virginal) as much or as little as ever she pleases. Her husband cannot prevent her from dressing and re-dressing herself a dozen times a day, from talking scandal, from scolding her negroes, and laughing at the withered creatures who are her gaoles, or from yawning and going to sleep on her cushions whenever, like Mrs. Gamp, she feels "so disposed." The most aromatic toutoun or tobacco, the most delicious doudourmas or lollipops, are hers without stint. She may give afternoon parties, "kettledrums," five o'clock teas, to her female friends as often as ever it pleases her so to do, or she may visit those friends either by invitation or à l'improviste, after the manner of the American "surprise parties." The bath is her club. It is not considered comme il faut for a Khanoum to be seen on foot in the narrow lanes of the bazaars; but ladies of the middle classes (if a middle class can be said to exist in a country where social distinction depends, not on inherited rank, but on acquired grade, easily won and easily lost) are still often seen in the Bezesteen, where they worry the stall-keepers wellnigh out of their minds; turn over goods by the hour together without buying anything; vex the tradesmen by offering him derisive prices, and virtually turn his establishment out of windows—at least, they would do so if the establishment had any windows. Until the police interfered lately, the ladies used frequently to install themselves in the best shops of the Bezesteen, turning out the proprietor and his assistants. Then, sending out for narghiles, for pastry, coffee, and kibobs, playing backgammon and the Turkish variation of our game of "snip, snap, snorum," and laughing consumedly, they would otherwise behave themselves in a free and independent manner. Yet this very license, which the police of Stamboul were fain to express, only showed that the poor things were pining for the wholesome and rational liberty which the man-Turks deny them. The saturnalia of slaves are always furious; and can you imagine anything more superlatively boisterous than (were it possible) a Trappist playing football, or a convent full of nuns engaged in a game at romps? They have their evening parties, too, these khanoums, parties called "Aksh nights," from the halva of honey-cakes which are customarily eaten thereat; and especially there are the winter gatherings round the tandour. To make a tandour you should get a long dining-room table, from which you must cut off the legs at half their length. Then cut a large hole in the middle of the table and insert therein a manghal, or brazier, full of live charcoal. A carpet is then laid over the table, and a tablecloth over that. The ladies cluster round the tandour cross-legged on cushions laid on the floor, and are wrapped from the waist downwards in thick shawls. So everything is very warm and snug. The domestics bring chibouks and cigarettes, coffee and sweetmeats; and merriment and conviviality set in, sometimes tending to diversions of the hunt-the-slipper kind; so that occasionally the pan of burning charcoal is tipped over and the live coals are liberally distributed among the garments of the guests. A good many hundreds of houses are burnt every year in Stamboul alone through the oversetting of tandours; but the recreation is inexpressibly dear to the Ottoman mind, and is one of the few Oriental customs which is common both to Moslem and to Greek and Armenian ladies.

Now what, it may be asked, could the Gentle Sex in Turkey want more? They are petted; they are spoiled; they are satiated with sweetstuff and tobacco-smoke. They have plenty of fine clothes and jewels. They have no work to do, and they may indulge in any amount of gossip and tittle-tattle with women as idle as they. There are even little khanoums who have French and German governesses, and who learn to play the waltz from "Faust" and the "Fille de Madame Angot." Can they require anything more? They require, and they are entitled to, a great deal more, I think—to be able to choose their husbands for themselves; to be able to mingle in the society of upright and educated men; to be able to drive and walk about unmuffled in ridiculous nose-bags—to be free, in a word. And, for all their fine clothes and jewels, the women in Turkey represent in the social scheme of the Osmanli nothing more nor less than so many animals—pretty animals, costly animals, animals to be carressed and made much of, if you please—but animals and slaves, for all that.

THE NEW ZEALAND GOLD AND COAL FIELDS.

The Marquis of Normanby has forwarded to the Earl of Carnarvon a report of his official visit to Hokitika, New Zealand, in which he states that the district of Westland is mountainous and densely wooded, and, as a rule, little suited for agriculture or pastoral purposes; it is, however, rich in minerals of various kinds—gold, silver, and coal being those which at present are attracting the most attention. Unfortunately, the harbours along that portion of the coast are all bar harbours, with only a small draught of water, and difficult of access, which greatly impedes the trade of the district. Nearly the whole of the country through which the road from Hokitika to Greymouth—a distance of forty-five miles—passes is auriferous, and much of it has either been or is now being worked, and it is curious to observe the vast amount of work that has been done and the skill and ingenuity which has been exercised to bring water for the purpose of washing. In some instances the whole face of a hill has been washed away by artificial races.

The Kumara gold-fields, the discovery of which caused great excitement ten months ago, are situated about half way between Hokitika and Greymouth, and it certainly is a most remarkable instance of what can be produced in a few months by a gold rush. His Lordship found over 4300 persons permanently established upon the ground, and a town had sprung up which presented few of the characteristics of a new gold-field town, the houses being more regular and of a larger and more substantial character than he had ever before seen on a new gold-field. Three or four good-sized hotels were already occupied, and numerous shops and stores of considerable pretensions might be seen in all directions either completed or in course of construction, and, after riding over a portion of the field, his Lordship was entertained at a luncheon to which about 120 sat down in a large and substantial public hall. The whole of this has been the creation of less than ten months, as in June, 1876, the whole place was a dense bush. What makes the rapid progress of this field the more extraordinary is that so far no great amount of gold has been actually raised from it. Many, if not most, of the claims have to be approached by long tunnels driven into the sides of the hills, which take months to complete, besides which, great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining a good supply of water at a proper level for washing. This latter difficulty, however, will, it is hoped, soon be overcome, as means have been discovered by which an ample supply will be secured, and this, in the opinion of the old and experienced miners, is all that is required to secure the complete success of these diggings. This field was originally discovered by three or four men who managed to keep their discovery secret for about two years, during which time the average yield of the claim worked by them was £10 a man per week.

From Kumara Lord Normanby proceeded to Greymouth, which, like Hokitika, is situated on the banks of a river which forms a bar harbour. A short railway has lately been constructed from Greymouth to some coal-mines in the neighbourhood. One mine has been in operation for some time, and it produces the best coal which has as yet been worked in New Zealand. There are also two other mines which will shortly commence working, the coal from which it is hoped will be of a still better quality, as, although from the same seam, the coal is taken at a greater depth. The seam is a very large one, being 12 ft. to 15 ft. thick, and there can be no doubt as to the quantity which may be raised. The only difficulty is the question as to whether, taking price and quality into consideration, they will be able fairly to compete with the coal from New South Wales, as the bar at the entrance of the harbour is a bad one, and is frequently impassable, which will necessarily add considerably to the cost of shipment, and consequently to the price at which the coal can be put into the market.

From Greymouth his Lordship went to Westport, where efforts are also being made to open out a large coal district. About fifteen miles of railroad have been constructed by the Government with the view of facilitating the shipment of coal. These mines are not as yet opened out, but various specimens of coal were shown which appeared to be of a superior quality. The harbour at Westport is also a bar harbour, but it is much more sheltered than either Hokitika or Greymouth, and except with a northerly wind is generally accessible to vessels of not more than eleven feet draught.

The opening out of these coal-mines both at Westport and Greymouth is exciting much interest, and great hopes are entertained as to the success of this new industry, and there can be no doubt that the production of good and cheap coal in the colony, even if it is confined to the supply of the local market, would prove of inestimable value to New Zealand.

The report of the commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh, has been issued. They find fault with several of the arrangements of the building, and recommend changes, including an increase in the salaries of the officials, involving an increase of £604 a year to the present vote. In addition, the commissioners propose to spend £100 on the transit instrument, and that the scientific books in the library should be bound.

MIDDLE-CLASS EDUCATION FOR BOYS.

At Borden, near Sittingbourne, a school on a somewhat extensive scale is being erected at a cost of £10,000, for the education of the children (boys) of the middle classes. It is being built to the order of the governors of the Borden School Trust, which has been established under a recent scheme of the Charity Commissioners out of a local charity known as "Barrow's Gift."

The history of this charity is remarkable. In the year 1700 William Barrow, a farmer, died, bequeathing by will the income of certain landed property to "the widows and poor men" of Borden. The income then amounted to rather more than £450, which was divided between thirty or forty of the poorest inhabitants, who received their portions annually. Besides the above-mentioned property, William Barrow also left to "the widows and poor men" of Borden the reversion of other landed property. As time wore on the property increased in value, and the number of recipients was gradually increased by the trustees from thirty-five to eighty, until in 1863 the attention of the Court of Chancery was called to the charity, and the Court issued a scheme under which the number of recipients was to be reduced from eighty to thirty, who were to receive £15 each per annum. The Court directed that the surplus income should be invested until £2000 had accumulated, and then the trustees of the charity were to apply for a scheme for applying it to educational purposes. This, however, was not done, from some cause or other, until £9000 had accumulated; and then came the scheme of the Charity Commissioners for establishing a middle-class school. Altogether, about £20,000 of capital will be taken to build and endow this school. The property, which in 1709 produced £450 per annum, has continued to increase in value, until at the present time the yearly income arising therefrom is no less than £2500. Thirty "widows and poor men" will still receive £15 each a year, the Charity Commissioners having restricted the amount to that of the income of the charity in 1709—viz., £450. The population of Borden is now about ten times as large as in 1709. Save this £450 per annum, the whole of the charity is diverted. The surplus income remaining after erecting the school will be invested, and when it reaches £4000 application is to be made to the Charity Commissioners for a new scheme extending the educational operations of the charity.

The scheme, it may be mentioned, met with strenuous opposition from inhabitants in the locality; it was contended that the income of the property was left to the poor, and that the fact of its having more than quintupled in value was no reason why it should be diverted to establish and maintain a middle-class school, which would be of no advantage to the persons whom it was plain Barrow intended to benefit. They did not stand out for the income to be distributed in money payments; but they claimed that, as the Court of Chancery itself in the eighteenth century defined the persons entitled to Barrow's "gift" as "the poorest of the parishioners, next above those who ought to be entitled to relief by the poor's rate," the charity should not have been diverted to another class, but should have been applied, even if the area of its operations was extended to benefiting "widows and poor men," as Barrow called them, by means of almshouses and a free education for their children. The scheme, however, became law, and the school is being erected.

SPELLING.

Mr. Matthew Arnold, in his report this year as one of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools, refers to the proposed reform in spelling, and observes that, although English spelling has great irregularities, which makes its acquisition exceptionally difficult to adult foreigners, it is not clear to him that it can thence be inferred, or that experience proves, that it is therefore exceptionally difficult to an English child. At any rate, he says, the English nation will not be induced, in the hope of making it easier, to take to writing, "Lead us not into temptation." What changes are made will not be made in view of making spelling easier to children, but because certain things in our present system are irrational. He says:—"At present the printers in great measure fix our spelling according to their sense of what is symmetrical. The practical advice I would give to teachers is to take every opportunity of remarking when our present spelling is erroneous through blunder. Both they and their scholars will learn a great deal by doing so. For instance, we find almost universally connection, reflection, instead of connexion, reflexion. This the printers give us from the analogy of words like affection, collection, and, for the sake of symmetry. But collection comes from a Latin participle in actus, and reflection from a Latin participle in exus, and to give the two nouns the same termination is a pure blunder in grammar. We shall never find these terminations confounded in French. Again, it is almost impossible to induce a printer to print 'a forgone advantage'; he insists on making it foregone, because we speak of 'a foregone conclusion.' But a foregone advantage means an advantage gone without; a foregone conclusion means a conclusion anticipated. The one is ver in German, sine in Latin; the other cor and ans." Mr. Arnold is disposed to think that a Royal Commission might with advantage be charged, not with the absurd task of inventing a brand-new spelling, but with the task of reviewing our present spelling, of pointing out evident anomalies in it, and of suggesting feasible amendments of it. Such a Commission might be permanent, with the function of watching our language, by no means of stereotyping it.

Owing to representations made by Mr. Dorrien Smith, the Lord of the Islands of Scilly, the Government has consented to substitute a new and postal telegraphic cable for the private but disused one between the Land's End and the Scilly Islands.

POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

The cost of transmission by post within the United Kingdom, including the Channel Islands, is one halfpenny.

ABROAD.

Africa, West Coast of	...	2d
Alexandria	...	2d
Australia, via Brindisi	...	2d
Australia, via Southampton	...	2d
Austria	...	2d
Belgium	...	2d
Brazil	...	2d
Canada	...	2d
Cape of Good Hope	...	2d
China, via Brindisi	...	2d
China, via Southampton	...	2d
Constantinople	...	2d
Denmark	...	2d
France	...	2d
Germany	...	2d
Gibraltar	...	2d
Greece	...	2d
Holland	...	2d
India, via Brindisi	...	2d
India, via Southampton	...	2d
Italy	...	2d
Mauritius	...	2d
New Zealand	...	2d
Norway	...	2d
Russia	...	2d
Spain	...	2d
Sweden	...	2d
Switzerland	...	2d
United States	...	2d
West Indies	...	2d

Copies printed on this paper may be sent to the Colonies and Foreign Countries at half the rates stated above; but their use is not recommended, the appearance of the Engravings being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the time of publication.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR WILLIAMSON BOOTH, BART.

Sir Williamson Booth, Bart., died on the 26th ult., at his seat, Paxton Park, St. Neots, Hunts. He was born in July, 1811, the eldest son of William Booth, Esq., of Roydon House, Essex, by Mary, his wife, daughter and coheir of J. Williamson, Esq., and received his education at Eton. He was J.P. and D.L. for Huntingdonshire and Cambridgeshire, and served as High Sheriff of those counties in 1855. He succeeded to the baronetcy, under a special limitation, Jan. 24, 1850, on the death of his uncle, Sir Felix Booth, the first Baronet, and the title devolves on Sir Williamson's next brother, Sir Charles Booth, third Baronet, of Netherfield Park, Herts, who was born in 1812.

ADMIRAL HAMILTON.

The death of Admiral A. P. Hamilton occurred on the 2nd inst. at Dorset-square. He was born in 1786, entered the Navy in 1800 as a first-class volunteer on board the Topaze, and obtained the rank of midshipman in 1801. From June, 1804, till October, 1806, he served in China and the Mediterranean, and was present at the defence of Gaeta. He was promoted in 1808, and took part in the capture, on Aug. 16, 1806, of the French 18-gun sloop Espiegle. On Sept. 28, 1810, while in charge of the boats of the Valiant and the Armide, he captured two brigs and destroyed a third while they were lying under a strong battery at Point du Ché, near Rochelle. He was made a Commander in the following month, and until he was posted on May 31, 1816, he was employed in the Ceylon troopship, on the North America and St. Helena stations. He retired on Oct. 1, 1846.

MR. HOLDEN, OF ASTON.

Edward Anthony Holden, Esq., of Aston Hall, Derbyshire, J.P. and D.L., died on the 28th ult. at his seat near Derby. He was born in 1805, the eldest son of the Rev. Charles Shuttleworth (who took the name and arms of Holden in 1791) and grandson of James Shuttleworth, Esq., of Gawthorpe, by Mary, his wife, only daughter and heir of Robert Holden, Esq., of Aston. Mr. Edward Holden was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. in 1829, and M.A. in 1833; and served as High Sheriff of Derbyshire in 1838. He married, in 1832, Susan Drummond, daughter of George Moore, Esq., of Appleby Hall, Leicestershire, and leaves four sons and six daughters.

MR. THOMAS EVERETT FOWLE.

Thomas Everett Fowle, Esq., D.L., died on the 17th ult. at his residence, Chute Lodge, near Andover. He was born July 1, 1807, the third son of William Fowle, Esq., of Chute Lodge, and was for forty years a county magistrate, conspicuous for his unremitting attendance to all public business and sedulous in the administration of justice in the division to which he belonged. The villages of Chariton and North Newton owe their present parish churches in no small degree to his exertions. Near his own home he rebuilt the chancel of Chute church, and about two years ago built, entirely at his own cost, the pretty Church of St. Mary, Chute Forest. Mr. Fowle married, in 1851, the youngest daughter of the Rev. Hugh Price, Rector of Newton Tony, Wilts, and is succeeded in the family estates by his son, William Hugh Fowle, Esq.

The deaths have also been announced of—

Murray T. Parks, Commander R.N., on the 27th ult., at Southsea, aged fifty.

Henry Aylmer Greene, Director of Contracts, War Department, on the 25th ult., aged fifty.

John Stoker Pritchard, Commander R.N., late of Burnham, Essex, on the 25th ult., in his seventy-fifth year.

Captain Alexander Stevenson Pearson, R.N., on the 20th ult., at Clevedon, aged eighty-eight.

Major Alexander Grant Miller, R.A., on July 19, at Murree, East Indies, aged thirty-nine.

The Rev. Frederick Hamilton Laughlin, M.A., late Assistant Librarian of the British Museum, on the 23rd ult.

The Rev. W. L. Onslow, Rector of Sandringham and Chaplain to the Prince of Wales, in his fifty-eighth year.

Sir William Henry St. Lawrence Clarke-Travers, Bart., on the 31st ult. His memoir will be given next week.

William Gordon Davidson, Esq., of Southfod, late Inspector-General of Hospitals, Indian Army, Madras, on the 26th ult., at Bogle House, Kirkcaldy.

Lady Edith Tudway, wife of Charles Clement Tudway, Esq., of Wells, Somersetshire, and second daughter of Horatio, present Earl Nelson, on the 24th ult., aged twenty-seven.

George Hartley, Esq., H.B.M. Consul at Fernando Po, West Coast of Africa, on June 10 last, aged thirty-eight. He was only son of the late George Hartley, Esq., of Whitehaven.

Mr. D. S. Baker, heraldic artist, of consumption, on the 1st inst., aged fifty-three. Mr. Baker, who was deaf and dumb, drew for many years the Arms for this column.

Sir Francis Hicks, treasurer of St. Thomas's Hospital, on the 1st inst., at Margate, in his fifty-seventh year. He was knighted by the Queen when her Majesty in person opened the new buildings of the new hospital.

Colonel Francis John Oldfield, of H.M. Indian Army, on the 24th ult., at Roostrevor, Ireland, aged fifty-six. He was fourth son of Thomas Brame Oldfield, Esq., of Champion-hill, Surrey, by Emma, his wife, eldest daughter of Vice-Admiral William Young.

Colonel Thomas Peach Waterman, of the Bengal Staff Corps, on the 29th ult., at Seabrook House. He entered the Army in 1838, and served throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848 and 1849, including the passage of the Chenab and the battle of Goojerat, for which he received a medal with clasp.

Colonel Robert Peel Dawson, of Moyala Park, Castle Dawson, Lord Lieutenant of the county of Londonderry, at Dover, on the 2nd inst., aged fifty-nine. Colonel Dawson was the son of the Right Hon. G. R. Dawson, for many years M.P. for the county of Londonderry, and of Mary, sister of the late Sir Robert Peel, Bart. He was formerly in the Grenadier Guards and 11th Hussars, and sat in the House of Commons for some years as member for the county of Londonderry.

William Schaw Lindsay, Esq., of Shepperton Manor, Middlesex, at the Manor House, Shepperton, on the 28th ult. He was born in 1816. Mr. Lindsay, formerly a merchant and shipowner, was a J.P. and D.L. for Middlesex and a Commissioner of Lieutenancy for London; sat in Parliament for Tynemouth from 1854 to 1859, and for Sunderland from 1859 to 1865. He was the author of various letters and pamphlets on maritime affairs. In 1842 he published a book entitled "Our Navigation and Mercantile Marine Laws," and recently "A History of Mercantile Shipping," volumes which were the fruit of extensive reading and research.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

OF J. (Llandudno).—The title of the late Mr. Wormald's work is "Chess Openings," and it was published by W. Morgan, 67, Barbican, London.

GRECO (Carrick-on-Shuir).—(1) The solution of the problem page 406 of the "Handbook" is as follows:—1. R to Q sq, K moves either to R sq or Q sq, when white continues with 2. R to R sq or Q sq accordingly. (2) Mr. Staunton died in July, 1874. (3) Any answer to this question would be considered invidious, because there are many claimants for the pre-eminence described.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Glasgow).—We shall have much pleasure in examining the problems, and informing you of the results.

W and M (Scarborough).—The White Book at Q Kt sq, in Problem No. 1746, is placed there to prevent a solution by 1. Q to Q Kt sq (ch), &c.

S A S (Sydenham).—All parties to the "dual move" controversy are now agreed that a dual move in the solution of a problem is a defect to be avoided if possible. It is not always possible, however; and therefore a strict application of the rule is undesirable.

B H (Guesney).—We have forwarded the letter as requested.

E P O B (Oxon).—We have never seen the problem before. It shall be examined and reported on.

F C C (Pittary-square).—Will you kindly re-examine your three-move problem. There does not appear to be any mate in three moves if Black plays 1. Kt to R 3rd.

PROBLEMS received from T A Hind, M Michael, E P O'Brien, W M Whittle, and J de Honteyn.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1747 received from D H. Herward, M Clare, W F Payne, A Little Boy, and Pongo, Junior.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1748 received from T E Hughes, M T de Burgh, E L G. F. W. Hadden, A Bournot, M Macrae, N Rumbelow, Maggie Irwin, B H Toovey, Idle Mechanics' Institute, W F Payne, B H Brooks, J Bowden, and Pongo, Junior.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1749 received from H B. W. Nelson, Mechanic, Triton, A G B. A. Scott, Only Jones, T R Y. R. Roughhead, J S W. American, Simplex, H Burgher, Long Stop, Leonora and Leon, Black Knight, J Wontone, B R Stone, W Alston, L B H. Tippet, S Western, R T King, W Lee, Paul's Root, E Worsley, Harrobian, M E N. Brock, F G V. L. Barnett, S Threlfall, T Edgar, S Adams, G Reeves, H Standfield, A Mackenzie, R W B. E. Edmonds, G Wright, St J E. M. Boes, M Whiteley, W C Dutton, B Schofield, F Wharton, N Powell, J Lyndford, J F Spier, N H Hastings, L of Truro, Queen of Connaught, Robin Gray, C R Elmore, Dr F St. W. Leese, B Levy, C E F. W. P. Welch, W F Payne, Cant, W T Aman, B S G. E. P. Valliamy, Farley Mechanics' Institute, J Bowden, N Rumbelow, Idle Mechanics' Institute, Maggie Irwin, Three Young Ladies, Copiapho, J de Honteyn, E Frau, M Clare, Enmie, E L G. W. and M. Walter, F W Hadden, R H Brooks, G H V. W. F. Tighe, E H H. V. A. Wood, G A Bellingall, C T B. Woolwich Chess Club, S A Sillen, A Bournot, M Macrae, J Thursty, H M Frideaux, F Pennie, T E Hughes, and W S B.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF ENIGMA No. 8 received from T E Hughes, E L G. Herward, Idle Mechanics' Institute, B H Brooks, and of Enigma No. 9 from H B. T. E. Hughes, E L G. Herward, J de Honteyn, E Frau, Woolwich Chess Club, F Dennis, Farley Mechanics' Institute, N Rumbelow, Idle Mechanics' Institute, Maggie Irwin, W Leese, Cant, J Barnes, B Hutchinson, G G. J. W. Fletcher, W K Hopkins, M Thayer, G M Stroud, J Cooper, Ellis Lewis, J Reed, A Elmaker, W M Meredith, and F V Pettit.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1748.

WHITE. BLACK. WHITE. BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B 3rd P takes Kt* S. Q to Q Kt 5th. Mate.
2. R to Q 3rd P takes R
* If Black plays 1. K to Q 3rd, then 2. R to R 6th (ch), &c.

PROBLEM No. 1751.

By JAMES PIERCE, M.A.

BLACK.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 1992.—VOL. LXXI.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1877.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE.
By Post, 6d.

THE LATE M. THIERS AT THE PAVILLON HENRI IV., ST. GERMAIN.
FROM A PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN AUGUST 30.

BIRTHS.

On the 8th inst., at Wallhouse, Bathgate, N.B., the wife of Andrew Gillon, of Wallhouse, of a son.
On the 11th inst., at Broomhall, Dunfermline, the Countess of Elgin, of a daughter.
On the 8th inst., at Aldershot, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Howard Elphinstone, of a daughter.
On the 4th inst., at Longcross House, Chertsey, the Hon. Mrs. R. Stapleton-Cotton, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 11th inst., at St. Nicholas' Church, Brighton, the Rev. F. W. Taylor, of Brighton, to Alice Maria, only daughter of J. S. E. Bishop, Esq., of Goldmid-road, Brighton. No cards.
On the 4th inst., at Malta, A. J. Lavie, Captain Royal Artillery, son of the late Colonel T. Lavie, Madras Artillery, to Lucy Mary Bernard, daughter of the late R. Bernard, R.N., Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets, and Hon. Surgeon to the Queen, Malta.

DEATHS.

On the 6th inst., at Broom Wood, Clapham-common, Caroline Combe, wife of Sir Charles Forbes, Bart., of Newe, Aberdeenshire.
On the 6th inst., at Cork Abbey-Bray, Harriet, Lady Verner, widow of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir W. Verner, Bart., aged 78.
On the 2nd inst., at Bellevue House, Exeter, Jean, wife of Andrew Forlong, Esq.
On July 28, at Dilkhoosh Chahar, India, from the effects of an accident, George Apperley Pyke, second son of Duncombe Pyke, jun., aged 18 years.

* * * The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 22.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 16.
Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity.	Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Duckworth.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. Dr. Curry, Master of the Charterhouse; 3.15 p.m., Rev. Canon Lightfoot; 7 p.m., Rev. Dr. Simpson, Minor Canon.	St. James's, noon, Rev. Samuel Flood Jones.
	Whitehall, closed for repairs.
	Savoy, closed for alterations.
MONDAY, SEPT. 17.
Jewish Fast of the Atonement.	Junior Thames Yacht Club, Medway matches.
Races: Baldoyls.
TUESDAY, SEPT. 18.
Accession of Oscar, King of Sweden, 1873.	Bishop Auckland Agricultural and Dog Show.
Humane Society, committee, 4 p.m.	Races: Hendon.
WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 19.
Ipswich and Eastern Counties Great International Poultry, Pigeon, and Cage-Bird Society Exhibition (two days).	National Social Science Association: Twenty-first annual Congress, Aberdeen: morning, meetings of council and committees; afternoon, special service at West Parish church, sermon by Rev. Professor Milligan; evening, inaugural address by the Earl of Aberdeen, the president.
Long Sutton Agricultural Show (two days).
Leeds Musical Festival: morning, Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; evening, Austin's "Fire-King," &c.
THURSDAY, SEPT. 20.
Battle of the Alma, 1854.	National Social Science Association Congress, Aberdeen: morning, address on Jurisprudence by Lord Gifford; evening, the Lord Provost's dinner at the Townhall.
Carlisle Infirmary: bazaar to be opened by Princess Louise.	Races: Monmouth.
Middleton Agricultural Society show.
Leeds Musical Festival: morning, Mendelssohn's "Walpurgisnacht," &c.; evening, Handel's "Solomon."
FRIDAY, SEPT. 21.
St. Matthew, evangelist and apostle.	National Social Science Association Congress, Aberdeen: morning, address on education by Lord Young; evening, conversation at Advocates' Hall, address by Lord Ronald Leveson-Gower.
Prince Ernest of Hanover born, 1845.
Leeds Musical Festival: morning, Macfarren's "Joseph"; evening, Raff's symphony, &c.
Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
SATURDAY, SEPT. 22.
Full Moon, 8.35 p.m.	National Social Science Association Congress, Aberdeen: morning, address on the Repression of Crime, by the Lord Advocate; afternoon, excursions to Dunnotar, Aboyne, &c.
Jewish Feast of Tabernacles.	Yachting: Thames Sailing Club and Junior Thames Club.
Abdul Hamid II., Sultan of Turkey, born, Sept. 22, 1842.
Leeds Musical Festival: Bach's "Magnificat," Mozart's "Requiem," and Beethoven's "Mount of Olives."

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.
Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 84 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOM.		WIND.		General Direction.	Movement in hours, read at 10 p.m.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 p.m.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	0-10.	10-4.	Force.	Direction.
September	Inches.	° F.	° F.	%
1	30.233	51.4	41.9	79	8	63.0	40.7	SW. W. WSW.	84	0.000
2	30.912	59.1	42.2	71	4	63.6	41.0	WSW. SW.	54	0.000
3	30.817	54.7	44.6	71	6	62.0	47.2	SW. NE.	249	0.000
4	30.939	53.6	43.1	67	7	59.3	46.7	NE. ENE.	439	0.000
5	30.955	56.4	44.3	68	—	62.2	51.3	ENE. NE.	364	0.000
6	30.970	57.0	52.5	86	5	64.8	51.7	ENE. E. SSW.	112	0.000
7	30.732	59.6	55.6	88	8	70.2	52.8	SE. S. SW.	293	0.115

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—
Barometer (in inches) corrected .. 30.303 29.904 29.817 29.983 29.947 29.983 29.739
Temperature of Air 63.9° 65.6° 67.6° 66.9° 69.9° 69.6° 65.6°
Temperature of Evaporation 59.7° 61.7° 60.8° 61.9° 61.9° 61.6° 61.6°
Direction of Wind SSW. WSW. NE. NE. ENE. ENE. E.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 22.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
7 18	9 45	10 32	11 13	11 50	—	0 19
0 42	1 0	1 18	1 35	1 50	2 4

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS, "THE BRAZEN SERPENT," "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," and "CHRIST ENTERING THE TEMPLE," each 33 ft. by 22 ft., with "Dream of Pile's Wife," "Christian Martyrs," &c., at the DORE GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, W. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

ELIJAH WALTON.—EXHIBITION OF WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, chiefly ALPINE and EASTERN, ON VIEW and for SALE at very moderate prices.—NOW OPEN, at BURLINGTON GALLERY, 191, Piccadilly. Ten to six. Admission (including Catalogue), 1s.

CRYSTAL PALACE PICTURE-GALLERY.—Open all the year round for the RECEPTION and SALE of PICTURES by the British and Foreign Schools. For Particulars apply to Mr. C. W. WASS.

THE MOONSTONE. By WILKIE COLLINS. A New Drama. EVERY EVENING at 8.15.—OLYMPIC THEATRE.

MASKELYNE and COOKE. Daily at Three and Eight o'clock. EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Fifth year in London. The present programme embraces Psycho and Zoe, the twin automatic mysteries; the sensational scene, in exposure of so-called Spiritualism, in which Mr. Cooke floats about the room taking the cabinet with him—the most astounding feat ever accomplished; and many other illusory items of novel and original character. Such is the success of the entertainment that it is advisable to book seats in advance, for which there is no charge. Admission, 5s., 3s., 2s., 1s.

TWO HOURS AT HOME.—GREAT ST. JAMES'S HALL.—TWELVE NIGHTS ONLY, commencing MONDAY, SEPT. 24. Every Monday, Tuesday, Friday, and Saturday, at Eight, Mr. Kennedy, the Scottish Vocalist, will give his Entertainments on the Songs of Scotland, assisted by the following members of his family:—Miss Helen Kennedy, soprano; Miss Marjory Kennedy, contralto; Mr. David Kennedy, tenor; Mr. Robert Kennedy, bass; Mr. James Kennedy, baritone. Change of programme each evening. Tickets, 3s., 2s., and 1s., at Austin's and principal Music-sellers.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS will introduce an ENTIRELY NEW PROGRAMME. The whole of the songs contained in the first or musical portion of the Entertainment will be changed. New Dances, New Whimsicalities, and New Burlesque Sketches. The New Programme will be given EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT, and on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at THREE and EIGHT.

FAUTEUILS, 5s.; SOFA STALLS, 2s.; AREA, 2s.; GALLERY, 1s. Doors Open at 2.30 for the Day Performance; at 7.30 for the Evening Performance. No fees. Ladies can retain their bonnets in all parts of the Hall.

TUESDAY NEXT, SEPT. 18.

INAUGURATION OF THE THIRTEENTH YEAR OF THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS' UNINTERRUPTED SEASON at the

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY, which commenced on Sept. 18, 1865, since which period there HAS NOT BEEN A BREAK OF A SINGLE LAWFUL DAY. ON TUESDAY NEXT, SEPT. 18, THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS WILL GIVE THEIR FIVE THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-THIRD CONSECUTIVE PERFORMANCE AT THIS HALL—an event without parallel in the history of amusements.

In addition to the extraordinary number of Representations at the St. James's Hall, the company have given many occasional entertainments at the Crystal Palace, the Alexandra Palace, the Theatre Royal Drury-Lane, Princess's, the Gaiety, Globe, Opera Comique, and also none of which have interfered with the regular Representations at St. James's Hall.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY PERFORMANCES AT THE STANDARD THEATRE.

THE MOORE and BURGESS COMPANY NOW COMPRISES UPWARDS OF FORTY of the finest Vocalists and Instrumentalists ever brought together in a similar organization, the whole of the Instrumentalists in Messrs. Moore and Burgess' Orchestra having been selected from the Royal Italian Opera, Her Majesty's Opera, and Philharmonic Society's Band; while nearly all the principal Vocalists have filled responsible positions on the operatic stage.

Amateur clerks and shopmen have never been permitted to inflict their feeble efforts on the audience of St. James's Hall.

INAUGURATION OF THE THIRTEENTH CONSECUTIVE YEAR.

TUESDAY NEXT, SEPT. 18.

FAUTEUILS, 5s.; SOFA STALLS, 2s.; AREA (raised and cushioned seats), 2s.; GALLERY (the largest and most comfortable in London), 1s. No fees. No charge for Programmes.

Every West-End omnibus will convey visitors to the doors of St. James's Hall.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—Great Success.—HAMILTON'S RUSSO-TURKISH WAR. Vivid representations of the most important Events of the Campaign. Magnificent Scenes in Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Vienna, Belgrade, &c. EVERY EVENING at Eight; Wednesday and Saturday, at Three and Eight.

LONDON HOSPITAL, Whitechapel-road, E.—FUNDS are GREATLY NEEDED, and Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received. Nearly 800 Beds maintained. Fixed Income, about £14,000. Unavoidable Expenditure, about £40,000 yearly.

Wards and other parts of the Institution always Open to the Inspection of Visitors. Reports, with full information as to privileges of Subscribers and of the work effected by this Hospital, sent (free) on application. A. G. SKELETON, Secretary. Bankers—Roberts, Lubbock, and Co.; Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co.

Now ready, THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK FOR 1878. containing Twenty-Four Engravings from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—viz. Gates of Constantinople, Ports on the Bosphorus and the Black Sea, Old Modes of Locomotion, &c.; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Licenses; Zepher, Remarkable Events, &c. &c. &c. and a great variety of Useful and interesting Information. The Trade supplied by G. VICKERS, Angel-court (177), Strand; and H. Williams, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1877.

The skies have been more merciful to India than was feared by those who felt the heaviest responsibility for its future. Rain has fallen over some districts in sufficient abundance to save the next harvest; in others, copiously but inadequately, yet with good ground for expectation that it will be followed up by more. Within the last fortnight prospects have greatly changed for the better. They are no longer indefinitely disastrous, paralysing hope, and so destroying one of the chief incentives to vigorous interposition. There is reason for believing that the period of four months intervening between the present time and the next harvest will comprise the extreme limits within which extraordinary assistance, whether through the agency of the Indian Government or through the benevolent liberality of the British public, will be called for. In short, the work which we have to do is becoming, to a much greater extent, more commensurate with the means which are within our reach. We begin to see not merely a possible, but a probable, end to the duties devolving upon us. It is well that such should be the case. Nothing tends more surely to discourage strenuous activity than a conviction that the evil to be grappled with far transcends the immense instrumentality which it imperatively requires. We are as some strong swimmer who in making for the shore has already touched ground. We are not certain as yet that we shall achieve deliverance from the stormy billows with which we may have to contend, but at least we have passed from what seemed to be beyond reach of hope to what is within reach, and we are justified in the expectation that within a calculable interval—and that, moreover, measurable with our own strength—we shall, with whatever temporary damage, have placed ourselves ahead of the danger which menaced us.

Let us not mistake our position. The rains which have fallen can only affect the coming harvest. They cannot restore the past. Up to February next, when it is possible, nay, all but certain, that plenty will again be known in Southern India, famine will continue to prevail—that is, that upwards of twenty millions of people will be short of the food necessary for their subsistence, three fourths of whom may become dependent upon sources outside their own exertions for the material aliment requisite to the maintenance of life. Now, when it is considered that to feed ten million people—and we advisedly adopt a low estimate of what may be required—four thousand tons of grain must be provided and distributed, we may perceive how stupendous is the task devolving upon the Indian Administration. When we last wrote upon this subject the number of deaths traceable, directly or indirectly, to the Famine, had already reached half a million. We fear that frightful number must, in any case, be very largely exceeded. The means of transport have been, we are informed, quite insufficient to meet the demand. A Correspondent of the Times, writing from Madras, states that there have been acres of ground near that city covered with bags of rice sent by sea, while in the interior of the country beyond it there have been the starving villages for which the rice was destined, but to which it could not be forwarded. Here, at any rate, there is room for the interposition of Government. A large temporary addition to the rolling stock of the railway has already, we believe, been made, and, amongst the unremunerative public works to be undertaken with a view to the employment of the destitute population, tramways branching from it in various directions will pierce many an outlet in the impediments now existing to the conveyance of food to where it is most wanted—a remedial measure which will, perhaps, become as important for the future well being of Southern India as for the proximate relief of its starving people. There can be no distrust of the energy or of the general wisdom of the Administration of India in this crisis; and we think we may fairly cherish the consoling conviction that what can be done by public authority (without utterly demoralising the existing social constitution of India) will be done.

The next question which occurs is what aid can be supplemented to the Ruling Powers by private benevolence. The answer has been already furnished by the considerate prevision of Indian Statesmen. A channel has been marked out by them into which individual liberality may pour its treasures without embarrassing in any way the machinery of Government. The orphans of those who perish by the Famine, or by any of the diseases consequent thereupon, and those families ready to drop into the devouring vortex, but who cannot be expected to hold out much longer, are formally made over to British benevolence. An appeal has been made through the Lord Mayor of London, as we anticipated it would be, to the generosity of the British people. That appeal has been promptly responded to, and the response will no doubt reach a sum far beyond common expectation. But no total likely to be sent in will be commensurate with the need of the occasion. Nevertheless, it is not our intention to ply our readers with reasons for contributing. The case is one which needs only to be set forth as it has been by the committee at the Mansion House to commend itself to the sympathy and liberality of Englishmen in general. The ready hand will be instantly at the service of the feeling heart. The widow's mite will be welcomed with as thankful a spirit as the more splendid subscription of the millionaire. At any rate, here is a sphere for the action of each, and a motive which can hardly fail of telling upon all. We need none of us in this case ask, Who is our neighbour? We should be anxious only that the duties of a neighbour may be efficiently and cheerfully discharged.

THE COURT.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, visited Mrs. Campbell at The Manse, Crathie, on Thursday week, and subsequently drove to the Glassalt Shiel. The Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Hutchings, and Mr. George Farquharson of Invercauld, dined with her Majesty at Balmoral Castle the next day. On Saturday last the Queen, with Princess Beatrice, drove to Glen Gelder Shiel. The Rev. Donald Macleod, D.D., arrived at the castle. Her Majesty and Princess Beatrice attended Divine service on Sunday, performed at the castle by the Rev. Dr. Donald Macleod. The Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy, the Rev. Dr. Macleod, and the Rev. A. Campbell dined with the Queen. Her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, left Balmoral on Wednesday for a few days' sojourn on Loch Maree, Ross-shire. She left Balmoral Castle early in the forenoon. The train proceeded to Keith, in charge of the officials of the Great Northern of Scotland Railway, and at Keith entered on the Highland line, and was taken in charge by the general manager of the company, the locomotive superintendent, and the assistant-superintendent of the line. Her Majesty arrived at Achnasheen, the station on Dingwall and Skye Railway, at 4.50. The journey thence to Loch Maree, about fifteen miles, was made by posting. Prince Leopold has taken daily drives on Deeside. On Wednesday the Prince arrived at Dunkeld from Balmoral, having posted by Braemar, Spital of Glenshee, and Blairgowrie. Shortly after his arrival the Prince visited the Dowager Duchess of Athole at Dunkeld House. He was to leave on Thursday for Aberfeldy, on his way to Taymouth Castle to visit the Earl and Countess of Breadalbane.

Her Majesty has caused a message of condolence to be sent to Madame Thiers.

The Queen has appointed George Husband Baird Macleod, Esq., M.D., Regius Professor of Surgery, University of Glasgow, to be one of the Surgeons in Ordinary to her Majesty in Scotland, in the room of Professor Joseph Lister, resigned.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales arrived at Cowes yesterday week in his yacht Hildegarde from Havre. His Royal Highness is expected to arrive at Newburgh Park, Easingwold, on a visit to Sir George O. Wombwell on Monday next, for a few days' shooting. The Princess of Wales, with her children, are at the Isle of Wight.

The Prince has appointed the Hon. Alfred Henry Thesiger, Q.C., to be Attorney-General to his Royal Highness, vice George Loch, Esq., Q.C., deceased.

The Duke of Connaught has passed a week on a visit to the Knight of Kerry at his residence, Glanleam, Valentia. His Royal Highness had an enthusiastic reception upon his landing on the island. The Duke, accompanied by a numerous suite, went to the Gaiety Theatre on Wednesday evening.

The Empress Eugénie and Prince Louis Napoleon, who are now staying at Cowes, on Monday attended a mass said at her Majesty's special request for the soul of the late Emperor. In the afternoon the Empress and the Prince accompanied the Prince and Princess of Wales in a sail round the island in the Royal yacht Osborne.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has passed some days visiting the Earl of Enniskillen at Florence Court, in the county of Fermanagh, the Bishop of Derry in Londonderry, and Lord O'Neill at Shanes Castle; and at the close of the week the Archbishop and Mrs. and the Misses Taunt will arrive at the Viceregal Lodge on a visit to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The Archbishop of York has left Bishopthorpe for Scotland.

His Excellency the Russian Ambassador and Countess Schouvaloff arrived at Brighton last Saturday from Scotland.

His Excellency General Meredith Read, American Minister at the Court of Athens, has arrived on a visit to the Marquis of Bute, at Mount Stuart, Rothsay.

The Duchess of St. Albans and Mrs. Bernal Osborne have left Newtown Anner, Tipperary, for Kilkee. The Duke of St. Albans is cruising in his yacht off the coast.

The Duke of Norfolk, accompanied by the Duchess of Norfolk and the Ladies Howard, has arrived at The Farm, Sheffield, from Arundel Castle, Sussex.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Bristol have left Ickworth Park, Bury St. Edmunds, for Scotland.

The Earl and Countess Manvers and the Ladies Pierrepont, have arrived at Holme Pierrepont, near Nottingham.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

The marriage of Mr. Ion Trant Hamilton, M.P. for the county of Dublin, and Miss Victoria Alexandra Wellesley, daughter of Lady Charles Wellesley and granddaughter of the illustrious Duke of Wellington, was solemnised on Thursday week, at St. George's Church, Hanover-square. The bride arrived accompanied by Lady Charles Wellesley, and was received by Colonel Wellesley and her bridesmaids—namely, Lady Emily Pierrepont, Miss Egerton, Miss Campbell, and Miss Evelyn Wellesley (cousins and niece of the bride), and Lady Emily Stanhope and Miss Cane (cousins of the bridegroom). Mr. Montagu Corry acted as Mr. Ion Hamilton's best man. The bride, who was given away by Colonel Wellesley, wore a dress of rich white satin trimmed with Brussels lace, and over a wreath of orange-blossoms fastened by diamond stars a tulle veil. The jewels were a diamond necklace and pendant. The bridesmaids were dressed in costumes of cream-coloured plain and broché foulard; straw hats trimmed with cream-coloured feathers and bunches of shamrocks and bluish roses. Each wore a crystal locket set round with pearls and diamonds, and initials I. V. in white enamel. The religious ceremony was performed by the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Windsor, uncle of the bride. After the celebration the wedding party reassembled at Lady Charles Wellesley's residence in Hill-street, Berkeley-square, for breakfast, which was provided for upwards of fifty guests. The bride and bridegroom left for Marbury Hall, Mr. Smith Barry's seat in Cheshire, where they pass the early days of their honeymoon, and go to Abbotstown, in the county of Dublin. The bride's travelling-dress consisted of a fawn-coloured silk skirt and merino polonaise, with ostrich feather trimming and bonnet to match. A gold collar necklace set with diamonds, and locket set with diamond star, given by Mr. Derham, of Skerries, and the pearl bracelet given by Lady Charles Wellesley's household were also worn. The wedding presents were very numerous. The Queen sent her goddaughter a locket, a gold medallion of her Majesty set in opals, and an Indian shawl; the bridegroom gave his bride a diamond necklace with pendants and diamond earrings, and a dressing-case with silver-gilt fittings; the Duke of Wellington's present to his niece consisted of a set of five diamond stars and diamond drop earrings, and the Duchess of Wellington a locket and massive bracelet, set with diamonds and pearls; the tenants on the Holmpatrick estate gave a suite of five pearl stars with diamond centre; and the Abbotstown servants, a Bible with mediæval gilt mountings.

The marriage of Lord Ernest Seymour, third and youngest son of the Marquis of Hertford, and Lady Georgiana, fourth daughter of Earl Fortescue, will take place in the course of the week after next; and the marriage of Lady Elinor Amherst, fourth daughter of Earl and Countess Amherst, with Captain Denison, M.P. for Nottingham, is expected to take place early in November.

GENERAL GRANT IN SCOTLAND.

General Grant telegraphed to the Dundee Magistrates from Dunrobin Castle on Thursday week, stating that other engagements prevented him from carrying out his intention of re-visiting Dundee, and that therefore he should be unable to accept the freedom of that borough which the Town Council had so kindly offered. The General, in company with the Duke of Sutherland, visited several places of interest in the vicinity of Dunrobin. Next day he visited Thurso, with Mrs. Grant, the Duke of Sutherland, and others. Sir Tollemache Sinclair, M.P., was at the station. The local volunteers appeared as a guard of honour, and escorted the General to Thurso Castle, the cheering along the whole route being most enthusiastic. In front of the Castle, Provost Bremner, chief magistrate, presented the General with an address from the Town Council and the inhabitants, allusion being made to his Scotch extraction. In the afternoon the party drove to Barrogill Castle and John o'Groats, on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Caithness, and after a short stay returned to Thurso Castle. In the evening he visited Wick, and was presented with the freedom of that ancient burgh. In acknowledging the honour General Grant remarked that during the eight years of his Presidency it was a hope of his, which he was happy to say had been realised, that all differences between England and the United States should be removed in a manner honourable to both.

General Grant arrived in Inverness on Saturday, and was presented in the evening with the freedom of the burgh. The presentation was made in the music-hall by Provost Simpson, who referred in his speech to the settlement of the Alabama claims. General Grant, in reply, expressed his gratitude for the kindness and attention he had received since he landed on the shores of Great Britain, and said that he should carry home nothing but pleasant recollections of his visit. He had always felt, long before he had anything to do with the settling of those questions of which the Provost had spoken, and which had caused some irritation between the two countries, that nothing but the best of feelings should exist between the two English-speaking nations, and he was glad that the Alabama affair had been concluded in a fair and honourable way to both parties. He hoped that during the centuries to come the friendship of the two great countries would go on increasing, and if it did the effect would be felt over all the world. An album of Highland scenery was presented to Mrs. Grant.

On Tuesday General and Mrs. Grant arrived at Glasgow from Stirling. They were the guests of Lord Provost Bain during their stay. On Wednesday General Grant, accompanied by the Lord Provost of Glasgow, visited the ship-building yard of Messrs. John Elder and Co., and other places of interest in Glasgow. He was presented with the freedom of the city on Thursday, and entertained by the corporation at a banquet in the evening.

At a meeting of the Leamington Corporation on Monday evening the Mayor read a letter from General Grant regretting his inability to visit Leamington next month, when the Sanitary Institute will hold a congress in that town. The General added that he hoped to visit Leamington at a later period.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Thames overflowed its banks slightly on Sunday and Monday, and, although such an event had been foreseen and necessary precautions had been taken, some damage was done.

The nineteen horses that have been working the Guildford coach during the season just closed were sold at Tattersall's on Monday for 1529 guineas, averaging 80½ guineas each.

The amount received by the Hospital Saturday Fund up to Wednesday night was about £2500. This is exclusive of the sum collected in the streets on Hospital Saturday. The amount, as at present known, is about £300 in excess of the sum received at the corresponding date last year. M. Leopold de Rothschild, one of the vice-presidents, has sent £50.

An exhibition of fruit, cut flowers, and table decorations has been held at the Alexandra Palace this week—on Thursday, yesterday, and to-day.—The caravan of animals from the central regions of Africa and of Nubian hunters, which has been for some time past a source of attraction to the inhabitants of Paris and its visitors, has arrived at the Alexandra Palace, and is on view daily.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism for the first week of September shows that the number of paupers was 76,802, of whom 36,374 were in workhouses and 40,428 received outdoor relief. Compared with the corresponding weeks of 1876, 1875, and 1874, these figures show a decline of 533, 5321, and 14,633 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 658, of whom 424 were men, 187 women, and 47 children under the age of sixteen.

Application having been made to the Lord Mayor to give his sanction and patronage to entertainments to be given throughout the country by six of the Tynewydd miners, aided by a company of vocalists, half of the proceeds to go to the Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund, a reply has been received from his Lordship expressing his regret that he cannot patronise the movement, and adding that the exhibition which the Welsh miners are making of themselves goes far to remove any kindly interest which he had taken in them.

Last month the officers of the Fishmongers' Company seized 58½ tons of diseased fish at and near Billingsgate Market. The fish numbered 218,010, of which 160,891 arrived by water and 57,119 by rail. They included 17 brill, 150 catfish, 523 cod, 120 crabs, 30 conger-eels, 25,800 dabs, 48 dorset, 56,300 gurnets, 26,410 haddocks, 1 halibut, 10,125 herrings, 9 ling, 1575 lobsters, 500 mackerel, 470 mullets, 300 pilchards, 16,354 plaice, 7 salmon, 27 skate, 1800 smelts, 256 soles, 660 thornbacks, 30 trout, 28 turbot, and 75,450 whiting; in addition to which there were seized 2 gallons of mussels, 447 of periwinkles, and 47 of whelks, 655 quarts of shrimps, 101 lb. of eels, and 12 lb. of prawns.

An inquest was held at Dartmouth Park last Tuesday as to the death of a little boy named Stevens, three years of age, living in Spencer-street, Highgate-rise, who died from poisoning by nicotine. The father said that on Saturday week he gave the child a new clay pipe for the purpose of blowing soap-bubbles. The child broke the pipe, and his father then gave him an old wooden pipe, having previously washed it. After using this for a time, the child became sick. Medical advice was sought; but the child gradually grew worse, and died last Wednesday. The doctor who attended him said that death was caused by the nicotine which the child had imbibed when blowing the bubbles, and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the evidence.

There were 2356 births and 1188 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 64, whereas the deaths were so many as 257 below, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths from smallpox, which had been 21, 11, and 20 in the three previous weeks, declined last week to 8—a smaller number than in any week since September last. There were 23 deaths from measles, 17 from scarlet fever, 7 from diphtheria, 19 from whooping-cough, 21 from different forms of fever, and 87 from diarrhoea. In Greater London 2911 births and 1423 deaths were registered. The mean temperature was 53.5 deg., being 5.2 deg. below the average. The duration of registered sunshine during the week was 37.7 hours out of the 92.6 hours that the sun was above the horizon.

The Turners' Company, according to custom, have offered their freedom, with other rewards, to the exhibitors of the best specimens of hand-turning in any of the subjects of competition, which this year include ivory, pottery, stone, and jet, and steel, brass, and gold for horological purposes. Pottery will comprise terra-cotta, stoneware, earthenware, and porcelain, and stone and jet will include any natural substance of a mineral character except those which require baking or burning. Lady Burdett-Coutts has offered £25 for money prizes to the competitors, and the court of the company has voted £50 for the same purpose. Among the judges are Sir Gilbert Scott, Sir Joseph Whitworth, Dr. Pole, Mr. Hutton Gregory, Mr. Doulton, and others. The articles will be on view some time in October at the Mansion House, and the Lord Mayor will distribute the prizes to the winners.

The Lord Mayor, on taking his seat at the Mansion House Police Court on Monday, made an appeal for funds for the poor-box, observing that there was nothing in the box, and that, in fact, the account was considerably overdrawn.—A letter from the Prefect of the Seine was received by his Lordship acknowledging, on behalf of the Municipal Council of Paris, the courtesy and hospitality shown by the Lord Mayor to the members of the council who recently visited London. The council also presented the Lord Mayor with two handsome volumes of the work, "Les Armoiries de Paris."—The same post brought the Lord Mayor a letter from the Mayor of Baltimore asking his acceptance of two volumes containing the Mayor's last annual Message to the City Council and the reports of the heads of the various departments of the Municipal Government.—The Lord Mayor has, on account of his official and other engagements, declined to be nominated for the treasurership of St. Thomas's Hospital.—The Lord Mayor received on Tuesday from the Hon. S. L. Tilley, Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, a letter, dated Fredericton, Aug. 30, thanking his Lordship and the subscribers to the fund for the relief of the distress caused by the fire at St. John for their aid. The letter states that the aged and infirm, and widows with children, whose means of support have in whole or in part been destroyed, have been specially considered, that a portion of the £5800 received has already been appropriated to their relief, and that further aid will from time to time be given.

Mr. Gladstone has accepted the invitation of the Mayor of Nottingham to be present on the occasion of the laying of the foundation-stone of the new buildings to be erected in the town for a free library, and for the promotion of the Cambridge University extension scheme. The buildings will cost upwards of £40,000, and of this sum an anonymous donor has given £10,000. The Corporation find the remainder.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Beavan, Alfred Edward, to be Vicar of Hadfield Broad Oak.
Brown, Joseph Smith; Curate of Millrow.
Colby, E. R.; Resident Chaplain at Leipzig, Saxony.
Edwards, Basil; Vicar of Blaisdon.
Forde, J. F.; Incumbent of St. Peter's, Eltham, Kent.
Forrest, Dr.; Chaplain to Mr. Alderman Nottage, Sheriff-Elect.
Gedge, H. Somerville; Incumbent of St. Paul's District, Northampton.
Gibbs, George Frederic, Vicar of Downholme; Vicar of All Saints', Leeds.
Johnson, Thomas Gilpin; Perpetual Curate of All Saints', Preston.
Jones, Walter A.; Curate of Tewkesbury Abbey.
Maude, Charles Frewen; Rector of Woodham Mortimer, Essex.
Mould, J.; Chaplain to Mr. Alderman Staples, Sheriff-Elect.
Penny, J.; Head Master of the Milton-Abbas Grammar School.
Powles, H. C.; Rector of Aahleworth, Gloucestershire.
Pratt, C. P. Tidd; Surrogate for the Diocese of Oxford.
Richardson, Frederic Henry; Rural Dean of Goscoat First Deanery, Treacher, J. B.; Surrogate in the Diocese of Oxford.—Guardian.

The Marquis of Salisbury, Earl Cowper, Earl Brownlow, the Earl of Essex, Sir E. Beckett, Bart., and Mr. Abel Smith, M.P., have each subscribed a donation of £100 towards the increase of the endowment fund of St. Albans Abbey.

On Sunday, the 1st inst., a new chancel which has been added to Rokeby church, Yorkshire, as a memorial of the late Mrs. Morritt, was opened by the Bishop of Ripon, who preached on the occasion from Ephesians v. 1. In the afternoon a sermon was preached by the Dean of York.

The Bishop of Ripon spoke on Monday at the annual meeting of the Ripon Auxiliary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. His Lordship spoke of the efforts of the society in missionary work, and referred with satisfaction to the large accession of native-born clergy to the missionary staff.

The chancel of Truro cathedral is being extended, in order to accommodate the honorary Canons who are shortly to be appointed by the Bishop. There are eight honorary Canons to be appointed this year, and two each succeeding year till the number reaches twenty-four, as provided by the Act. The first Canon will be the Rev. R. Thynne, Rector of Kilkhampton.

Burnham church, Essex, has been enriched by a costly and beautiful pulpit, bought by public subscription and erected in memory of the late Mr. William Anger, who for many years filled the office of churchwarden; a prayer-deak and lectern of carved oak have also been furnished out of the same fund; and the chancel of the church has undergone considerable restoration at the expense of Mrs. Anger and other friends.

The fine and ancient church of Henbury, Bristol, has been thoroughly restored, and its beauty increased by the insertion of a four-light window of an unusual treatment. It is composed of two shades of green glass, with black outlines of the subjects of the Holy Women at the Tomb, and the appearance of the Saviour to Mary Magdalene, which is said to have a very good effect. Messrs. Mayer and Co., of Munich, are the executors.

The interesting little church of Appledram, near Chichester, was reopened by the Bishop of the diocese, after a complete and careful restoration, on the 6th inst. The cost of restoring the chancel has been defrayed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who are the improprators of the tithes; the cost of the nave has been defrayed by the Vicar, the Rev. R. A. L. Nunns, aided by considerable local contributions and grants from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and the Diocesan Society.

The treasurer of the Rochester Cathedral Restoration Fund writes to explain that the recently published audited account only includes the sum raised by the donations of the public and of the individual members of the Chapter. Before appealing to the public at all the Dean and Chapter spent rather more than £10,000 (the accumulations of several years for this purpose) upon those substantial repairs and restorations of the fabric which were most urgently needed. The whole amount, therefore, expended during the last six years is nearly £23,300. During the same period, by the liberality of several donors, fifteen stained-glass windows have been inserted, at a cost of more than £1200. But, the treasurer adds, a great deal more still remains to be done, for which the funds are wanting.

The work of restoring the ancient Church of St. Mungo, at Simonbury, which has now been going on for eighteen months, was brought to a termination on the 4th inst., when the church was reopened by the Bishop of Durham. The idea of restoring the mother church of Tynedale was entertained by the present Rector, the Rev. Percy Rogers, shortly after his appointment in 1873, and with the help of his fellow honorary secretary, Major-General Allgood, C.B., has now, in spite of many difficulties, been carried out by Mr. R. J. Johnson, of Newcastle, at a cost of about £2700. Some very handsome gifts have been presented to the church, first among which may be mentioned three stained windows, by Mr. Kempe, Beaumont-street, London. The east chancel window has its centre light filled by the Crucifixion, with angels at the head and foot of the Cross, while on either side light is portrayed the Virgin and St. John, above whom are represented angels holding the sun turning away his face in horror, and the eclipsed earth. Under it runs the inscription—"In memory of Meyrick Henry Legge Beebee, born at Simonburn, 7th Sept., 1842, died at Calcutta, 7th Jan., 1875, dedicated by his widow." The north-east aisle, or "angel window," is erected by Miss Allgood, of the Hermitage, in memory of her sister Mary Fanny and her brothers William Isaac, in holy orders, and Robert James, 98th Regiment, who are buried in the churchyard. The third, or "children's window," in the north aisle, is the gift of Major-General Allgood, C.B., and bears only the inscription, "To the glory of God, in memory of a very dear wife and child, who rest in the churchyard." The pulpit, of Early English design, taken from one in Magdalen College, Oxford, is inscribed "To the glory of God, in memory of Meyrick Beebee, M.A., for thirty-two years Rector of Simonburn, the gift of his children." Within the rails is a rich pavement of Irish and Carrara marbles, another "In memoriam" gift of Miss Allgood. Last, there stands close to the door a font of white Caen stone carved with ferns and lilies, bearing the inscription, "The gift of Mary Ridley, daughter of John and Bridget Ridley, of Parkend."

Sir Charles Dilke, M.P., distributed the prizes to the students of the Onslow College of Science, of which he is the president, at the Vestry-Hall, Chelsea, on Tuesday.

The Royal Humane Society has awarded an honorary testimonial on vellum to Mr. Horace Hart, of Lewisham, for rescuing from drowning a young lady who fell off the parade into the sea at Walton-on-the-Naze, on Aug. 5. Mr. Hart, seeing the young lady struggling in the sea, leaped in with all his clothes on, and brought her safely ashore.

An attempt is to be made to convert Sheffield parish churchyard, which occupies about three acres in the heart of the town, into an ornamental garden. An agreement was confirmed by the Corporation on Wednesday by which a portion of the churchyard is to be given up on two sides to widen the streets, and the remainder is to be inclosed, laid out as an ornamental ground, and kept in good order for ever at the expense of the town.

HOUSE OF THE LATE M. THIERS, IN THE PLACE ST. GEORGES, RUE NOTRE DAME DE LORETTE, PARIS.

THE WAR: THE VALLEY OF THE LOM.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

NEW TOWNHALL AT MANCHESTER—THE GREAT HALL.

THE WAR.

The mighty struggle in Bulgaria, in the central region traversed by the rivers Osma, Lom, and Vid, has finally drawn to what seems likely to prove a decisive battle in the neighbourhood of Plevna, which had been the scene of two fierce conflicts before. The situation of that town on the river Vid, and the positions of the allied Russian and Roumanian forces brought there to attack the intrenchments held by Osman Pasha, are shown in the Map which will be found in our Supplement. The main army, commanded by the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, who is accompanied by the Emperor Alexander, with headquarters at Poradim, is extended in a semicircle facing westward, over the space inclosed by the Osma and the Vid, having its rear to the Osma, and with its front curved in a vast concave of thirty or forty miles, half surrounding Plevna; the Roumanian divisions forming its right wing, and stretching across the Vid. Fighting—but chiefly artillery bombardment or cannonade, with detached assaults on particular earthworks—has been going on here daily since the morning of yesterday week.

The capture by the Russians, on Monday week, of Lovcha or Lovatz, a town on the Osma, twenty miles south of Plevna, was described in our last, and its effect will be greatly to enhance the importance of a defeat of Osman Pasha at Plevna, as he will be cut off from a junction with Suleiman Pasha, who is expected to march northward from the Balkans.

On the other hand, the rear and left wing of the Russian entire array of forces, resting on the river Jantra, at Biela or Bela, with its hold of the bridge over the Danube at Sistova, would seem to be endangered by the recent victories of Mahomet Ali Pasha. He has repeatedly beaten the troops of the Czarewitch on the river Lom, and has now driven them quite back from that river, and from the roads leading to the Turkish fortified town of Rustchuk. It is possible that he may be able to hinder some reinforcements from Russia passing the Danube.

This being the general aspect of the military situation in Bulgaria, we would invite the reader's attention to the Sketches of our Special Artists; one by Mr. Melton Prior, representing the valley of the Lom, where Mahomet Ali Pasha has won his recent victories; and two Sketches, by Herr Schönberg, of the Roumanian troops (16th Dorobantz Regiment) on their march to Bryslan, one of their allotted positions before Plevna. We gather from the Special Correspondents of the daily London newspapers, but more especially from the letters of this week telegraphed to the Daily News, a sufficient notion of the Russian attempts, since Friday in last week, to reduce Osman Pasha's intrenched position at Plevna. This must be regarded, in any event, as the principal operation of the whole campaign.

On Thursday week, in the evening, the attacking forces before Plevna took up their positions. This army (without going into details) comprises the 9th Corps, still under the command of Baron Krüdener, 18,000 men; the 4th Corps, General Kryloff (Zotoff), the old commander, being now chief of the Roumanian staff) commanding, 20,000; one brigade of Meretinsky's Division and one brigade of the Third Division, each numbering 6000 men; the fourth Rifle Brigade, 3000 men; the two Roumanian divisions of 14,000 men each, completing the force of infantry to 80,000 bayonets. The cavalry consists of the Fourth and Ninth Cavalry Divisions and one brigade of the Eleventh Division, numbering 5000 sabres. Two Roumanian divisions, 4000, and a portion of the Imperial Escort bring up the total to 10,000 horsemen. The number of field-guns is not given, but it is stated that 250 25-centimetre guns of position accompany the force. The Roumanians occupy the right, where Krüdener fought on July 31—the strongest portion of the Turkish position—whilst the Russian forces are distributed more to the southward, where Schakofsky made his rash and disastrous advance. Opposite Grivitza are placed the Fifth Division (9th Corps), flanked on the left by the Thirty-first Division (9th Corps) and the Thirtieth Division (4th Corps). The line is then taken up by the Sixteenth Division, stretching round to Bogot on the Plevna-Lovcha road. By this road, after detaching a brigade to Trojan, due south of Lovcha, Meretinsky marched northward with one brigade of his own Division, one brigade of the Third Division, and the tirailleurs, thus increasing the strength of the left flank. On the morning of yesterday week, the 7th, the troops having arrived at their different positions on the previous evening, the battle was opened by a heavy fire from the Russian siege guns; for the importance of thoroughly preparing the way of the infantry by artillery is seen in the former descriptions of the Turkish position. The Russian infantry lie round about in readiness to attack it at the word of command, and the Russian batteries are very close up; but the Turkish position is a broad sloping natural glacis, affording no cover for attacking infantry, and the fire of the redoubts continued so strong that an assault on it would have entailed, if not failure, at least certain terrible loss.

On Saturday morning, at half-past five, the artillery engagement was renewed. The Russians on the left wing succeeded in capturing some heights to the south of the town, presumably beyond Radishovo, whilst two regiments of the Third Roumanian Division obtained possession of Urbitza. The cannonade lasted all through the night, and increased in violence on Sunday morning. It was maintained throughout Sunday night, and the Grivitza redoubt, which is the centre of the Turkish position, was assailed with cannon fire from north-east and south. Besides this a battery had been placed right out in the open in front of the redoubt, and was maintaining its position well, although the fire of the great Turkish work was concentrated upon it. The Daily News correspondent was able to satisfy himself by personal observation that Plevna was much stronger now than it was at the date of the last attack. He describes a whole chain of redoubts linked together by a covered way, and making a good line of cover for the Turks on their right flank and partly in their rear. These redoubts, it is important to note, command the Lovcha and Selvi road. The Turkish position is, indeed, one great intrenched camp studded with redoubts. The various fortified positions held by the Turks so materially and reciprocally command one another that the place must be taken as a whole or not at all.

On Monday, again, General Skobeleff attacked and carried another height before Plevna, the possession of which enables the Russians to bombard the enemy's position, and also the town itself. It is remarked that the Turks on this occasion made only a feeble resistance. The conflict was still going on at the hour of the latest despatches, on Wednesday, before the writing of this notice.

The battles of Karahassankoi and Kazelevo, as remarked above, have freed the course of the Lom from the presence of the Russians, and the Turks are now in unchallenged possession of the whole line. The following are the particulars of the engagement near Kazelevo on Wednesday week:—

The whole right wing of the Turkish force was concentrated at Solenik on the middle branch of the Lom, Fuad Pasha's division advancing from Rasgrad and Nedjib's from Karahassankoi. The Russians occupied Kazelevo. The 14th Corps d'Armée of Fuad Pasha took its position on the heights facing the village, and commenced a vigorous attack. The Russians made an obstinate resistance, but towards mid-day were forced to retire, after a loss of 2000 men. The Turks carried the redoubt at the point of the bayonet. A young Russian officer, who was here observed gallantly endeavouring to rally the men, was killed, and the body, when subsequently discovered, proved, it is said, to be that of a woman. She was buried where she fell. The Turkish commander, Mehemet Ali, freely exposed his life under the heavy shell fire, the battalions enthusiastically cheering him as they went into action. Next morning the discovery was made that the Russians had abandoned the opposite heights on the left bank, and had retreated towards Biela. The result of this brilliant action is completely to force back the Russian line of defence to the Jantra.

Other demonstrations have been made at Kadikoi and before Rustchuk, where the garrison have succeeded in preventing the Russian boats running opposite Pyrgos, thereby obliging the reinforcements for the Czarewitch to go round by the bridge at Sistova and most materially aiding the operations of Mehemet Ali. Operations in the Shipka Pass have been confined, as far as we know, to an artillery duel, but the situation of the Russians is not exactly desirable. Although masters of the pass, in so far that they have stopped the attempt to take it, the road leading to their position is commanded by the Turkish artillery, so that all supplies and troops have to be moved during the night.

We have again to thank Captain James Gambier, R.N., the Times "Naval Correspondent" with the army of Suleiman Pasha in the Balkans, for a sketch from which we have drawn our illustration of the Turks attacking the Russian positions in the Shipka Pass. The first day's fighting in that obstinate contest, which was prolonged during eight or nine days, costing the Turkish army at least ten thousand men in killed and wounded, has been thus described:—

"Arrived at the village of Shipka, at the mouth of the pass of that name, on Monday, the 20th ult., by the following day the troops had reached the crests of the crags 5000 ft. high, facing the Russian intrenchments, commanding the highest portion of the pass. Almost inaccessible as the position was, cannon was speedily brought up, and two batteries were established which throughout the day dealt havoc within the Russian intrenchments, which appeared to be at their mercy. Suleiman's troops meantime had ascended the main road of the pass, and had clambered up through the forest and thicket which clothed the mountain side to the grassy slopes, and not five hundred yards remained between the contesting soldiery. All day long the fight lasted, and far into the night. The Turkish soldiers were poured on to the bare slopes of the Russian intrenchments, and were mowed down with storms of bullets from their almost unseen and well-screened foe. Demands for reinforcements were repeatedly made by the General commanding the attack, and, although complied with, no troops in the world could withstand such fearful odds. A coup de main was clearly the only plan left to take the first of the enemy's positions; but at the late hour of the night, and with disheartened, exhausted troops, the idea had to be abandoned, and the day was practically lost, so far as the first direct attack was concerned. The troops actually engaged in the assault numbered 5000, and it is said that their losses in killed and wounded amounted to 1300. That of the enemy must have borne a proportionate amount, as the Turkish artillery was admirably served, and from the commanding position it occupied must have dealt death and destruction, as every shell exploded in the enemy's ranks."

The Emperor of Russia has given forty crosses of honour to be distributed among the soldiers of the 16th Dorobantz Regiment of Roumanians, for their bravery in the attack on Plevna; and Prince Charles of Roumania has issued a martial proclamation. The Turkish fortress of Nicsich, in Herzegovina, has at length surrendered to the Montenegrins.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Marshal MacMahon, accompanied by M. Fourtoul, Minister of the Interior, left Paris for Bordeaux on Sunday morning. He was welcomed at the towns of Poitiers, Ruffec, and Angoulême by the Prefects, and by large crowds, but no cries of any description were indulged in. At night he was the guest of the Duke Decazes, at the Château La Grave. The Duke gave a banquet in honour of the President, and there were illuminations in the evening. Marshal MacMahon reached Bordeaux at one o'clock on Monday, and was received by the civil and military authorities. M. Fourcaud, the Mayor, a Republican, in addressing the Marshal, said that the municipal council and the members of the administration were all elected by a Republican population firmly attached to order, and full of respect for the laws. Their only thought was for the maintenance of peace and the free development of the national activity. These were the true Conservative principles. By the appeal to universal suffrage the country would be appeased, the public prosperity promoted, and the Constitution newly guaranteed. In his reply the Marshal said, "Rest assured that peace, which is one of your first needs, will not be disturbed; and that, when the country shall have responded to my appeal, the Constitution to which you are attached, and of which I shall be the faithful guardian, will work unimpeded, in order to assure the complete development of the national prosperity." Replying to the president of the Chamber of Commerce, the Marshal spoke of his desire to promote commercial interests, and referred to some local improvements which were about to be undertaken. He added, "The increase in the revenue continues. It has reached the sum of 5,000,000f. for the month of August, and 27,000,000f. for the seven preceding months; and will, I hope, allow of a reduction of the taxes being proposed in the next Budget favourable to the development of commerce and industry." A special correspondent telegraphed from Bordeaux to the Times that the Marshal's reply to the Republican Mayor and Life Senator, and also his reply to the important free-trade speech of the President of the Chamber of Commerce, had made an excellent impression, and a compact crowd collected on his way to the theatre, by whom he was warmly and unanimously cheered. The crowd raised, with equal vigour, the two cries of "Vive la République!" and "Vive le Maréchal!" the changes being rung on both, without anything suggestive of inconsistency between them. At Arcachon the Marshal on Tuesday inspected the oyster-beds—now an important industry—and the steam fishing-boats. He had a hearty reception, and gave the Legion of Honour to M. Johnston, one of the numerous citizens of English extraction of whom France is proud. M. Johnston is one of those who have made Arcachon, and is one of the great vine-growers of Bordeaux. He is brother of a Right Centre Deputy who distinguished himself in the National Assembly of 1871. On Wednesday the Marshal went to Périgueux.

The funeral of M. Thiers took place last Saturday. A description of the ceremony is given at page 258.

M. Gambetta was sentenced on Tuesday, by the Tribunal of Correctional Police in Paris, to three months' imprisonment and a fine of 2000f. on the charge of libelling, in his speech at Lille, the President of the Republic and insulting the Ministers. M. Gambetta did not appear. M. Bertoland, the counsel he had retained, was prevented by illness from defending him; and M. Allou, to whom he afterwards applied, declined, owing to the shortness of the notice, to undertake the case. Judgment was therefore given by default—M. Murat, publisher of the République Française, in which the report of the speech appeared, being included in the sentence. M. Gambetta had petitioned for a week's adjournment, but this was refused by the Court. M. Gambetta has lodged an appeal to the judgment against him.

Several more Mayors have been dismissed.

The usual gathering of Positivists on the anniversary of the death of Auguste Comte, was last week held in the Rue Monsieur le Prince, Paris, where his rooms are religiously preserved just as he left them. M. Pierre Laffitte delivered an address, in which he denounced scientific materialism, especially as exhibited in certain modern ethnological theories. Among those present were Mr. Frederic Harrison and Professor Beesly.

Mr. Washburne, the late American Minister at Paris, left that city on Monday afternoon for Southampton en route to the United States.

The French Geographical Society has purchased on the Boulevard St. Germain, at Paris, a site for the erection of a building for its meetings, library, and offices. The hall in which the meetings will be held will be large enough to hold 500 persons. The building is to be ready for use next year.

A serious fire broke out at Dieppe on Monday evening in the silk manufactory of MM. Leclerc and Lefevre. A high wind was blowing at the time, and in consequence of this and the insufficiency of the means for extinguishing the fire, it spread rapidly, and was not mastered until five a.m. The loss is estimated at 1,000,000f.

GERMANY.

The Emperor William paid a visit to Düsseldorf on the 5th inst., and a banquet was given to him, at which Prince von Wied proposed his health, expressing the gratitude of Rhenish Prussia for its deliverance from the peril of 1870. The Emperor, in reply, said his governorship of the province during his brother's reign was among the happiest periods of his life. When its robust sons had fought and conquered with those of Old Prussia, there ceased to be an Old and a New Prussia, for both became one, just as Germany was now one, with Prussia at its head.

On the same day his Majesty received a deputation of the Evangelical clergy of the Lower Rhine, and in reply to them said the Church must remain, or else they would all go astray, for there existed a party which would abolish religion and leave them in the condition in which the French Revolutionists left their country. Church and school, he added, were bound to foster patriotism, and therefore they ought to remain in close connection.

AUSTRO-HUNGARY.

At a Court dinner on Tuesday, at which were present the Archdukes Albrecht and John, Prince Leopold, and all the foreign officers who are attending the manoeuvres of the Austrian troops, the Emperor Francis Joseph proposed the health of "his dear friend and ally the Emperor of Russia, whose fête it is to-day." The band played the Russian National Anthem.

TURKEY.

The German and French Ambassadors have presented to the Porte separate notes, not of identical tenor, concerning the release of the three persons condemned to five years' penal servitude at Widdin for complicity in the assassination of the German and French Consuls at Salonica, and who are now at liberty in Salonica. The French Government demands the imprisonment of these convicts. The German note concludes by declaring that the state of things might force the German Government to have recourse to other measures. In consequence of these representations, the Porte has ordered the re-arrest and confinement of five of the Salonica assassins, who had been released from Widdin.

Mr. Layard, the British Ambassador, has received a firman from the Sultan authorising excavations at Nineveh.

Some difficulty has arisen between the Porte and the Khedive on account of the Egyptian Convention respecting the suppression of the slave trade in the Red Sea. The Porte objects that the clause respecting the right of search and seizure exceeds the powers of the Khedive, as it partly relates to waters which are entirely Ottoman.

EGYPT.

The Khedive has returned to Cairo. An Alexandria telegram tells us that the cylinder inclosing Cleopatra's Needle has been repaired, and the launch effected. The obelisk has been towed into a dry dock to have the bilges, mast, and deckhouse fitted. This done, and the towing arranged, the voyage home will begin.

The Nile has stopped rising, ten feet below a good height. This does not affect the present season's crops of cotton and sugar, which are very promising.

AMERICA.

President Hayes has begun his tour in the Western and Southern States, and arrived on the 7th inst. at Marietta, Ohio, where he was welcomed by an assemblage of 15,000 people, who formed a long procession to escort him through the town. The President, accompanied by Messrs. Devens and Key, subsequently made strong Union speeches to a number of war veterans, in presence of a crowd of about 30,000 persons, by whom he was enthusiastically cheered. On arriving at Dayton, Ohio, the President met with a cordial reception. In a speech acknowledging their welcome, the President dwelt upon the peaceful and lawful settlement of the Presidential election question, and expressed his belief that the people generally were satisfied with the results of his Southern policy, although they might differ upon the means by which they had been obtained. He was repeatedly cheered. At Dayton, Ohio, on Wednesday, President Hayes unveiled a monument erected in memory of the soldiers who fell during the Civil War. He made a speech paying honour to the dead in moving terms. Forty thousand persons were present.

The Republican party in Wisconsin have adopted resolutions expressing unshaken confidence in the purposes and patriotism of President Hayes, and hoping that the South will appreciate his policy. Should it, however, prove unsuccessful, other measures should be adopted. The resolutions further express great satisfaction at the approaching resumption of specie payments and favour the remonetisation of silver.

The Republican candidate has been again elected to the post of Governor of the State of Maine. The voting returns, however, show the Republican majority to be 7000 less than at the last election.

The elections to the Californian Legislature have resulted in the return of a Democratic majority.

The American Correspondent of the Times says that the Freetraders' National Conference met at Saratoga on the 7th inst.—Mr. Nathan Appleton presiding. Resolutions were adopted advocating Free-Trade principles, urging the negotiation of commercial treaties with France and Spain, and of a reciprocity treaty with Canada, and recommending the establishment of local Free-Trade organisations. A council composed of thirteen members, with Mr. David A. Wells as chairman, was appointed to call a National Free-Trade Convention and form a national Free-Trade Association.

The Pennsylvania Labour Convention has nominated a State ticket which demands radical legislation in favour of working men.

The international rifle-match was to be held at Creedmoor on Thursday and Friday, this week, each country having a team of eight. The British riflemen have been practising at the Creedmoor range since their arrival.

According to a despatch received at New York from Halifax, the Fishery Commission is understood to have unanimously decided that it is not competent to award compensation to the Dominion Government for the privileges enjoyed by American fishermen in transshipping cargoes and in buying bait and supplies in British waters.

From Washington we learn that the national flag was hoisted half-mast high over the public offices on Saturday as a mark of respect to M. Thiers.

Advices from Utah state that Mr. Taylor has been appointed acting Mormon President until the election of a new president.

The American papers announce the death of Admiral Semmes, the commander of the Confederate cruiser Alabama.

THE CAPE COLONIES.

The Union Company's Royal steam-ship Nubian, with the homeward Cape mails to Aug. 21, arrived at Plymouth on Wednesday morning.

Sir Bartle Frere left Cape Town on Aug. 18 for a six-weeks' tour in the eastern districts, during which the official opening of the extension of the North-Eastern Railway to Alicedale will be declared by his Excellency.

Prior to his departure, the Governor invited the Town Council of Cape Town to meet him at the Government House, where he gave an exposition of his views regarding the sanitary state of the city. His Excellency said that he knew no place of its size and possessing such natural advantages so deficient in all that appertains to efficient municipal economy.

The Bishop of Cape Town had left on a long visitation tour, which will extend to the Orange Free State. His Lordship is expected to be absent about four months.

There is no news of importance from the Transvaal, everything being reported quiet on the Zulu border.

The Hon. S. Jacobs, who was a passenger by the Nubian, has resigned the post of Attorney-General, and will be succeeded by Mr. Advocate Stockenström.

The Queen has presented pictures to the native institution at Connebloem.

The Paris Exhibition Committee has begun its sittings, and has appointed Mr. Jacobs to represent the Committee at the Exhibition in Paris.

A bill legalising marriage with a deceased wife's sister has been passed by the Legislature of Natal and approved by the Lieutenant-Governor of the colony.

AID TO THE VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

The report of the Central Relief Committee at Constantinople of the Fund for the Relief of Distress in Bulgaria has been received. The committee was formed in September last. Relief was sent to Batak, Derwent, and other places in the district in which outrages took place. The committee distributed medicine, blankets, clothing, &c., to the distressed people, and bought oxen, ploughs, and seed to enable the ruined communities to recommence, to some extent, their ordinary avocations. The services rendered by the American missionaries are acknowledged.

The Foreign Office has received from Mr. J. H. Fawcett a report describing the lamentable condition in which he found the fugitive Mussulman women and children at Rodosto and Adrianople. He was accompanied to those places by Colonel Blunt, of the new gendarmerie, and they made a personal distribution of relief. It is impossible, says Mr. Fawcett, without having personally witnessed it, to picture the extremity of misery into which the peasantry have been plunged.

Mr. Lovett has offered to the promoters of the Turkish Compassionate Fund the use of his yacht (200 tons burden) to convey clothes, food, or medicine to Constantinople. He has also offered to take command of the yacht, and to sail whenever it may be necessary.

Mr. MacKeller and Mr. E. W. G. Goodridge, of St. Thomas's Hospital, and three other gentlemen, left London for the seat of war on Thursday week. They are sent out by the National Aid Society, and will follow the Turkish army.

A meeting of the Committee for Relief of the Sick and Wounded Russian Soldiers was held on Thursday week at 14, Cockspur-street, Pall-mall, S.W.—the Rev. W. O. Lamson in the chair. A letter was read from his Excellency P. de Mauritz, private secretary to the Empress of Russia, acknowledging the receipt of 1000 roubles remitted for the Red Cross on the 16th ult. Among other letters read was the following to Mr. Lewis Farley:—

Manchester, Sept. 1.
Sir.—It delights me to think there are still a few noble hearts left in England who are willing to receive contributions to help assuage the pangs of those devoted heroes, the wounded Russian soldiers, who have fallen victims to this dreadful and wicked war, solely produced by Turkish misrule and the indifference and ignorance of British statesmen. It is equally deplorable and distressing to read how many people allow the plenty God has given them for better purposes to flow into such channels as will add fuel to the fire, and only prolong the struggle, for as long as the Turk can drain Britannia's coffers he will continue in lust, rapine, and murder. In the present war the abettors are as bad as the perpetrators, and an awful responsibility lies upon the heads of those who continue to distribute the wealth of England among the Turks. For some time past it has been my custom, after providing for my family, to spend a week for an Illustrated London News and a night for one glass of ale. For the future I intend to deprive myself of the latter luxury during six days of the week, and to forward you the 1s. a week as long as the war lasts, provided I remain in work and am able to do so.—Your humble servant, G. BROWN, late in the British Army.

The committee also received a communication from St. Petersburg stating that the names of the subscribers to the fund would be published in the Russian Official Gazette.

Lord Richard Grosvenor, M.P., has joined the committee of the Russian Sick and Wounded Fund, and sent a contribution of £50. The committee has also been joined by Mr. Shaw Lefevre, Professor Bryce, of Oxford, and the Rev. Newman Hall.

The Stafford House Committee has decided to send out to the seat of war four more surgeons and six dressers, fully provided with stores and instruments, who will start immediately. In accordance with Mr. Barrington Kennett's request, a further large supply of carbolic acid and chlorodyne, 9 cwt. of lint, two dozen cases of surgical instruments, and 1000 blankets have also been dispatched.

The Times, referring to the various subscriptions now on foot for the relief of sufferings by war and famine—the National Society for Aid to the Sick and Wounded, the Stafford House Committee, Lady Strangford's Committee, the Russian Wounded Fund, the Turkish Compassionate Fund, collections on behalf of Bulgarians, Bosnians, Montenegrins, and the Indian Famine Relief Fund—says that never probably have so many imperative demands been made upon the generosity of the British nation, and never has the cry for help met with a response so prompt and liberal. However we may explain the fact, it is certain that Europe leaves to this country the main portion of the work of international beneficence. It is to England that every nation in turn appeals in its hour of tribulation, with a confident assurance that the appeal will be answered. We do not (says the Times) found any vainglorious pretensions on this fact, for it is in a measure through the exigency of circumstances that we are thus regarded, and it has become a point of honour with us to maintain our repute. It is not so with other nations. When, however, we ask ourselves why this should be so, we are at fault. It is not that either French or Germans are unkindly and ungenerous. Nor, again, is it because they are poor. There is nothing in the internal affairs of France and Germany to explain an apathy that is to us astonishing. It is all a matter of habit, no doubt. We have learned to accept without surprise, and certainly without reluctance, the task of administering the world's benefactions at our own cost. Other countries have never acquired the practice, and it does not occur to them to claim the right to participate. The contrast is at least a curious one.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.

The Times' correspondent at Calcutta, telegraphing on Sunday, says that the weather reports of the past week are decidedly more cheering than they have been for some time back. A private telegram received from Madras, says there has been fine rain everywhere in the districts dependent on the south-west monsoon, and that there are fair prospects for the later crops. A long minute by the Viceroy, written before he started for Madras, is published in the Gazette Extraordinary. In it he discusses the famine policy and prospects at considerable length, and states that his journey to Madras was prompted by the hope that it would enable him to strengthen and augment the means on which the Duke of Buckingham is dependent for a satisfactory solution of a problem as serious as any which ever occupied the mind or taxed the abilities of an Indian statesman. The Secretary of State has agreed to the Viceroy's proposal for the completion of the Doond and Matmar Railway, which will connect the northern and southern branches of the Great Indian Peninsula line above the Ghauts, and the various railway companies are increasing their working power. The correspondent says that the position taken by the Supreme Government regarding subscriptions has been stated in letters to the Madras and Bengal Governments. The Viceroy thinks that, while it is undesirable for the Government itself to ask those who will hereafter have to bear the burden of taxation on account of famine expenditure to give their private subscriptions also towards the same object, he desires that every encouragement may be given to any spontaneous efforts which may be made in this direction. He is, he says, far from desiring to impede the flow of private charity, and is only anxious to secure that it should be devoted to useful purposes apart from those already taken up by the State, and that it should not be diverted into a simple contribution to the Government revenues.

The Lord Mayor has received a telegram from the Central Relief Committee at Madras giving particulars as to the measures being taken for the relief of the sufferers by the famine, intimating that without most promising rain the distress must continue, and probably become intensified, until February next, and stating that the general outlook is improving, but that nothing decisive can be expected till the coming north-east monsoon proves fair or otherwise.

THE FAMINE FUND AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

Among the sums received at the Mansion House on Thursday week were one thousand guineas subscribed by the United Grand Lodge of Freemasons, and £1490 which had been collected on the Stock Exchange, including £52 10s. each from Mr. A. Scrimgeour and Messrs. W. A. and N. Wilkinson, and £50 each from Mr. T. Lloyd, jun., Messrs. Mitchell and Co., Messrs. Hichens, Harrison, and Co., and Messrs. Sheppard, Pelly, and Co. A first instalment of £1500 from Bristol and one from Leeds of £800 were received; a fourth of £500 from Dublin; one from Colchester of £150; and Lewes, £100. Among the larger amounts paid in addition were the following:—The Duke of Westminster, £100; the Chartered Bank of India, £250; the Eastern Telegraph Company, £100; the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company, £100; Mr. Fitzwilliam Dick, M.P., £100. By way of experiment, a money-box was attached to the railings of the Mansion House during the business hours of the day, and the result was the collection of £10 12s. 10d. in coin of all kinds. A noticeable subscription paid in was that of £2 from the children of the Board school in Sun-lane, Norwich.

Yesterday week £10,000 was paid in. The Mayor of Newcastle-on-Tyne transmitted a donation from his townspeople of £2000 (the largest single amount yet paid in), and among the larger sums entered were the following:—Dublin (fifth instalment), £500; the Duke of Bedford, £500; Belfast (first instalment), £500; "An Old Madrassee," £300; the Earl of Eldon, £200; Sir Richard Wallace, M.P., £200; West Bromwich, £150; Messrs. Gordon, Woodroffe, and Co., £105; Messrs. W. H. Smith and Son, £105; the Assam Company, £105; Pontefract, £100; York (third instalment), £100; Guildford (second instalment), £100; Southampton (fourth instalment), £100; the Rev. Edward Holland (second donation), £100; Mrs. Holland, £100; Mr. James Duncan, £100; Mr. S. Bowering, £100; Messrs. Granet, Brown, and Co., of Genoa, £100; Mr. E. N. Buxton, £100; W. W. W., £100. The officers in the Inland Revenue Department throughout the country have contributed £137 15s. 1d. In the box outside the Mansion House £23 1s. was found at the close of the day. Among the noticeable donations was £6 from the Shaftesbury School, Bisley—one of the institutions connected with the National Refuges for Homeless and Destitute Children.

Among the larger amounts received last Saturday were—Sheffield, £2000; Huddersfield, £1500; Northampton, £300; Devonport (second contribution), £200; Basingstoke, £100; Hanley, £100; Taunton, £100; the Marquis of Clanricarde, £150; the Proprietor of the Standard newspaper (Mr. James Johnstone), £105; Mr. R. Campbell, £100; Mr. C. English, £100. An adjourned meeting of the Bradford Committee was held on Saturday in the Mayor's Parlour at the Townhall—Alderman Henry Mitchell presiding. The list of subscriptions in aid of the Famine Relief Fund, it was reported, had reached about £4150, and the chairman observed that this was the most generous subscription ever known in Bradford, and spread over a larger area than any previous charitable effort. A Wesleyan minister at Birkenhead, who sends £4 from his Sunday scholars, suggests that an appeal should be made to the Sunday schools. He adds:—"I cannot but think there would be a hearty response. Have we not 20,000 schools that would send you £1 each?"

At a meeting of the sub-committee on Monday, presided over by the Lord Mayor, it was resolved, on the motion of Sir N. de Rothschild, M.P., to transmit forthwith to Madras a further sum of £35,000, making £115,000 in all. A discussion arose as to the advisableness of holding a public meeting, but the matter was postponed for further consideration. The name of Sir John Lubbock, M.P., was added to the committee. Among the larger donations received were Nottingham, £400; Sunderland, £200; Norwich (second instalment), £300; Wolverhampton, £250; Southampton (fifth instalment), £100; Maidstone, £200; Stoke-on-Trent, £100; Messrs. Mildred, Goyeneche, and Co., £100; Messrs. Bruno, Silva, and Co., £100; W. R. N., £100; J. C. N., £100; Christ Church, Chislehurst, £122 12s. 2d.; St. Michael's, Stockwell, £82 8s. 3d.; Worcester, £165 10s.; St. Michael's, Chester-square, £77 2s. 7d.; and the King's Weigh-House Chapel, City, £70 5s.

The Mayor of Derby waited personally upon the Lord Mayor on Tuesday and handed him a cheque for £500, and among the sums received by the secretary and cashier were the following:—The Duke of Northumberland, £500; the Duke of Devonshire, £500; Dublin (6th instalment), £500; Plymouth, £500; Rochdale, £500; Shrewsbury, £300; Maidstone (second donation), £200; York (third instalment), £400; Messrs. Dalgety, Du Croz, and Co., £105; Hartlepool, £162 odd; Messrs. Tagart, Boyson, and Co., £105; Carlisle, £100; Lymington, £100; Mr. C. J. Freake, £100; Sidmouth, £245 19s. 1d. Upwards of £200 church collections were paid in, including Oswestry parish church, £135 10s.; Ford church, Northumberland, £145; Immanuel Church, Streatham, £190 5s. 2d.; Emsworth church, £60 1s. 3d.; Wells Cathedral, £42 1s. 8d.; Chichester Cathedral, £40 11s. 6d.; Colne church, £50; St. Peter's, Thanet, £74 3s. 8d.; Epsom church, £57 11s. 4d.; Buckhurst-hill parish church, £76 9s.; St. John the Divine, Kennington, £108 8s. 10d.; St. Thomas's, Southborough, £82; and Honiton church, £44 9s. 2d. In the box outside the Mansion House £18 odd was found.

Down to Wednesday evening the Fund had reached a total of £145,000, of which £115,000 had been transmitted to Madras for distribution through the relief committee there. Upwards of £5000 was paid in at the Mansion House during the day, including the following among other sums—viz.:—Exeter (additional), £500; Belfast, £500; Harrogate, £350; Dover, £300; Ashford, £100; Bury St. Edmunds, £78 17s. 6d.; Kingston, £56 7s. 7d.; Mr. George Moffatt, £100. Among the collections received on Wednesday were:—Camden-road Baptist Chapel, £118 9s.; Congregational Church, Otley, £95 18s. 8d.; Christ Church, Hampstead, £58 2s. 7d.; and St. Peter's, Southborough, £57.

On Thursday afternoon, at a meeting of the Court of Common Council, it was unanimously resolved to contribute the sum of £1000 to the Mansion House Indian Famine Fund.

The Bishop of London has sent a letter to the Incumbents of his diocese in which he says he has hesitated up to the present to request them to ask contributions towards the relief of the sufferers by the famine in India because the season of the year, in his diocese, is unfavourable for such an effort, as a large proportion of the congregations are absent from town. The need is, however, most urgent; and, as his Lordship does not suppose an appeal of more terrible intensity has ever been made than this, he expresses how glad he shall be if arrangements are made to have collections in the several churches for this object at as early a date as possible.

The Chief Rabbi has addressed to the Jewish congregations a circular on the same subject.

The Bishop of Madras, in a letter to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, says, under date Aug. 13:—"Even here in India, till very recently, it has been universally understood that Government was doing all that was both necessary and practicable, and that voluntary help would introduce confusion. But arrangements will now be made for combining the two;" and he trusts that sympathy will have been aroused in England.

The directors of the Eastern Telegraph Company have offered to transmit over their lines to Bombay, free of charge, all open messages from the Lord Mayor to the committee in India on the subject of the famine.

Meetings continue to be called in the provinces and liberal contributions made.

* Mr. William Henry Ravenscroft has been appointed Auditor and Accountant-General and Controller of the Revenue for the Island of Ceylon.

The Emperor and Empress of Brazil left Lisbon on Sunday by the mail-steamers Orénoque to return to Rio de Janeiro. Salutes were fired by the Portuguese and Spanish war-vessels in the Tagus on the departure of their Majesties.

The Pope, in receiving some pilgrims from Angers, said that they should pray to God that at the general elections all Frenchmen should be at one with the Government, so that a wise and truly Christian régime might be established.

A paper issued at Callao publishes the letter of instructions respecting the Huascar, sent by the Peruvian Government to its representative in England. In these instructions the Government insists upon its right to claim satisfaction—first, for a violation of its maritime territory; and, secondly, on the ground that the Huascar was the property of Peru.

The first Belgian expedition for the exploration of Central Africa is to leave on the 18th of next month. It will embark at Southampton on board the steamer Danube. After a short stay at Natal it will continue the journey to Zanzibar, and next to Lake Tanganyika, and thence to the interior to establish there the first station.

Letters, newspapers, &c., addressed to Gibraltar, which have hitherto been forwarded, as a rule, by direct packet once a week, will in future be sent by packet only when posted, or arriving, in London on the day of the packet's departure—viz., every Thursday morning, or if specially addressed "By packet." On all other occasions they will be sent by the daily mail via France and Spain.

A dispute has arisen between Germany and Nicaragua on account of assaults committed upon two German Consuls in the city of Leon. The German Government demands the punishment of the offenders, a sum of 30,000 dols. as compensation, and a salute to the German Consular flag. The Nicaraguan Minister maintains that the whole matter has been misrepresented, and declares that, if the threats of Germany are carried out, Nicaragua will protest against the use of force by a great Power towards a weak and innocent nation.

The Queen has conferred the honour of knighthood upon the following gentlemen:—William Buell Richards, Esq., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Canada; Antoine Aime Dorion, Esq., Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, Quebec; Bryan Robinson, Esq., late Judge of the Supreme Court, Newfoundland; John Henry de Villiers, Esq., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and President of the Legislative Council, Cape Colony; David Tennant, Esq., Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Cape Colony; G. Wigram Allen, Esq., Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, New South Wales; John Bridd Phear, Esq., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Ceylon.

TURKS ADVANCING.

RUSSIANS.

THE WAR: THE TURKS ATTACKING THE
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN GAMBIE.

RUSSIAN BATTERIES.

TURKS ADVANCING THROUGH A WOOD.

RUSSIAN POSITION IN THE SHIPKA PASS.

R.N., A CORRESPONDENT OF THE "TIMES."

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

The noble peer who, towards the close of last Session, drew the attention of their Lordships' House to the unprotected state of Blackheath, and incidentally referred to the highway robberies which had taken place there, was, after a manner, pooh-poohed by the Government; and the police "theory" seemed to be that the alleged outrages, if not wholly apocryphal, were at the worst only mischievous freaks on the part of some scatterbrain schoolboys or apprentices. To sceptics in the matter the report of the examination at the Greenwich Police Court of the two youths charged with robbing Mr. Hodgson, one of the Assistant Solicitors to the Treasury, one night last May, will be a very startling revelation. As to the guilt or innocence of the two lads under remand, it would be, of course, premature to indulge in any speculations; but it is, at all events, something to know that the story told was not so much idle gossip and not a "sensational" invention of the "penny press." We have Mr. Hodgson's own word that on the night in question the carriage in which he, with two ladies, were riding to Granville Park, Blackheath, was stopped by two persons wearing masks; that by one of them a pistol was presented at his head; and, under the threat of having his brains blown out, he handed over to the bandits some seventeen pounds in money, two blank cheques, and some postage-stamps. If this was not highway robbery, Dick Turpin must have been a member of the Charity Organisation Society and Claude Du Val a churchwarden and a moral man.

Everybody knows the story of Horace Walpole's encounter with the highwayman; but I am not certain whether the capital story of the highwayman, the Quaker, and the country girl who hid the twenty-pound note in her hair, is also "universally" known. I read it many years ago as a subject for translation in a book of Portuguese exercises; but when or where it originally appeared I do not know. I will try to compress the tale within the compass, so to speak, of a nutshell. Scene, the interior of the stage coach from London to York, some time in the last century. Personages, in addition to the usual complement of "insides," a pretty country girl, with a luxuriant head of hair under her straw hat, and a demure Quaker. Rumble, jog, jolt, rattle; change horses; rattle, jolt, jog, rumble; change horses again. Between dinner and supper time desultory conversation. Pretty country girl explains with charming naïveté how she has been at service in London; how she is going to York to be married (here she blushes); how she has saved up twenty pounds as her dowry; and how (for fear of highwaymen) she has concealed a bank bill for that amount in her tresses. The moon rises. Enter at one of the windows the "half-length" of a black-visored highwayman with a cocked pistol. "Your money or your life!" General consternation. Travellers proceed to hand over. A tolerably good harvest for the man in the mask. Quaker gives up a fat little bag containing no less than forty spade guineas. Pretty country girl surrenders, sobbing, two William and Mary half-crowns, a Queen Anne shilling, and a silver huswife.

Is this all? Does the highwayman ride away. No; like Oliver Twist, he asks for more. "Ain't none o' you hid nothin'?" he asks gruffly; and again he points his pistol menacingly. Then, up and speaks that false Quaker. "One of us, Friend," he says, "has, I grieve to say, made concealment of treasure. Yonder young woman hath a bill for twenty pounds hidden in her top-knot." Highwayman grins. Country girl, with much weeping and wailing, unbinds her bonny hair. Hands over her poor little marriage portion to highwayman. Hard-hearted miscreant rides away. Anguish of despoiled heroine. Ruined, utterly ruined! Nice young man won't have anything to say to her now. Die old maid. Despair. Torrent of virtuous indignation on perfidious Broad-brim's head. General and particular desire to scratch his wicked old eyes out. Guard (with blunderbuss) interferes for his protection. Quaker smiles blandly. Jog, rattle, jolt, bump. Coach arrives at York. Country girl going away from inn-yard whimpering, when Quaker beckons her aside. "Young woman," he says, "I did thee anon a grievous wrong; it is time for reparation to be made. Lest he who held the pistol should shoot, I made discovery of thy hoard. Truly, thee hadst twenty pounds in thy top-knot; but I had twenty thousand pounds in my boots. There are two hundred and fifty pounds. Go and be happy, for I am sure thee is good." Quaker turns out to be the wealthiest banker in York. General dance of the characters. Tableau, Curtain, End. I wonder how many different versions there have been within the last four or five thousand years or so of this old story, and to how many lands it wandered before it got into the Portuguese exercise-book?

I hear something of the projected establishment of a "Dietetic Reform Club," with a view of affording dining accommodation to vegetarians visiting London. The promoters of the movement would do better, I fancy, could they open a few good vegetarian restaurants in the metropolis, open to all and sundry. I am not wedded fanatically to the doctrine of wholly abstaining from animal food; but I cannot help thinking that most English people, taking one month with another, eat a great deal more meat than is good for them. But where are you to get a succulent vegetarian dinner? If you try the system in your own house (not constraining other people to follow your example), the cook, after a few days, gives warning, as "not being used to them outlandish ways;" and your family, while scornfully suffering you to go your own way, secretly opine that you are either out of temper, or growing stingy, or going mad. Try it, Edwin. When Angelina asks you in the morning what you would wish for dinner, answer that you would very much like to have some plain boiled macaroni, a stuffed tomato, two poached eggs on spinach, a mushroom fritter, and some "ramekin" cheese. If Angelina does not disdainfully toss her pendant plait and flounce out of the room, murmuring sotto voce remarks about the preposterous ideas that some people get into their heads, I am very much in error.

"From the sublime to the ridiculous there is but one step." Napoleon I. is said to have said this to the Abbe de Pradt at Warsaw in 1812-13. If you need further conviction of the truth of this aphorism just cast your eyes on the principal cartoon in Punch this week. It is one of the most powerful and the most pathetic that John Tenniel has drawn for a long time. An allegorical figure of France, bare-armed, in a long mourning robe, and wearing a white cauchoise cap, is depicted as sorrowing over the tomb of "Thiers, Libérateur de la Patrie (it should properly be 'du Territoire'), 1872." Wreaths of immortelles are scattered on the cenotaph. In the background, Imperialist, Legitimist, Republican, Communist phantoms dimly flit. The cartoon bears the title of "The Broken Link," and is, indeed, a very noble drawing; only its sublimity is tinged with the ridiculous owing to the circumstance that the bare-armed figure in the mourning robe is the very image of a lady in an old-fashioned bathing-gown, say on the sands at Hastings. One little bare foot is slightly advanced, as though to test the temperature of the briny; and, looking downwards, the lady seems to be murmuring, "I wonder if it is very cold?"

These contretemps cannot be helped. They are inevitable sometimes; and Fate makes sport of us when we strive to be most serious. The sculptor of the Guards' Monument, in Waterloo-place, tried his utmost to give to his laurel-distributing statue of Fame a dignified and imposing appearance; but she looks for all the world as though she were playing at quoits. The popularity of the engraving from Paul Delaroche's beautiful picture of the "Drowning Martyr" was imperilled by the mistake of the Irish critic who called it the "Colleen Bawn."

Between certain accomplished gentlemen, professionals and amateurs, who delight in the production of what are known as "painters' etchings" and a certain commercial body called the "Printsellers' Association," who are more extensively connected with the publication of finished engravings on a large scale, there has sprung up, this week or two past, a vivaciously antagonistic newspaper correspondence, to which the Times, I know not why, has prefixed the scarcely elegant title of "rattening." This column being an eminently pacific one, I have no wish to interfere in the "rattening" dispute; but, without giving an opinion one way or the other as to the merits of the case, I may be permitted to ask one I hope not very impertinent question. Thirty years ago comparatively few English painters handled the etching-needle (I remember the old Etching Club, with its epigrammatic motto of "Rem acu;" but the number of its members was limited), whereas nowadays there is scarcely an artist of note who has not made his mark on copper as well as on canvas. How is it that, while the art of artistic etching has been thus astonishingly developed, the practice of etching, as applied to the illustration of books, has become all but extinct?

In the days of which I speak (poor Seymour had been dead some years), George and Robert Cruikshank, Hablot K. Browne ("Phiz"), R. W. Buss, Onwhyn, Standfast, Samuel Lover, John Leech (an exquisite etcher when he chose to take pains), and others were all hard at work etching illustrations to social novels and magazine articles. George Cruikshank and Leech were the artistic mainstays of "Bentley." Then George transferred his invaluable services to "Ainsworth," and, for a time, had as a coadjutor in the illustrations to "Windor Castle" the famous Frenchman Tony Johannot. Then Mr. Thackeray began to illustrate his own novels—plying the needle on the hard steel, mind, and not on the soft copper. He did not, however, "bite in" his own plates. That was done, as carving is done at a diner à la Russe, by servitors behind a screen. The bright days of illustrative etching seem fled for good and all. Why? Ask photography. Ask wood engraving, you may tell me; but still I reply that fifty thousand copies are not required of every work that is printed; and that where only a moderate impression is needed etched illustrations might most appropriately be employed. If Mr. Whistler or Mr. Tissot, for example, would only condescend to etch a few vignettes for the embellishment of my forthcoming "Verses to Araminta" (in hendecasyllables, and all sweetly pretty, I can assure you), I will warrant that the plates, were they even as soft as Araminta's eyes, would yield a great many more impressions than the public cared to call for.

Mr. Henry Irving has consented to take the chair at a dinner to be given at Willis's Rooms, on Oct. 6 next, in aid of the funds of the Royal Dramatic College. The gifted actor, who is likewise an eloquent and thoughtful public speaker, will doubtless attract a brilliant and influential gathering on this particular occasion, and a few hundred pounds may be subscribed to meet the immediate needs of the College; but it is really deplorable that something cannot be done to place it on a permanent basis, and to prevent an institution which was started under such very bright auspices from coming to irremediable grief. The worst of it is that the members of the theatrical profession are not unanimous as to the expediency of keeping up the College. There is a pro-Maybury party and an anti-Maybury one. O! for some drama-loving millionaire who would step in and solve the difficulty by endowing the College with fifty thousand pounds. A secular charity without an endowment sins against the first principles of philanthropic economy. G. A. S.

The surplus arising out of the Welsh National Eisteddfod at Carnarvon, last month, is roughly set down at £1000.

There have been festivities at Upsala this week, to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the foundation of the University of Upsala in the ancient capital, and the town which gives its name to the Archbishop of Sweden.

The English Grand Lodge of Good Templars in Wales met at Wrexham, on Monday, for the annual session, holding the gathering in North Wales for the first time in the annals of the order. About one hundred delegates, coming from all parts of the Principality, were present at the inaugural soirée. The sittings lasted over four days.

Some time ago meetings of the Athole Highlanders were held in the different districts of Athole for the purpose of promoting the idea of presenting the Duke of Athole with his portrait in oil on the occasion of the opening of the new hall at Blair Castle. Subscriptions were entered into with such success that Mr. Barclay, of Edinburgh, was commissioned to paint a portrait—a companion picture to one of the Duchess already in the possession of the Duke. We learn from the Glasgow Herald that the presentation took place after the dinner in the hall on the gathering day, when Captain Oswald, of Dunnikier, senior officer of the Highlanders, in a neat and complimentary speech, handed over the picture.

The Cutlers' Feast took place at Sheffield on the 6th inst., at the Cutlers' Hall, when a large number of guests sat down, under the presidency of the Master Cutler, Mr. D. Ward. He was supported by Lord Houghton, the Duke of Norfolk, Lord Denman, Mr. J. Lowther, M.P., Mr. Roebuck, M.P., Mr. Stanhope, M.P., and guests from York, Leeds, and other towns. Mr. Lowther touched briefly on the Eastern Question, and said that the Government were fully alive to the desirableness of promoting peace. Mr. Roebuck spoke with emphasis on the subject of the war, declaring that the Turkish and Russian Governments were a disgrace to humanity. He concluded by saying, "Peace, peace, my countrymen! but don't be afraid of war."

Lord Carnarvon presided at a meeting held at Newbury last Monday to promote the erection of a memorial to Lucius Cary, Viscount Falkland, on the battle-field of Newbury, where he fell. Mr. Walter Money, F.S.A., honorary secretary, reported that the subscriptions promised amounted to only £450; the expenses of advertising, &c., had been £50; leaving a balance of £400, of which £350 had been paid up. Under these circumstances it was necessary that the proposed design should be reduced to something of a simpler character, or that the commencement of the work should be delayed until sufficient funds were forthcoming. The meeting was adjourned. The site for the memorial on Wash-common has been given by a member of the Newbury District Field Club, with which society the movement originated.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

An interesting ceremony took place on Saturday last in connection with the 20th Middlesex, in the presentation of a testimonial to Sergeant-Major Crowther, on his retirement. The regiment, with both bands, paraded in full dress at Albany Barracks at five p.m., and being formed into square, Lieutenant-Colonel Gore-Browne called on Sergeant-Major Crowther, and presented him with a handsome silver watch, an illuminated testimonial, and a purse of fifty-five sovereigns, from the officers, non-commissioned officers, and members, past and present, of the regiment, adding some very appropriate remarks of his own.

Among the competitions which took place last week the following are the chief:—

The volley competition of the 26th Middlesex (Customs and Docks) was held at the range of the regiment at Rainham. The Challenge Cup was won by A company with 134 points, the next in order being F company, 118; and B company, 105.

A match took place at Wimbledon between the 37th Middlesex (Bloomsbury) and the 1st Surrey; and, after a close contest, the 1st Surrey won, the scores being—1st Surrey, 1255; 37th Middlesex, 1235.

A match was fired at Marlow between the H company of the London Rifle Brigade, who have lately been carrying all before them, and the 1st Bucks. There were to be ten men on each side. Only nine of the London men were on the ground, but with a man short they were enabled to add one more to their long list of successes—scoring 511 points to 505.

The fifth monthly contest of the Robin Hood Rifles for the Battalion Challenge Prizes took place at Nottingham. The chief scorers were:—Corporal T. N. Colles, Quartermaster-Sergeant Cuckson, Corporal R. Coupe, Private H. W. Read, Private J. Lee, Sergeant B. Hollis, Corporal G. C. Liberty, Private E. Wilson, Private W. J. Russell, Colour-Sergeant J. Cumberland, Private T. Mallet, Sergeant F. Warsop, Corporal W. H. Aldam, Private T. Vickers, and Private F. C. Cuckson.

At the annual county meeting of the Worcestershire Rifle Association the bronze medal of the National Rifle Association was won by Private E. Yarrington, 20th Worcester Rifles. The next highest scorers were Private Pritchard, 20th; Sergeant T. Hickman, 1st; and Captain H. Cobett, 14th. Lord Elmley's prizes were taken by Lance-Corporal Noake, 14th; Private W. Walters, 21st; and Private J. Adams, 1st. Seventeen corps entered for the team champion badge contest. Stourport were the victors with 505 points, next in order coming Worcester, 469; Wolverley, 468; and Redditch, 460 points.

The Oxfordshire county meeting was held at the Hincksey butts, near Oxford. The winner of the National Rifle Association bronze medal was Sergeant Bennett, of Deddington.

The Chester rifle meeting took place on the Sealand range, the principal winners being as follows:—Gold Medal contest, first stage: £4, Sergeant Woolley; £3, Private Day. Second stage: £4, Private Boulton; £3, Sergeant Parry. Aggregate prizes—£10, Gold Medal, and Champion Badge—Sergeant Woolley. The "Jones" Challenge Cup: Private J. Gorst, Private T. Williams, and Private J. Day. Drill prizes: £5, Sergeant Parry; £4, Sergeant Tennyson. Battalion Challenge Cup: Cup and £5, Private R. Lewis. Silver cup, Sergeant Parry; silver medal, Private John Day; bronze medal, Corporal Tennyson. All Comers' prizes: £10, Private A. W. Pilling, Leeds Rifles; £5, Corporal W. Bratherton Crewe; £3, Sergeant A. Tennyson, 6th C.R.V.; £2 each, Sergeant J. Belyse, Crewe; Corporal Walker, 40th L.V.R.; and Sergeant Spalding, 2nd Cheshire.

The ninth competition for the Brigade Challenge Medal of the Queen's (Edinburgh) took place in the Hunters' Bog, when the holder, Private Downie, was successful in retaining it, he making 36 points against 19 by the challenger, Lieutenant Glanville.

Details are to hand of a simultaneous match fired last month between the Demerara Rifle Association and the F company of the 1st Lancashire. The Demerara men fired with the Martini-Henry and the Lancastrians with the Snider. The result was a victory for the Demerara team, they scoring 764 against 715 points by the 1st Lancashire.

The promotion of St. Albans to the dignity of a city was gazetted last night. A similar step with regard to Truro was taken last week.

The Liverpool emigration returns show that in August 7266 persons sailed from the Mersey for foreign countries. Of these 5745 proceeded to the United States, 1210 to British North America, 48 to Australia, 102 to South America, 80 to the East Indies, 17 to the West Indies, 36 to China, and 30 to the West Coast of Africa. The nationalities of the emigrants were—English, 4873; Scotch, 66; Irish, 589; foreign, 1428; and 319 were not distinguished. The returns show a decrease compared with August, 1876, when the emigrants numbered 7970.

Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., First Lord of the Admiralty, paid a visit last Tuesday to the Téméraire, which weighed anchor and sailed outside the Isle of Wight, for the trial of her guns. After a thorough inspection of the ship, the right hon. gentleman examined the lightning torpedo-boats.—The unarmoured war-steamer Cormorant was launched at Chatham Dockyard on Wednesday. She is intended to have a high speed. Her engines are to be of 900-horse power indicated, and her armaments will be two 7-in. 9-cwt. guns on revolving platforms, two 64-pounder guns on revolving carriages, and a broadside of two 64-cwt. guns.

It has been notified at the Admiralty that the First Lord has awarded the following pensions:—Captains H. D. Hickley and F. A. Herbert have been given the Captain's good-service pension of £150 a year, vacant by the promotion of Rear-Admiral W. Gore Jones and the retirement of Rear-Admiral Bythessa, from Aug. 5 last. The vacancy on the Flag Officers' Greenwich Hospital pension list, caused by the death of Vice-Admiral Wise, has been filled up by conferring the pension of £150 a year on Vice-Admiral Prevost, from Aug. 8 last. Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets, Charles T. S. Kevern, has been awarded the Greenwich Hospital pension of £50 a year, vacant by the death on the 14th ult. of Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets John Andrews.

A terrible collision took place on Tuesday night off Portland between the Avalanche, from London to Wellington, New Zealand, and the Forest, of Windsor, Nova Scotia, from London to Sandy Hook. The Avalanche was struck by the Forest, and she sank almost immediately; the Forest also sank shortly afterwards. The Avalanche had twenty-six saloon, seventeen second-class, and twenty third-class passengers, principally returning colonists, and a crew of thirty-one officers and men; and the Forest had a crew of twenty-one. On board the Avalanche there was no time to lower boats, and it is believed that all the passengers and all of the crew except the third officer, John Sherrington, and two seamen were drowned. Nine of the Forest's complement appear to have been saved; among them are Captain Lockhart, the chief mate, McKelvie, and the steward.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE DONCASTER WEEK.

The very heavy rains which left London on Monday fully attested the unusual interest attaching to the decision of the hundred and first St. Leger; and a stroll through the town in the evening convinced us that the number of visitors was far above the average. An early appearance on the racecourse on Tuesday morning to see the final gallops of the St. Leger horses is becoming quite a part of the week's programme, and the number of people present increases yearly. They crowd all over the course in the most reckless fashion, the horses having to thread their way among them; and unless measures are taken to prevent them some very serious accidents are sure to take place. A very few policemen would have no difficulty in keeping a clear track, and there is no excuse for the neglect of such a simple precaution. Now that the great race is numbered with things of the past, these morning gallops possess little or no interest, and we need only say that Strachino did the best performance of any of the St. Leger horses; and that Silvio and Lady Golightly, led by Skylark, went the full distance at a fair pace, the colt winning golden opinions; while Fontainebleau was not at all liked, nor was Brown Prince. The meeting was opened, according to the invariable custom, with the Fitzwilliam Stakes; and the antagonism of such speedy animals as Trappist, Ecossais, and Mousquetaire was productive of much excitement. The first-named was almost backed against the field; but, though only in receipt of 2 lb., instead of 23 lb., as when they met at Goodwood, Mousquetaire raced right away from him, and this wonderfully-improved colt will not find his equal in these sprint races until he meets the invincible Springfield. The filly by Scottish Chief—Emily made very short work of two moderate opponents in the Filly Stakes; and then came the Great Yorkshire Handicap, for which thirteen numbers were hoisted. The incessant outlays on Hilarious (6st. 8 lb.) eventually brought him to 2 to 1; and, as the rain was now falling in torrents, and the course becoming very heavy, the remembrance of the style in which Mrs. Pond (6st. 7 lb.) galloped through the mud at York found her plenty of friends at double those odds. Some distance from home the race was reduced to a match between Hilarious and Albert Edward (6st. 8 lb.), of whom the former appeared to have slightly the better of it at the distance, but Albert Edward stayed the longer, and won cleverly at the finish. This is the first race won by the own brother to George Frederick, but, like all his family, he evidently improves with age, and may do still better things. Only half a dozen ran for the Champagne Stakes, but four of these had won races, and another was Melville, a dark own brother to Hawthornden, by Lord Clifden—Bonnie Blink. Lord Falmouth won this race in 1875 and 1876, and as soon as the betting opened odds were laid on Childeric, his representative, and perhaps the best looking two-year-old of the season. Nothing else was backed with any spirit, though there were a few outlays on Cyprus, the winner of the Woodcote Stakes at Epsom, and the race was regarded as a virtual walk-over for Childeric. To the horror of his backers, however, Archer was very uneasy on him before reaching the bend, and a few strides further on he dropped away, leaving Red Hazard with the lead. This the latter kept until passing the Stand, where Clémentine, who had been lying off, dashed to the front, and beat him easily by two lengths, Cyprus being a poor third. As Clémentine has been badly defeated on the only four previous occasions on which she has run, so, the form is quite inexplicable, especially as we have heard no excuses made for Childeric's wretched exhibition.

The weather on Wednesday was a great improvement on that of the previous day, as there was only one slight shower, and, though the "going" was decidedly sticky, it could not be called heavy. As the Queen's Plate resulted in a walk-over, there was only one race before the great event, so that there was plenty of time to prepare the St. Leger candidates for the fray. The field was stronger than had been anticipated, Manœuvre, Warrior, Zucchero, Sheldrake, and Durham somewhat unexpectedly helping to make up a very respectable contingent of fourteen. After the preliminary canter, the customary parade before the Stand took place, Strathmore leading the way. He looked uncommonly well, but is still somewhat above himself, and a few more good gallops would benefit him materially. Both Silvio and Lady Golightly were greatly admired. The mare has come on wonderfully since York, and showed no traces of the slight accident which befell her on her way to Doncaster; and the colt, though lacking the size and length of some previous Leger winners, was in splendid condition, and full of life and go. Fontainebleau disappointed us greatly, as, like most of his family, he was very deficient in muscle, and bore signs of a hurried preparation. Strachino, the other French candidate, gained many fresh friends. He is a little horse, but seemed trained to the hour, and had all the appearance of a fine stayer. There was no sign of the awful temper with which he has generally been credited, though, as a matter of precaution, he took his preliminary canter in company with Champion, who has led him in his work for some time past. Hayhoe has certainly worked wonders with Plunger, who could not have been fitter, though his great size and somewhat flashy style of going were unerring indications that a mile would prove about the length of his tether. Brown Prince, to back whom for a place there was a complete furore, has grown coarser and more unlike a racehorse than ever, and his position in the Two Thousand is a complete mystery. They got off well together at the second attempt. Silvio was the first to break the line, having as attendants Manœuvre, Sheldrake, and Durham. On settling down, however, Manœuvre took up the running, followed by Sheldrake and Durham, close up with the latter being the favourite, Zucchero, and Fontainebleau. No change occurred in this order until crossing the road, when Sheldrake deprived Manœuvre of the command and went on followed by Plunger, next to whom succeeded Lord Bradford's pair, Manœuvre and Zucchero, and Fontainebleau. Going up the hill Plunger forced his way to the front, and strode along with a clear lead of Sheldrake, Manœuvre, and Durham, and they were followed as they reappeared in sight by Fontainebleau, Strathmore, Zucchero, Brown Prince, and Silvio, Strachino going next, and Sunray last, immediately behind the other three. As they came to the Rifle Butts Sheldrake drew up to the quarters of Plunger, and in another hundred yards had given him the go by. At the same time Strathmore drew up third, Manœuvre now going on fourth, Fontainebleau fifth, Brown Prince and Strachino next, on the outside, and Silvio and Zucchero at their heels. Sheldrake maintained his leading position until reaching the half-mile post, when he collapsed, and, dropping back to the rear, left Plunger once more at the head of affairs, his nearest attendants being Fontainebleau, Silvio, and Strachino, close up with them succeeding Manœuvre and Strathmore, with Zucchero prominent on the outside of all. Rounding the bend, a scrimmage occurred amongst the leading lot, which, by the way, had been joined by Lady Golightly, who was one of the principal sufferers. When they came fairly into the line for home Archer shot to the front with Silvio, and was followed by Manœuvre and Zucchero, Lady Golightly lying next at a clear interval, and none of the others now being in it. Zucchero was the first beaten, and Archer making a resolute call upon the favourite, Lord Falmouth's colt responded with the utmost generosity, and, maintaining the lead to the end, won by three lengths. A rattling race for second honours rested with the Heath House second string, Lady Golightly, beating Manœuvre by a head for that position. Many a length away came Durham fourth, Strachino fifth, Hidalgo sixth, and Zucchero seventh, and another dozen lengths away were Plunger, Warrior, Fontainebleau, and Brown Prince, all in a cluster. The last three were Sheldrake, Sunray, and Strathmore. Thus Lord Falmouth, who had never previously won the St. Leger, though he was second and third with Kingcraft and Wheatear in 1870, rivalled the achievement of Mr. Merry, who supplied the first and second four years ago, the only difference being that, on that occasion, "the mare proved the better horse." Silvio has evidently improved immensely, and is a grand stayer, so that he is likely to do great credit to Blair Athol in cup races next season. The position obtained by Manœuvre was the surprise of the race, as Lady Golightly had the greatest difficulty in beating her by a head, and, with 6st. 6 lb. on her back, Lord Bradford's filly may well be favourite for the Cambridgeshire.

Want of space forbids us to touch upon the sales of blood stock until next week; but those of Tuesday and Wednesday were great failures, buyers being very scarce.

HORTICULTURE.

At the last general meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society the president, Lord Aberdare, stated that, now that the society had a fair prospect before it, the council hoped to be able to do something successfully with regard to the revival of provincial shows; thus, perhaps, laying the foundation of a new future for the society, and, if they were successful, affording a guarantee fund which would put them out of their difficulties of a financial character. His Lordship further said that if some surplus remained the society would have the nucleus of a capital sum, which would enable the council to hold provincial shows annually. In accordance with this statement, the council have fixed that a show shall be held at Preston from July 9 to 13, inclusive, 1878.

The International Horticultural Show held last week at Carlisle was largely and fashionably attended. Among the successful exhibitors was her Majesty's gardener with a collection from the famed fruit gardens at Windsor. The gardeners to the following were also all prize-winners:—Duke of Northumberland, Duke of Roxburghe, Marquis of Downshire, Earl of Strathmore, Earl of Mansfield, Earl of Derby, Earl Somers, Earl of Bective, Earl of Ellesmere, Earl of Lonsdale, Countess of Stair, Viscount de Vesci, Viscount Hill, Lord Carrington. Prizes to the amount of about twelve hundred pounds were offered, and a magnificent 25-guinea silver cup was given by Lady Musgrave, of Eden Hall, for the best floral dinner-table decoration. Mr. William Bull, the new plant merchant, of Chelsea, also gave three silver cups, of the respective value of 15 guineas, 10 guineas, and 6 guineas in each case, for twelve new plants introduced into this country by himself. T. M. Shuttleworth, Esq., won the first prize (£20) for twelve stove and greenhouse plants, each a marvellous specimen of cultural skill; Earl Somers's gardener the first prize (£20) for the best collection of sixteen sorts of fruit; and William Bull, F.L.S., of Chelsea, the first prize (£20) for twelve new plants not yet in commerce—that is, new introductions to this country that have not yet been distributed to the general public.

A floricultural exhibition, being the twenty-fifth autumn show of the Brighton and Sussex Floricultural and Horticultural Society, was held at Brighton on Wednesday and Thursday in the Royal Pavilion. The display of fruits, plants, and flowers was as excellent in quality as extensive in quantity, being sent from all parts of the county. A choice collection of variegated plants sent by a Brighton firm was awarded the "blue ribbon" of the show—a handsome cup given by the London and Brighton Railway Company. The gardener of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon took the first prize for twelve varieties of roses, as well as for a fine show of orchids.

Lady Randolph Churchill has become a member of the Irish Amateur Drawing Society.

A Dutch journal announces that six forts, one of them at Zaandam, are to be constructed near Amsterdam.

Mdlle. Titien was brought to London from Worthing on Thursday in a saloon carriage on the Brighton Railway. Her condition has improved.

Mr. Powell, of the Hotwells, an old Bristol resident who recently died, has left his fortune (£40,000) to the Bristol Infirmary and Hospital.

Spain has been visited by storms and floods, which have caused much damage to property both in the metropolis and throughout the provinces.

A boy five years of age died on Monday at Barnstaple from hydrophobia. He was bitten by a retriever a month ago. Charles Shephard, of Bitterne, recently died of hydrophobia at Southampton Infirmary, making the third case that has occurred in the neighbourhood within the last few weeks.

The first list of applicants for trade-marks in Class 23 (cotton yarn and thread) advertised has just been published. They are thirty in number. The number of applications to register in this class was about 2500, and more than half were rejected. About 1000 marks have been so far provisionally allowed, and they have been forwarded to London, and a first batch of these has now been advertised. Classes 24, 25, and the other classes to which textile goods come in remain to be dealt with. There are only three weeks for lodging notice of opposition to registration of these cotton marks. The time for other marks is three months.

The autumn exhibition of pictures at the Royal Manchester Institution has opened this year with well-filled rooms. One of the attractions is Mr. J. D. Watson's "Yeoman's Wedding," a picture representing a bride of the last century quitting her old home and friends, and riding away on a pillion behind her husband. The place of honour in the first gallery is given to Mr. Aumonier's "Eastern Broad, Suffolk," which represents a river marsh, its vegetation, and all the natural features of such a landscape, with remarkable fidelity. Mr. Stanhope's "Eve tempted" (late in the Grosvenor Gallery) and Mr. Walter Crane's "Renaissance of Venus" have found ardent admirers. Mr. G. F. Watts, R.A., has only one work in the exhibition, "The Dove," which shows the bird resting on a tree above the waters of the subsiding Deluge. Mr. Sam Bough's "West Ween's Harbour, Sunrise," Mr. Mark Fisher's "Fen Meadows," Mr. J. D. Watson's "Christmas Greeting," and Mr. Napier Henry's "Fisherman's Wooing" are among the other pictures to which the greatest prominence is given. The rising school of landscape-painters for which Manchester is becoming noted is very well represented.

LAW AND POLICE.

At the Middlesex Sessions yesterday week the trial of Jane Sears was concluded. She was charged with defrauding tradesmen in the Chelsea district of property and money to a large amount, by representing that she was the owner of houses. She was sentenced to fifteen months' hard labour.

John Carr and Charles Martin, who are charged with stealing bonds of the value of £70,000 while in transit from London to Paris, and feloniously receiving Peruvian bonds of the value of £20,000, were yesterday week again brought up at the Mansion House. It was stated that the Government had undertaken to prosecute the prisoners, and that a reward of £3000 would be offered for information and the recovery of the property still missing. The prisoners were remanded.

Alfred Thomas Wilson, who had at first refused to give either his name or his address, was charged at the Mansion House last Saturday, on remand, with being in the unlawful possession of a St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railway bond for a thousand dollars, which was stolen on Monday last, with other bonds and money, from a post-office van at Zurich. On the application of Mr. Freshfield Williams, who appeared on behalf of the Swiss Government, Sir James Ingham, the magistrate of Bow-street, on Monday granted a warrant to bring Wilson before him, under the Extradition Act.

The hearing of evidence in support of the charge against the three detectives and a solicitor, of having conspired together to defeat the ends of justice, was continued yesterday week at Bow-street. In compliance with a request made by Mr. Poland on behalf of the Treasury, the witnesses he had called were bound over to appear at the October Sessions of the Central Criminal Court. Several others were examined, including Mr. H. Carr, superintendent of the detective police department of the Midland Railway, at Derby; Mr. C. Hole, a railway detective, at Manchester; Mr. C. Woodrow, a railway police inspector, of Manchester; and Police-Sergeant Reimers. The last-named witness stated that he had been degraded from the rank of inspector to that of sergeant because of a "dirty conspiracy" between Druscovich and a private inquiry agent.—A chief incident in Saturday's proceedings was the arrest of Chief Inspector Clarke on the same charge as the other prisoners. The witness under examination was Mr. Frederick Williamson, the Superintendent of the Detective Department, Scotland-yard. His evidence principally related to the reports made by the detectives to him in connection with the frauds on the Countess de Goncourt. Clarke made an application to be admitted to bail, which was granted. The case was then adjourned to Thursday. On Thursday Mr. Poland stated the case against Clarke, and Mr. Superintendent Williamson continued his evidence, being cross-examined at considerable length as to his direct evidence on the subject of certain documents being in the handwriting of Palmer. Sir J. Ingham said he should commit Palmer for trial, and he should be obliged to refuse bail.

A serious affray with burglars took place early on Sunday morning at the house of Mr. Braham, 325, City-road. One of Mr. Braham's sons, hearing a noise, went down stairs, and was attacked by two burglars, with whom he struggled, receiving such serious injuries from a knife and a knuckle-duster that on his father and his brother coming to his aid they found him insensible. The burglars escaped, one of them leaving for some distance a track of blood. The same morning a young man, who had been admitted into St. Bartholomew's Hospital at half-past one o'clock suffering from cuts about the head and face, was arrested by the police on suspicion. A knuckle-duster was found on him.

The house of Mr. Abraham Deveris, of 1, Beaumont-square, was entered by thieves early last Saturday morning, and a number of silver spoons and forks, a pair of silver sugar-tongs, some candelabra, and a number of other articles were stolen.

Two young men, named Thomas Hyslop and John Dinham, who are suspected of having committed the recent highway robberies on Blackheath, were arrested at Portsmouth on Monday, having been found passing one of the stolen bank-notes, and on Tuesday they were brought before the magistrate at the Greenwich Police Court. They are bakers in employment at Portsmouth, and are aged eighteen and nineteen years respectively. Mr. W. H. Hodgson, one of the Assistant Solicitors to the Treasury, who had been robbed of £17, testified to the circumstances under which the robbery took place. The prisoners' landlady at Blackheath also gave evidence, and the further proceedings in the case were then adjourned until to-day (Saturday).

William Howes, the man charged with a series of frauds by means of "bogus companies," was again before the Marylebone magistrate on Saturday. Evidence was adduced in support of the case, in which the prisoner is alleged to have defrauded Mrs. Palmer, a refreshment-house keeper in the Edgware-road, of £250, under pretence of getting her son a situation in the "Sovereign and Belgian Star Company."

William Starmore, police constable, was again brought before the Brentford magistrates last Saturday charged with committing a burglary at the Duke of York Inn, Hanwell, and stealing wines, spirits, tobacco, and money valued at £3 18s., on the 31st ult., and was committed for trial. An inspector said there were three other charges against the prisoner.

The Metropolitan Board of Works has decided upon the following alterations in the names of streets and numbering of houses within the limits of the metropolis:—The names of Maydwell-street, S.E., Millais-street, S.E., and Holmby-street, S.E., have been approved for new roads to connect Albany-road with Boundary-road. Brewhouse-yard, King-street West, Hammersmith, will be re-named Wescombe-cottages. Wellington-street and Upper Wellington-street, Southampton-street, Camberwell, will be re-named Westmacott-street, the subsidiary names abolished, and the houses re-numbered. Park-street, Wick-road, Hackney, will be incorporated with Wick-road, E., under the latter name, and the houses re-numbered. The houses in Denmark-place, St. Giles's, will be numbered with consecutive numbers. Frederick-place, Newington-butts, will be re-named Hurlburt-place, S.E., and the sub-names abolished, and the houses re-numbered. Cumberland-street, Hackney-road, will be called Scawfell-street, E., and the houses re-numbered. A suggestion for the adoption of the name of Abbott-road, E., for a road at Bromley, Poplar, at present named Leven-road, and of the application of the name Leven-road to a new road adjacent and parallel with the existing road of that name has been approved. The houses in North Keppel-mews, St. Giles's, will be re-numbered. Evelyn-street, New Town, Deptford, will be incorporated with Lucas-street, under the name of Lucas-street, S.E., the subsidiary names abolished, and the houses re-numbered. Amersham-grove and Amersham-grove North, New-cross, will be incorporated under the former name, the subsidiary names abolished, and the houses re-numbered. The subsidiary names in Cornwall-road, Camberwell, will be abolished, and the houses re-numbered. Alpha-street and Green Hundred-road, Camberwell, will be incorporated under the latter name, and the houses re-numbered.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE 16TH DOROBANTZ REGIMENT (ROUMANIAN) AT BRYSLAN, NEAR PLEVNA.
FACSIMILE OF A SKETCH.

HALT OF ROUMANIAN TROOPS ON THE MARCH TO BRYSLAN, BEFORE PLEVNA.

OPENING OF THE WALKER FINE-ART GALLERY AT LIVERPOOL.

THE WALKER FINE-ART GALLERY, LIVERPOOL.

The opening on Thursday week of the building which Mr. A. B. Walker, Mayor of Liverpool, has erected at his private cost, amounting to nearly £40,000, and has presented to that town for a Gallery of Fine Arts, is the subject of a page of illustrations. A view of the building was given in our last. The situation is in William Brown-street, next to the William Brown Free Library, and in the rear of St. George's Hall. The front is adorned with three colossal statues, in marble, representing Raphael, Michael Angelo, and an emblematic figure of "Liverpool." The two former are placed at the sides of the entrance to the Art-Gallery, and the latter is at the summit of the building. They are the work of Mr. Warrington Wood, the sculptor, at his studio in Rome.

In recognition of the generosity of the Mayor, it was resolved that the opening of the gallery should be accompanied by a demonstration as widely representative as possible. With this view, a procession of artisans employed in twenty different trades was organised. This assembled in the Volunteer drill-ground at Kensington, and paraded the streets till the Townhall was reached, when it was joined by a second procession, representing the Town Council, the Dock Board, and other public bodies, and including Lord Derby and other invited guests. A grand muster of volunteers also took place. The weather, though rain at first threatened, proved fine and sunny. After passing along the leading streets, all thickly lined with enthusiastic spectators, who repeatedly cheered and waved their hats, the procession arrived at the Art-Gallery. The Mayor, Lord Derby, and others ascended the platform erected in front of the building. The ceremony of opening the building was commenced. The Mayor, in presenting the gallery to the town, said that a public building for the reception of art-treasures, and available for systematic art-culture, had long been an acknowledged want, and his object had been to satisfy that requirement. He hoped that with a permanent gallery they would be able to secure a large number of valuable works and collections that otherwise would find a home elsewhere. He then handed to Mr. Alderman Weightman, chairman of the finance committee of the Corporation, a golden key, thus formally delivering the building over to the town. Mr. Alderman Weightman expressed the thanks of the Liverpool townspeople to Mr. Walker, and to former benefactors. He called upon the Town Clerk to read the official address from the Corporation accepting the gift. The Mayor briefly acknowledged the address. A second address, from a large number of the inhabitants, was presented, expressing the high estimation in which the Mayor's gift was held. It was intimated that a marble statue of Mr. Walker, subscribed for by the inhabitants at large, would be placed in the vestibule of the new gallery. This address was inclosed in a magnificent casket.

Lord Derby then declared the building open, amidst flourishes of trumpets and loud and hearty cheering. The scene in front of the gallery was highly imposing. Bands of Volunteers were marching up and down into position with drums beating; bodies of artisans, with colours flying and bands playing, were filing past in an apparently endless stream; and in the background, filling up Lime-street, London-road, Islington, and William Brown-street, were dense masses of people. Those on the platform were enabled to obtain a commanding view of the spectacle. Lord Derby, the Mayor, and other leading persons, then passed into the Art-Gallery, where they were received by Mr. Samuelson, chairman of the Museum and Arts Committee of the Town Council. Mr. Samuelson asked his Lordship to unveil a picture in celebration of the occasion. The picture was a historical one, being the original cartoon of the painting in the corridor of the House of Commons, by Mr. E. M. Ward, R.A., representing Jane Lane assisting Charles I. to escape after the battle of Worcester. Mr. Samuelson stated that as a nucleus of a municipal collection of art-objects they had sixty paintings and twenty pieces of statuary presented by private individuals, and twenty paintings purchased out of the corporate funds, making one hundred specimens in all. Lord Derby then unveiled the picture amidst cheers, remarking that he was heartily glad that Liverpool had already made a beginning. He did not know that any man who had money to spend could do better than follow the noble example of the Mayor of Liverpool; and he hoped it would be followed in all the leading towns.

The party walked through the rooms, which are hung with pictures forming the usual autumn exhibition; and afterwards there was a banquet in the great hall of St. George's Hall, which was brilliantly lighted and gaily decorated with flowers and exotic plants. The galleries were occupied by ladies in full evening dress. Amongst the guests present, in addition to Lord Derby, were Lord Sandon, Lord Denbigh, the Hon. F. A. Stanley, M.P., and others. After dinner a selection of music was played upon the organ by Mr. W. T. Best, and the Glee and Madrigal Union sang several vocal compositions.

The customary toasts, besides the health of the Mayor of Liverpool, were duly proposed and commented upon, by Lord Derby, making several of his pithy and original speeches. In replying to the toast of his own health, as Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Lord Derby spoke of the Russo-Turkish war, and of the Indian famine. Of the former he said, on behalf of Government—"We have done what we could to avert this unfortunate quarrel. We failed in that; and, looking back on the past, I do not think that success was ever possible. There was on both sides a conviction that war must come sooner or later; and, where that feeling exists, mediation is a very hopeless business. I don't think that the present moment is favourable for any interposition by third parties in the interests of peace. It is not the business of England to offer good offices without some reasonable prospect of their being accepted. But the time may come—it may not even be far distant; and whenever, in our judgment, that time shall have arrived, be sure that we will not lose the opportunity. If I were to describe, in one sentence, the feeling and attitude of the Government, I would say that we shall do what we can to pull our neighbours out of the ditch; but that, in doing so, we shall be very careful that they don't pull us in."

The Methodists of Wales have observed this week as a week of prayer for fine weather, for the alleviation of the Indian famine, and for the cessation of the war.

Mr. John Bright, M.P., has accepted an invitation to distribute the Rochdale Grammar School prizes and certificates at the Townhall, Rochdale, on the 25th inst.

A foreign cattle market was opened at Sunderland on Monday, the Privy Council having granted the port extraordinary privileges, owing to its peculiar facilities for the prevention of infection. The port commissioners have erected lairs, &c., costing £2000. Three hundred and thirty-six head of cattle and twenty-six lambs arrived in a steamer from Tonnage on Saturday, and, having undergone quarantine in the appointed lairs, were offered for sale on Monday. They were in splendid condition, and were sold at from 7s. to 9s. per stone.

THE MAGAZINES.

The Cornhill has one contribution of remarkable excellence, a tale of Anglo-Roman life entitled "The Princess Pauline." The humour consists not so much in the incidents, though these are highly entertaining, and the denouement in particular is unexpectedly dramatic, as in the self-portraiture of the narrator, a benevolent, inefficient old fogey, sketched with the irony of unconscious self-portraiture to the very life. Professor Dowden's essay on recent French poetry is a piece of intelligent and refined criticism, from which we gather that there are at last some welcome symptoms of a reaction against the effeminate practice of art merely for art's sake, and the still more mischievous creed of art for sensation's sake, as in Baudelaire. The ruling spirit just now seems to be Leconte de Lisle, a poet of earnest though subdued feeling and grand massive style, but too erudite for popularity. Mr. A. C. Lyall's poetical monologue of the sceptical Indian prince is deeply felt and musically rendered, a success the more creditable the less poetry is deemed an Indian Home Secretary's vocation. Lucian is the theme of a chatty but very adequate paper; and there is an interesting review, evidently from a well-known hand, of the position of the inferior class of domestic servants in London, especially in connection with the work of Mrs. Nassau Senior. We have further to mention the commencement of a promising new story entitled "For Percival," and the spirited continuation of "Erema."

The articles in Fraser are for the most part of a solid character. "Modern Prophets" deals not very conclusively with some of the supposed tendencies of modern science. "Third-Class Passengers" proves to be a renewal of the attack on the mineral traffic of the great railway companies, which is denounced as unprofitable as a source of revenue, and as involving a considerable enhancement of the rates of passenger traffic. The long series of papers on the prospects of English commerce is concluded by a condemnation of our Indian empire, a hundred and twenty years too late at this time of day; and an urgent appeal for the development of our colonies—without, however, any important suggestion in furtherance of that object. There are also an interesting account of the ancient city of Veii, and a smart paper on the abuses attending the transfer of landed property.

Macmillan publishes the first part of a most important contribution by Mr. A. R. Wallace, treating of colour in animals and plants. In the present instalment, which is restricted to the animal kingdom, Mr. Wallace assigns his grounds for rejecting Mr. Darwin's theory of the influence of sexual selection in producing variations of colour, the principal and apparently conclusive one being that the more sober individuals of a species find mates equally with the more conspicuous. Protective resemblance, and exuberance of constitutional vigour, finding a vent in the development of novel tints, are in Mr. Wallace's eyes the chief, though perhaps not the sole factors in the process. Another important article is Professor Seeley's essay on Prussian history, suggested by the recently published memoirs of Prince Hardenberg. Professor Seeley insists strongly that the Prussian revolution accomplished under the auspices of Stein and Hardenberg was not in reality less of a revolution than the French, nor less worthy of note for being worked out by pacific means. It involved, indeed, one coup-d'état of a startling description, the work of Stein, whom Professor Seeley regards as the master spirit of the time in Germany, and a complete biography of whom he craves as the best means of initiating English readers into the unduly neglected history of Prussia. The remainder of the contents are insignificant, with the exception of "Love's Arrows," a poem of extreme beauty in its descriptive passages, but less successful as a narrative.

Blackwood is exceptionally dry this month, offering hardly anything readable except its fictions. "Pauline," however, is as good as usual; and "Mine is Thine," while retaining its gaiety, develops a vein of fancy and feeling. A high estimate of the late Mr. Samuel Warren as a novelist, though graceful and becoming in the quarter where it appears, will elicit but a qualified assent in any other. Notwithstanding the essential vulgarity of Mr. Warren's talent, however, it must be admitted that he possessed a rare power of interesting his readers, and that his personages and situations are not readily forgotten.

The Nineteenth Century is rich in articles on subjects of Imperial concern. Foremost among these is one on the proposed English annexation of Egypt, by Herr George von Bunsen, a German statesman, whose goodwill to this country is beyond question. Mr. Bunsen thinks that the German people would offer no opposition to such a step, which he nevertheless deprecates on the ground of the territorial compensations on which other Powers would insist, and the general break-up of the Turkish Empire which would thus be occasioned. We believe we can assure Mr. Bunsen that any English establishment in Egypt will follow, not precede, such a break-up, and that England will be very well satisfied if the arms of Turkey succeed in averting it altogether. But such reluctance has nothing in common with the nervous dread of any extension of the boundaries of empire, for which Mr. Dicey properly rebukes Mr. Gladstone, in an essay hitting the weakest point in the late Premier's political character. How necessary annexation may become is well illustrated in Mr. Wilson's account of the recent incorporation of the Transvaal State with the Cape colony. "Famine and Debt in India," by Mr. Pedder, gives a distressing picture of the condition of the poorer cultivators of the Bombay Presidency, who seem to have been victimised by the application of modern principles of legislation and political economy to a state of society to which they are unsuited. Dr. Badger investigates the claim of the Sultan to be accounted the representative of the Prophet, which seems to be admitted de facto rather than established de jure. Mr. Mallock's inquiry, "Is Life worth Living?" is merely a re-statement of his former argument of the impossibility of morality apart from certain beliefs. If this line of reasoning contributed anything to the demonstration of these beliefs, its purpose would be intelligible, but as this is not the case it seems a reckless and mischievous thing to impair the authority of moral sanctions which have great weight with numbers of persons, however groundless they may appear to Mr. Mallock. The new Symposium consists of four papers discussing Mr. F. Harrison's recent essay on "The Soul and a Future Life," by Professor Huxley, Mr. Hutton, Lord Blackford, and the Hon. Roden Noel. Unfortunately, Mr. Harrison has contrived to evoke so much lively feeling that the philosophical banquet, like Lucian's of old, threatens to end in a feast of the Centaurs and the Lapithæ.

By much the most agreeable paper in the Fortnightly Review is that by Mr. Anthony Trollope on Cicero as a Man of Letters, an exceedingly pleasant review of the whole bulk of Cicero's writings. Mr. Trollope here exhibits himself in the unwonted light of a hero-worshipper, and his hero is worthy of his reverence. Mr. Goldwin Smith dissuades the nation from a "policy of aggrandisement," partly on the ground of the tendency of the extension of empire over races ^{Unit for constitutional government to discourage the constitutional feeling at home.} There is reason in this, but free nations have had to face even greater perils. Mr. Smith may feel assured that the English people will not shrink from aggrandisement if it comes in their way, nor go after it while it remains out of their way. Heine's views on religion and politics receive more attention than they deserve from Mr. L. A. Montefiore. Dr. Hueffer's notice of Karasowski's recent life of Chopin is remarkable for some original details respecting Chopin's last visit to England, when he was little better than a dying man. In an eccentric disquisition on "antithetic fallacies," Mr. Gladstone is compared to a horse, Lord Derby to a donkey, and Lord Beaconsfield to "that arboreal animal in which the Darwinian philosophy sees the origin of man." This is hard measure for a statesman who has so emphatically professed himself "on the side of the angels."

The indefatigable Mr. Goldwin Smith also contributes an article to the Contemporary Review on the subject of the recent strikes in America. His view is hopeful, but he seems to overlook the most unsatisfactory part of the business—the temptation to unprincipled politicians to inflame such disputes for their own purposes. Writing of similar matters solely from a working man's point of view, Mr. George Howell does himself honour by his emphatic condemnation of intimidation, and cautions against the abuses of "picketing." It is to be hoped that he is a fair representative of the spirit of English trades-unionism. Signor Gallenga takes a gloomy view of French capacity for self-government. We cannot see why Marshal MacMahon's coup of May 18 should be a proof of the failure of constitutional rule in France, any more than Charles I.'s arrest of the five members proved the same thing in England. Mrs. Mark Pattison's chapter on the French châteaux of the Renaissance evinces a most thorough study of the subject, and raises our expectations of the work of which it is to form a part. Professor Dowden's essay on the influence of science on literature is a very valuable piece of criticism. In another article some recent unwholesome developments of English journalism are denounced with more passion than pungency. The nuisance is undeniable, but we fear there is no remedy except that people in general should become wiser and better.

London Society continues to rely mainly on "Proud Maisie," which is distinguished this month by remarkable psychologic truth and insight, as well as dramatic interest. We may also note a very good paper on "The Poetry of Persiflage," and some pretty lines composed at Henley.

"Miss Misanthrope" continues to make a conquest every month in the Gentleman's Magazine—a dangerous example, we must say, to young ladies, and a seductive premium on feminine misanthropy. There are also entertaining papers on Basque legends and the "fondaci" or alums of Naples; a good account of the great, but little known, Spanish dramatist Alarcon; and a picturesque description of a visit to a Kaffir chief.

The Month has two amusingly contrasted biographical studies on Philip II. and Pombal, from which we gather that it is a much less grave offence to burn a heretic than to banish a Jesuit.

The Dublin University continues to improve under its present management. The most generally interesting contributions are the first of a series on "Indian Anomalies," with some strong assertions respecting the alleged corruption of the native officials attached to English courts of law; a memoir, with a photographic portrait, of Mr. H. Irving; "Lost Elements of Ancient Lore," a collection of very striking chronological curiosities; and some additional particulars of the early life of the late Mr. Mortimer Collins.

Belgravia is readable throughout, especially Mr. Payn's most amusing story, "By Proxy." With reference, however, to the last paragraph, we may inform Mr. Payn that the younger Robespierre was guillotined on the same day as his brother. Tinsley is also fairly entertaining.

The September number of Industrial Art sustains its high character for illustrations and letterpress. The engravings, which are numerous, address themselves to almost every branch of art industry, and are full of valuable suggestions to designers, artists, and amateurs. Men of Mark for September contains admirable portraits of Sir Rutherford Alcock, the Bishop of Salisbury, and Thomas Woolner, R.A. "The Market Place at Antwerp" and "A Japanese Ferry" are the works selected for reproduction in the Picture Gallery.

We have further to acknowledge the receipt of the Geographical Magazine, Churchman's Magazine, Foreign Church Chronicle, St. James's Magazine, Atlantic Monthly, Victoria Magazine, Charing-cross Magazine, New Monthly, Ladies' Treasury, Milliner and Dressmaker, Englishwoman's Magazine, Young Englishwoman, Good Words, Good Things, Golden Hours, Leisure Hour, Argoey, Science Gossip; and the monthly parts of All the Year Round, Cassell's Family Magazine, Day of Rest, Sunday at Home, Sunday Magazine, Weekly Welcome, and Golden Hours.

A sale of shorthorns took place on the 6th inst. at Ulverstone. A white calf made 610 gs., Brighteye Sixth 780 gs., and Mildeye 610 gs. Second Duke of Gloster was withdrawn at a reserve of £750. Twenty-eight cows realised 4500 gs.

From the lists issued by the delegates of the University of Oxford it appears that forty-one candidates from the Royal Asylum of St. Anne's Society's Schools were successful. Of those there are three senior girls and thirteen senior boys, six junior girls and nineteen junior boys.

Some important experiments were tried last week with the telephone at the Eliza Mine, St. Austell, by Dr. Foster, Government Inspector of Mines. The instrument, attached to a covered copper wire, was sent down the ventilating shaft, and within a quarter of an hour speaking at the bottom of the mine was distinctly heard above, the utterances being even more audible, it is stated, on the surface than below.

A large number of delegates from Chambers of Commerce were present at the autumnal meeting of the Associated Chambers, which was held at Hull last Tuesday—Mr. Sampson Lloyd, M.P., the president, occupying the chair. Resolutions were passed in favour of the amendment of the bankruptcy laws, the establishment of county courts near great commercial centres, with enlarged jurisdiction, and the more frequent holding of assizes. The inhabited house duty was amongst the other subjects discussed. In the evening the delegates were entertained by Dr. King, the Mayor.—At the second day's meeting many subjects were considered, including the law of partnership, foreign telegraphs, and agriculture, and resolutions were passed respecting them. The question of delays in connection with civil action decisions and the new Spanish tariff were also discussed, but no decision was come to respecting them. In the evening the delegates were entertained at a dinner by Colonel Longstaff, the president of the Hull Chamber.

by HENRY BRETT and CO., Holborn, is universally prized. It is the best stimulant for the sportsman and tourist, and has proved invaluable in cases of a choleraic nature.

NATIONAL INSTITUTION for DISEASES OF THE SKIN,
 Gray's-Inn-road, King's-cross, London, W.C. Established 1864.
 Physician, Dr. Barr Meadows, 47, Victoria-street, S.W.
 Free to the necessitous. Payment required from other applicants.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM OF HIRE.

PIANOFORTES of every description by all the most celebrated makers from Two Guinea a Quarter.

HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, from One Pound Five Shillings per Quarter.

SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES, at immense Reductions for Cash, or on the Three-Years' System.

CHAPPELL'S ENGLISH 20-GUINEA or SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, in Canadian Walnut or Mahogany. This instrument combines good quality of tone and excellence of workmanship. Has a lovely touch, and is capable of enduring hard practice without going out of order. Owing to its size, it is admirably adapted for the boudoir or any room where space is an object. In Solid Oak or White Ash, 22 ga.; Rosewood or Walnut Case, 27 ga.

NEW POLKA BY CH. D'ALBERT.
THE FANFARE POLKA. By CHARLES D'ALBERT. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. net; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NEW DANCE MUSIC.

SWEETHEARTS. Waltz on Arthur Sullivan's popular Song. "One of the best waltzes ever written by the Net. above favourite Composer." .. 2 0
TRIAL BY JURY LANCERS, on Airs from Sullivan's popular Work .. 2 0
TRIAL BY JURY QUADRILLE .. 2 0
TRIAL BY JURY WALTZ .. 2 0
TRIAL BY JURY POLKA .. 1 6
RINK GALOP .. 2 0
PLEUR DE THE QUADRILLE .. 2 0
FASCINATION VALSE A Trois Temps .. 2 0
SULTAN'S POLKA (New Edition) .. 1 6
The above, arranged for Full Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. each. N.B. A Complete List of M. D'Albert's Popular Dance Music will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO'S LIST of NEW SONGS.

THE DISTANT SHORE (sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd)	ARTHUR SULLIVAN	2s. net.
THE ROW WALK (sung by Madame A. Sterling)	M. W. BALFE	2s. net.
THOUGHT PASSING HENCE	ARTHUR SULLIVAN	2s. net.
MY BROTHER (sung by Stanley)	ARTHUR SULLIVAN	2s. net.
IF (sung by B. McGuckin)	PINSUTI	2s. net.
THE CAPTIVE SKYLARK	PINSUTI	2s. net.
THE SKYLARK FREE	PINSUTI	2s. net.
BOOKS AND FLOWERS	PINSUTI	2s. net.
OH! FOR THE WINGS	PINSUTI	2s. net.
THE EVERLASTING SHORE	PINSUTI	2s. net.
SWEETHEARTS	ARTHUR SULLIVAN	2s. net.
CHARLE SONG	CARRINGTON LEE	2s. net.
THE LAST LEAF	CARRINGTON LEE	2s. net.
WHEN THOU ART HIGH	GOONDOO	2s. net.
I'LL SING THESE SONGS OF ABABY	F. CLAY	2s. net.
THE STATE OF A ROSE	HENRY SMART	2s. net.
MY LOVER ACROSS THE BLUE SEA	S. ADAMS	2s. net.
THE DAY MY LOVE WENT AWAY	L. GRAY	2s. net.
NOT FAR AWAY	H. THOMAS	2s. net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TRIAL BY JURY. Dramatic Cantata. Written by W. S. Gilbert. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed with immense success at the Strand Theatre. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d. net. TRIAL BY JURY. Pianoforte Solo. 2s. 6d. net. THE JUDGE'S SONG. 2s. net. THE LOVE-SICK BOY. Defendant's Song. 1s. 6d. net. KUHLER'S FANTASIA. 2s. net. SMALLWOOD'S FANTASIA (easy). 1s. 6d. net. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

L'ORGANISTE PRATIQUE. 240 Easy Pieces for Organ or Harmonium, by J. LEYBACH. In 2 vols., price 6s. each net; or in eight parts, each 2s. net. The above will supply a want long felt by amateur performers on the organ or harmonium, as all the pieces are very pretty without being difficult. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES HALLE'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. Section I.—No. 1. Pianoforte Tutor. FORTY BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

CHARLES HALLE'S NEW EDITION of POPULAR WORKS. For List of Pieces already published Catalogues will be forwarded, post-free, on application to FORTY BROTHERS, 272, Regent-street, London; and Cross-street, South King-street, Manchester.

THE FIRE KING. New Cantata. By WALTER AUSTIN. To be produced at the Leeds Festival on Wednesday Evening, Sept. 19. Artists—Mrs. Osgood, Madame Patey, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Signor Poli. Piano and Vocal score, price 6s.; post-free, 6s. 6d. net. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

SUNG BY MR. BARTON MCGUCKIN.
MINE OWN. A New Song. By H. GADSBY; Words by F. E. Weatherly. "If you were at your window As I passed up the street." Price 1s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MADAME LIEBHART.
FAR FROM HOME. New Song. By G. B. ALLEN. Sung with the greatest success at Madame Liebhart's Concerts. Price 1s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

EDITH'S SONG. From Tennyson's "Harold." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 2s. 6d. net. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

A WINTER'S TALE. From Tennyson's "Harold." "Two young lovers in wintry weather." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 2s. 6d. net. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WAR SONGS OF THE EAST. By H. B. FARNIE. In handsome cover, price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 6d. net. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA SERENADE. Waltz. By METRA. A most attractive and popular waltz. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 2s. 6d. net. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA VAGUE. Waltz. By METRA. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 2s. 6d. net. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

W. SMALLWOOD'S NEW PIECES for PIANOFORTE. Illustrated Title-pages. CRYSTAL DEWDROPS. AVELETTE. Gondola Song. FAIRY DREAMS. Post-free, 18 stamps each. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. Now ready. New Illustrated Book. Post-free. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 235. Nine Stops. Viola Dolce, Seraphone, &c. Price 12s. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 312. Ten Stops. With Octave Coupler and Sub-Bass. Price 40s. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

W. T. BEST'S FIRST ORGAN BOOK. Forty pages, music size. An Elementary and Practical Guide for Organ Students. This day, price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

J. W. ELLIOTT'S NEW HARMONIUM. J. TUTOR. Containing everything necessary to be learnt for playing the Harmonium. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day, price 1s.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

HENNING'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLIN. A celebrated German Method. Now for the first time published in English. It includes 162 Progressive Exercises. Forty pages, music size. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

EDWARD HOWELL'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLONCELLO. Founded on Romberg's Method. A Complete and Practical Instruction Book, for the use of all Students who wish to master the Instrument. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day, price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

DR. CALLCOTT'S GRAMMAR OF MUSIC. Boosey's New Shilling Edition. This day.

VACCAJ'S SINGING METHOD, and BALFE'S BALLAD TUTOR. Boosey's New Shilling Editions. This day.

MUSIC FOR THE SEASIDE.
BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET. New Numbers. Price 1s. each, post-free, 1s. 1d. Arthur Sullivan's Ten Songs. Raff's Piano Album. Santley's Ten Songs. Brahms's Piano Album. Virginia Gabriel's Ten Songs. Brahms's Piano Album. A. S. Gatty's Twelve Ballads. Lamotte's Waltz Album. Longfellow & Balfe's Ten Songs. Waldteufel's Waltz Album. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street, London.

TRUE HEARTS. New Song, by the Composer of "Nancy Lee." This day. Sung by Miss Ellen D'Alton.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

ONE ONLY. By WEKERLIN. This exquisite Romance, sung with equal success by Mr. Edward Lloyd and Mr. Santley, may be had of all Music-sellers in town and country. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

STILL WATERS RUN DEEP. By PINSUTI. Price 2s. each net.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE. By PINSUTI. Price 2s. each net.

AS YOU LIKE IT. By PINSUTI. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

FAIR IS MY LOVE. By HATTON. Mr. Santley will sing this celebrated song at all the concerts during the approaching tournee with Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

IF YOU WERE AT YOUR WINDOW. By MOLLOY. The Words by Weatherly. Price 2s. net. "If you were at your window, And I were passing by, I wonder would you greet me, And smile to see me nigh." Molloy's version must be ordered. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. On the Celebrated Song. The Waltz of the Season. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by HAMILTON AIDÉ. Remember or Forget. The Fisher. Maid I Love is Six Years Old. Let me Dream of Happy Days. Brown Eyes, or Blue Eyes. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ALFRED SCOTT GATTY. Rothay Bay. One, Morning, oh! so early. Old Sweet Story. The Departure. Hay is in the Mow. Apart. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. The Lost Chord. Let me Dream Again. Living Poems. Sleep, my Love, Sleep. Golden Days. Waking Back. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by F. H. COWEN. It was a Dream. Almost. Spinning. Marguerite. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by DOLORES. Destiny. The Fairies. Clear and Cool. Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

ASHDOWN and PARRY'S CATALOGUES of MUSIC. PART 1. PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONIUM. PART 2. VOCAL. PART 3. HARP, CONCERTINA. PART 4. VIOLIN, VIOLONCELLO, ORCHESTRA, &c. PART 5. FLUTE, CORNET, CLARINET, &c. Sent gratis and post-free to any part of the world. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square, London.

SIR WILLIAM STERNDALE BENNETT'S BARCAROLLE (from the Fourth Concerto).—This beautiful Composition is not published in the following forms:—Piano Solo .. 4s. Piano Duet .. 4s. Organ, arranged by Dr. Stegall .. 4s. London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

GAVOTTE, in E Minor. By SILAS. Played by Madame Essop at her Concerts in England and America with immense success. A new edition of this celebrated Gavotte is now ready. Price 3s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square.

OLIVIA. New Waltz. By CHARLES COOTE, Jun. Played by Coote and Tinsley's band at the State Ball at Buckingham Palace, June 22. Piano Solo, 4s.; Duet, 6s.—London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

DRUMMER-BOY'S POLKA. By ARDITI. Great success. Re-demanded nightly with acclamation. "The Drummer-Boy's Polka," by the same composer, introducing the drummers of the Coldstream, was likewise uproariously re-demanded.—Daily Telegraph. Price 3s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LE TORTORELLE VALSE. By ARDITI. Also enjoyed nightly. "A delightfully flowing and melodious valse, from the pen of Signor Arditi. 'Le Tortorelle' obtained a hearty encore."—Daily Telegraph, Aug. 15. Price 4s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, W.

SECONDHAND PIANOS.—BOOSEY and CO. have a large Stock of Instruments by all the great Makers, which they offer, according to their custom on the close of the season, at greatly reduced prices. The majority of these Pianos have been hired for one season only, and are as good as new.—Sole address, 235, Regent-street.

BOOSEY and CO'S BRASS INSTRUMENTS FOR AMATEURS. THE DISTIN CORNET, from 25 to 30s. THE DISTIN CELEBRATED LIGHT VALVE CORNETS, 7 and 9s., are the best Cornets manufactured. THE DISTIN MINIATURE CORNET-A-PISTONS, 9s. THE DISTIN BALLAD HORN in C, 9s. THE DISTIN DRAG and POST HORNS and BAND INSTRUMENTS at all prices. THE DISTIN MONTHLY BRASS BAND JOURNAL, 10s. 6d. per annum. The above instruments were exhibited by Boosey and Co., at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and were awarded a Prize Medal "For power and good quality of tone, fine workmanship." Estimates for Bands of all sizes, also illustrations and prices, to be had of the sole manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 235, Regent-street, London.

ROYAL DUBLIN SOCIETY.

TAYLOR ART SCHOLARSHIPS AND PRIZES. The Trustees and Judges appointed for carrying into effect the Trusts of the Will of the late George Archibald Taylor, Esq., in reference to the income arising from the sum bequeathed by him for the promotion of Art in Ireland, have settled the terms upon which £20 a year will be awarded (in 1878) in Two Scholarships and One Prize to Irish Art Students. Particulars will be furnished on application to Wm. Edwd. Swales, M.D., Regr., Kildare-street, August, 1877.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND (Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861). Bankers to the New Zealand Government. Paid-up Capital, £725,000. Reserve Fund, 275,000.

DIRECTORS.
J. LOGAN CAMPBELL, Esq., President.
George B. Owen, Esq. W. I. Taylor, Esq.
Alfred Cox, Esq., M.P.A. James Watt, Esq.
Samuel Browning, Esq. Hon. Jas. Williamson, M.L.C.
LONDON BOARD.
The Right Hon. Sir James Fergusson, Bart., K.C.M.G. Robert Porter, Esq.
Archd. Hamilton, Esq. Thomas Russell, Esq., C.M.G.
A. J. Mundella, Esq., M.P.
Head Office—Auckland.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle.
In Fiji—Levuka.
In New Zealand—Auckland, Christchurch, Dunedin, Wellington, Napier, Nelson, Invercargill, Pictou, and at seventy-eight other towns and places throughout the Colony.
The Bank grants Drafts on all their Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.
The London Office RECEIVES DEPOSITS of £20 and upwards for fixed periods of two to five years, bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum. The rate for shorter periods can be ascertained on application at the Office of the Bank.
F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

THE GRANVILLE, ST. LAWRENCE-ON-SEA, near Ramsgate.—Baths, Theatre, Concerts, Billiard-Room. Board, with attendance, in the Grand Gothic Dining-Hall, 12s. per day.—Address, THE MANAGER.

KINAHAN'S LL WHISKY. UNIVERSALLY RECOMMENDED BY THE MEDICAL PROFESSION. A pure old spirit, mild, mellow, delicious, and most wholesome. Dr. Hassell says:—"The samples were soft and mellow to the taste, aromatic and ethereal to the smell. The whisky is pure, well matured, and of very excellent quality."

SCHWEPPE'S MALVERN SELTZER. As there are now many spurious imitations of this celebrated Water, consumers are requested to see that every bottle bears labels with Name and Trade-Mark—"A FOUNTAIN."

ELLIS'S RUTHIN WATERS. PURE AERATED WATERS.

ELLIS'S RUTHIN WATERS.—Crystal Springs. Soda, Potash, Seltzer, Lemonade, &c. &c. &c. Curks branded "R. ELLIS and SON, RUTHIN," and every Label bears their Trade Mark. Sold everywhere, and wholesale of R. ELLIS and SON, Ruthin, North Wales. LONDON AGENTS: W. BEST and SONS, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square.

In consequence of Spurious Imitations of LEA and PERRINS' SAUCE, which are calculated to deceive the Public, Lea and Perrins have adopted a NEW LABEL, bearing their Signature, LEA and PERRINS, which signature is placed on every bottle of WORKSHIRE SAUCE, and without which none is genuine. Sold wholesale by the Proprietors, Worcester; and by all Dealers in Sauces throughout the World.

COCKS'S READING SAUCE is the best and most economical Sauce ever manufactured FOR FISH, ENRICHING SOUPS, GRAVIES, &c. It only requires a trial to convince the purchaser of its excellence.

CAUTION.—The genuine is protected by Trade Mark—viz., CHARLES COCKS'S Signature on a white ground across the Reading Arms.

HORNIMAN'S TEA for Forty Years has commanded a large sale, because it can always be relied on for strength, flavor, and cheapness. It is the best tea imported. Sold only in packets.

TAYLOR BROTHERS' MARAVILLA COCOA. DELICIOUS AND INVIGORATING.

MARAVILLA COCOA. "It may justly be called the perfection of prepared Cocoa." British Medical Journal.

MARAVILLA COCOA.—"The 'Globe' says, 'TAYLOR BROTHERS' MARAVILLA COCOA has achieved a thorough success, and surpasses every other cocoa in the market. Entirely soluble, a delicate aroma, and a rare concentration of the purest elements of nutrition, distinguish the Maravilla Cocoa above all others. For invalids, dyspeptics, and consumers of Cocoa in general, we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage.'"
Sole Proprietors, TAYLOR BROTHERS, London.

AMERICAN CENTENNIAL PRIZE MEDAL.
FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. Its pure flavour, delicate aroma, and invigorating qualities have established its position as a first-class dietetic article.

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "The Caracas Cocoa of such choice quality."—Food, Water, and Air (Dr. Hassell). "A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

FRY'S EXTRACT OF COCOA, "than which, if properly prepared, there is no nicer or more wholesome preparation of Cocoa."—Food, Water, and Air. Edited by Dr. Hassell.

TENTH INTERNATIONAL MEDAL awarded to J. S. FRY and SON.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN and POLSON'S CORN FLOUR, WITH STEWED FRUIT OF ANY KIND.

THE ESSEX FLOUR and GRAIN COMPANY. Liverpool-ward, London, N. supply the best goods only.—Wheat, for Pastry, 10s. 4d. per bushel; House-holds, for Bread, 10s.; Wheat Meal, for Brown Bread, 8s. 4d.; Coarse Scotch Oatmeal, 3s. 2d. per 14 lb.; Rye, 3s. 4d.; American Hominy, 4s.; Barley, Buckwheat, 5s. per bushel, or 10s. per sack; Indian Corn, 4s. 8d. per bushel, or 17s. 6d. per sack; Oats, 4s. per bushel; Crushed Oats, 3s. 6d. per bushel, 13s. 6d. per sack; Middlings, 2s. 4d. per bushel; Ground Pollard, 1s. 8d.; Peas, 7s. 6d.; Tick Beans, 8s.; Split Peas, 2s. 6d. and 3s. per sack; Most Biscuits, 2s. per cwt.; Barley Meal, 4s. 8d. per bushel, or 17s. 6d. per sack. Lentil Flour, for invalids, in tins, 1 lb. size, 1s. and 7lb. 6s. All other kinds of Grain and Seed. Special prices for larger quantities. Orders and cheques to be made in favour of G. Young.

WILLIS'S "BEST BIRD'S-EYE" GUARANTEED. Sold Everywhere in Sixpenny Packets (containing Ten), protected by our Name and Trade Mark. W. D. and H. O. WILLIS, Bristol and London.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE"
CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases its effects are marvellous. In bottles, 2s. 6d. each, and cases containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 125 stamps, by the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, London.

HUNYADI JÁNOS.

BARON LIEBIG

AFFIRMS that its richness in aperient salts surpasses that of all other known waters.—Lancet.

HUNYADI JÁNOS. "The most certain and the most comfortable of all aperient waters, specially indicated in costiveness, in portal congestion, with tendency to hemorrhoids, and in sluggish conditions of the liver."—John Macpherson, M.D., Inspector-General of Hospitals, Author of "Baths and Wells of Europe."

HUNYADI JÁNOS. APERIENT NATURAL MINERAL WATER.

MOST VALUABLE and PALATABLE. Prof. MacNamara, Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland.

MOST AGREEABLE, SAFE, and EFFICACIOUS.—British Medical Journal.

HUNYADI JÁNOS. Highly efficacious, not only as an ordinary aperient, but also in cases of habitual constipation.—Dr. Roberts, University College Hospital.

PREFERRED to PULLNA and FRIEDRICHSHALL.—Prof. Atkin, F.R.S., Royal Victoria Hospital, Army Medical School, Netley.

HUNYADI JÁNOS SUPERSEDES PILLS, DRAUGHTS, and CASTOR OIL.

HUNYADI JÁNOS, HIGHLY BENEFICIAL IN BILIOUS ATTACKS.—Dr. Silver, Charing-cross Hospital.

HUNYADI JÁNOS. "As a laxative I prefer the Hunyadi János to any and every other mineral water, and for the following reasons:—The dose is small. The taste is not unpleasant. It acts promptly. It does not oppress the stomach. It does not gripe. And it is efficient. IT IS INVALUABLE FOR LYING-IN WOMEN, as an ordinary nursery aperient, and in diseases of women.—Dr. J. Marion Sims, Hon. Fellow of the Obstetrical Society of England, &c."

USES of the HUNYADI JÁNOS:
THE HUNYADI JÁNOS WATERS are used with excellent results according to the most eminent authorities:—1. As a safe, ordinary, and gentle aperient; 2. for habitual constipation; 3. by persons inclined to inflammation, congestion, and gouty disorder; 4. in chronic affections of the organs of respiration and circulation; 5. in organic diseases resulting from fatty degeneration; 6. against undue deposition of fat in general; 7. against hemorrhoids; 8. during pregnancy and in many female diseases; 9. in bilious attacks and disorders of the liver; 10. the evil consequences of indigestion and diet.

HUNYADI JÁNOS.—THE BEST NATURAL APERIENT.

HUNYADI JÁNOS, MORE PLEASANT than its RIVALS; while its EFFICACY as a PURGATIVE corresponds to

ITS UNUSUAL CHYMICAL COMPOSITION.—Dr. T. L. Brunton, F.R.S., Lecturer on Materia Medica, St. Bartholomew's Hospital; Examiner in the University of London.

HUNYADI JÁNOS.—For ordinary aperient purposes a half wine-glassful of the HUNYADI WATER may be taken at bed-time, or a wine-glassful taken in the morning fasting. It is most efficacious when warmed to a temperature not below 80 deg., or mixed with an equal quantity of hot water.

MAY be ordered of all CHYMISTS and MINERAL WATER DEALERS. In original Bottles, price 2s. and 1s. 6d.

D. R. DE JONGH'S (KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR, KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM) LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL. Proved by twenty-five years' medical experience to be THE PUREST. THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST EASILY DIGESTED. THE MOST RAPIDLY EFFICACIOUS.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL. THE ONLY KIND which produces the full curative effects in CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, AND WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS. DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL, Physician Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor. "I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. DR. DE JONGH'S OIL is now the only Cod-Liver Oil used in the Royal National Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest."

LENNOX BROWNE, Esq., F.R.C.S.E., Senior Surgeon Central London Throat and Ear Hospital. "The action of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil has proved, in my own experience, particularly valuable, not only in those diseases for which it was originally employed, but also in many cases of weakness of the Singing and Speaking Voice, dependent on Bronchial or Laryngeal irritation, and in all forms of Laryngeal Enlargement of Glands, and Discharges from the Ear."

DR. GILL, Consulting Physician Royal Asylum of St. Anne's Society. "Professor Troussseau remarks:—'Cod-Liver Oil constitutes at the same time a food and an agent of stimulation perfectly suited to the organism when it is more or less debilitated.' Before I noticed these observations by a scientific authority as Troussseau, I had been led to a similar belief by a considerable number of cases in which I had had an opportunity of watching the good effects of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL."

DR. SAUNDERS, C.B., late Deputy-Inspector-General Army Hospitals, Superintendent London Medical Mission. "I have used Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil extensively among the sick poor of St. Giles's, and consider it a valuable remedy, especially in the wasting diseases of children."

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only in capsules IMPERIAL Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; 1 Pint, 4s. 6d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all respectable Chemists and Druggists throughout the world.

SOLE CONSIGNERS. ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON.

LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE. Have it in your houses, and use no other. This saline is the true Antidote in Fevers, Eruptive Affections, Sea or Bilious sickness, having peculiar and exclusive merits. For the protection of the public against fraudulent imitations, I have applied for and obtained a perpetual injunction, with costs, against the defendant. Observe the genuine has my Name and Trade Mark on a Buff-Coloured Wrapper.—115, Holborn-hill, London.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 108, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE O. LESTERON, 108, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1877.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only in capsules IMPERIAL Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; 1 Pint, 4s. 6d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all respectable Chemists and Druggists throughout the world.

SOLE CONSIGNERS. ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON.

LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE. Have it in your houses, and use no other. This saline is the true Antidote in Fevers, Eruptive Affections, Sea or Bilious sickness, having peculiar and exclusive merits. For the protection of the public against fraudulent imitations, I have applied for and obtained a perpetual injunction, with costs, against the defendant. Observe the genuine has my Name and Trade Mark on a Buff-Coloured Wrapper.—115, Holborn-hill, London.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 108, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE O. LESTERON, 108, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1877.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only in capsules IMPERIAL Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; 1 Pint, 4s. 6d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all respectable Chemists and Druggists throughout the world.

SOLE CONSIGNERS. ANSAR, HARFORD, and

THE MANCHESTER OPENED ON T

THE NEW TOWNHALL.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 13, 1877.

SILVER PLATE FOR USE AT THE NEW TOWNHALL, MANCHESTER.

THE DEPUTATION FROM BELFORT.

THE SPEECHES AT THE TOMB.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE M. THIERS.

THE MANCHESTER NEW TOWNHALL.

The City of Manchester, which has a population of nearly 400,000, is ruled by a Municipal Corporation of more than ordinary importance, intrusted with the management of extensive waterworks and gasworks, as well as the paving, cleansing, and lighting of the streets, their construction or improvement, and the maintenance of the city police. This busy and influential Town Council, with its numerous official staff of so many departments, has quite outgrown the accommodation of its old Townhall, in King-street, and has therefore provided for itself a new Townhall, in Albert-square, which is one of the noblest modern buildings in England. It was formally opened last Thursday; and the large Engraving which forms our Extra Supplement, with one of the page Engravings in this Number, will serve at present for Illustrations of the event. The architect of the New Townhall is Mr. Alfred Waterhouse, who was the architect likewise of the Manchester Assize Courts, in Strangeways, a fine Gothic structure, and who has shown, in both instances, an unsurpassed mastery of the true Gothic style adapted to the practical uses of our own day, and to places for the transaction of civil public business. The Exterior and Interior Views of the Townhall, represented in our two Engravings, deserve the attention of all who care for the preservation of what is noblest and most characteristic of our national history, in the continued practice of the grand art of stately architecture, in harmony with its best traditions and examples of past achievement.

Albert-square, in which the new Townhall is situated, does not seem to the visitor in Manchester a very conspicuous or accessible ground for its municipal palace to stand in, as it lies quite away from the main street of shopping and other bustling traffic. This is Market-street, with its new Royal Exchange in the centre, with the old Cathedral Church below it, and with the fine open esplanade of Piccadilly above, where the Royal Infirmary extends its domed and pillared front, adorned with the bronze statues of Peel and Wellington and Dr. John Dalton, the philosophical chemist. A turn for a quarter of a mile in a southern direction, to the left hand in descending the incline of Market-street, leads to Albert-square, which has of late years been opened at the end of Princess-street, near the corner of Cross-street and John Dalton-street, and beyond which, in Peter-street, is the notable Free-Trade Hall, with the Theatre and other places of entertainment. Many costly and handsome warehouses or buildings for commercial business are to be found in the adjoining streets, and the Royal Institution and Athenæum are within a few hundred paces; but in Albert-square itself, an oblong space of 160 yards by 80 yards, there is nothing remarkable except the Gothic Albert Memorial in its centre and the New Townhall.

The Townhall must be particularly described. It occupies, with its inner courts, 8648 square yards; but this site was of a shape most inconvenient to deal with, being an irregular acute-angled triangle, having its point cut off by Cooper-street in the rear. Mr. Waterhouse has exercised great skill and ingenuity in distributing the space, and in providing above 250 rooms, well adapted to the various purposes required. The main front of the New Townhall, in Albert-square, facing the Albert Memorial, stands 240 ft. clear of the opposite buildings; but the sides of the Townhall, which are longer than the front, and which have, in our judgment, not less architectural beauty and originality of design, cannot so easily be viewed at a glance, the streets along those sides being very narrow. The length of the main front, shown in our Extra Supplement Engraving, is 328 ft., and from the midst of it springs the principal tower, with the spire, to the height of 280 ft. The height above the roof is extreme, and perhaps could not be greater without going beyond the limits of proportion. Below the tower, the centre of the front is the projecting porch, itself a considerable edifice, the lofty windows and arcades of which, like those in the rest of the façade, make four stories, with a gable at the roof, and a subordinate gable over the actual porchway beneath. To the right and left of this porch the building extends a front of the length above stated, with four stories of painted windows, the first floor having the largest and finest, geometrically decorated, and the uppermost floor having dormer windows, with gables, looking out from a deep-pitched roof. The porch is but the most central of several projections in the front, the boldest being at each angle, where the number of stories rise to five, which is continued round three façades. The roof-line of all four façades is diversified in the parapets, turrets, corner pavilions, and gables of dormer windows. Apart from the tower and porch, the pretensions of the front to a character distinct from the sides are to be found in a more massive simplicity of ornament, and not in its greater variety. The sides, as we have said, are longer than the front, for while it is 328 ft., they are 387 ft. and 350 ft. respectively. It has been remarked that the shape of the site is not far from being a triangle, the line of the front forming its base. At the other extreme, the truncated point of the triangle, situated in Cooper-street, the elevation is neither unadorned nor wanting in dignity, for it is surmounted with a tower and spire 200 ft. high, and visible almost everywhere as the attendant on its greater companion in the front. At this end also there is a porch of some magnificence. The longer of the two sides, the one in Princess-street, has another ornamental tower, 156 ft. high, not far from the angle with the front. But the greatest tower of the three is worthily the crown of all. It rises behind the roof gable of the central porch in the front. Its lower and larger division, in which will be ten bells and carillon chimes, is square in form, its four broad faces having each three lofty two-light windows, deeply recessed, above which are the round clock dials of 16 ft. diameter. This square portion of the tower is surmounted at the four angles by pinnacle-shaped turrets. Here is also a corbelled cornice, with mouldings and parapet, forming a balcony. Those who have climbed such towers, and looked on cities from their summits, may conceive the height from the statement that, after reaching the attic floor of the hall, the steps of the ascent by a turret to the balcony above the clock are within a score of two hundred. But this is not the top of the tower—very far from it. Above the square portion rises a lofty and lighter looking lantern-tower, octagonal in shape; and above this again is the spire, also octagonal, which alone is 64 ft. in height. Its finial is a copper ball, with spikes, which, as seen from below, represents the Manchester crest—a globe covered with bees.

Little can be said in this slight sketch of the characteristic decorations of the building, with statues of St. George, as a Knight of Malta, on the apex of the main central gable of the front; Henry III. and Queen Elizabeth in niches below; Agricola in the point of the gable over the doorway itself; other Sovereigns and historic figures, national and local, distributed elsewhere; or the symbolic medallions and scores of coats of arms, commemorating personages past and present who have a place in Manchester history.

The interior is a new example of the architect's well-known care that his rooms shall be fitted to their use, and their arrangement methodically convenient. The positions even of the various entrances were selected after due consideration of the quarters from which the greatest number of business visitors to the hall might be expected, as well as with a view to the readiest possible access from the street to every part of the building. The disposition of the inner portion leaves space for three courtyards, some of the architectural effects of which are very striking. On the staircases also the resources of constructive art have been lavished. If we enter by the main porchway, with its rows of columns—on each side five plain ones detached, and five attached and finely moulded with rich groining overhead—we are presently in a vaulted entrance-hall, with eight main arches on low shafts of polished granite, roofed with Bath stone, inlaid with blue from the Forest of Dean. To right and left are wide corridors groined cloisterwise, leading round the building to the offices or committee-rooms, the windows of which adorn the exterior. A central avenue leads to the police department. From the entrance-hall, too, rises the main staircase, designed as one of the principal features of the building. It has two distinct flights of steps of a fine width, and is lighted by lofty traceried windows, giving a view of some inner elevations which will always be seen with pleasure. A shafted arcading supports the stone balustrade, and within the staircase is inclosed an elaborately-moulded spiral flight of steps, appropriately leading to a ladies' cloak-room; for the grand staircase leads to apartments on the first floor which will be used for receiving company and giving entertainments. On this, the main floor, as on the others, there is a wide continuous corridor round the building, groined overhead, and more than 750 ft. long. On the outer side of the corridors are the well-lighted business rooms of the departments under municipal control. On the inner side numerous oriel afford recesses for seats, and greatly enhance the appearance both of the corridors themselves and of the courtyards which they overlook. The flooring of the principal corridors is fine mosaic, on which many Italians have been engaged. On the first floor are not only the Mayor's state apartments, the reception-rooms, and the council chamber, but also a public hall, 100 ft. by 50 ft. It is not intended for the very largest public meetings; these are held in the neighbouring Free-Trade Hall. It is, however, as shown in our Illustration, a very stately assembly-room, roofed with oak, lighted at both sides, having also at one end a great mullioned window with geometrical tracery, and at the other an apsidal termination, in which an organ is placed. Besides the main staircase, there are others on the different sides of the building, giving access to every floor. They are circular, somewhat after the plan of the staircase built by Francis I. in the courtyard of his château at Blois; polished shafts of granite support their inner circle, and they are lighted from the inner courtyards by moulded and traceried windows. What is considered the gem of the courtyard architecture is a covered bridge, connecting the public hall with one of the corridors. This superb arch challenges comparison with the Venetian Bridge of Sighs, and is one of the attractions of the view from the windows of the main staircase.

The great chime clock and carillons, which have been manufactured by Messrs. Gillett and Bland, steam clock factory, Croydon, are not yet fixed in the tower, in consequence of the delay in hanging the bells. This clock and carillons combined will be the largest work of the kind in the world, and the following is a description of them:—The clock is constructed to strike the hours upon the great bell of seven tons in the key of G, and to chime the four quarters on ten bells, the time to be shown upon the four illuminated dials, each 16 ft. in diameter. The main frame is on the horizontal plan, of solid cast iron, 12 ft. long, 4 ft. 6 in. wide, and 4 ft. 2 in. high, and weighs 1½ ton. All the wheels are of gun metal, turned, cut, and polished in an engine. The main wheels of the striking and quarters are 2 ft. 6 in. diameter, and the main wheel of the going part is 2 ft. in diameter; all the rest of the wheels in due proportion. The bosses for the pivots to run in are of gun metal screwed into the frames. There are engraved and silvered dials on the clock, showing hours, minutes, and seconds, for the purpose of regulating the outer hands, and for taking observations. The pendulum is a compensated one, made of zinc and iron tubes, to beat two seconds of time, with a cast-iron cylindrical bob of about 6 cwt., to be suspended from a cast iron bracket fixed on a stone corbel built into the wall. The barrels are made of cast iron, turned and grooved, from which will be suspended the weights, by patent steel lines, weighing over 2½ tons, which will drive the clock. The striking cams and levers are all hard steel faced. The escapement, which is a very ingenious piece of mechanism, is the "double three-legged gravity," which is found infinitely superior to all other kinds for perfect time-keeping. There is an automatic gas apparatus fitted to the clock, for turning the gas up and down. It is so contrived as to suit all seasons of the year, providing for long and short days, according to the calendar, so that no attendance will be required to turn the gas on and off, this effecting a considerable saving in time and gas. Messrs. Gillett and Bland were the inventors of this apparatus, which they first applied to the Bradford Townhall clock.

The chime part of the clock is constructed on a new principle, so that the changes for the quarters can be altered at any time. Provision will be made for connecting the clock with the electric current for registering Greenwich mean time. The hour-bell, in the key of G, will be the largest struck upon by any clock in the United Kingdom, except the one at Westminster Palace. The bell at Westminster was originally struck by a hammer of 8 cwt. until the bell was cracked, but since then the hammer has been reduced to 4 cwt. The hammer which will strike the Manchester Townhall bell is heavier than that, and the quarter-bells are also much heavier than those at Westminster. The hours and quarters will be heard at a much greater distance. The other two great bells in this country, at Oxford and York, are struck by hand, and not by the clock.

The Carillon Machine is constructed on Gillett and Bland's further improved patented system, of which they were the patentees and original introducers. It will play thirty-one tunes on twenty-one bells, weighing altogether about thirty-two tons, which is double the weight of those at Worcester Cathedral and Bradford Townhall. These bells will have a range of twenty-one notes, extending from G, on the lowest line in the bass clef, to F sharp, on the lowest space in the treble clef. They will admit of tunes being played in five different keys—C, G, D, A, and E. It will be seen from the following notes of the bells, F sharp, F, E, D sharp, D, C sharp, C, B, A, G sharp, G, F sharp, F, E, D sharp, D, C sharp, and C, B, A, G, that a greater variety and a better selection of melodies will be played here than on any other bells in this country. A fresh tune will be played for every day in the month, the change of tune taking place at midnight, by a self-acting shifting apparatus, and the order in which they will be played to be altered monthly. There will also be a barrel pricked with full changes, to be rung on eight, ten, or twelve bells, similar to ringing a peal, which can be used at any time. The machine will be fitted with an ivory keyboard, like that of a piano-forte; so that any musician will be able to play tunes upon the bells, with the fingers, with as much ease as in playing the piano or organ. Each tune will be played two or three times over, day and night, at six, nine, twelve, and three o'clock. The machine is so constructed that any of the thirty-one tunes can be played at any time. It is fitted with an apparatus by which the tunes can be stopped or let off at any moment. It is due to Messrs. Gillett and Bland to state that every part of this great work—the clock, bells, and carillon machinery, even to the casting of all the metals—has been carried out at their own factory.

We give an Illustration of the service of plate made by Messrs. Elkington and Co., and presented to the Corporation of Manchester for use in the new Townhall, as the result of a subscription initiated and chiefly collected by Mr. Alderman Curtis, during his second mayoralty of last year. The service is in solid silver, parcel gilt. Its total weight is upwards of 10,000 ounces, and its value £7000. It consists of seventy-four pieces—namely, one plateau, 15 ft. long by 2 ft. 7 in. wide, divided into three compartments, the centre and the end pieces being so arranged as to be capable of separate use; two candelabra, 3 ft. 4 in. high, and each bearing thirteen lights; ten candelabra, about 2 ft. 10 in. high, and each bearing nine lights; three centrepieces, oval in shape, fitted with dishes of ruby glass, to contain flowers; ten fruit-stands, 12 in. high, fitted with dishes of ruby glass; twenty-four compotiers, fitted with ruby glass dishes; and twenty-four ice-dishes. Added to the service are two loving cups, specially presented by the overseers. These are 18 in. high by 9½ in. diameter of bowl, and each has three handles.

The service was designed by M. Williams, with the approval of Mr. Waterhouse, architect of the Townhall, to whom the drawings were submitted. The design is Gothic, of the Early English period, with a free use of ornament based upon Byzantine examples—the intention being that the service should harmonise with the style of the building in which it is to be used.

When the service is arranged the plateau, with the objects placed upon it, will constitute the principal feature. This is intended for the decoration of the Mayor's or high table; the rest of the service being intended for use upon the side tables. The plateau is formed, in the upper part, of a bold and enriched moulding, beneath which are arranged a series of diagonal labels, bearing the names of the past and present Mayors of Manchester, with spaces left for the insertion of the names of the future Mayors. Between these labels are arranged designs of the cotton plant, in leaf, flower, and seed, emblematic of the chief industry of the city. At equal distances are affixed small gilt shields bearing the arms of London, Edinburgh, and Dublin, as the capitals of the three kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland; the cities of York and Glasgow; the borough of Belfast, and the chief towns of the county of Lancaster—namely, Salford, Lancaster, Bolton, Blackburn, Burnley, Rochdale, Ashton-under-Lyne, Liverpool, Preston, Bury, Oldham, Warrington, Wigan, and Stalybridge. At regular intervals the plateau is divided by projecting moulded tablets or panels, five on each side. The lower parts of these panels constitute the feet on which it stands. The upper parts bear large shields with coats of arms blazoned in their proper colours. The centre panel is assigned to the arms of the city of Manchester. On the left hand are the arms of Mr. Alderman Curtis and those of the county of Lancaster. On the right hand are the Royal arms and those of the bishopric of Manchester. These shields, and the smaller ones bearing the arms of cities and towns, are repeated on each side.

When placed on the high table, the principal service plate will be arranged in the following manner:—In the centre, the oval corbelle or centrepiece, filled with flowers; next to this, on each side a compotier; then, on each side a fruit-stand; next, another compotier; and at each of the semicircular ends a candelabrum of thirteen lights. Outside the plateau will be arranged fruit-stands and ice-bowls. With the exception of the candelabra, the pieces composing the service have been kept to a moderate height, in order that the view from the tables may be uninterrupted.

FUNERAL OF M. THIERS.

A Portrait and Memoir of this illustrious French statesman and historian, who died on Monday week at St. Germain-en-Laye, appeared in our last publication. We now give some Illustrations of the Funeral, which took place on Sunday in Paris, attended by a vast concourse of people, and by many persons of eminence in French political and literary circles. Another Illustration, copied from a recent photograph taken at St. Germain, represents M. Thiers in the courtyard of the hotel where he lodged, about to go out for his daily walk, as he was frequently seen by ordinary residents and visitors there. The private house belonging to him in the Place St. Georges, Rue Notre Dame de Lorette, not far from the Madeleine, was his usual residence at Paris. It will be remembered that the house originally belonging to M. Thiers on this site was purposely destroyed by the Commune in 1871, as a token of their detestation of his policy or conduct in the administration of French affairs; and that a new mansion was afterwards built at the public cost, and presented to M. Thiers, by order of the National Constituent Assembly at Versailles. Here dwelt the octogenarian statesman, the accomplished debater, talker, and writer, living in a simple domestic manner, with his wife and her sister, Mlle. Dornier, but frequently receiving the social assemblage of his numerous friends and adherents. This house in the Place St. Georges, to which the body of M. Thiers was removed from St. Germain, is shown in one of our Illustrations. Here lay the coffin, placed in the saloon on the ground floor, which had been transformed into a "chapelle ardente" by velvet hangings and gilt candelabra; but only a few persons were admitted to view the body lying in state.

It had been announced, as we stated last week, that, by order of President MacMahon and his Government, there would be a State Funeral at the Hospital of the Invalides, where the body of Napoleon I. was laid when brought from St. Helena. But the family and personal friends of M. Thiers, pleading his own express desire, chose to have the funeral conducted in the ordinary manner, at private cost. They would have consented to let the religious service be performed at the church of the Madeleine, for the more ample accommodation of a very large number of spectators; but this was refused by the Archbishop of Paris, M. Guibert, so that it was in the small parish church of Notre Dame de Lorette that the solemn ceremony took place, before conveying the body to the cemetery of Père-la-Chaise. As a precaution against disturbance of the peace, troops were kept ready in several of the Paris barracks, and the Ministry sat at the Elysée Palace on Sunday morning, receiving frequent telegraphic reports of the state of the city; but, happily, there was not the slightest disorder throughout the day.

At half-past ten o'clock, the gates of M. Thiers' mansion in the Place St. Georges were opened to the persons invited and provided with cards. The sergents-de-ville, posted in the Rue Lafayette, instructed pedestrians and vehicles as to the route they must take according to the cards they exhibited. About this time the hearse appeared before the gate of the hotel. It was a magnificent car, with silver stars glittering on its black cloth, with its massive wheels, its four allegorical figures at the corners, and its six jet-black horses. But what especially distinguished this car from ordinary hearses was the profusion of flowers, wreaths, and bouquets under which it literally disappeared, for every flower and every bouquet was a mark of reverence from a part of France. Around this car, and held at a distance by the sergents-de-ville, the crowd began to draw closer, scarcely leaving to the people specially invited the space necessary to reach the house. The Place St. Georges and its neighbourhood gave an idea at this moment of the spectacle presently to be displayed on the Boulevards. Compact groups of figures filled every window and balcony, and on the roofs, where the force of the wind and rain made it impossible to hold an umbrella, men and women braved the weather to watch the preparations. At half-past eleven the court-yard, the gardens, and the drawing-rooms of the house contained as many as they could hold of those who were to follow the cortege. At this moment, two by two, eight porters, each carrying on his shoulder a black staff edged with silver, bearing wreaths of flowers and immortelles, for which there had not been room on the car, ranged themselves on each side of it. Four other porters, each carrying a cushion bearing M. Thiers' decorations, placed themselves behind the car; then came the servants and the family. The funeral procession was about to commence. Prince Orloff, the Russian Ambassador, his head uncovered, was standing in the rain, and only replaced his hat when the coffin was laid on the car. No other chief of the diplomatic missions being at this moment in Paris, the Chargés-d'Affaires, or First Secretaries of the Embassies and Legations, ranged themselves behind Prince Orloff, who wore the grand chain of the Legion of Honour. The members of the family and the persons invited by them, as also the members of the Institute, followed, and the funeral car advanced towards the little church of Notre Dame de Lorette. The Senators, ex-Deputies, and different deputations walked behind it; the deputation from St. Germain, where M. Thiers died, was allowed to precede the cortege, carrying the enormous tricolour flag of that town. Among the deputation was one from the town of Belfort, in Alsace, which M. Thiers succeeded in preserving to France when all the rest of that province was given to Germany. A squadron of cavalry led off the procession, a funeral band followed, and soldiers, their muskets lowered, lined the cortege on each side. The number of tickets issued had been limited, on account of the narrow dimensions of the church, and those who waited outside till the end of the service were ten times as many as those able to gain admission. The church, though small, is of harmonious proportions, and was admirably decorated. Its walls and pillars were veiled by black drapery spotted with silver. Escutcheons bearing the letter "T" appeared at intervals; an imposing catafalque, the summit of which rested on four columns with silver capitals, rose from a dais to the roof, its four immense draperies forming a cross, and joining the four corners of the nave. Four statues, life-size, leaned on the columns, and hundreds of wax lights threw a soft light on the whole congregation. Those who had followed the car entered in the order assigned them, Khalil Pasha joining the members of the Diplomatic Corps present. The whole Left of the Senate and the late Chamber had mustered—Victor Hugo, M. Waddington, the Comte de St. Vallier; all shades of Republicans were there. General de Cissey, who does not belong to the Left, and M. Pouyer-Quertier, who is its opponent, had not forgotten that they were among the Ministers of the deceased, and figured among those present. But, with these exceptions, the Right of the Senate and the Chamber, the Cabinet, and all connected with the Government were absent.

The religious service in the church of Notre Dame de Lorette was ended at one o'clock, and the procession then set out for the cemetery of Père-la-Chaise. Its route was through the Rue Lepelletier, the Boulevard des Italiens, the Boulevard Montmartre, the Boulevard Poissonnière, the Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, the Boulevard St. Denis, the Boulevard St. Martin, the Place du Château d'Eau, the Boulevard Voltaire, and the Rue de la Roquette—that is to say, along the entire north side of central Paris, from the west to the east end. The morning had been rainy and windy, but the rain had ceased at this time, and there was an immense crowd of people all the way, mostly animated by feelings of respect for their illustrious deceased countryman, though with great differences of opinion and sentiment concerning the merits of his public actions, and the principles he advocated. At the end of the Rue de la Roquette a cry of "Vive la République" was raised. The hearse entered the cemetery, and passed a short distance up the main avenue, where the coffin was taken from it, and was borne along a side walk, followed on foot by the family and friends, to a small edifice, in the form of a chapel, which is the private vault of the "Famille Dosne-Thiers," that is to say, of the united families of M. Thiers and his wife. There is an inscription on the front to this effect. All the floral crowns and bouquets were here deposited by their bearers. The priest here recited the concluding prayers of the service for the dead; after which five speakers addressed the mourners and visitors, as is customary in France, with some observations upon the character of the deceased.

The first speaker was M. Grévy, who is designated by M. Gambetta at a Republican candidate for the Presidency, instead of M. Thiers. He referred to the long connection of M. Thiers with the school of Constitutional Monarchy, but remarked that M. Thiers had subsequently become convinced that the purely Democratic condition of society in France could not endure a Monarchical Government. To him it was, therefore, chiefly due that the Republic had gained the adhesion of France, and the approval of Europe, as the only Government adapted to French social interests. "Let them all resolve now to prove that it would be maintained as a truly Conservative Government for their country and time, a Government of order, peace, and liberty."

The next and longest address was delivered by M. Jules Simon, who dwelt upon the conduct of the French Government by M. Thiers at one period of the reign of King Louis Philippe; and with reference to this M. Jules Simon said:—"Never was a Minister more useful or less of a courtier. He had two maxims, which are as follow:—1. The King reigns, and does not govern. 2. In case of conflict, the last word should rest with the country, represented by the majority of the Chamber. He contended for these two maxims—that is, for liberty against personal power—as a journalist under the Restoration, as a Minister under the July Monarchy, and as a deputy under the Second Empire. Returned from exile, sent by the people of Paris to the Corps Législatif, he entered it only to claim the necessary liberties. Personal power then set itself to demonstrate by a war, the most insensate, the most deplorably conducted, the most disastrous in its effects, how blind are the peoples who abandon to a master their interests, honour, and even national existence." After alluding to M. Thiers' appeal to Europe for support, were it only a moral support, for a great country whose existence was necessary to the peace and welfare of Europe, to his consummate ability and courage in the painful task of concluding peace, and to his indefatigable labours as President, presiding daily over the Cabinet, attending important sittings of the Chamber, and even of Committees, M. Jules Simon went on to say:—

"Yet M. Thiers fell on May 24, 1873. It is no secret that the Conservatives abandoned him—him, a Conservative like them, and perhaps more so than many of them—because, after experience and mature reflection, he had distinctly pronounced for the Republic. He might have remained in power by virtue of the law. He might even the year before, had he liked, been declared President for life. Not only did he refuse any prolongation, but when, on May 24, he saw a narrow majority against him, he retired. He obeyed his own maxim, that the majority of the Parliament should have the last word. His friends vainly remonstrated that the Chamber on that occasion was not in accord with the country. There existed between the Legislative and Executive powers an antagonism fatal to the national interests. M. Thiers, faithful to his doctrine and practice, and, as always, putting France above everything, did not hesitate to return to private life. Then commenced an unexampled demonstration. To discover one like it one must go back to the history of Washington. Paris came first, then all the towns in France, then the colonies, and the Frenchmen scattered over both worlds. His house became the meeting-place of the statesmen of Europe. People abroad asked in critical circumstances, 'What does M. Thiers think?' Even descended from power, he remained a luminary for all and a protection for France. Lastly, what was consoling and fortifying from May 24, 1873, to Sept. 3, 1877, was the spectacle of the confidence and gratitude of the people. M. Thiers, who courted nobody, had never flattered them. He had even applied severe words to them; but the people saw in him only the Liberator of the Territory and the Founder of the Republic. They have followed him hitherto, grateful for the past, trustful in the future, resolved to put in practice the advice he gave, as in saying, 'The victory is to the wisest.' Farewell, in the name of the country, to the champion of liberty, to the Liberator of the Territory, to the First President of the French Republic."

Among the other speakers were Admiral Pothuau, ex-Minister of Marine, who dwelt on M. Thiers' efforts for the reorganization of the Army, and remarked that his Presidency over the long and sometimes stormy sittings of the Committee on Military Service last spring, produced in him the first signs of physical fatigue; M. de Sacy, who, on behalf of the Academy, eulogised his conversational powers and private virtues; and M. Vuitry, who represented the Academy of Moral Sciences.

On leaving Père-la-Chaise, Victor Hugo was loudly cheered, the people pressing round the cab so as to impede his departure for a minute or two. M. Gambetta left unobserved by a side gate.

MUSIC.

THE TRIENNIAL GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Our last week's report of this celebration necessarily left some of the performances unnoticed.

On the Thursday morning Brahms's "Requiem" and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" were given in the cathedral, the former having been preceded by Mr. Arthur Sullivan's overture "In Memoriam," and a well-written "Kyrie Eleison" (for solo voices and chorus), by Mr. B. Luard-Selby, and followed by Gounod's air "There is a green Hill" (finely sung by Madame Patey), and the late Dr. Wesley's anthem "The Wilderness."

Of Brahms's "Requiem" we have already spoken in reference to its first public performance in England by the Philharmonic Society in 1873. The work derived additional impressiveness at Gloucester from the solemnity of the building in which it was performed. The effect of several portions was very striking, especially the fine chorus, "Behold, all flesh is as the grass." There is but little solo music in the work, of which this is the least effective portion. These incidental passages were rendered by Madame Sophie Löwe and Mr. Santley.

Dr. Wesley's anthem is a favourable specimen of his high powers as a Church composer; the chorus "And the ransom of the Lord" being a very masterly piece of writing. The solo portions were sung by Miss Adela Vernon, Miss Griffiths, Mesdames Patey and Sophie Löwe, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Cummings, and Mr. Santley.

Mendelssohn's great work formed the close of Thursday morning's performances. The three symphonic movements which precede the cantata were finely played by the orchestra, and the choral and solo music was very satisfactorily rendered, the latter by Madame Sophie Löwe, Miss Adela Vernon, and Mr. E. Lloyd.

On the Friday (yesterday week) the Festival closed with "The Messiah," the usual climax at the three-choir festivals. As on the other mornings, the performance took place in the cathedral, the sublimity of the music deriving special significance from the locality. The chorus singing was—as it had generally been throughout the week—excellent. A great feature in the solo music was Mlle. Albani's fine delivery of the airs "Rejoice greatly," "Come unto Him," and "I know that my Redeemer liveth." The other solo music was rendered by Madame Sophie Löwe, Miss Bertha Griffiths, Madame Patey, Mr. Cummings, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Santley, and Mr. Maybrick. The trumpet obbligato, finely played by Mr. Thomas Harper, was a prominent feature in Mr. Santley's air, "The trumpet shall sound."

The first part of Thursday evening's miscellaneous concert was devoted to a performance of Gade's cantata "The Crusaders," of which we spoke fully in reference to its first hearing in England, at the Birmingham Festival of last year. The solos at Gloucester were sung by Madame Sophie Löwe, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Mr. Santley. The second portion of the concert opened with a cleverly written overture, composed specially for the festival by Mr. C. V. Stanford, who conducted it. The work was greatly applauded. The remainder of the concert consisted of a miscellaneous selection, which included Mlle. Albani's brilliant singing in the scene from "Lucia di Lammermoor" (the flute obbligato skilfully played by Mr. Radcliffe), the prayer from "Tannhäuser," and the ballad "Robin Adair." The prima donna was enthusiastically applauded in each piece, and encored in the last, for which she substituted "The Last Rose of Summer." Other vocal solos were effectively given by Miss B. Griffiths, Madame Patey, Mr. Cummings, Mr. Santley, and Mr. Maybrick; Miss Agnes Zimmermann gave an excellent rendering of Weber's concert-stück for pianoforte (with orchestra) and the concert closed with the same composer's "Jubilee Overture," admirably played by the band.

As the festival was inaugurated by a special service in the cathedral, so it was supplemented by a similar solemnity on the Friday evening, with the addition of the co-operation of an orchestra. The musical portion of the service included Purcell's anthem "O sing unto the Lord," the solo portions by Mr. E. Lloyd and Mr. Santley, and the "Hallelujah" chorus.

The festival performances—with the exception of the two overtures directed by the composers thereof—were very ably conducted by Mr. Charles Harford Lloyd; Mr. Done (of Worcester) presided at the organ in the oratorio performances, and Mr. S. G. Hayward at the cathedral services, this gentleman and Mr. C. H. Lloyd having occasionally officiated as pianoforte accompanists.

The festival has been a great success, both musically and financially. Nearly £1800 has been realised by collections and donations.

THE LEEDS TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

This great music meeting will open on Wednesday next at the Townhall.

The arrangements for the festival are on a very grand scale, the band and chorus consisting of about 400 performers. The principal singers are:—Mlle. Albani, Madame Sinico, Madame Edith Wynne, Mrs. Osgood, Madame Patey, Mlle. Redeker, Mrs. Mudie-Bolingbroke, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. W. Shakspeare, Mr. Santley, Mr. Cecil Tovey, and Signor Foli. M. Sainton is principal first violin, Mr. J. T. Willy principal second, Mr. Doyle principal viola, and Mr. White principal double-bass. M. Brossa is first flute, M. Dubrucq first oboe, Mr. Lazarus first clarinet, and Mr. Wotton first bassoon. Four horns are headed by Mr. Mann, and two trumpets by Mr. T. Harper; cornets, trombones, ophicleide, harp, drums, cymbals, &c., completing a band of unusual strength. The chorus consists of nearly 300 voices, making, altogether, as already said, a force of about 400 executants, with Sir Michael Costa as conductor.

A long list of vice-presidents is headed by the name of Earl Fitzwilliam as president, and a large number of guarantors, including the Mayor of Leeds (Alderman Galls-worthy), and the High Sheriff of Yorkshire (Viscount Pollington) give ample assurance of safety to the undertaking. There seems to be no doubt of a highly satisfactory financial result to the festival, and of great consequent benefit to the Leeds medical charities, in behalf of which the festival is given.

The opening performance on Wednesday morning will consist of "Elijah," which oratorio has for many years past been chosen for similar occasions. On Wednesday evening "The Fire King," a dramatic cantata, composed by Mr. Walter Austin, will be performed for the first time, followed by a miscellaneous selection. Thursday morning will be devoted to secular compositions; the programme including Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night" music; and, on Thursday evening, Handel's "Solomon" will be given, with Sir Michael Costa's additional accompaniments. Friday morning will bring forward the speciality of the festival, the new oratorio, "Joseph," composed expressly for the occasion by Professor G. A. Macfarren; on Friday evening a miscellaneous selection of orchestral and vocal music will be given; and on Saturday morning the festival will conclude with performances of Bach's "Magnificat" in D, Mozart's "Requiem," and Beethoven's "Mount of Olives."

Performances of operas in English are still being given at the Crystal Palace, under the direction of Mr. Henry Corri, and with Mr. Isidore de Solla as conductor. "Norma" was the opera on Tuesday, with Madame Ida Gillies-Corri as the heroine. For Thursday Mozart's "Impresario" was announced.

The Covent Garden Promenade Concerts continue to prove attractive. M. Henri Ketten has recently appeared there, and his brilliant pianoforte playing is one of the prominent features of the programme. Mlle. Pommereul's refined violin-playing is still meeting with nightly success. Wednesday was a Handel and Haydn night.

Madame Liebhart's concerts continue to draw large numbers to the Agricultural Hall, Islington. The Lord Mayor has accepted the offer of Madame Liebhart to set aside the proceeds of one night's performance in aid of the Indian Famine Fund, and his Lordship will be present.

The statement that Madame Adelina Patti had retired to a convent has been contradicted. The prima donna is said to have signed a fresh contract with Mr. Maurice Strakosch to sing in sixty representations of opera in Europe before the end of next March. She will make five appearances only in England before the next opera season, these being at concerts in the provinces given by Mr. W. Pyatt, of Nottingham. The first is at Manchester on Oct. 12, and Liverpool follows on the 17th. According to the Observer, Madame Patti will resume her position at the Royal Italian Opera next season.

THEATRES.

PRINCESS'S.

The art of composing melodrama, we suspect, is a distinct department for the exercise of dramatic skill; it is seldom that one man succeeds in it and likewise in regular play-writing equally well. Nothing can be more delightful than Mr. H. J. Byron's comedies and vaudevilles; their popularity is unbounded, and one has been running for more than 800 consecutive nights, and is still running. Besides these, however, Mr. Byron has attempted a melodrama or two, and been comparatively unsuccessful. We fear that the work produced on Monday, called "Guinea Gold," belongs to this unfortunate category. Whatever may be the reason, the tone of the dialogue is unsatisfactory, and the story not very intelligible. The structure of the drama is exceedingly defective, and the subject as little attractive as need be, while expedients are admitted for the sake of effect which are common stage-property, and familiar inventions. The hero, sustained with great care by Mr. William Rignold, has committed robbery and attempted murder, and afterwards assumes the character of the person whom he supposed he had slain, and passes himself off for the brother of one John Rawlinson (Mr. Charles Warner), who is about to be wedded to an orphan, named Guinea Gold (Miss Lydia Foote). The scenes are occupied with the trouble and dangers of these two young people, consequent upon the wicked designs of this criminal at large. Associated with the action are Joe Larch (Mr. W. H. Stephens), a forger of bank-notes, and Mr. Tweezer, a detective (Mr. Harry Jackson, who has also acted as stage-director on the occasion). Both characters were elaborately sustained; but the latter gentleman fell under the displeasure of the audience, who seemed to hold him responsible for the occasional failures or shortcomings of the general performance. One prominent character, Bob Lamb, a servant boy, played by Miss Fanny Leslie, was adequately appreciated. Some of the effects are purely scenic. One that occurred at the end of the second act represented an overflow of the river at an old house in Rotherhithe; and another of an escape by the window of Guinea Gold, pursued by the villain Richard, showing both the interior and exterior of the building, Holly Lodge, Highgate. This address happens, curiously enough, to be that of an illustrious lady—an error evidently due to some misapprehension or accidental suggestion. The last scene exhibits the Vale of Health, Hampstead. All these pictorial efforts reflect great credit on Mr. Julian Hicks, the highly respectable artist by whom the scenery has been painted.

The annual benefit of Mr. Edgar Mowbray, one of the managers of the Mohawk Minstrels, took place at the Agricultural Hall on Wednesday. The programme comprised some fine old English ballads.

At the conclusion of a farewell tour, now in progress, Mrs. Howard Paul intends to devote herself entirely to the stage, from which she has been so long absent.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE M. THIERS: THE PROCESSION

ON THE BOULEVARD NEAR THE CHATEAU D'EAU.

THE COUNTRY AROUND PLEVNA.

Our Map of the country about Plevna shows the Turkish fortifications surrounding that town, as well as the positions occupied by the Russian and Roumanian troops early in the morning of yesterday week. The former, as well as some of the Russian batteries, are taken from a plan forwarded by Herr Schöenberg, our Special Artist, now with the Roumanian forces. The Russian positions are laid down as described by the special correspondent of the Daily News; and those held by the Roumanians, which are only approximate, are from various authorities. The allied forces in front of Plevna this week consisted of the 4th Russian Army Corps (Sixteenth and Thirtieth Divisions of Infantry and Fourth Division of Cavalry), commanded by General Krylof; the 9th Russian Army Corps (Fifth and Thirty-first Divisions of Infantry and Ninth Division of Cavalry), commanded by Baron Krüdener; also three brigades of infantry, made up of regiments and battalions belonging to various divisions, commanded by Prince Imeritinsky; and at least three Roumanian divisions. The total strength may be estimated at 91,000 bayonets and 13,000 sabres. The number of guns is stated at 250. The recent battle of Plevna began on Friday week at six in the morning, when the Russians opened fire from their heavy siege batteries in front of Zgalintze and Pelishat, as well as from the advanced batteries which they had thrown up in the course of the preceding night close to the Turkish intrenchments.

The Russian Golos of the 25th ult. contains an account of the neighbourhood of Plevna, Lovcha, and Trojana, of part of which the following is a translation:—

"The attention of the world is now turned to the tract of country lying between the Bulgarian rivers, the Osma and the Vid. There, according to general expectation, must be fought a decisive engagement.

"The tract of country lying between the rivers Osma and Vid is a plateau in the form of an irregular oblong. Its length from the Danube to the Kodji Balkans is 150 versts. It is bounded on the west by the river Vid, on the east by the Osma, on the north by the Danube, on the south by the Kodji Balkans. The river Vid takes its rise in the Kodji Balkans. From it flow two principal streams, the Black and the White Vid. At the distance of fifteen versts from their source the Black and White Vid mingle and form the river known as the Vid. The main course of the Vid is from south to north; and this river, though it winds considerably, is not so erratic as either the Jantra or the Osma. The Vid flows for a distance of 150 versts, and receives the waters of many minor streams, especially on the side of the right bank. This river and its tributaries flow through deep passes midst high and rugged hills.

Verbitsa Bookova; on the left, Radenitsa, Sooleimandere, Poradim, Egalevitsa (Sgalooits), and Radisovo. Passing through Plevna and over the river Vid, this road then turns to the south-west in the direction of the town of Orkhania and connects Plevna with Sophia. This road is now patrolled by our cavalry detachments, and the retreat of Osman Pasha is cut off by them; they also intercept the transport of provisions from Sophia to Plevna. From Plevna a road turns to the south-east of Lovatz (Lovcha). This is considered one of the best roads. It goes along the high land between the small streams of Tuchenitsa and Chernochka. From the high road between Bulgareni and Plevna three cross-roads lead to Lovcha from the north—one from Poradim through Vladin and Slatina; another from Radenitsa; the third from Bulgareni along the left bank of the Osma. From Lovcha three roads lead to the Vid besides that which connects Lovcha with Plevna. To the south the road from Tetevena to the town of Trojana passes across the plateau above described. This road traverses wild but magnificent scenery, and is the principal communication used by the inhabitants of the Balkans."

SALARIES AND PENSIONS.

The Government has issued, under the title of "Finance Accounts of the United Kingdom," a return of all the receipts and expenditure of the United Kingdom in respect of individuals.

The most interesting portion of this bluebook will be found in its statements as to the salaries now enjoyed by the officers of the Crown, civil and legal, and the pensions to which they are entitled in respect of past services of themselves, or in some cases of their ancestors. For instance, in pages 47-64 will be found a full list of the salaries enjoyed by the Judges of the land and by the rest of our legal staff, from the Lord Chancellor, who enjoys his £10,000 a year, down to a gentleman who figures as "Patent Messenger for South Wales," with his modest annuity of £13 18s. 4d.

Again, on page 38, the annual allowance to each of the members of the Royal family will be found. Her Majesty (including, of course, her civil list, the salaries and expenses of the Royal household, the Royal Bounty and Special Service Fund, &c.) received in the year, March, 1876-March, 1877, the sum of £406,709 19s. 9d.; the Prince of Wales, £40,000; the Duke of Edinburgh, £25,000; the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold, each £15,000; the Princess of Wales, £10,000; the Duke of Cambridge, £12,000; the Crown Princess of Prussia, £8000; Princess Alice, Princess Helena, Princess Louise, and the Duchess of Cambridge, each £6000; Princess Mary of Teck, £5000; Princess Augusta, Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, £3000.

Turning to the diplomatic pensions, on page 42, we find that Lord Stratford de Redcliffe enjoys an allowance of £1788; Lord Cowley and Lord Napier, each £1700; Sir George Hamilton Seymour and Sir James Hudson, each £1300; while eight or ten other gentlemen are rewarded at about half that figure. The chief pensioners for their own services are the following:—Lord Chancellors, each at £5000—Lord Chelmsford, Lord Hatherley, and Lord Selborne; Sir William Erle, £3750; and Sir Samuel Martin, Sir John Byles, Sir Henry Keating, Lord Penzance, and Sir Richard Kindersley, each figure at £3500. Lord Eversley, as ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, is down for a pension of £4000; while three ex-Cabinet Ministers—Sir George Grey, Mr. Spencer Walpole, and Mr. Thomas Milner Gibson—have each £2000.

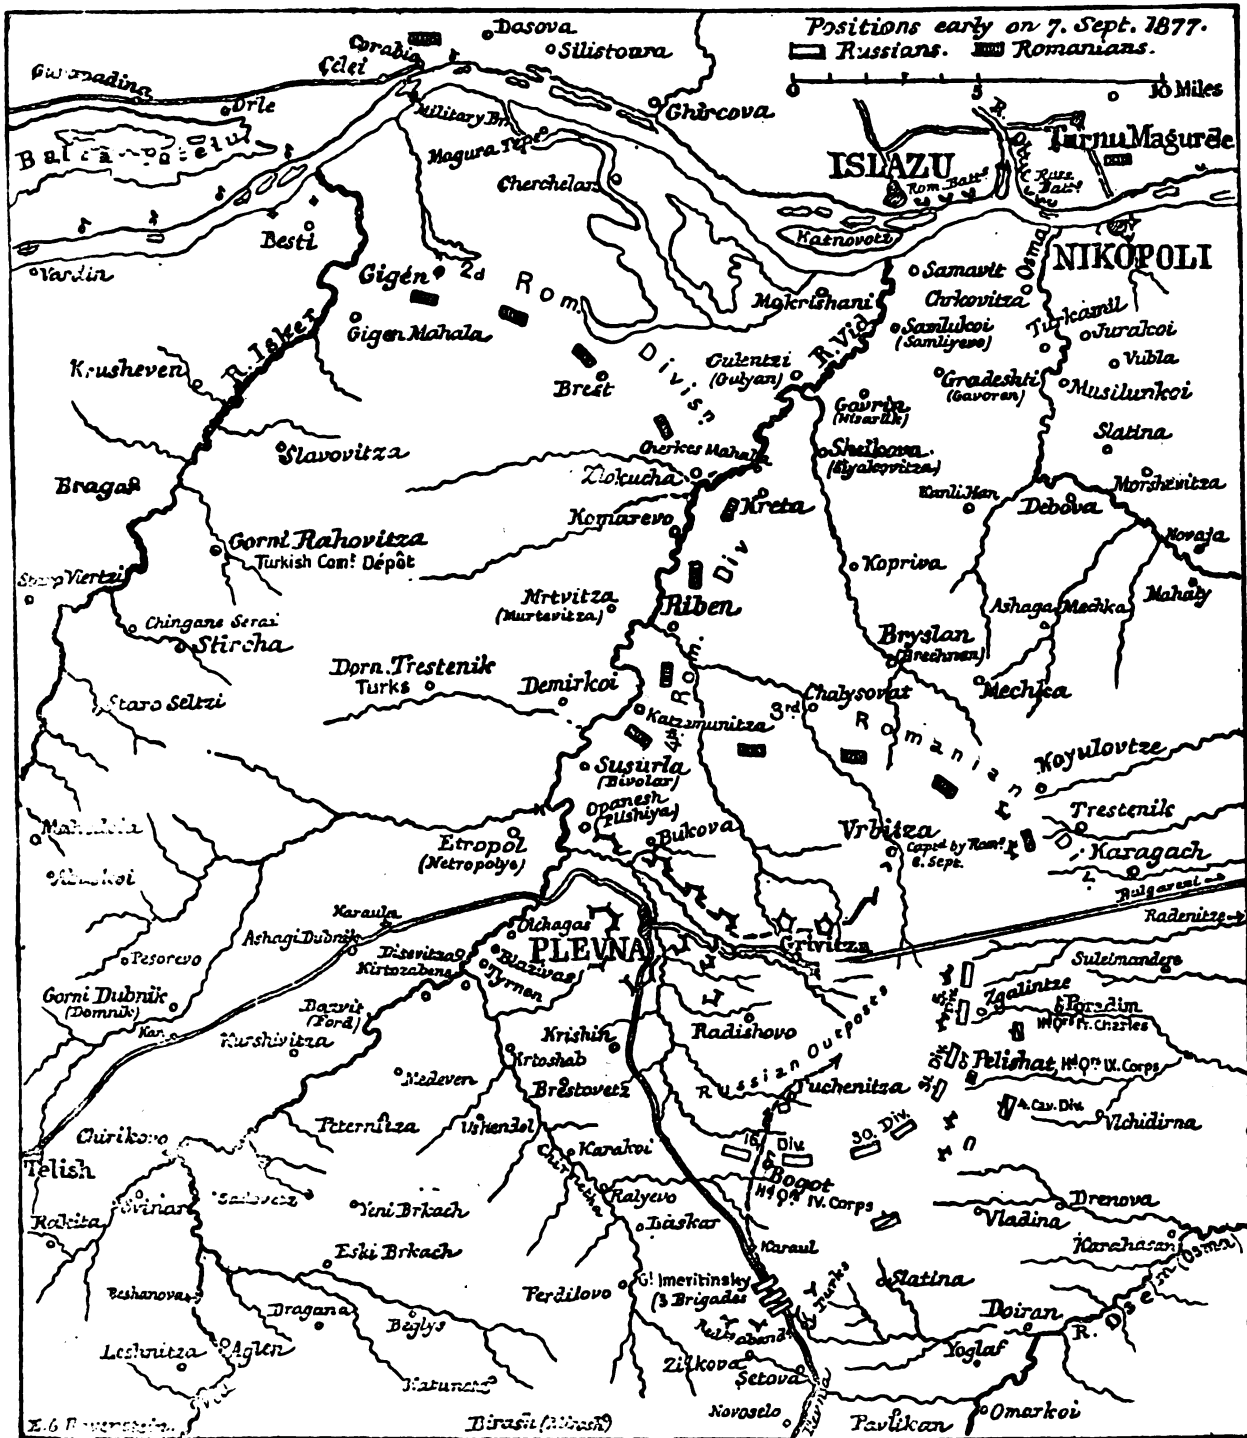

But perhaps the most curious portion of the bluebook is page 39, which gives us a list of the hereditary pensions—that is, of pensions enjoyed now by individuals on account of their fathers' or their ancestors' naval and military services. The Duke of Marlborough has £1000 a year on account of the services of the victor of Blenheim, while a like sum is secured to present and next Dukes of Wellington, but to no other duke, on account of Waterloo. In like manner, to the title of Lord Rodney there is affixed a pension of either £1000 or £2000, for this book does not make it quite clear which, in perpetuity; while the present Viscount St. Vincent, the third holder of that title, enjoys a pension of £3000, which, however, dies with him. It appears that the nation in 1806-7 annexed in perpetuity a pension of £3500 to every Earl Nelson to the end of time; while the present Lord Combermere and his son alone will receive the £2000 pension with which his coronet is endowed. Every Lord Exmouth, as long as the title shall last, will draw £2000 from the nation; but Lords Seaton, Napier of Magdala, Keane, Hardinge, Gough, and Raglan, and their next immediate successors in their respective titles, and no descendants in a further degree, will enjoy the same amount respectively. The pensions, each of £1000, enjoyed by Sir W. Fenwick Williams, Sir Henry M. Havelock and Lady Havelock, and by the widows of Lords Elgin and Mayo, Governors-General of India, are for life only.

The Right Hon. William Beresford, late Secretary at War, draws a salary of £83 a year as "Keeper of the Tennis Court" at Hampton Court Palace; and the following names still stand as the receivers, as pensioners, "for loss of post fines":—Sir Thomas Colebrook, £60 15s.; the Marquis of Salisbury, £1 10s.; Sir Edward Halse, £10 4s. 6d.; the Duke of Norfolk, £56 0s. 2d.; and the Earl of Powis, £3 18s. 8d.; while the heirs of the Duke of Schomberg draw £1798 2s. 10d., and Lord Bath, presumably as one of them, £1200; and the heirs of William Penn no less than £4000.

It may also astonish the world to find that there are still living old servants of Queen Charlotte to draw £310 a year, while one of those of George III. draws £10 quarterly. £9539 yearly goes into the pockets of persons who were put upon their civil lists by Kings George IV. and William IV.

Letters patent have been issued under the Great Seal altering the style of the borough of Truro to the "City of Truro."

The Rodney, 1417 tons, Captain A. Louttit, chartered by Sir Arthur Blyth, K.C.M.G., the Agent-General for South Australia, left Plymouth on the 7th inst. for Port Adelaide, with 448 emigrants, among whom were 149 single female domestic servants, under the care of Miss Davidson, matron.

THE WAR: POSITION OF THE CONTENDING ARMIES AT PLEVNA.

A somewhat extensive valley lies to the right bank of the Vid at a point where that river is met by some of its tributaries. In a valley of considerable size, through which flow the mingled waters of the Tuchenitsa and the Gravitsa, is situated the now famous town of Plevna. On the banks of the Vid and of its tributaries, especially about half way down the main stream, in the neighbourhood of Plevna, is a thick population. Higher up the Vid, on its right bank, lies the small town of Tetiven, with its 4000 inhabitants. The town is built on the northern slopes of the Balkans, opposite the pass of Tekke, which is but little frequented. There are four roads leading from Tetiven: one to the west through Golemy, Bolgarsky, and Izvor, to the metalled road which connects Orkhania and Plevna; another to the east to Trojana, which lies on the higher course of the Osma; a third, leading through Glojhan, Gradushnitsa, Galata, and Yablonitsa to Lovatz (Lovcha); a fourth along the banks of the Vid by the Monastery of St. George, Glojhan, Gezen, Toros, and Aglen, to Plevna. Between Tetiven and Plevna there are many villages on the banks of the Vid.

"The river Osma forms the eastern boundary of the plateau which we have described. This river, like the Vid, takes its rise in the Kodji Balkans. The source is marked by two streams called the White and Black Osma. These, meeting at Trojana, form what is known as the Osma. The upper portion of the river, from Trojana to Lovatz (Lovcha), flows in an almost direct line from south to north. From Lovatz it then takes a turn in a north-easterly direction, to which it adheres for about thirty-five versts—i.e., to the small town of Kozarbelini. At this point the Osma, having made almost a complete circle, turns to the north-west. As it approaches the Danube, about seven versts short of the small town of Turkomecla, it takes a straight course from south to north, and falls into the Danube west of Nikopol. In this way the Osma, in the middle of its course, from Lovatz to Turkomecla, makes a considerable circle, the arc of which faces the east. The tract of country lying within this circle has for its intersecting line the river Vid, and for its centre Plevna. Within this tract are now distributed our forces.

"The plateau which has been described is a highland stretching from the Balkans to the Danube. It is intersected by rivers and streams which flow through deep passes, and it is marked out by cross-roads, over which are scattered towns and villages.

"The cross-roads which connect the Osma and the Vid are six in number. The most important of these is the large road leading from Bela through Bulgareni to Plevna. From Bulgareni it goes west along the valley of the Osma until it is met by the small river Poradim, on which lies the village of Neredintsa (Radenitsa). Passing in a westerly direction, after leaving the valley for the higher ground, the road goes round the villages of Veena, Karagacha, Palasa, and Gravitsa. It then descends into the Plevna Valley. On the right of the road lie Zerkalovitsa, Tristenik (Turkish), Koulavitsa, Palats,

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR FRANCIS HICKS.

Sir Francis Hicks, of Oakfield, Streatham-hill, treasurer of St. Thomas's Hospital, died on the 1st inst., after a short illness, in his fifty-seventh year. He was a justice of the peace and deputy lieutenant, and received the honour of knighthood in 1871, on the opening of St. Thomas's Hospital by the Queen. Sir Francis was three times married:—Firstly, in 1846, to Jane (who died the same year), youngest daughter of the late William Mercer, Esq., of Surbiton, Surrey; secondly, in 1851, to Mary, eldest daughter of the late George Faith, Esq., of Upper Tulse-hill, Surrey; and, thirdly, in 1871, to Elizabeth Myles, eldest daughter of the late William Hutchinson, Esq., of Borage Lodge, Ripon.

The deaths have also been announced of—

John Falsshaw Pawsen, Esq., on the 30th ult., at Mill-hill, Hendon.

Commander Thomas Henry Larcom, R.N., on the 14th ult., at Trinidad.

John Joshua Jeans, Esq., H.B.M. Vice-Consul, at Catania, Sicily, on the 25th ult.

Captain Mildmay Clerk, late 12th Lancers, on the 3rd inst., at Spratton Hall, Northamptonshire.

Lieutenant-Colonel Harwood, on the 2nd inst., at Hemingford-road, London, aged sixty-nine.

William Scott, M.D., Surgeon-Major, late Madras Army, on the 28th ult., in Edinburgh, aged sixty.

Hugh Hilton Hornby, Esq., of Ribby Hall, Preston, Lancashire, on the 6th inst., aged thirty-eight.

P. J. Kearney, Esq., D.L., at Milltown House, Clonmellon, in the county of Meath, on the 5th inst., aged seventy-seven.

The Rev. John Alexander Frere, M.A., late Vicar of Shillington, Beds, on the 27th ult., at Achenkirch, Austrian Tyrol, aged sixty-three.

William Henry Heap Hutchinson, Esq., of Cottingham Hall, Yorkshire, on the 4th inst., at Blairhoolachan, Stirling, aged fifty-eight.

Commander W. H. Symons, R.N., Secretary of the Shipwrecked Mariner's Society, on the 7th inst., at Camberwell, aged fifty-eight.

The Rev. Thomas Oliver Goodchild, M.A., for thirty-eight years Rector of Hackney, Middlesex, on the 5th inst., at Folkestone, aged seventy-seven.

The Rev. Augustus James Sharp, Rector of Snailwell-cum-Chippenham, Cambridgeshire, on the 7th inst., at Snailwell Rectory, in his seventy-second year.

Charles Whichcott Anderson, Captain Royal North Lincoln Militia, second son of Sir Charles H. J. Anderson, Bart., on the 7th inst., at Lea, Lincolnshire.

Miss Florence Vance, younger daughter and coheir of the late John Vance, Esq., the well-known member for the city of Dublin, and afterwards for Armagh.

Edward Cunard, Esq., of the 10th Hussars, next brother and heir presumptive of Sir Bache Cunard, Bart. Killed by his pony falling on him in a match of polo, on the 29th ult.

Caroline Combe, Lady Forbes, wife of Sir Charles Forbes, Bart., of Newe, Aberdeenshire, and daughter of George Battye, Esq., of Campden-hill, on the 6th inst., at Broom Wood, Clapham-common.

Colonel Thomas Peach Waterman, Bengal Staff Corps, at Seabrook House, on the 29th ult. He served in the Punjab Campaign of 1848-9, including the passage of the Chenab and battle of Goojerat.

The Hon. Emma Louisa Parkyns, wife of Mansfield Parkyns, Esq., of Woodborough Hall, Notts, and third daughter of the first Lord Westbury, Lord Chancellor, on the 2nd inst., in her forty-second year.

Admiral Arthur Phillip Hamilton, late of The Mount, and of Chingford, Essex, on the 2nd inst., at 2, Dorset-square, aged ninety-one. He was the fourth son of John Hamilton, Esq., of Bishopegate, Berks, and was twice married.

William Haughton, Esq., the chairman of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company of Ireland, on the 5th inst., after a week's illness. He was seventy-eight years of age, and had been connected with the railway from its formation.

Harriet, Lady Verner, widow of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir William Verner, K.C.H.M.P., created a Baronet in 1846, and only child of the Hon. Colonel Edward Wingfield (son of Richard, third Viscount Powerscourt), on the 6th inst., at Cork Abbey, Bray, near Dublin.

Edward Augustus Brendon, Esq., M.A., of Bere Court, Lord of the Manor of Pangbourne, Berks, late Royal Horse Guards, on the 28th ult., aged fifty-seven. He was eldest son of the late John Symonds Brendon, Esq., of Bere Court, by Catherine, his wife, eldest daughter of Lieut.-Col. W. H. Toovey Hawley.

Llewellyn Wynne Bodychan Sparrow, Esq., 48th Regiment, late 14th Hussars, on the 2nd inst., at Dalkey, near Dublin, aged twenty-eight. He was eldest son of John Bodychan Sparrow, Esq., of Bodychan and Gwyn-du, in the county of Anglesey, and formerly of Redhill, Beaumaris.

Mr. R. N. Philippe, on the 5th inst., at his residence, Broom Hall, Sheffield. He was until recently an active member of the Common Council of London; a magistrate for Middlesex, Surrey, and the West Riding of Yorkshire; a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries; and vice-president of the British Archaeological Association. Since 1871 he had been Recorder of Pontefract. He was about seventy years of age.

A severe easterly gale visited the south coast of England on Saturday and Sunday last. Great damage is reported to have been caused on the Cornish coast.

The first of a number of people's public-houses which it is proposed to start in Hull, similar to those at Liverpool, was opened on the 6th inst. by Mr. C. H. Wilson, M.P. These houses are undertaken by a company.

The directors of the Hull Dock Company have determined to construct a large graving-dock on the east foreshore of the River Humber. The dock is to be of dimensions sufficient to accommodate the largest class of ships, and to be provided with every appliance for the speedy accomplishment of repairs.

Captain H. F. Feilden, R.A., who accompanied the recent Arctic Expedition as naturalist, has presented to the Royal Artillery Institution a number of skulls and antlers of deer and other articles brought home by him from the Polar regions. The collection includes a Greenland harpoon and a pair of snow-shoes, formerly the property of the late Dr. Rae.

An exhibition of pictures, sculpture, and pottery was opened on Monday in St. John's Hall, Penzance. The Mayor and Corporation attended the opening in state; and the principal addresses were made by the Bishop of Truro, Sir J. St. Aubyn, M.P.; Mr. Leonard Courtney, M.P.; Sir Paul Molesworth, and Prebendary Hodgeford.

CHESS.

B (Anxiety).—We have not space to spare for all the variations arising in the Solution of No. 1747; but a little careful examination should make clear to you that, after White's first move, B to R 3rd, every possible move of Black's is provided for, and the discovery check to the Queen is the only one that can be made.

F B (Brixton).—The solution of No. 1748 was published in our issue of the 29th ult.

E E A.—It is more convenient to describe the position on blank diagrams of the chess-board, as W K for White King, &c. A problem should be solved in the required number of moves against the best defence, and these you have failed to note in your proposed solutions of Problems Nos. 1748 and 1750.

J O M (Killeshandra).—Problem No. 1750 is correctly printed, and can be solved in two moves, as stated in the conditions.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1748 received from Hereward, Dr F St, C Blythe, T Elder, B E W, B R O, O S Cox, Ernest, and a Working Man.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1749 received from A Phillips, Mario Macrae, J O Martin, East Marden, G P Drew, D H, and Hereward.

A E G (Mayfair).—Stamma's work on End Games in a separate form is very scarce, but all of them are included in Alexander's "Beauties of Chess," a copy of which can be easily obtained through your bookseller.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1750 received from H B, Pomes le Cavalier, G S at Kiel, L S B, Harrobian, G Beves, A Mackenzie, M Whiteley, G Wright, T W Hope, J Lyndford, J F Spies, Robin Gray, L Burnett, O R E, R Schofield, N Powell, P Hampton, W O Dutton, M Rees, F Wharton, St J E, F G V, N Brock, Queen of Connaught, H B G, B Parkinson, D Leslie, Con, S B of Leeds, W Lee, S Western, W Nelson, Lemora and Leon, Tupp, Paul's Rook, J Winton, Triton, B B Stone, R T King, T Edgar, G Fostbrooke, W Cowell, S Adams, B W Robson, E Emmons, N H Hastings, R Roughhead, H Burgher, T R Y, Long Stop, Black Knight, Simplex, N E D, M Bawling, H Stanfield, Mechanic, Only Jones, O D T, B Halliwell, J O M, O Blythe, N Franklin, L Edinaker, B R O, S Johnson, Lis, G T J Greenbank, W R H, O S Cox, R Hutchinson, A Seaside Party, T Elder, W Cooper, L of Truro, M L Thayer, A T O, Emile Frau, W P Welch, G H V, J de Honsteyn, R H Brooks, H M Pridaux, H Lewy, F Dennis, E H V, J R Olovenshaw, E L G, Copiapino, Emme, A Wood, T E Hughes, J Sergeant, Charles T Downe, M Ryan, Gamie Norge, J Thursty, E P Villiamy, A Wood, G P Drew, Farley Mechanic Institute, N Bumbelow, W Hoskins, D H, Woolwich Chess Club, and Dr F St.

NOTE.—A number of correspondents believe they have solved this problem by 1. K takes Kt, and a still larger number propose to solve it by 1. K to R 7th. Neither of these moves will answer; for, in reply to 1. K takes Kt, Black can play 1. B to R 3rd (ch), and the comp d rope of the King can be met with 1. Kt to K B 4th.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 9 received from Hereward, Mundo Macrae; and of No. 10 from H B, Emile Frau, J de Honsteyn, R H Brooks, H M Pridaux, F Dennis, Hereward, E H V, J R Olovenshaw, E L G, Copiapino, Emme, A Wood, T E Hughes, A Bellingall, S A Gilman, W Champneys, L Reed, M Dickenson, J W Fletcher, B Selby, C S Cox, N Barnes, J Sharrowood, W V Pettit, M Meredith, W Bradford, B McKean, C L Durragh, and T J B.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1749.

WHITE. BLACK. WHITE. BLACK.
1. Q to Q sq. Any move. 2. Q, B, or either Kt mates accordingly.

PROBLEM No. 1752.

By W. FOSTER.

BLACK.

WHITE.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

CHESS IN LIVERPOOL.

A Game played recently at the Liverpool Chess Club, between the Rev. J. OWEN and Mr. L. SCHULL. (Pianchetto.)

WHITE (Mr. O.) BLACK (Mr. S.)
1. P to Q Kt 3rd P to K 4th
2. P to Kt 2nd P to Q 3rd
3. P to K 3rd P to K Kt 3rd
4. P to Q B 4th P to Kt 2nd
5. Kt to Q B 3rd Kt to K 2nd
6. R to B sq Castles
7. B to Q 3rd P to K B 4th
8. B to Kt sq P to Q Kt 3rd
9. P to K R 4th B to Q Kt 2nd
10. R to R 2nd

White's game at this point looks far from promising. He probably hoped to obtain an attack upon the Black King's quarters by advancing the Pawns on this side, supported by the Rook; but, as the sequel shows, he never has an opportunity of carrying out his purpose.

Black has opened his game with considerable skill, although it must be owned that his adversary is not seen at his best in this point. Should White now proceed with P to K 3rd, then follows Kt to Kt 3rd, attacking the Rook, &c.

11. P to B 3rd Q to B 2nd
12. P to Q 6th Q R to K sq
13. Kt to Kt 3rd P to B 5th
14. P takes P P takes P
15. Kt to K 2nd Kt to B 4th
16. B takes B K takes B
17. Q to Q 2nd Kt to B 4th
18. P to B 3rd Q to B 2nd
19. P to Q 6th Q R to K sq
20. Kt to Kt 3rd P to B 5th
21. P takes P P takes P
22. Kt to K 2nd Kt to B 4th
23. B takes B K takes B
24. Q to Q 2nd Kt to B 4th
25. Kt to Kt 3rd P to B 5th
26. R to R 2nd Q to K 2nd
27. K to Kt 3rd R to K sq
28. Kt to B 4th R to K 6th
29. Q to B 2nd Q to K B 2nd
30. R to K 2nd Q takes R
31. R takes R (ch) Q takes R
32. R to K sq Q to B 2nd
33. Q to K 4th R to Kt 5th
34. R to B sq B to B 4th
35. R to B 2nd B to B 4th
36. Q to K 2nd Q to Kt 2nd
37. Q to K 6th (ch) K to B 2nd
38. Kt to Q 3rd R to Kt 3rd
39. Q to K 6th R to Kt 6th
40. Kt to K sq
The result of this move is the loss of the Rook; but, in any case, the exposed position of his King renders White's game hopeless.

41. K to Q sq Q takes K
42. K to K 7th (ch) Q to B 2nd
43. Q takes P Q to K Kt 2nd, and White resigned.

CHESS IN LONDON.

An amusing Partie, in which the Rev. Mr. MACDONWELL gives the odds of Pawn and Move to another Amateur.

(Removes Black's K B P from the Board.)

WHITE (Mr. A.) BLACK (Mr. M.)
1. P to K 4th P to K 3rd
2. Kt to K B 3rd P to Q B 4th
3. P to K 5th P to Q 4th
4. P takes P (en pas.)

White ignores the precepts that enjoin the first player, at these odds, to establish a centre of Pawns.

5. B to B 4th B takes P
6. Castles Kt to K B 3rd
7. Kt to Kt 5th Castles

This attack strikes us as premature; but it is certainly productive of a very lively game.

8. B takes P (ch) Kt to Q B 3rd
9. Kt takes B B takes P (ch)
10. K to R sq Q to Q 3rd
11. Kt takes R B to K 4th
12. P to K B 4th

A highly ingenious device that exchanges the imprisoned Knight at the sacrifice of a Pawn.

White resigned.

ENIGMA No. 19.

By T. F. SMYTHES.

White: K at K B 6th, Kt at K B 6th and Q 4th, B at K Kt sq and K 8th, P at K 2nd and Q 8th.
Black: K at K 8th and P at Q R 3rd.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Feb. 25, 1875) of Mr. James Middleton Hall, late of Scarborough, Yorkshire, who died on July 19 last, was proved on the 7th inst. by James Sprot, James Robinson Pease, and Henry Edward Silvester, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £160,000. The testator gives to each of his executors £100; to his daughter Frances, £800, if unmarried at the time of his decease; and the remainder of his property, real and personal, upon trust for his four daughters—Mrs. Harriett Rudd, Mrs. Emily Legard, Mrs. Caroline Walford, and Miss Frances Hall.

The will (dated Feb. 23, 1875) of Mr. John Alexander, late of No. 49, Porchester-terrace, Bayswater, who died on July 29 last at Drumgrange, Ayrshire, was proved on the 30th ult. by James Alexander and John Cassels Alexander, the sons, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £50,000. The testator leaves to his sister, Miss Janet Alexander, an annuity of £100 for life; to his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Alexander, his residence, with the furniture and the income of one third of the residue of his estate for life; and the residue of his property to his said two sons.

The will and codicil (dated Nov. 3, 1874, and July 10, 1877) of Mr. George Elliott, late of No. 2, Crimea-villas, Wood-green, Tottenham, who died on the 18th ult., were proved on the 30th ult. by Mrs. Sarah Charlotte Elliott, the widow, Lawrence Hawkins Johnson, Nathaniel Cork, and Henry Godfrey Webb, the surviving executors, the personal estate being sworn under £40,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife £350 per annum for life; to the London Fever Hospital, Liverpool-road, Islington, and the Hospital for Fistula, City-road, £50 each; to his brother, Thomas Henry Elliott, the interest of £5000 for life; an annuity to his daughter Caroline, and a few other legacies. The residue he divides between his other children.

The will (dated May 26, 1875) of Mr. Robert Gardner, late of No. 40, Gloucester-gardens, Hyde Park, who died on July 26 last, was proved on the 23rd ult. by Robert William Gardner, the son, and Miss Elizabeth Anne Gardner, the daughter, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £40,000. The testator bequeaths to his sister, Elizabeth, £300; upon trust for the three children of his late daughter Mrs. Mary Maria Sangster, £1500 each; upon trust for each of his two daughters, Elizabeth Anne and Catherine Martha, £6000; and to each of his sons, Robert William and Charles Henry, £5000. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves to his said four children in equal shares.

The will, with two codicils (dated Dec. 24, 1873, and July 24, 1877) of Mr. Jacob Abraham Franklin, formerly of No. 7, Delamere-crescent, and late of No. 24, Westbourne Park-villas, Paddington, was proved on the 3rd ult. by Ellis Abraham Franklin and Henry Abraham Franklin, the brothers, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator bequeaths £5000 out of his pure personal estate upon trust for certain objects (which are fully set out in his first codicil) having for their aim the protection of Judaism and the better accomplishment of its mission; a capital sum to produce £1200 per annum is to be set aside, and is given in various proportion to different members of his family. The residue he gives to his said two brothers.

The Glasgow Improvement Trust have given instructions that a book of photographs shall be prepared, showing "old and historical parts of the city" demolished by the city improvements, with explanatory letter-press by Mr. Carrick, the master of works.

A paper has been presented to the Board of Trade respecting the income and expenditure of British railways during 1876. The large increase in mileage is shown to have been almost wholly in England. The transformation of loans into debenture stock, which has been going on for some years, is reported to be approaching its completion. The ordinary shareholder is stated to receive, on the average, rather a better dividend than the holders of other railway capital; the average payment is about 4½ per cent, and the greater part of the capital, nearly £124,000,000, receives from 3 to 6 per cent; but £38,000,000 of capital received no dividend at all. The third-class passenger traffic of railways is found to grow out of all proportion to the others.

The Flax Supply Association of Ireland have issued a report on the Irish flax crop. The report states that, owing to the continued wetness of the weather, frequent inquiries have been made respecting the condition of the flax crop in Ireland, and, in consequence, queries were sent out to correspondents in the several flax-growing districts, from the replies to which a report has been compiled, stating that, from the backward season, it is somewhat premature to report upon the crop, the bulk of which must be at present in the water, and until scutching is more generally in progress a proper opinion as to quality and estimate as to yield cannot be made. From the tenour of the report it is satisfactory to learn that the injury done by wet weather is not so serious as many anticipated, but it is evident that the heavy crops which were so numerous this year suffered most. It must be borne in mind, however, that, taking this crop as a whole, it is the heaviest that has been produced in Ireland for many years, and although the acreage is upwards of 7 per cent. under what it was last year, an equal, if not greater, amount of fibre may reasonably be expected, but probably the quality will be to some extent impaired by the untoward character of the season. The usual full report shall be issued when the flax crop has been all secured.

Mr. Hugh Owen, acting on behalf of a munificent gentleman who does not desire his name to be known, has issued the following circular to schoolmasters throughout Wales:—"A native of the county is prepared to found an Anglesey 'County Scholarship,' to be competed for by boys in the public elementary schools of the county; and I wish now to intimate to you that your school will be invited to supply candidates for the competition. The candidates must not be under thirteen nor over fifteen years of age. The scholarship will be £20 a year for the first two years, tenable at any grammar or middle-class school approved by the examiners; and, if the scholar at the end of that period is found to be eligible as regards health, character, and attainments, he will be offered a scholarship of £30 a year, tenable at the University College of Wales, Aberystwith, for three years. An invitation will be sent to your school in the month of December next, and will be accompanied by a detailed statement showing the manner in which the examination will be conducted and the centres at which the candidates will have to attend. The competitors will be examined in arithmetic, English grammar and composition, English history, modern geography, and in any one (or more, at the option of each competitor) of the specific subjects of secular instruction which are indicated in the new code of regulations." It is believed that similar scholarships will be founded presently in other counties in the Principality. The donor of the first Anglesey County Scholarship has expressed his intention to provide for its permanence by endowment.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street; Bedding Factory, Eagle-place, London, N.W. Carpets, Furniture, Drapery, Furnishings, Locomotives, China, Glass, Paper-Hangings, Pictures, Screens, Clocks, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout.

THE IMMENSE RANGE OF PREMISES
formerly the EAGLE BREWERY having been REBUILT and added to their SHOWROOMS, it is now one of the largest and most commodious in the world. Comparison of price and quality respectfully solicited before deciding elsewhere. OETZMANN and CO. are enabled to offer special advantages to Country Customers in delivery of Goods by their own large FANTOMHORN VANS, and fixing in position by competent persons. Descriptive Catalogue, the best Furnishing Guide extant, post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

MAPLE and CO.
FURNITURE.
TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNITURE.
New ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the Price Lists, &c. required, post-free.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.
100 Suites of various designs in stock, from 4s. 6d. to 300s.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CARPETS.
British and Foreign, of every description. 800 Pieces best Brussels, old patterns, 8s. 9d. per yard.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CRETONNE OHINTZ.
Just received from Mulhouse a Manufacturer's Stock of about 1000 Pieces, at prices varying from 10d. per yard. These goods are about half the price they were.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

SILK DAMASKS.
The largest and most varied assortment at old prices. Satins, Silks, Cotelinas, Silk Repe of all Colours, in Stock.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO.
CARPETS.
TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

CASELERS, in Crystal, Glass, Ormolu, or Bronze, Medals, Fittings, &c. A large assortment always on view. Every article marked with plain figures.
D. HULBERT and CO., Manufacturers, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
WITH SPECIAL NOVELTIES and Patented Improvements. Without addition to the Recently Reduced Prices. The Cheapest and Best.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
WITH SELF-ADJUSTING BALANCE-WHEEL. Machine cannot be turned in wrong direction. Perfection for those Learning to Sew, and for Every Variety of Family Sewing, Embroidery, and Braiding.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
REDUCED PRICE, from 24s. 6d. Cash, 24s. With New Patent Triple Action Balance-Wheel. Which is Self-Adjusting in its Perfect Control by Learners.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
HAND OR TREADLE, with Self-Adjusting Balance-Wheel. On Hire at 2s. 6d. per Week, with Option of Purchase Without Extra Charges or Expenses.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
With a NOVEL THREAD-COCCON and Cocoon Shuttle-Case. The Latest Improvement. No Re-winding of Thread. Perfect Sewing, with Great Saving of Time.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
WITH SPECIAL IMPROVEMENTS The New Thread Coccoons, On Sale at all the Offices of the Company. Price per dozen or per gross. As cheap as Cotton on Spools. No Re-winding of Thread.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
CAUTION.
BEWARE OF PERSONS WHO, HAVING NO GOOD TRADE REPUTATION OF THEIR OWN, USE OUR NAME, "SINGER," TO PALM OFF COUNTERFEIT MACHINES of Inferior Construction Manufacture.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
EVERY SINGER MACHINE Has the COMPANY'S NAME PRINTED UPON THE ARM, and Imprinted upon the Brass Trade-Mark Plate.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
To Avoid Deception, Buy only at the Office of THE SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY (formerly I. and M. Singer and Co.).

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.
CHIEF OFFICE IN EUROPE: 60, Foster-lane, London, E.C. AND 191 BRANCH OFFICES in the United Kingdom. Prospectuses forwarded free by post.

NOTICE.—Manufacture of SPOONS and FORKS. Messrs. ELKINGTON and CO. beg to announce that, having succeeded in carrying out several important improvements in the above manufacture, they are now enabled to offer their guaranteed qualities at such prices as, while fully maintaining their high quality, place them within the reach of all classes. Revised Illustrated Price-List can be had on application.
Address—ELKINGTON and CO. LONDON—22, Regent-street, W. LIVERPOOL—32, Church-street, E.C. MANCHESTER—St. Ann's-square; or to the Manufacturer, NEWHALL-STREET, BIRMINGHAM.

MAPPIN and WEBB, MANUFACTURERS. Mansion House-buildings, City, London. The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

MAPPIN and WEBB'S SPOONS and FORKS.
Electro-Silver Plate on Nickel. Fiddle or Plain. Best Qual.
12 Tablespoons or Forks, per doz. 41 10 0 25 0 0
12 Dessert-Spoons " " 1 1 0 12 0 0
12 Teaspoons " " 0 12 0 0 10 0
Salt, Mustard, or Egg Spoons " " 0 5 0 0 5 0
1 Pair Sugar Tongs " " 0 5 0 0 5 0

MAPPIN and WEBB, MANUFACTURERS. 75, 77, and 79, Oxford-street, West-End, London. The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

JOHN MORTLOCK
begs to call attention to the "EVERY-DAY" DINNER SERVICES, complete for 12 Persons, 44 15s. Colours are indestructible.
The Pottery Galleries, 203 and 204, Oxford-street; 30 and 31, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

DINNER, DESERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TOILET SERVICES.
CUT TABLE GLASS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION. The Stock consists of the newest and best patterns, selected with much care, and is conveniently arranged for parties furnishing to choose from.
First-class quality—superior taste—low prices.
Catalogue on application.
ALFRED B. PEARCE, 30, Ludgate-hill, E.C. (Established 1702.)

LORNE "THE PERFECTION OF WHISKY." UNBLENDED PURE "TODDY." Wholesale of the Sole Proprietors: GREENLEES BROTHERS, 1, Graham-buildings, E.C. Distilleries, Argyllshire.

EPPS'S COCOA. GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING. JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS.

NATURAL MINERAL WATERS OF VICHY.
Property of the French Government. CELESTINS.—The water of this spring is very agreeable, sparkling, and slightly acidulated. Remedy for Complaints of the Kidneys, Gravel, Gout, Diabetes, Rheumatism, &c. HAUTEFÈVE.—This spring contains a greater quantity of carbonic acid, and is especially recommended as a table water. GRANDE-GRILLE.—For Complaints of the Liver and Biliary Organs, Indigestion, &c. HOPITAL.—For Stomach Complaints, &c. VICHY WATERS are pleasant to the taste, and may be drunk with wine or mixed with wine or spirits.
CAUTION.—See that the name of the particular water required is on the capsule.
Sold by all Chemists, Wine and Mineral Water Merchants, Price One Shilling per Bottle.

WRIGHT'S COAL-TAR SOAP ("SAPO CARBONIS DETERGENS"). Antiseptic, Detergent, Disinfectant. The most beautiful, agreeable, and refreshing TOILET SOAP in the world. By its daily use, freedom from infectious diseases is secured; the complexion improved; pimples, blotches, and roughness removed; and the skin made clear, smooth, and lustrous.
"In our hands it has proved most effective in skin diseases."
"It is the only true antiseptic soap."
—British Medical Journal. In Tablets, 6d. and 1s. each, of all Chemists.
W. V. WRIGHT and CO., Southwark-street, London.

THROAT IRRITATION. EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. Sold only in Boxes, 6d. and 1s., labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS, 44, Threadneedle-street; and 170, Piccadilly.

LAXORA LOZENGES.—This Preparation will be found the most valuable remedy for Constipation, Sluggishness of the Stomach, Bile, Headache, and especially useful for Children and Ladies.
The "Lancet," June 9, 1877, reports:—"We have no hesitation in recommending this preparation. It is a great improvement on the preparations in common use for the same purpose, and will be really valuable in families."
"Medical Press and Circular," April 11, 1877:—"The Laxora Lozenges can be safely recommended."
C. R. C. Titchborne, Ph.D.:—"The Laxora Lozenges are efficacious, and are made of purest materials."
Each Box contains Eight Lozenges, and sold, 1s. 10d., by all Chemists and Druggists; Wholesale, 2s., Southwark-street.

DR. LELIEVRE'S ICELAND MOSS
POULTICE, superior to all (Patented), is exempt from all the inconveniences inseparable from Poulitices made with Linseed or Bread. These spoil the Linen, bedding, &c., dry up on the edges, rapidly ferment, giving a most unpleasant odour; and no dependence can be placed on the quality and freshness of the linseed meal. This New Poultice is instantaneous, for it is ready in a few seconds. Sold retail by all Chemists.
Wholesale, HIGGLOT and CO., 22, Southwark-street, London.

TOOTH-A-CHIE. BUNTER'S NERVE effects an instant cure by the painless constriction of the Nerve, without injury to the substance of the tooth; forms a stopping, and saves the tooth. Of any Chemist, 2s. 1d. per packet.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

PAINLESS DENTISTRY.
Mr. G. H. JONES, SURGEON-DENTIST, will be glad to forward his New Pamphlet, gratis and post-free, which explains the most unique system of the adaptation of artificial and extraction of natural teeth without pain, from his only London address, 57, Great Russell-street (opposite the British Museum).
My dear Sir—Allow me to express my sincere thanks for the skill and attention displayed in the construction of my Artificial Teeth, which renders my mastication and articulation excellent. I am glad to hear that you have obtained her Majesty's Royal Letters patent to protect what I consider the perfection of Painless Dentistry. In recognition of your valuable services, you are at liberty to use my name.
S. G. HUTTONS, By Appointment Surgeon-Dentist to the Queen. To G. H. Jones, Esq.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.
PULVERMACHER'S "GALVANISM," NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER OF EXHAUSTED VITAL ENERGY.
In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the vast and wonderful curative power of Pulvermacher's Patent Galvanic Hand, Belts, &c., in Rheumatism, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three stamps, on application to
J. L. PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT, 194, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

URGENT MOURNING.
"ON RECEIPT OF LETTER or TELEGRAM"
MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on application—no matter the distance (if required), with an excellent fitting Dressmaker (if required), without extra charge.
PETER ROBINSON, 202, 203, 204, Regent-street, London.

DEEP MOURNING ORDERS.
DRESSES, Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, and all made-up articles, in the most appropriate and best styles, at the lowest possible cost. Dressmaking and Millinery, by clever and expert artists.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by PETER ROBINSON, upon the most advantageous terms to Families. The Court and Family Mourning Warehouse, 202, 203, 204, Regent-street, London.

BLACK SILKS.
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, is now selling, some remarkably CHEAP BLACK SILKS, productions of the best makers, from 2s. to 4s. per yard less than the Lyons market prices.
Excellent qualities at 2s. 6d., and 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 7d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 11s. 6d., and 12s. 6d.
Also DECOUVRE PURE BLACK SILKS, at 5s., 7s., and 8s.
The largely increasing sale of this well-known and celebrated Silk shows how much it is appreciated by lovers of really good Black Silks.
For Patrons, PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 202 to 204, where the above can only be obtained.

FOR YOUNG LADIES.
COSTUMES, beautifully Out and Fashioned, in the new styles, at 4 and 10s. 6d. yards for Bodice.
At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET.

A BLACK SILK COSTUME, MADE OF RICH LYONS SILK, for 5s.; formerly 6s. 6d. for 7s.; formerly 7s. 6d. for 10s.; formerly 10s. 6d. for 12s. 6d.
Perfectly New Styles. Exquisitely cut and trimmed by French Artists. Patterns and Patterns of Black Silk free. Address—PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 202 to 204.

THE NEW CRAPE.
The Pure Silk Gordian Crape, for Widows and Families. Its advantages are—that it is made of Silk so pure that it will not crease when sat upon, nor spot with rain. It is a richer black, free from dress and the gummed appearance so objectionable in other Crape. The wear of every day is guaranteed.
The Gordian Crape is a Speciality, only to be obtained at PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, THE MOURNING WAREHOUSE, Nos. 202 to 204. Excellent qualities at 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 7d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 11s. 6d. Patterns free.

FUR-LINED COATS
at Summer Prices. Good useful Coats at 20s. 6d. and 24s. 6d.

SEMI-FITTING SEAL PALETOTS, 23 inches long, for 9s. 25 inches long, for 10s. 6d.
At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET.

NOTICE.—In reference to the above advertisements, it is important that letters should be clearly addressed to 202 to 204, REGENT-STREET.

AT PETER ROBINSON'S WAREHOUSE FOR BLACK GOODS, REGENT-STREET.
For TWO GUINEAS and up to FIVE, CHOICE BLACK MATERIAL (COSTUMES COMPLETE, in the new style) (Principles of Fashion and Skirt) Patterns and Photos free.

EGERTON BURNETT'S ROYAL WELLINGTON SERGES.
"The Court Circular," "The Queen," "Myra's Journal," &c., unanimously testify to the superiority of Egerton Burnett's Serges as the best material for ladies' wear.
EGERTON BURNETT, Wellington, Somerset, respectfully calls attention to these admirable SERGES. He has repeatedly called the honour of supplying them direct to the ROYAL FAMILY, and orders are daily arriving from all parts of the Kingdom. Being woven from the finest wools, and of a permanent patent dye, which neither rain nor salt water can affect, they surpass all others in appearance and durability.
Prices from 1s. 6d. to the finest, at 5s. 6d. per yard.
E. B.'s NEW HAND-MADE VIGOONNE OACHMERE/BIENNE and FOULE SERGES are most fashionable.
A SPECIAL STRONG MAKE IS MADE FOR BOYS' and GENTLEMEN'S SUITS, 2s. 6d. in, from 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns—Books of the various makes and shades sent free by post, and carriage is paid to Bristol or London on parcels over 2s. Goods packed for exportation.
EGERTON BURNETT, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

SWAN and EDGAR are now showing some Great Novelties in TRAVELLING and SEASIDE DRESSES—all-wool Ulsters, new shapes, at 15s., 20s., 25s., 30s., &c. A splendid Stock of Sensible Patterns, in the new shape, commencing at 9s.; and New Dress Materials for Early Autumn Wear. Also New Goods in Silks, Costumes, Mantles, Lace, Ribbons, Ball-Dresses, Millinery, &c. Patterns and Estimates free. Parcels of 25 value sent carriage paid to any part accessible by railway. Piccadilly and Regent-street, London.

ROYAL DEVONSHIRE SERGES.
woven from pure Wool, for LADIES' DRESSES, in Navy or Dark Indigo Blue, Black, Dark Brown, Fawn, and other solid colours, price 1s. 11d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 11d. per yard.
For CHILDREN a lower quality is made, very strong, price 1s. 6d. per yard.
For BOYS' HARD WEAR is a extra milled, strong, 5d. in, wide, 3s. 6d. per yard.
Books of Patterns sent post-free by SPEARMAN and SPEARMAN, Devonshire Serge Factories, Plymouth.
The ROYAL DEVONSHIRE SERGE is the only true Yachting Serge.
See Water cannot injure it. Any Length is Cut by the Factory, who arrange to pay the carriage of all parcels above Two Pounds in value to and as far as London.

"WEAR-RESISTING" (Regis.) BOYS' SUITS.
SAMUEL BROTHERS.
Suit for a Boy 3 ft. 6 in. in height, C Class, 27s.; D Class, 31s. Prices varying according to height. Patterns, &c., sent free.
SAMUEL BROTHERS, 57, Ludgate-hill, London.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED COATS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of style and colour, are supplied by the original makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 27, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

TRAVELLING BAGS.
Write for their "Bag Catalogue" MAPPIN and WEBB, 76, 77, & 78, OXFORD-STREET, } London. W. & 2, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, CITY.

SANGSTER and CO., UMBRELLA MAKERS. Six Prize Medals awarded. Sangster's Silk and Alpaca Umbrellas, upon Fox's Celebrated Paragon Frames, all bearing Trade Mark, and fitted with the new Automatic Runner, are the Cheapest, Smallest, Lightest, and Best in the world.
NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR THE AUTOMATIC. This invention has long been sought after. THE PATENT AUTOMATIC RUNNER is Self-opening—Self-closing. Always ready. 140, Regent-street, W. 14, Fleet-street, E.C. Also Wholesale and Shipping Depot. Philadelphia Exhibition, Prize Medal and Diploma awarded.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER.
IT CANNOT FAIL TO RESTORE GREY HAIR TO ITS YOUTHFUL COLOUR, GLOSS, AND BEAUTY. WHEN THE HAIR TURNS GREY, LOSES ITS LUSTRE, AND FALLS OUT, IT SIMPLY REQUIRES NOURISHMENT. MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER, BY ITS GENTLE TONIC ACTION, STRENGTHENS AND INVIGORATES THE HAIR, AND BY THE OPERATION OF NATURAL CAUSES, GREY OR WHITE HAIR IS QUICKLY RESTORED TO ITS YOUTHFUL COLOUR, GLOSS, AND BEAUTY. IT WILL STOP ITS FALLING, AND INDUCE A HEALTHY AND MOST LUXURIOUS GROWTH. USE NO OTHER PREPARATION WITH IT. NOT EVEN OIL OR POMADE, OR ZYLO-BALSAMUM.
CAUTION!!—The Genuine only in Pink Wrappers. Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers in Toilet Articles.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.
Mrs. S. A. ALLEN manufactures two entirely distinct Preparations for the Hair. One or the other is suited to every condition of the Human Hair. Both are never required at one time. For details as to each preparation, kindly read above and below this paragraph. Readers can easily determine which of the two they require.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S ZYLO-BALSAMUM, For the Growth and Preservation of the Hair. A cooling transparent liquid, entirely vegetable, without sediment.

A SIMPLE TONIC AND DRESSING OF INESTIMABLE VALUE TO BOTH SEXES THE FAVOURITE WITH THE YOUNG AND ALL THOSE WHO HAVE NO GREY HAIR. PRE-MATURE LOSS OF THE HAIR, SO COMMON IN THESE DAYS, MAY BE ENTIRELY PREVENTED BY THE USE OF ZYLO-BALSAMUM. PROMPT RELIEF IN THOUSANDS OF CASES HAS BEEN AFFORDED WHERE THE HAIR HAS BEEN COMING OUT IN HANDFULS. IT PROMOTES A HEALTHY AND VIGOROUS GROWTH. HAIR DRESSED WITH ZYLO-BALSAMUM IS ALWAYS CLEAN, FREE FROM DANDRUFF, AND WITH THAT BEAUTIFUL GLOSS ONLY SEEN IN HEALTHY HAIR. IT IS DELIGHTFULLY FRAGRANT. NO OIL OR POMADE SHOULD BE USED WITH IT.
CAUTION!!—The Genuine only in Black Grey Wrappers. Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers in Toilet Articles.

GOLDEN STAR BAY-LEAF WATER.
Triple distilled from the fresh leaves of the Bay Tree (Myrica Acoris). For the Face, Throat, Nursery, and Bath.
A few drops on a sponge or towel moistened with water, and the face and hands bathed with it, is very beneficial to the skin, removing all roughness. Most highly recommended to apply after shaving. A small quantity in the bath gives a delightful aroma, and it has most remarkable cleansing properties. Particularly adapted to the bathing of infants and young children. Most grateful to invalids and all who suffer from headache from mental labour or fatigue. Buy only the genuine Golden Star Bay-Leaf Water, sold in three sizes Toilet Bottles, 2s. 6d., 5s., &c., by Chemists and Perfumers, or on receipt of stamp from the Wholesale Depot, 114 and 116, Southampton-row, London.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the World; it thoroughly cleanses partially decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalcules," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. Price 2s. 6d. per Bottle. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, leaving a refreshing and pleasant taste in the mouth. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as a berry. Prepared by HENRY U. GALLUP, 403, Oxford-street, London. Bottled everywhere.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore to every one Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the hair has not decayed. Ask any Chemist for the "Mexican Hair Renewer," price 2s. 6d. Prepared by HENRY U. GALLUP, 403, Oxford-street, London.

JOHN GOSNELL and CO.'S CHERRY TOOTH-PASTE gives a beautiful Set of Teeth, makes the Teeth of pearly-like whiteness, and protects the enamel from decay.—Of all Chemists and Perfumers, at 1s. 6d. per Pot.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET PERFUME, fresh as morning-gathered flowers, 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. per Bottle. Breidenbach's MACABARINE, invaluable for preserving the Growth of the Hair, 1s. 2s. 6d., 5s. per Bottle. Of all Chemists, and the Makers, 157a, New Bond-street, W.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO has been proved, by its unparalleled success of seventy years, to be the best Dentifrice for procuring White and Sound Teeth, Healthy Gums, and Fragrant Breath, being perfectly free from all deleterious and acid compounds, which give a temporary whiteness to the teeth, but ultimately ruin the enamel. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers. Price 2s. 6d. Take no Odonto but Rowlands'.

THOMPSON and CAPPER'S DENTIFRICE WATER arrests decay in the Teeth and sweetens the Breath.—55, Bold-street, Liverpool. Sold in 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 7s. 6d. Bottles, by all Chemists.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA. The best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion; and a safe aperient for delicate constitutions, ladies, and children. Of all Chemists.

MR. STREETER'S DIAMOND ORNAMENTS. LONDON—MADE JEWELLERY, of exquisite design and workmanship. The only Jeweller in England whose stock consists solely of 18-Carat Gold. ENGLISH KEYLESS LEVER WATCHES, with all the latest improvements. Of Mr. STREETER, 13, New Bond-street.

"GOLD." By EDWIN W. STREETER. Second Edition will shortly be ready.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 108, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 108, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1877.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 1993.—VOL. LXXI.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1877.

TWO WHOLE SHEETS, SIXPENCE.
AND SUPPLEMENT } BY POST, 6½D.

THE COLLISION IN THE CHANNEL: LANDING OF THE SURVIVORS FROM THE AVALANCHE AND FOREST.

of the Prince. The Earl of Breadalbane entertained the Killin Volunteers to dinner in the Kenmore Hotel, and the Aberfeldy Volunteers to dinner in the Breadalbane Hotel, Aberfeldy. The Prince visited the village of Kenmore on Saturday last, and he has since made various excursions in the neighbourhood, and has been yachting on Loch Tay. On Monday he visited Sir Robert and Lady Menzies at Farleyer, having previously had luncheon at Castle Menzies. There was a tableau performance at Taymouth in the evening, among the performers being Prince Leopold, the Earl and Countess of Breadalbane, the Duchess of Montrose, Lady Violet Greville, the Hon. Cecilia and Alice Harbord, Miss Menzies of Menzies, Lord Brook, the Hon. A. Yorke, Colonel Drummond Murray, and Mr. Cecil Lister Kaye.

Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein are still in Scotland: they went last week on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Westminster at Reay Forest.

During the absence of Princess Louise of Lorne from town, the milk from two cows has been given daily for the use of the children at the Victoria Hospital, of which her Royal Highness is patroness.

His Excellency Count Münster, who has been visiting the Earl of Derby at Knowsley, returned to the German Embassy on Saturday last. His Excellency left Prussia House, Carlton House-terrace, on Wednesday morning for Berlin and Hanover. He will be back in England on the 13th of next month. During the absence of Count Münster, Baron von der Brincken will act as Chargé-d'Affaires.

Earl and Countess Granville returned to town on Saturday last from staying with the Earl and Countess of Scarborough at Sandbeck Park, Yorkshire.

Earl and Countess Cadogan have returned from Homburg. The Earl and Countess of Bradford returned to Weston Park on Saturday last from Sandbeck Hall.

Frances Countess Waldegrave and Lord Carlingford have taken up their residence at Chewton Priory, Mendip.

Lord Lyons has returned from Ems.

Lord and Lady Gardner and the Hon. Evelyn Gardner have arrived at Stansted Hall, Bishops Cleeve.

Lord and Lady Colchester have gone to Ostend.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

The marriage of the Rev. R. Digby Ram (youngest son of the Rev. A. J. Ram, Rector of Rolleston and Canon of Rochester, and the late Lady Jane Ram) and Miss Mary Anson, only daughter of the Hon. Mrs. Boothby and the late Mr. George Edward Anson, of New Lodge, Newwood Forest, for many years secretary to the Prince Consort, was celebrated at Hanbury church, Staffordshire, on Thursday week. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jeffery Foot, Vicar of Hanbury, assisted by the Rev. G. Stopford Ram, Vicar of St. Anne's, Highgate, brother of the bridegroom. A large number of relatives and friends assembled at the breakfast, which was given by Mr. and Mrs. Boothby, at the New Lodge, after which the bride and bridegroom posted to Lichfield, en route for London. The wedding presents were numerous, and included a gold locket set with pearls and diamonds, the gift of the Queen, and containing likenesses of herself and of the Prince Consort, who were Miss Anson's godparents.

A marriage is arranged, and will shortly take place, between the Duke of Norfolk and Lady Flora Hastings, eldest daughter of Mr. Abney Hastings, of Leicestershire, and the late Countess of Loudoun.

A marriage is arranged between Mr. Wyndham Edward Hanmer, brother of Lord Hanmer, and Miss Hely Hutchinson, daughter of the late Colonel the Hon. Henry Hely Hutchinson.

Mr. Frank Lloyd Edwards, of Nanhoron, has been elected chairman of the Carnarvon Quarter Sessions, in succession to Lord Newborough, who has resigned the office.

Mr. John Simon, C.B., has accepted the invitation of the council of the Midland Medical Society to deliver the inaugural address for the ensuing session.

The Act for the union under one Government of such of the South African colonies and States as may agree thereto, and for the government of such union, which was "obstructed" in the late Session, and led to a night and day sitting of the House of Commons, contains sixty-one sections. The preamble recites that proposals have been made for uniting under one Government, under the Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, those colonies and States of South Africa which may voluntarily elect to enter into such union. The general principles on which the constitution of the legislative authority and of the executive government in the union are to be established are declared, and the wishes and opinions of the colonies as to details are to be represented to her Majesty through their respective Legislatures. The various sections set forth the declaration and nature of any union of two or more of the colonies, with provisions for its completion; and her Majesty, by an Order in Council, is to declare the day on which the union shall take effect. The union is to be divided into such provinces, with such names and boundaries, as the Queen may direct. The executive government is to be vested in her Majesty, and to be exercised by the Governor-General. There is to be a Privy Council of the union. The "Union Parliament" will consist of an Upper House, to be styled "the Legislative Council," and a House of Representatives, to be called "the House of Assembly;" and their respective powers, are set forth in the Act.

The London Gazette contains the following notification:—Admiralty, Aug. 28, 1877.—Her Majesty has approved of the following Regulations for the Navy: 1. Decorations and medals are to be worn in full dress. 2. Miniature orders and medals, or ribbons only, may only be worn by officers in the undress uniform. 3. Decorations and medals are to be worn on the left breast, in a single horizontal line, suspended from a single bar, placed on a line one inch below the point of the shoulder, but no part of the bar or buckle is to be seen. The buckle of the Companionship of the Bath, however, being part of the decoration, is to be shown. The ribbon is not to exceed one inch in length, unless the number of clasps requires it to be longer. 4. When the decorations and medals cannot, on account of the number, be suspended from the bar so as to be fully seen, they are to overlap. 5. Medals will be worn in the order of the dates on which they were conferred, the first decoration or medal obtained being placed farthest from the shoulder. The following is the order of arrangement: 1. English decorations. 2. English medals. 3. Foreign decorations. 4. Foreign medals; the medal for long service and good conduct is to be worn after the war medal. 6. Medals granted to petty officers and seamen may either be worn as indicated in the foregoing paragraphs, or be stitched in a straight horizontal line on the jacket or frock. 7. When ribbons only are worn they must be half an inch in length. 8. Medals awarded by a society for bravery in saving human life are, if specially authorised, to be worn on the right breast.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

The Times' correspondent at Calcutta telegraphs that the famine reports for the past week state that prospects have greatly improved in the Madras Presidency, but prices continue high. There has been abundant rain in many parts of Bombay, and fair reports have come from the Central Provinces, Berar, the North-West, Bengal, Assam, and Burmah. More rain is much wanted in Gwalior and Neemuch. A good rain has fallen in parts of Rajpootana, but prospects are not generally improved. In the Punjab there has been generally light rain, except in the Mooltan district, where there are heavy floods. Grain imports continue on a large scale. Rice is a little lower, but there is no change in the interior. The result of the Viceroy's visit to Mysore has been the introduction there of the policy laid down by the Supreme Government—namely, the making gratuitous relief subsidiary to the main object of getting all able-bodied poor on the relief works. Several new works have been sanctioned, and are already begun—among others, the Bangalore and Mysore Railway. On his return from Simla the Viceroy will assume the charge of the famine portfolio. Cholera has reappeared at Cuddapah. Colonel Moberly, district engineer, and Dr. McNulty have been attacked. The public health is not much improved.

The Viceroy of India has sent a telegram to the India Office stating that there had been a good fall of rain throughout the greater portion of Madras, and that the general prospect shows improvement; that the improvement in Bombay continues; that the distress in Mysore is very severe; and that in Bengal, Burmah, the Central Provinces, and Assam the prospects are, on the whole, favourable. In Madras there are 773,091 persons on the works, and 1,513,555 receiving gratuitous relief. In Bombay the numbers are, on the works 280,727, and receiving relief, 158,733; and in Mysore, 52,000, and 227,000.

THE FAMINE FUND AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

Among the sums which were received at the close of last week were £1000 voted by the Court of Common Council of the City of London, £1000 (second instalment) from Birmingham, £1000 (second instalment) from Bristol, £500 from Aberdeen, £450 from Torquay, £400 from Lincoln, £200 from the Salters' Company, Dundee £2000, Wigan £350, Dublin (seventh contribution) £500, Newbury £100, Southampton (sixth instalment) £100, Huntingdon £100, Scarborough (second instalment) £131, Taunton (third instalment) £100, Market Weighton £50, the Duke of Cleveland £200, Taunton £100, Ipswich £250, the Dorset Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons £200, Colchester (second instalment) £100, West Bromwich (second instalment £100), Weybridge parish church and St. Michael's £242, Shepton Mallett £102, Newcastle-on-Tyne (second instalment) £1000, Birmingham (third contribution) £1000, Brighton (second donation) £300, Cambridge £400, Devonport (additional) £300, Canterbury (second instalment) £200, Coupar Angus £115, Pontefract £100, Hawick and District £100, Luton £100, Aldershot £100. A public appeal at Romford, Essex, resulted in the collection of £278, of which Mr. Coope, M.P., contributed £100 and Mr. T. C. Baring, M.P., £100. Earl Brownlow sent £100. Several more church collections were received, the largest being £162 from Holy Trinity, Bournemouth.

At a meeting of the executive committee on Monday it was resolved to send a further sum of £40,000 to Madras, making a total of £155,000 sent out. Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., Alderman Sidney, Mr. Charles Teede, and Mr. P. Macfadyen, of Madras, were added to the committee. A telegram, dated Madras, Saturday, was read, stating that the committee there had voted £5000 for the relief of the distress in Bombay, and £10,000 for the relief of the distress in Mysore, and that they were arranging a more thorough organisation of the local committees. Mr. Pender, M.P., suggested that appeals should be made to the British colonies, and promised to arrange for gratuitous telegraphic communication with that view. The principal sums received were:—The County of Warwick (per the High Sheriff) £1000, Huddersfield (second instalment) £1000, Dublin (eighth) £500, Halifax £500, Rochdale (second) £500, Belfast (additional) £500, Tynemouth £400, Bath (second) £300, York (third) £300, Longton £225, Batley £200, Norwich (third) £200, Durham £200, Winchester £150, Oswestry (third) £130, Hanley (third) £100, Maidstone (third) £100, Margate (second) £100, Messrs. Sharples and Co. (Hitchin) £100, St. Paul's (Hamlet-road, Upper Norwood) £110, house-to-house collection at Southwell £183, Mrs. H. D. Harcourt £100, Stourbridge £100.

The Lord Mayor received a telegram on Tuesday from the Madras Relief Committee giving information of the increased death-rate in several towns and districts. The telegram will be found in another page. The School Board for London has consented to a collection in aid of the relief fund being made in each board school in the metropolis. During the day £9000 was paid in, including donations from the following cities and towns:—Kendal £500, Southport £500, Stafford £500, Shrewsbury (third donation) £250, Kirkcaldy £200, Reading £200, Canterbury (third) £150; Newport (Isle of Wight) £150, Montrose £140, Bridport £100, Taunton (fourth) £100, Stoke-on-Trent (second) £100, Southampton (seventh) £100, and Boston £100; £100 was also received as a fresh instalment from the Isle of Man. Miss Kate Forbes sent £100, Mr. G. Bullock £100, Mr. J. H. Challis £100, Miss Elizabeth Howey £100. Over 350 church and chapel collections came to hand, the largest being Church Eaton, £126 3s.; St. Mark's, Tunbridge Wells, £105 1s. 6d.

The large sum of £10,500 was subscribed on Wednesday. The committee of Lloyd's forwarded a donation of £1000, and, in addition, the members and subscribers contributed among themselves £1300. Among the contributions from towns were the following:—Birmingham (third instalment) £1000, Leicester £1000, Cheltenham £800, Great Driffield £300, Coventry £300, Grantham £200, West Bromwich (third) £150, Horncastle £125, Kilkenny £100, Maidstone (fourth) £100. The Cutlers' Company (through Mr. Henry Graves, the Master) sent £105, the National Bank of India £105, Messrs. Huntley and Palmer £100, Miss Dixon £100, the London Assurance Corporation £100. About 200 more church and chapel collections were received.

The Lord Mayor has appointed Friday evening, the 21st inst., for the concert which Madame Liebart has offered to give in aid of the Mansion House Indian Famine Fund. His Lordship has signified his intention to attend in state.

Meetings continue to be held throughout the country for the purpose of starting subscriptions in aid of the fund. A public meeting of the inhabitants of Coventry was held this week in St. Mary's Hall. The Mayor (Mr. Alderman Banks) presided, and there was an influential attendance. Resolutions were passed appointing a committee to collect subscriptions and requesting the ministers of religion in the city to preach sermons on behalf of the fund. The amount collected in the room was over £266.

A meeting in aid of the fund was held last Saturday at the Shire Hall, Warwick, and it was announced that subscriptions amounting to over £1200 had been received.

A meeting of the Bradford committee was held on Saturday at the Townhall. The subscription was reported to amount to £5700, and it was stated that £4700 had been sent to the relief committee at Madras.

Cardinal Manning, writing to the secretary, says:—"It is my intention to issue a letter for a collection to be made in our churches on the second Sunday in October. I fix that date in the hope that more persons will have by that time returned to London."

The President of the Wesleyan Conference, in a "pastoral letter" just issued, recommends that collections should be made on an early Sunday by the Wesleyan congregations throughout the country on behalf of the Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund. He also commends to their sympathy and help the sufferers by the fire in New Brunswick.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The amount collected in the boxes placed in the streets and large establishments of London on Hospital Saturday was £835, being a slight increase on the sum realised in the same way last year.

The Governors of the Charterhouse have elected Mr. Harry W. Lee, solicitor, to be their registrar, from fourteen or fifteen candidates. The duties involve residence in the Charterhouse, and the salary is £700 a year, with other advantages.

Last week there was a splendid show of fruit and flowers at the Alexandra Palace; and now we have one at the Crystal Palace. The twenty-second annual exhibition of fruit and cut flowers at the latter place was opened yesterday, and is continued to-day (Saturday). It must be nearly as bad as the fate of Tantalus to survey, without tasting, this luscious collection of grapes, peaches, nectarines, pine-apples, cherries, figs, melons, apples, pears, plums, and other choice fruits.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers at the end of the second week of September was 76,411, of whom 36,329 were in workhouses and 40,082 received outdoor relief. Compared with the corresponding weeks in the years 1876, 1875, and 1874, these figures show a decrease of 672, 5146, and 14,897 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 591, of whom 388 were men, 158 women, and 45 children.

The revising barristers' courts were opened on Tuesday. At the City Court an objection was made to the name of Mr. Albert Grant as a member of the Loriners' Company, it being contended that the report of Mr. Justice Mellor on the trial of the Kidderminster election petition in 1874 had disqualified him for a period of seven years. The objection was not, however, sustained, the revising barrister holding that the promise to give an entertainment, though it rendered the election void, did not come under the head of bribery.

Mr. Lowe, M.P., who is president of the West Kent Bicycle Club, witnessed the races of that club in the grounds of the Crystal Palace last Saturday, and in distributing the prizes he gave a short address in praise of bicycle riding, which he pronounced to be the best antidote to the gout. He said they had had the satisfaction of seeing a gallant contest of fine young men, entirely dependent upon their own energy, strength, and endurance, and there had been no spurring and no whips, and no acts of cruelty such as might be charged against races of another character.

By direction of the Earl of Derby an extract from a despatch from her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro, reporting a drought in the northern provinces of Brazil and suggesting a public subscription in England in aid of the sufferers, has been forwarded to the Lord Mayor, who has sent a reply to the effect that he is afraid that another famine fund were started both it and the Indian famine subscriptions would suffer, and that he therefore hesitates in making a fresh appeal for public aid. The Lord Mayor adds, however, that he will give the Earl of Derby's letter every publicity, and that should any funds reach him he will forward them to Rio.

On Tuesday, at noon, the Master, the Wardens, and the Court of the Fruiterers' Company (a civic guild, founded in the third year of the reign of James I.) waited by appointment upon the Lord Mayor, in the saloon of the Mansion House, and presented him with a splendid assortment of the choicest fruits of the season, including grapes, peaches, apples, pears, melons, and greenhouses. Formerly the gift consisted of twelve bushels of apples, which, neatly packed in clean baskets, and covered with linen napkins, were taken from Farringdon Market by porters, escorted by the beadle of the company, to the Mansion House. On its arrival in former days the Lady Mayoress used to direct her housekeeper to take charge of the fruit and put a bottle of wine in each basket for the use of the carriers, who were "regaled" with a dinner.

THE WESLEYAN METHODISTS.

The Annual Minutes of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference have been published.

In the home work there are 225 probationers on circuit work, and in the foreign work 147. The deaths of 33 ministers in Great Britain are reported. In Great Britain there are 382,287 church members, 1400 ministers, and 243 supernumeraries. In the foreign missions there are 81,658 members, 279 ministers, and 11 supernumeraries. The candidates for ordination at the next conference will be required to read during the year—"Broadus's Homiletics," "Jackson's Institutions of Christianity," "Butler's Analogy," Part II.; St. John's Gospel; in Greek, Romans, v.-viii.; in Hebrew, Isaiah, i.-v. They will be examined in the foregoing, and also in "The History of the Christian Church during the Second Century."

Sir Francis Lycett and Mr. W. Mcburn are the treasurers for the Extension Fund.

The total number of scholars in the Wesleyan day schools is 175,410, and the total cost £187,843. There are 6095 Sunday schools, 115,666 teachers and officers, 742,419 scholars, and 2495 libraries. Total cost of the schools, £58,913. The new Sunday-School Union has 2004 schools connected with it, and 186 circuit unions. Of the £10,000 needed as outfit or capital fund barely £3000 has as yet been realised. The Home for Destitute and Neglected Children, though succeeding well, is in debt £6200. There are 213 children in the London branch, 97 at the Lancashire branch, 125 at the Milton, and 15 at the Hamilton, in Canada. The reports of the 275 boys and girls placed in situations in Canada are satisfactory.

In the Army in Great Britain and Ireland there are 6800 hearers and 448 church members.

The Wesleyans this year begin the working of an elaborate scheme for temperance and Bands of Hope, which was adopted by the Conference.

The thanks of the Conference are given to Miss Heald and to Mr. W. N. Heald for the gift of a chapel, of the value of £15,000, at Didsbury, erected in memory of Mr. James Heald.

Mr. Stephen Cave, M.P. has been unanimously elected president of the West of England Sanatorium, Weston-super-Mare, for the ensuing year.

1. Ship's boat that came ashore bottom upwards. 2. Boat that saved twelve men from the sinking ships. 3. One of the Portland "lerrets" that brought them ashore.

THE COLLISION IN THE CHANNEL: BOATS ASHORE ON CHESIL BANK.

THE DISASTER IN THE CHANNEL.

We mentioned last week the terrible calamity that befel two outward-bound ships going down the Channel. These were the Avalanche, bound for New Zealand with sixty-three emigrants and other passengers, and the Forest, a vessel belonging to Nova Scotia, which was going in ballast to Sandy Hook, near New York. They came into collision with each other, about half-past nine o'clock in the evening, on Tuesday week, off the "isle," or rather promontory, of Portland. The Avalanche sank in a minute or two; the Forest was more slowly filled with water, so that there was nearly an hour for launching her boats. But of the total number of persons, about a hundred and twenty, in the two vessels, only a dozen were saved. Three or four boats were swamped, as the sea ran very high, with violent squalls of wind, and the beach is inaccessible in rough weather. The Portland fishermen, in one of their peculiar boats called "lerrets," relieved one of the boats of the Forest next morning, after a night of hard struggles to bring it ashore. Captain Ephraim Lockhart, the master of that ship, is one of the survivors. Of the ninety-seven persons on board the Avalanche only three were saved—John Sherrington, third officer, and two seamen. They scrambled on board the Forest, and got off in the boat which was manned by Captain Lockhart, Mr. McKelvie, chief mate, the steward, and a few other men of the Forest. All the passengers were drowned, including many women and children; Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins, with six children; Dr. Tanner, and other ladies and gentlemen. The landing of the twelve men who escaped, on the beach at Chesil Cove, on Wednesday morning, is the subject of one of our Illustrations. Another shows the ship's boats and fragments of wreck that drifted ashore. The fishermen's boats or "lerrets," in which some brave men performed the rescue of the twelve survivors, are worthy of an Illustration. These men were J. Chaddock, John and Thomas Way, Thomas Pearce, Thomas and Lewis

THE WAR: BULGARIAN REFUGEES IN GREEK SCHOOLS AT PHILIPPOPOLIS.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE WAR IN ASIA: ZIGANA, NEAR ERZEROUM.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTIST

White, and John Flann, in the first boat; and in the second boat another Flann, another John Way, G. White, Bennett, J. and G. Byatt. Six dead bodies were cast ashore on Chesil Beach, and four more at Chickerel, a few miles below Portland. An inquest was opened by Mr. R. N. Howard, Coroner for Portland, and the evidence of Captain Lookhart and Mr. Sherrington was taken; there is also the official inquiry to be held by order of the Board of Trade. The hull of the Forest has not sunk, but is still floating bottom upwards, and is to be blown up to remove the impediment to navigation. An attempt to destroy it with torpedoes was made last Tuesday, but failed. H.M.S. (ironclad) Defence, with three steam-pinnaces, commanded by Captain Howard, of the Black Prince, went out for this service. Admiral Dowell, C.B., was present and witnessed the operations.

No part of the cargo of the Avalanche, or passengers' property, has been saved. The Avalanche was a splendid iron ship, belonging to Messrs. Shaw, Savill, and Co.; she was built in 1874, and was ranked in the class of 100 A 1, the highest Lloyd's Committee have the power to give. Her crew, with officers, numbered thirty-four, and consisted of a master, Captain E. Williams, the mate, boatswain's mate, carpenter, boatswain, cook, steward, and fourteen seamen. The boatswain's mate, the carpenter, the boatswain, the cook, the steward, and twelve seamen were foreigners. The boatswain's mate was a Swede, the carpenter and two A B's were Finlanders, the boatswain and one A B were Dutchmen, the cook and one A B were Belgians, the steward was a Dane, four A B's were Austrians, one A B an American, and four A B's were Germans—in all eighteen foreigners. The Avalanche was in charge of a pilot, and therefore the master was relieved of all responsibility. Captain Williams possessed the full confidence of the owners. He was known as a skilful commander, who had never been in any accident, and was a favourite with the colonists who traded with or visited England. Among the cabin passengers were Mrs. Cooper and her daughter, for Wellington; Mr. H. J. Neale, for Napier; Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins and six children, for Wanganui; Miss Watt and Miss Taylor, and Mrs. Shield, for Wanganui; Mr. W. C. Snow, Mr. F. C. Simmons, nephew to General Sir Lintorn Simmons; Mr. A. Montgomerie, Mr. J. C. Cooke, Mr. F. Wanton, Mr. W. K. Bennett; Dr. R. Tanner, late of Ledbury, Herefordshire, with his son, for Canterbury; Mr. J. M. Richards and his niece, Miss Foote; Mr. C. G. Walker, L. D. Kirby, J. Graham, J. T. Somerville, G. Kurr, F. Lee and wife, with four children; J. Wilson and wife.

The Forest was a wooden ship, 202 ft. 2 in. in length, 40 ft. 8 in. in breadth, and 24 ft. 5 in. in depth of hold, 1488 tons gross register. She was built in 1873 by her owners, Messrs. G. Churchill, Sons, and Co., of Windsor, Nova Scotia. She was classed A 1 at Lloyd's for eight years, and was partly insured at Lloyd's. While the vessel was much larger than the Avalanche, her crew numbered only twenty-one, against thirty-four in the other ill-fated vessel.

THE WAR.

The past week, to the hour of this present writing on Thursday evening, has been a time of anxious expectancy for the reports of imminent further conflicts between the Russian and Turkish armies in Bulgaria, which have seemed to be drawing to a critical engagement at three different points—namely, at Plevna, on the Vid, where Osman Pasha, in his intrenched position is beleaguered by the main army of the Grand Duke Nicholas, with the Roumanian contingent; secondly, between the Lom and the Jantra, where the Czarewitch, driven back to a position north of Biela, has to defend his communications with the Danube against Mahomet Ali Pasha; and, thirdly, in the Shipka Pass, and on the Gabrova road from the Balkans northward to Timova, where Suleiman Pasha is pressing hard on the advanced corps of General Radetzky. In each of those quarters, to the middle of this week, the Turks have appeared to be gaining a substantial advantage, while the arrival of the Russian Imperial Guard, in sufficient force to turn the scale, cannot be expected for some days to come. The Russian army in Asia, too, has experienced some additional reverses, which do not, however, excite much attention.

We have thought fit, considering the urgent interest of the subject this week, to prepare two whole sheets, with a greater number of illustrations than usual, for the present issue of our Journal. In this publication will be found sketches from Herr Schönborg, our Special Artist now with the Roumanian army on the Vid, at the extreme right wing of the Russian forces before Plevna; from Mr. Melton Prior, who is with Nedjib Pasha, commander of a division of the Turkish forces on the Lom, under Mahomet Ali Pasha, and who was at the battle of Karahassankoi on the 30th ult.; from Messrs. Bell and Irving Montague, lately with the Turkish army in Armenia; and from an occasional correspondent at Adrianople. The desperate warfare in the Shipka Pass has been illustrated by the sketches of Mr. E. M. Hale, our Special Artist with General Gourko, and those of Captain Gambier, R.N., the Times' correspondent with Suleiman Pasha. Some of the more important subjects of our present illustrations are fully explained by the descriptive and narrative letters, partly borrowed from the Daily News and the Times, which are to be read in our Second Sheet. The battle of Karahassankoi is also related by Mr. Prior in a letter of his own, dated next day from that place. Herr Schönborg's sketches of the valley of the Vid below Plevna, a few miles north of that town, with the camp of the Fourth Roumanian Division at Kreta, and the reconnaissance performed by General Laskariéff on the 23rd ult. from Trstenik, with a detachment of Russian Uhlans, some Roumanian infantry, and two field-batteries, on the road westward of Plevna, may show where took place the movements of the right wing preliminary to closing upon Osman Pasha. The object was partly to surround the Turkish position at Plevna, at least on the north side, and to protect the approaches to the Roumanian bridge or crossing over the Danube at Corabia from any hostile interruption. Many incidents and attendant features of this war are shown in our smaller illustrations. The distressed condition of Bulgarian fugitives collected at Philippopolis, and the hideous familiarity of street executions at Adrianople, have been the subject of much comment. In the second city of the Turkish Empire, under the immediate government of Ahmed Vefik Pasha, it is a daily sight to behold several unhappy Bulgarians hung at the shop doors, or from the windows and balconies, for taking part with Russia or rebelling against the Sultan. It is true that in some cases, as in the particular instance shown in our Engraving, the persons so put to death have been guilty of robberies and murders or other outrages perpetrated on their Moslem neighbours, which almost equal the atrocities of the Bash-Bazouks and Circassians among the Christian part of the population.

Since the tremendous battles around Plevna on Tuesday and Wednesday week, narrated in another page, the military operations there have slackened in apparent activity; only, last Tuesday afternoon, the Roumanians before Plevna attacked a strong Turkish redoubt, but did not succeed in occupying it, and had to retire; they maintained their former positions. The Porte has telegraphed to its representatives that 30,000 men who have been sent to the assistance of Osman Pasha have arrived at Orkanieh. During the first part of this week there was a desultory cannonade between the Turkish batteries and the Grivitz redoubt. It is stated that the Russians refrain from provoking a fresh collision until the movements being executed by the army of the Czarewitch are completed.

While Plevna is now only bombarded, Mahomet Ali Pasha, with 125 battalions, fifty-four squadrons, and twenty-eight batteries, is closely approaching the position which the Czarewitch has prepared on the bank of the Yantra, near Biela. The force at the disposal of the Ottoman General in this direction is more than 100,000. The three corps of his adversary cannot now muster more than 60,000, if, indeed, so many; but the Czarewitch has on his side the advantage of occupying earthworks and of acting on the defensive. There have been some outposts affairs this week.

General Radetzky reports from the Shipka Pass that the Turks, after five days' bombardment, made a sudden assault last Monday morning on Fort St. Nicholas. The attack had extended to the whole line. Two thousand men of the Turkish Imperial Guard and the Arabian troops took part in the engagement. After a desperate battle of nine hours' duration the enemy was repulsed with an enormous loss. The Russian loss was considerable, consisting of 19 officers and 400 men wounded, and 100 killed, including Prince Mestchensky, Aide-de-Camp of the Emperor. On the other hand, Suleiman Pasha claims to have actually captured the heights of Fort St. Nicholas, but omits to say that he was forced to relinquish them. A later despatch from Adrianople says, "The Turks prevent the Russians from repairing the damages done to their defences in the Shipka Pass by a constant fire night and day. The Russians are withdrawing part of their forces to other cover, and strong hopes of a speedy victory are entertained here. Suleiman Pasha attacked the enemy on Monday. After seven hours' hard fighting, he took Fort St. Nicholas and five guns. Afterwards the Russians regained that position." It appears, however, that a force of Turks or Circassians has appeared at Gabrova, north of the Balkans, and has driven in some of the Russian posts towards Timova.

The Russians are making ready for a winter campaign. General Todleben has left St. Petersburg for the seat of war to fortify their intended winter quarters. Supplies of warm clothing have been ordered for the men. To guard the passages across the Danube, strong bridge-heads are being constructed at Matchin, Hirsowa, Nikopol, and Sistova. The first two will secure the passage across the river into the Dobrudcha, the last two that into Bulgaria. We learn that the first brigade of Rifles of the Guard has arrived at the Imperial head-quarters at Gorny Studen. We hear, too, that various columns of the Guard of the 2nd Corps are pressing onward with hurried marches through Roumania. But we do not know whether these troops are accompanied by the necessary trains, ready to take the field.

At this momentous crisis the meeting of the Prime Ministers of Austria and Germany may have the most important results. Prince Bismarck and Count Andrassy had a conference last Tuesday at Salzburg. The interview is said to have been extremely cordial. The semi-official Provincial Correspondence of Berlin, commenting on the meeting, says:—"The two statesmen, whose intimate and confidential accord has for a series of years contributed so greatly to bringing the common policy of the three Emperors in the interest of European peace to a successful issue, must have found it of the utmost value, especially under present circumstances, to enter into a confidential exchange of views in regard to the ways and means of further carrying out their great mission."

AID TO THE VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

A meeting of the Committee for Relief of Sick and Wounded Russian Soldiers was held on the 19th inst., at 11, Cockspur-street, Pall-mall—the Rev. W. O. Lamson in the chair. Letters were read from the Earl of Morton, the Rev. W. R. Wood Stephens, M.A., Prebendary of Chichester; Mr. J. Lorimer, Professor of Public Law in the University of Edinburgh; and Professor Raseve, F.R.S., of Manchester, adding their names to the committee. The following letter from the private secretary of the Empress of Russia was also read:—

Chancellerie de Sa Majesté l'Impératrice, St. Petersburg, Aug. 30 (Sept. 11), 1877.
Monsieur.—Messrs. Thomson, Bonar, and Co., bankers, of this capital, have handed me the sum of 20,000 roubles remitted by your committee, as announced in your letter of Sept. 4 (new style). I have had the pleasure to also bring this remittance to the knowledge of her Majesty the Empress, and I am commanded to convey her sincere thanks to the members of the committee, and to express to them how much she has been gratified at their gift, destined to relieve so many wounded, and a great number of necessitous families sorely tried by the present war. In begging you, Monsieur, to be the interpreter of these sentiments to the committee, I fulfil the duty of informing you that, according to the wish of the donors, the sum you have transmitted to me shall be divided into two parts, one of which shall be appropriated to the relief of our wounded, and the other distributed among the widows of the combatants fallen on the field of battle, and also devoted to the education of some of the orphans. This mode of distribution coincides perfectly with the gracious intentions of her Majesty the Empress. I have received the list of the persons who have contributed to this gift, and I shall not fail to have it published in our newspapers.

To Monsieur Lewis Farley. MAURITZ.
The committee ordered that a further sum of £1000 should be at once remitted.

The Duke of Portland, in sending his fourth donation of £1000 to the Stafford House Committee, has accompanied it by a letter, in which he says:—

I venture to mention the only difficulty that seems to me to have arisen and which has not been authoritatively met—viz., the case of a wounded soldier coming in and asking for his refugee wife and family to be provided for, or of one killed in action and his family seeking relief. I feel sure that now these will be provided for in preference to a certain extent to all other claimants by those who have the direction of the funds so munificently contributed by Lady Burdett-Coutts. I have always understood that the operations of the Stafford House Committee was strictly confined to the relief of the sick and wounded fighting men; and I had certainly always myself wished and expected this would be so. The funds are limited, and likely to continue to be, with the Indian famine and so many other calls in competition on the charity of the public, as well as from the total eclipse of the old patriotic and national feeling between England and Turkey as against the deadly enemy of both alike in all time past and for all time to come. I fear the strength of the Stafford House Committee is about to be severely tried, and I can only hope they will maintain their ground, notwithstanding the tremendous demands likely to be made upon them.

A correspondent at Dudley sends to the Birmingham Post the following note which he has received from Mr. R. Bond Moore, an English surgeon at Adrianople, acting on behalf of the Stafford House Committee:—

Adrianople, Sept. 3.
Dear W.—Awful work here. No time to write. No desire to describe scenes of wounded masses. Do get some subscriptions for Stafford House Fund. Suleiman Pasha says if it were not for Stafford House surgeons he would have to shoot his wounded men. We had two trains one night: 650 to dress by candle-light, then 400 in daylight. No splints, no bandages, no disinfectants. They are so close to the Russians that they are simply rid of them with bullets. R. BOND MOORE.

A portrait-bust of the late Right Hon. George Ward Hunt, half life-size, has been executed in stucco by Mr. Eli Johnson, sculptor, 11, Hugh-street, Belgravia.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Marshal MacMahon returned on Sunday night to Paris. It is stated that he met with a very cordial reception at Poitiers, Tours, and Châteaudun, particularly at the last-named place. The town of Châteaudun, in commemoration of its gallant stand against the German army in 1870, has been authorised to quarter the cross of the Legion of Honour on its arms.

On Monday there was an extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet to hear the Marshal's Manifesto to the French People read. It was issued on Wednesday, countersigned by M. Fourtou, Minister of the Interior, and is as follows:—

Frenchmen.—You are about to be called upon to nominate your representatives to the Chamber of Deputies. I do not assume to exercise any pressure upon your choice, but I feel bound to dispel any doubt upon what you are about to do. What I have done is this: For the last four years I have maintained peace, and the personal confidence with which I am honoured by foreign Sovereigns enables me daily to render our relations with all Powers more cordial. At home, public order has never been disturbed for a moment, owing to the policy of concord which brought around me men devoted, before all things, to their country. Public prosperity, momentarily arrested by our misfortunes, has recovered its elasticity; the general wealth has increased, notwithstanding the heavy burdens borne by the people; the national credit has been strengthened; and France, peaceful and confident, at the same time sees her army—always worthy of her—reconstituted upon new bases. These great results were, however, threatened with danger. The Chamber of Deputies, daily throwing off the leadership of moderate men, and more and more dominated by the avowed leaders of the Radical party, at length forgot the share of authority which belonged to me, and which I could not allow to be diminished without implicating the honour of my name before you and before history. Contesting at the same time my rightful influence in the Senate, the Chamber of Deputies aimed at nothing less than substituting for the necessary equilibrium of the public powers established by the Constitution the despotism of a new convention. The situation was no longer permissible. Exercising my constitutional right, and in conformity with the opinion of the Senate, I dissolved the Chamber of Deputies. It is now for you to speak. They tell you that I seek to overthrow the Republic; but you will not believe it. The Constitution is intrusted to my guardianship; and I will make it respected. What I look for from you is the election of a Chamber which, raising itself above party rivalries, should occupy itself at once all things with the country's affairs. At the last election an abuse was made of my name. Among those who then proclaimed themselves my friends, many have not ceased to oppose me. People still speak to you of their devotion to my person, and assert that they only attack my Ministers. Do not be duped by this artifice. To frustrate it my Government will designate among its candidates those who alone are authorised to make use of my name. You will maturely consider the bearing of your votes. Elections favourable to my policy will facilitate the regular conduct of the existing Government, they will affirm the principle of authority, sapped by demagogues, and will assure order and peace. Hostile elections would aggravate the conflict between the public powers, as well as impede the course of business and maintain agitation; and France, in the midst of these fresh complications, would become for Europe an object of distrust. As for myself, my duty would increase with the danger. I could not obey the mandates of the demagogues. I could neither become the instrument of Radicalism nor abandon the post in which the Constitution has placed me. I shall remain to defend Conservative interests with the support of the Senate, and shall energetically protect the faithful public servants who, at a difficult moment, have not allowed themselves to be intimidated by vain threats. Frenchmen, I await with full confidence the manifestation of your sentiments. After so many trials, France desires stability, order, and peace; and with God's help we will secure to the country these benefits. You will listen to the words of a soldier, who serves no party and no revolutionary or retrograde passion, and who is guided by nothing but love for his country.

Severe comments upon the manifesto are published by the Paris papers. The France says that the Marshal's language is utterly unlike anything ever used by the Queen of England, the King of the Belgians, or the King of Italy; and the Temps says that such language is without precedent even in a country as accustomed to surprises as France. The Orléanist organs praise the manifesto.

The Marshal drove out on Wednesday afternoon to inaugurate the new Avenue de l'Opéra. At the end of the Avenue he was received by M. Félix Voisin, the Prefect of Police, M. Alphand, engineer of the city, and by several other official personages, who explained to him the work completed and those still unfinished. Several thousand of persons assembled along the route, and there were cries of "Vive la République!" and "Vive le Maréchal!"

The Duke of Cambridge visited Marshal MacMahon in the course of Wednesday, and the President called, in return, at his Royal Highness's hotel.

Replying to a toast in honour of the Marshal-President of the French Republic and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, at a banquet given by the wine-growers of Libourne, the Duc Decazes has spoken on the external policy of France. He maintains that she has need of repose. "Europe knows," he observes, "that we are not pursuing a hostile or aggressive policy towards any Power. France," he continues, "is entirely the mistress of her destinies; help us to defend her against her own impulses, to maintain her in the faith of a wise liberty, and to preserve for her peace—that blessing of God on earth."

Oct. 14 has been finally fixed upon as the date of the elections. The electoral period begins on the 23rd inst. From the day of the opening of the electoral period till the fifth day preceding that of the elections, public meetings are authorised, on the condition that order shall not be disturbed nor the law violated.

In front of the Opera House, Paris, an experiment was made on Wednesday evening with a new electric light of great power. The ordinary jets of gas presented a poor appearance beside the magnificent flame.

M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, and M. Paris, Minister of Public Works, arrived at Boulogne on Wednesday to examine the site of the projected deep-sea harbour. The Ministers lunched with M. Gosselin, President of the Tribunal and Chamber of Commerce. They afterwards received the Judges and members of those two bodies. M. Alexander Adam, the sole surviving founder of the Chamber of Commerce of Boulogne, the oldest in France, addressed the Ministers. M. Paris, in replying, stated that he was happy to inform those present that all difficulties connected with the new harbour scheme were overcome, and that immediately after the meeting of the Chambers he would present a projet de loi. During the afternoon the Ministers, accompanied by M. Gosselin and M. Poizat, Prefect of the Pas de Calais, visited the principal local establishments.

Two Paris newspapers, the Bien Public and the Gaulois, were on Tuesday convicted for publishing reports of M. Gambetta's trial, and sentenced to fines respectively of 300 fr. and 200 fr. The judges of the court which tried the case held that the slightest allusion to it, or analysis of the speeches on either side, is as illegal as a full report.

HOLLAND.

The session of the States-General was opened last Monday by the King in person. His Majesty, in the speech from the throne, stated that the relations of his Government with foreign Powers left nothing to be desired. The harvest was sufficient, and the state of the finances was satisfactory. The King eulogised the conduct of the naval and military forces in Acheen, and pointed out that no operations had been necessary for some months past. It was hoped that after the submission of a few remaining districts it would be found possible to reduce considerably the forces now in Acheen. The Royal speech announced the presentation of bills for increasing the number of deputies and reforming the system of taxation. The Ministerial measures also include bills for the execution of public works in Java and for increasing the supply of labour in Surinam.

The Dutch-Indian Budget for 1878 shows a deficit of 16,500,000 fl., arising chiefly from the outlay on public works and the development of the railway system in Java. The Government proposes to cover this deficit by the issue of a loan of 16,000,000 fl., bearing interest at 4½ per cent, to be charged to the Budget of the Dutch Indies. The issue of the loan will be finally settled by law at a later period.

The latest intelligence received from Acheen, through private sources, reports that the Acheenese surprised a Dutch detachment on Aug. 12 at Semalanga, killing two officers and sixty men and wounding eighty. The Acheenese were repulsed with a loss of thirty-eight killed and wounded.

SPAIN.

It is said to be now certain that the marriage of the King and Princess Mercedes is to be celebrated in January next. Queen Isabella has postponed her visit to France, and will go to Seville to await the marriage.

AUSTRO-HUNGARY.

After a recess of two months, the Hungarian Diet reassembled last Saturday, when five interpellations relating to Eastern affairs were announced in the Lower House. The subjects of the interpellations are the adhesion of Austria-Hungary to the remonstrances of other Powers against the Turkish atrocities, the active intervention of Serbia, the policy of the Austro-Hungarian Government in regard to the war, and the triple alliance.

In Wednesday's sitting of the Lower House Herr Fux and twenty-seven of his partisans gave notice of the following questions to Prince Auersperg, the Minister-President:—

1. Does the Government intend, in view of the most recent events at the seat of war, to maintain and strictly observe, the principle of absolute neutrality towards the belligerents?
2. Does the Government intend, in pursuance of its purpose of maintaining this neutrality and of preventing Austrian interests from being jeopardised in the future, to specially exert its whole influence to keep Serbia from taking part in the war against Turkey?

The House subsequently discussed the bill for the reform of taxes. Herr Neuwrith's motion proposing that the bill should be thrown out was rejected by 139 votes against 102; and a resolution was adopted by 123 against 107 votes to pass to the debate on the different clauses of the bill in accordance with the proposals of the majority.

GREECE.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs has replied to a note from Lord Derby respecting the warlike attitude of Greece. He states that Greece does not intend to declare war against Turkey, but that this is all that any Power is justified in asking. The Porte, he adds, was not justified in demanding the co-operation of Greece in repressing the insurrection.

The death is announced of Admiral Canaris, the Greek Prime Minister, from apoplexy, on the 14th inst. He was originally a captain in the merchant service. During the War of Independence he distinguished himself by the daring he displayed in burning Turkish ships, and in 1826 he was appointed to the command of a frigate. The following year he entered the National Assembly. He again held command in the naval service, and soon took a leading part in politics. In 1848 and 1849 he was Minister of Marine and President of the Council. He was at the head of affairs in 1861, after the establishment of the new Monarchy. Of late years he had withdrawn from political life, and had only recently come forth from his retirement to serve his country at a critical period by joining the Coalition Ministry now in power. The Daily News special correspondent at Athens telegraphs that at the funeral the King was present as chief mourner, and that the ceremony was also attended by all the Ministers and foreign representatives. Every shop was shut, and many houses and balconies were hung with black.

At a Cabinet Council held on Monday it was resolved that the Ministers should tender their resignation. The King has requested the Cabinet to retain office provisionally, but M. Comcundouros is opposed to the formation of a fresh Coalition Ministry. It is believed, therefore, that the King will order the present Cabinet to retain office.

EGYPT.

The French Comptroller-General, the English Financial Commissioner, and the Secretary of the Egyptian Ministry of Finance left for Europe on Tuesday for the purpose of laying before Mr. Goschen and M. Joubert the necessity of making some arrangement for meeting the Egyptian Floating Debt of £4,500,000 sterling, which is unprovided for in the Khedive's decree of Nov. 18, 1876. The plan proposed is either to abandon the surplus arising from the Moukabalah or to increase the unified debt to the requisite amount.

A telegram to the Daily News states that the vessel which is to bring Cleopatra's Needle to England has been fitted for sea, and that she would probably start on her voyage near the close of this week. The ceremony of christening the obelisk ship was performed on Wednesday by the Hon. H. C. Vivian, the British Diplomatic Agent and Consul-General, in presence of the English colony and the principal Egyptian officials. Messrs. William Johnston and Co., of Liverpool, have received a telegram announcing that arrangements have been completed for the steamer Olga to tow their iron case containing Cleopatra's Needle from Alexandria to England. The case has been fitted up with accommodation for four men, whose duty will be to steer the mass in the wake of the steamer and thus minimise the tension on the tow lines.

An Alexandria telegram says that the state of affairs with regard to the periodical inundation of the Nile is considered to be critical, as the tendency of the waters to subside instead of rising becomes more marked.

AMERICA.

President Hayes began his Southern tour on Monday, and reached Louisville, where he had an enthusiastic reception. Business was suspended, and the route along which the procession passed was decorated with flags. President Hayes addressed a large meeting on Tuesday, urging the necessity of union, reconciliation, and obedience to the Constitution. His speech was received with rapturous applause. The President introduced Mr. Wade Hampton to the meeting, whereupon a scene of extraordinary enthusiasm ensued. Mr. Hampton congratulated the inhabitants of Louisville on the appropriateness and magnitude of the reception given to the President, which showed that, although differing from him in politics, they recognised a man who, rising above party feeling, had done his duty to the country. The speaker added that, as a Southern man, he came to welcome President Hayes on Southern soil, and to thank him for his acts of kindness and reconciliation, for the justice done to South Carolina, and for the peace and prosperity given to the whole country. He promised the President an equally warm reception in South Carolina. Mr. Hampton's speech was followed by prolonged cheering. Speeches were also made by Secretaries Schurz, McCrary, Thompson, and Key, and were well received. Mr. Evarts declared that the President had obliterated the last lines of division left by the Civil War. President Hayes held a brilliant reception in the evening, attended by representatives of all parties; and Louisville was illuminated at night in honour of the President's visit. The enthusiastic reception of President Hayes at Nashville on Wednesday equalled that extended to him by the citizens of Louisville. The Governor of Tennessee welcomed him, in the presence of 25,000 people, as the giver of peace to the South and the restorer of union. The President, in replying to the addresses of deputations of white and coloured citizens, said that he believed the coloured people no longer needed the protection of the Federal troops. Mr. Wade Hampton and several members of the Cabinet also delivered speeches. The people were sincerely enthusiastic.

The Democrats of Massachusetts have nominated Mr. William Gaston as their candidate for the Governorship of the State. At the meeting at which the nomination was made resolutions were passed declaring the belief that Mr. Tilden was actually elected President of the United States, but that the Democrats, while submitting in the interest of public tranquillity to the authority of the constituted administration, denounce the crime committed against the people of America. Other resolutions were adopted in favour of the honest payment of the public debt and advocating currency with gold as a basis. The Massachusetts Republicans have nominated Mr. Rice as their candidate for the governorship. They have also passed resolutions expressing their approval of President Hayes's policy, including that regarding the Southern States, and favouring an early resumption of specie payments.

The New Jersey Democrats have nominated General McClellan candidate for the governorship.

A convention, attended by the representatives from banks throughout the country, has been held at New York, at which resolutions were unanimously adopted in favour of the early resumption of specie payments, and declaring that this result would be best secured by the co-operation of Government and people through the agency of the banks.

The people of Boston made holiday on Monday on the occasion of the dedication of a monument erected on Flagstaff Hill to the soldiers and sailors killed in the late Civil War.

The international rifle-match at Creedmoor was won yesterday week by the American team. The scores were:—At 800 yards, Americans, 575; British, 559. At 900 yards, Americans, 554; British, 536. At 1000 yards, American, 550; British, 518. Total—Americans, 1679; British, 1613. The Centennial trophy was presented to the successful American rifle team in Gilmore's garden, on Wednesday, in the presence of thousands of spectators. The British team were complimented and repeatedly cheered. Sir H. Halford said he hoped that another contest would be arranged.

The Federal troops under General Sturgis had an encounter on the 14th inst. with the Nez Percés Indians on the Yellowstone River. Many of the Indians were killed, and 1000 of their horses captured. The troops lost a few men. Thirteen persons have been murdered by the Warm Springs Indians in New Mexico.

The Philadelphia correspondent of the Times telegraphs that last Tuesday night thirteen masked men captured Big Springs Station, on the Union Pacific Railway, 162 miles east of Cheyenne, compelling the station agent to exhibit a red light as a danger-signal. On the approach, therefore, of the east-bound express-train with treasure from the Pacific coast, it stopped, and the men broke open an express-car, robbed the passengers, cut the telegraph-wires, and, getting hold of 100,000 dols., decamped. No one was hurt, and the train, after some delay, proceeded on its way. Bodies of armed horsemen are in pursuit of the robbers, the railway company offering 10,000 dols. as a reward for their capture.

In Placer county, California, the inhabitants are forcibly expelling the Chinamen, and burning their quarters, because they were accused of having murdered a family.

American papers contain the will of Brigham Young, which was read at Salt Lake in the presence of all his wives and children. The estate is stated to be worth two million dollars. He leaves his property to be divided equally amongst his seventeen wives and fifty-six children, but sundry houses are given to special favourites—notably, his first wife, Amelia, to whom is given the Amelia Palace, a large and handsome modern building.

CANADA.

It is telegraphed from Ottawa that the Anglican Synod of Canada has accepted intercommunion with the United States Church.

CHINA.

The Times correspondent at Shanghai, writing on Aug. 12, says:—It is all but certain that the Viceroy of Nankin purposes to stop the Woosung Railway at the end of October, when the purchase will be completed and the line become Chinese property. It is stated, also, that Li Hung-Chang, when lately "interviewed" on the subject, gave no hope of the line being preserved.

The death is announced of the Queen Dowager of Saxony, aged seventy-two, daughter of Maximilian I. of Bavaria, who married in 1833 King Augustus II. of Saxony.

A great fire has taken place at Airolo, in Switzerland, by which 200 houses have been destroyed; and at Ghent the military hospital has been burnt to the ground, happily without loss of life.

We are informed that Lieutenant-Colonel A. F. Gore, Colonial Secretary of Barbadoes, is to succeed Colonel Harley at Tobago. The hon. gentleman has had considerable experience in colonial life, having entered the service as long ago as 1850, and having been constantly employed ever since in the Colonial Secretary's departments in Honduras, British Guiana, and Barbadoes.

A French clairvoyante named Douglade, and Mrs. Slader, whom she called her medium, were charged before the Jersey magistrates lately with obtaining money under false pretences. A woman who had lost some money consulted the prisoners concerning it, paying them 5s. as a fee. The medium pretended to trace the money to the possession of a Mrs. Gosling, but stated that, as the weather was dull, she could not positively declare she was the thief. The consequence was that Mrs. Gosling, being accused of having the money, complained to the police, and the prisoners were arrested. Madame Douglade said she had long practised her profession in Paris, and some of the police in Jersey had engaged her services professionally and had been satisfied with them. The magistrate told her that, however such practices were allowed in Paris, they could not be allowed in Jersey, and he fined her £1, or five days' imprisonment. Mrs. Slader was discharged.

MEMBERS OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

Mr. Courtney addressed his constituents at Liskeard last week, and explained his course of action in the House of Commons. He defended Sir Stafford Northcote from the charge of incapacity as leader of the House, and declared him to be a good average leader. At the conclusion of his address he received the usual vote of confidence.

Major O'Gorman, Mr. Parnell, and Mr. Kirk visited Mr. O'Sullivan on Monday at Kilmallock, and a Home-Rule demonstration was the consequence. An open-air meeting was held, at which addresses were delivered by Mr. Parnell, Major O'Gorman, and Mr. Kirk. The first-named gentleman said that a fresh struggle between England and Ireland had been inaugurated, and that he and his supporters would fight it out like men.

Professor Fawcett spoke on Indian affairs at a meeting held on Wednesday at Salisbury in aid of the Famine Relief Fund. He strongly advocated an extension of public works, of irrigation, improvement in the means of communication, and, above all, increased economy in the administration of the military system of India. He urged that the Government should appoint a Committee to investigate the whole question, and said that if nobody else felt inclined to take the matter up he would himself move for the appointment of such a Committee immediately on the reassembling of Parliament.

Mr. Watkin Williams, in responding for the House of Commons at the annual meeting of the Denbigh and Flintshire Agricultural Society on Wednesday, referred to the Indian famine, and remarked that twenty-five years ago he had pointed out the necessity of measures being adopted to prevent the recurrence of such fearful visitations.

Major Allen, one of the members for East Somerset, addressed a harvest festival gathering near Bristol on Wednesday, and referred briefly to the Eastern Question. The gallant member, who served in the Crimean War, attributed the popular feeling of this country in favour of Turkey to the remembrance of the horrible atrocities committed by the Russians during that war upon English wounded soldiers.

At the dinner of the Llandilo Agricultural Association on Wednesday Mr. John Jones, member for Carmarthen, in response to the toast of the borough and county members, expressed himself strongly on the subject of the war in the East. We ought never, he said, to have allowed the Russians to cross the Balkans, and if they menaced Constantinople it would be our duty immediately to interfere. The Turks were fighting for their hearths and homes, their wives and children. The war on the part of the Russians was most unjustifiable, and he hoped they would go back covered with ignominy and shame.

Lord Hartington has accepted the invitation of the Liberal Association for the West of Scotland to take part in a gathering in Glasgow in November. His Lordship has also accepted similar invitations from Liberal Associations in the East and North of Scotland.

THE IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE.

Newcastle-on-Tyne was this year selected as the town in which the autumnal meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute should be held, and it would not have been easy to choose a more appropriate place for that purpose. This is the ninth annual provincial meeting of the institute, and the second which has been held in the North of England, the first of the series having been held in Middlesborough, the headquarters of the society, when it had been inaugurated but a twelvemonth. It was originally intended that the autumn meeting should this year be held in Sweden, the Motala Ironworks Company having given the institute a very pressing invitation. The death, however, of the foreign secretary of the institute (Mr. David Forbes, F.R.S.), upon whom the council relied for making the requisite arrangements, necessitated the postponement of that visit and the selection of Newcastle as a substitute. This selection was ratified at the spring meeting, which was held in London in March last, since which time the death of Mr. John Jones, the general secretary of the institute, has occurred. A committee was therefore appointed by the council to take charge of the arrangements for the present meeting, and they have prepared a most interesting programme. The committee consists of Mr. I. Lowthian Bell, M.P., F.R.S., Mr. B. Samuelson, M.P., Mr. Edward Williams, and Mr. W. Whitwell, all gentlemen connected with the iron trade of the north, and well fitted for the work intrusted to them by their fellow-members of council.

The meetings, which extended nearly through the present week, were held in the Wood Memorial Hall. The proceedings on Monday consisted mainly in the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, the election of new members, and other routine business. On Tuesday a welcome was given to the institute by the Mayor and Mr. J. Cowen, M.P. The business was begun by the President, Dr. Siemens, giving an address, in the course of which he referred in appreciative terms to the late secretary, Mr. Jones. Papers were read by Mr. G. Dove, jun., Mr. I. Lowthian Bell, M.P., and the President, and visits were made to objects of interest in the neighbourhood. At Wednesday's meeting a discussion took place on papers which had been read on the previous day by Dr. Siemens and Mr. I. Lowthian Bell, M.P. Papers were then read by the Foreign Secretary of the Institute (for M. Gautier) and Mr. Stevenson, of Durham. After luncheon, the members of the institute witnessed the opening of the new swing bridge, and visited various works of the neighbourhood. In the evening a conversation was held. Thursday morning was devoted to the reading and discussion of papers; and in the afternoon the Ordnance Works of Sir William Armstrong and Co., at Elswick, were to be visited, also the steel works of Messrs. John Spencer and Sons, at Newburn. Two large collieries in this district were thrown open for inspection. Friday was to be devoted to an excursion to Middlesborough and the works on Tees-side. Mr. R. Dixon, of the Cleveland Iron Shipyard, has made arrangements for launching on the same day a vessel of 2200 tons burden, and will also throw open his yard for inspection.

The Edinburgh theatre building and properties were put up for sale on Wednesday at £26,700. The United Presbyterian Church of Scotland became the purchasers at the upset price. The intention is to convert the building into a synod hall and offices for the whole denomination.

A mail for the Australian and New Zealand colonies will be made up for dispatch by the steam-ship Hankow this (Saturday) evening. Letters should be posted at the usual hour, and specially directed "Per Hankow, steam-ship, via Plymouth."—The barque Scottish Hero, Captain M'Eacharn, sailed from Gravesend on Saturday, bound for Rockhampton, Queensland, and had on board the following emigrants:—Seventy-eight married people, 110 single men, 62 single women, 58 children between the ages of one and twelve, and 9 infants.—The Oaklands, with 338 emigrants, arrived at Port Adelaide on the 9th inst., all well.

THE WAR: BATTLE OF KARAHASSANKOI, AUGUST 3
FROM A SKETCH BY

URKISH INFANTRY STORMING THE VILLAGE OF KIZILA.
OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Beavan, Alfred Edward, to be Vicar of Holy Trinity, Hatfield-heath.
 Briscoe, Dr.; Chancellor of Bangor Cathedral.
 Causton, F. J.; Vicar of All Saints', Alton.
 Carter, W. C.; Curate of Milton.
 Cautley, Proby Littler; Vicar of Southwold, Suffolk.
 Cooper, L. L.; Vicar of Raunds.
 Cousmaker, John Octavius; Vicar of Westwood.
 Dupuis, George Richard; Rector of Sessay, Yorkshire.
 Firmstone, E.; Rector of Wyke.
 Forde, Arthur F.; Vicar of St. Peter's, Eltham, Kent.
 Grey, H. G.; Vicar of Holy Trinity, St. Ebbe's, Oxford.
 Ketchley, Walter Guy; Surrogate for the Diocese of York.
 Longdon, H. L.; Rector of Keighley.
 Macdonald, James Leonard; Vicar of Wellesbourne.
 Marshall, Henry James; Rector of Beaford.
 Maud, Henry Landon; Incumbent of New Milverton.
 Russell, Alexander Henry Monckton; Rector of Ashow.
 Sheringham, Harry Alagar; Vicar of St. Gloucestershire.
 Stevenson, Robert; Perpetual Curate of St. James's, Newton Hall.
 Stott, John; Perpetual Curate of Christ Church, Walsley.
 Tanner, James; Curate-in-Charge of St. James's Church, Stratford-on-Avon.
 Underwood, John Christian Curwen; Rector of Howell.
 Williams, Henry Lewis; Vicar of Holy Trinity, Bingley.
 Wright, John; Rector of Myndtown.—Guardian.

The Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, will be closed on Sundays, the 23rd and 30th inst., and reopened for Divine service on Sunday, Oct. 7.

The suffragan Bishop of Dover consecrated a large new cemetery for the Bromley and Bickley parishes on Wednesday. It consists of ten acres of land, and is situated about three miles from Chislehurst.

On Wednesday morning the Bishop of Ely consecrated the fine new church erected in the parish of All Saints, at Newmarket, in memory of the late Lord George John Manners for twenty years member for Cambridgeshire and the Isle of Ely. The necessary funds have been raised by a public subscription, to which the noblemen and gentry of all parties in the country and Isle contributed.

Last Monday the Earl of Bradford laid the foundation-stone of the new Church of St. Bartholomew, Nelson-street, Bolton. It is to be in the Decorated style, from the designs of Messrs. Barry, of Liverpool; and, when completed, it is expected to cost about £9000. The present contracts, however, are only for £6470, of which the late Miss Howells, of Woodside, Great Lever, contributed £6000.

An unusual scene was witnessed on Sunday morning in St. Paul's Church, Bolton. While the "banus" of John Pearson and Jane Fryer were being "asked" for the third time, the mother of Pearson stood up in the church and objected to his marriage on the ground that he was not of age. She subsequently produced proof of her objection, which was held to be valid.

Bishop Alford, formerly of Victoria and lately Vicar of Cloughton, has accepted the incumbency of the new district of St. Mary, Kippington, Sevenoaks. It is in the gift of Mr. W. J. Thompson, of Mincing-lane and Kippington Park, by whom and his sister the funds have been provided for building and endowing the new church and the erection of the vicarage-house. The church is not yet built, but the foundations are in course of preparation.

Last Saturday the Bishop of Rochester consecrated Emmanuel Church, West Dulwich, which has been built from the designs of Mr. E. C. Robins in the French Gothic style of the thirteenth century. It consists of a nave, transepts, north and south aisles, chancel, organ-chamber, clergy and choir vestries. The chancel has a polygonal apse with five double windows; its walls are lined with ornamental tiles, and it has a tessellated pavement. The reredos is of Caen stone, inlaid with mosaics. There is a fine organ by Hill. The portions of the church not yet completed are the upper part of the tower and the spire and two western bays of the nave. The cost of the building as far as it has gone is upwards of £6000, and about £3000 more will be required to finish the structure. The Rev. Eben Rae is the minister of the new church.

A meeting was held at Harrogate last Monday in aid of the Ripon Diocesan Church-Building Society and the Ripon Board of Education. The Bishop of Ripon, who presided, said the first-named society had been instrumental in erecting 150 new churches; it had increased church accommodation in 65 different parishes; it had erected 210 parsonage-houses; and augmented the endowments of 100 ill-endowed benefices. By these means it had added to the church accommodation of the diocese 89,984 sittings, and the various works had involved an expenditure of £794,122. Towards that large sum the society had made grants amounting to £115,822, so that it had been instrumental in calling forth no less a sum than £678,300. The population of the diocese of Ripon was increasing at an annual rate of considerably above 12,000. That involved a continually augmenting claim for church accommodation, and in many places where that claim arose the circumstances of the population were such that without extraneous aid the result they desired to reach could not be obtained.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Rev. Thomas Vere Bayne, Censor and Student of Christ Church, Oxford, and Thomas Francis Dallin, late Fellow of Queens, and Public Orator, have been appointed joint secretaries of the Oxford University Commission.

The Academy states that Professor Max Müller has returned to Oxford very much benefited by his year's sojourn abroad, and will now devote himself to the editing of the translations of the sacred books of the world which he has undertaken.

Dr. Thomas Charles Geddard, Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, died on Monday, after a long illness. He graduated in 1818 as seventeenth wrangler, and was appointed to the mastership of his college in 1852, in succession to Sir Herbert Jenner Fust.

Eton College has reopened at the close of the autumn vacation. During the vacation new mathematical schools have been erected on the west side of the Slough-road, and some of the class-rooms have been rearranged to meet the requirements of the masters and boys. In the new schools there are sixteen class-rooms, ten of which will accommodate a master and twenty-five students each; the other six being each large enough for a master and thirty-nine pupils. There is, therefore, school room for sixteen masters and 484 students.

A preliminary examination of gentlemen who propose to be candidates for cadetships in the Royal Military College will be held on Oct. 17 and following day in London, Edinburgh, and Dublin. This extra preliminary examination will not be reckoned in the number of trials allowed by the eighth paragraph of the regulations, and a candidate who fails will not be thereby precluded from presenting himself again at the ordinary preliminary examination in December.

Professor John Morris, who for more than twenty years has held the chair of geology and mineralogy at University College, has resigned his appointment.

The following is the list of honours obtained during the past school year at Dulwich College:—At the Universities: M. G. Glazebrook, First Class, Classics, Final Schools, Oxford; W. P. Cobbett, First Class, Jurisprudence, Final Schools, Oxford; G. V. Fiddes, open scholarship, Brasenose College, Oxford; V. P. Sells, open exhibition (Science), New College, Oxford; A. W. Grundry, open scholarship, Emmanuel College, Cambridge; W. New, open scholarship, St. Peter's College, Cambridge. In the Military and Civil Services: A. R. Stuart, Woolwich, Royal Military Academy, admission; W. E. Curry, Cooper's-hill, Royal Engineering College for India, admission; H. L. Eales, Indian Civil Service, admission; H. T. White, first place in Indian Law, Civil Service of India, examination, 1876; A. Meredith, first place in Persian, ditto. In other open competitions: W. New, Gold Medal of the Royal Geographical Society, Physical Geography; H. B. Cullerne, studentship, Architectural, Royal Academy of Arts; A. J. Gale, studentship, ditto; S. M. Fisher, gold medal, Life School, Government Department of Science and Art; T. F. Goodall, gold medal, Antique School. To the above may be added: H. B. Gundry, Commission, Royal Artillery; S. M. Fisher, silver medal for Monochrome, and bronze medal, Antique School, Department of Science and Art; J. N. Castello, B.A. of London University, obtained within a year of leaving school.

Mr. Gladstone presented the prizes to the successful pupils of the Hawarden Grammar School on Wednesday, and made the occasion one for the delivery of a speech upon human culture. He said that one great cause of the eagerness displayed for education in these days was the sense of the material advantages which it brought; and this idea was especially encouraged in Scotland. The higher view was that of fitting man for an elevated destiny, and towards this end he counselled, above all things, earnestness of purpose in youth.

The Wallingford Grammar School, which has recently been resuscitated, was reopened on Monday by Mr. E. Wells, M.P. for the borough, in the presence of a distinguished company. The school was founded 230 years ago by Walter Bigg, Alderman of the City of London, in the year 1650, and a native of Wallingford. He left £10 a year to educate six boys, and £10 a year to be given to the poor. The two sums have been amalgamated, and now produce £240 per annum. The income being in abeyance has accumulated to over £2000, and, with the addition of several hundreds in subscriptions, has been expended in erecting a handsome building to educate fifty boys and fifty girls.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE CONGRESS.

The twenty-first annual congress of the National Association for the Promotion of Social Science at Aberdeen was inaugurated on Wednesday afternoon by a special service in the West Parish Church, to which the Lord Provost, magistrates, and Town Council walked in procession. The preacher was the Rev. Dr. Milligan, Professor of Divinity and Biblical Criticism in the University of Aberdeen. He chose for his text Matthew viii. 1-4. His discourse was interesting and appropriate, and was listened to with marked attention by a very numerous congregation, every part of the fine old church being filled.

In the evening there was a large and brilliant assemblage in the Music-Hall, Union-street, to hear the address of the new President, the Earl of Aberdeen. The Marquis of Huntly, in taking the chair, observed that he considered it a very high honour on such an occasion to perform the duty which devolved on the retiring President—namely, to introduce his noble friend the Earl of Aberdeen, who he rejoiced to say was a kinsman and a neighbour, as his successor. Such an introduction was, indeed, unnecessary. Lord Aberdeen was well-known to them all; he bore a great historic name, which was certainly an honourable one, and respected not only throughout that district, but in Europe. He knew no one who was more anxious to perform his public duties to the satisfaction of his countrymen, and he was sure they would encourage him by their kind and genial reception. He had great pleasure in moving that the Earl of Aberdeen do take the chair.

The Earl of Aberdeen then took the chair, amid loud cheering, and proceeded to read his address, as follows:—

THE OPENING ADDRESS.

His Lordship said he accepted his office as President only because of his local connection, and, rejecting as topics for discussion Education and the history of the association, his Lordship proceeded to refer to the question of prison labour. It seems to me (said his Lordship) that labour in connection with imprisonment has hitherto been regarded too exclusively as an aggravation of punishment, and therefore as an additional degradation imposed upon the prisoner. It may be this, doubtless; and in many cases it ought to be so. To the ill-conditioned idler, who spends his life either in the streets or in the bridewell, all work is irksome; and for certain classes of criminals it is but right that prison labour should be essentially penal. But when prisoners are employed at trades which they have followed before their conviction, or by which they may earn their living after the expiration of their sentence, such labour is in no respect degrading, and in numerous instances it cannot fail to operate as a positive alleviation of the prisoner's lot. Enforced idleness in a bare and solitary cell would be to many a more grievous punishment than enforced labour in any probable circumstances. The difficulty in dealing with the problem is vastly increased by the fact that not only the prisoner but his work is isolated. Gaol labour is entirely separated from kindred labour outside the prison walls, and it is denied a free market for its production, as at present the prison authorities are compelled in a sense to smuggle their wares into the market, and thus to dispose of them at a serious disadvantage. But it may be reasonably hoped that ere long the public intelligence will thoroughly revolt against the idea that it is in the interest of the community that the inmates of our gaols should be kept at useless toil during their imprisonment and then turned out upon society unfit for anything save to thieve or beg. If all restrictions in prison labour were removed, it is possible that many persons might be temporarily prejudiced; but, on the other hand, it must be remembered that it is the interest of the prison authorities to employ prisoners in the manner which is most profitable; and therefore with a free market there would be less tendency than at present to an unfair pressure on any particular trade. If the term of a prisoner's sentence be spent in teaching him a trade which, by reason of its being either over-stocked or over-weighted by prison labour, will not afford him the means of earning a livelihood on his discharge from gaol, one great object of prison administration has failed. On the other hand, if once the labour of the prisoner be made really profitable to the prison authorities, it will probably be profitable to himself when he ceases to be a prisoner.

It is apparently impossible, Lord Aberdeen went on to say, to make short terms of imprisonment really deterrent. They seem, indeed, to degrade the prisoner.

What is the remedy? There is no abstract moral connection between offences against human laws and the particular punishments which particular laws have prescribed, and therefore, when punishment proves notoriously inadequate, either to reform the criminal or to deter from crime, it becomes simply useless, if not worse than useless. That the same individual should be sent to prison for a week, or a month, for the tenth, twentieth, fiftieth, or, as sometimes occurs in London, even for the hundredth time, can only serve to bring prisons, and the administration of the criminal law, into contempt. Surely it would be for the interest not only of the community, but of the offenders themselves, that the mere fact of a certain number of successive convictions should render the delinquent liable to be arraigned before a higher tribunal, and committed for the maximum term of imprisonment, or even to be sent to penal servitude. By thus eliminating from the population of our common gaols the class of habituals, the number of prisoners committed for short terms would be greatly reduced. And if, as seems probable, the power of imprisoning for debt is long to be further curtailed by legislation, the prison will become more essentially an institution for the punishment and reformation of criminals. A man who refuses or neglects to pay a debt which it is in his power to discharge may justly be sent to prison. But the case is very different when the obligation is created without suspicion of fraud, and when misfortune may have produced a real incapacity to meet it. In such circumstances it is illogical and inconsistent to imprison at all, now that imprisonment for debt has been ostensibly abolished. Wherever, in the other case supposed, the debtor's conduct is essentially fraudulent, and there is no sufficient reason why the severity of imprisonment should for him be so carefully mitigated, I am not unmindful of the practical difficulties which must beset the administration of such laws; but I venture, nevertheless, to submit that legislative reforms in the sense I have indicated are urgently required.

A reform in the management of our workhouses, similar to that proceeding in respect of prisons, is probably somewhat remote. And yet it is to be feared that in the administration of our poor laws abuses exist as great as those which have led to the new Prison Acts. The idle, and those who are scarcely deserving of pity, are allowed to be a serious burden upon the rates. The unfortunate, who lapse into poverty through no fault of their own, are thus repelled, and the public sense is occasionally shocked by the record of deaths incurred to avoid the workhouse. As a single illustration of my meaning, I may mention the enforced separation of married paupers. Such a requirement, for instance, though generally necessary for the maintenance of order and discipline, might surely be dispensed with, at all events, in the case of the aged and infirm. To sum up the matter in a word, while for the many the workhouse properly partakes of the character of a reformatory, there are those for whom it ought rather to be regarded as an asylum.

Passing to the question of labourers' dwellings, Lord Aberdeen mentioned the Artisans' Dwellings Act and the Metropolitan Association for Improving Dwellings, and was led to consider the subject of rural dwellings. Something had, he said, been done. The loans administered under the management of the Inland Inclosures Commission have special reference to the building of cottages, as well as to other agricultural improvements. In this particular district the need of improved cottage accommodation exists, probably, to as great an extent as in any other part of the kingdom. But it seems clear that, before any extensive improvement can be effected, there must be more co-operation between all the parties concerned. The landlord, the tenant-farmer, and the labourer must all contribute. It is not enough for a landlord to make up his mind that he will not look for a mere money return from expenditure incurred in the building of farm cottages. The farmer must rise to take an interest, in some measure at least, in the moral and physical wellbeing of his men; while, lastly, the farm-labourer must recognise the advantages offered by an opportunity of forming a settled home in contrast with the roving and independent life which in this country is unfortunately too characteristic of that class.

In conclusion, Lord Aberdeen spoke of the problem of intemperance—the prison-filler, the education-spoiler, and the health-destroyer—and said: I wish to state plainly that I do not come before you as the author of a panacea, or the advocate or representative of any special scheme for eradicating this plague and pest in our social life. The very fact that so large a number of schemes have been devised for this end is in itself a proof of the magnitude of the evil; but I am at present unpledged, either by conviction or by promise, to any project of the kind; and, moreover, my connection with the Committee appointed by the House of Lords to consider this very subject would preclude me from pronouncing a definite preference for any particular line of action. My desire and purpose is rather to suggest whether it would not be both appropriate and opportune that your association should consider this great subject—a subject which, so far as I know, has not hitherto formed a special topic for discussion at your meetings, though, as I have endeavoured to show, it must be regarded as coming directly within the scope of your deliberations.

His Lordship was loudly cheered in various passages of his address.

A vote of thanks, on the motion of Mr. Hastings, President of the Council, seconded by Mr. Edwin Chadwick, was passed to the Marquis of Huntly, who presided during the past year. The Lord Provost then moved, and the Earl of Kintore seconded, a vote of thanks to the Earl of Aberdeen.

The order of proceedings and the general arrangements for the Aberdeen Congress are as follow:—On Thursday morning Lord Gifford delivered his address on "Jurisprudence." The meetings of departments followed, for the reading and discussion of papers, and in the evening the Lord Provost and the magistrates and Town Council entertained a large party at dinner in the Townhall. On Friday the Right Hon. Lord Young was to deliver his address on "Education;" the discussions were to be continued, and in the evening there will be a conversazione in the Advocates' Hall and County Buildings, at which Lord Ronald Leveson-Gower will deliver his address as president of the Art section. On Saturday (to-day) the Lord Advocate will deliver his address on "Repression of Crime;" after which the departments will sit; and in the afternoon there will be excursions to Dunnottar and Aboyne, and possibly other places. Next Monday, the 24th, the proceedings will begin with the delivery of an address on "Health," by Mr. Edwin Chadwick, C.B. In the afternoon, after the discussions, a visit will be paid to the Old Mill Reformatory, under the able guidance of Mr. Sheriff Thompson; and in the evening there will be a working men's meeting. On Tuesday, Mr. James Caird, C.B., M.S., will deliver his address as president of the Economy Department; the sections will proceed with the discussions; and in the evening a conversazione will be given in the Music-Hall. On Wednesday, the last day, a meeting of council will precede the concluding meeting, at which the address of the president of the council (Mr. G. W. Hastings) will be delivered and a report on the business of the departments will be presented. In the afternoon excursions will run to places of interest in the neighbourhood.

The Denbigh and Flintshire Agricultural Society held their thirty-sixth annual show on Wednesday at Denbigh, under the presidency of Captain Pennant. At the annual meeting of the society Rhyl was chosen as the next meeting place.

Mr. Joseph Lionel Williams, the able artist and engraver on wood, died on the 9th inst. Mr. Williams was for many years engaged on this Journal. His engravings of the New Houses of Parliament were some of the best examples of architectural work ever produced on wood. Mr. Williams was also a painter of no mean ability, several of his works having been exhibited at the Dudley Gallery, Royal Academy, &c.

A serious accident happened to Earl Fortescue and his eldest son, Lord Ebrington, on Tuesday evening. They had been stag-hunting on Exmoor, with the Hon. Seymour Fortescue, a younger son of the noble Earl, and were returning to Castle Hill in an open carriage. The horses became restive about a mile from Simonsbath, and Mr. Fortescue jumped out of the carriage and tried to quiet them, but in vain; they sprang over the bank, the road being unfenced; and Earl Fortescue and Lord Ebrington were thrown out, the carriage passing over the shoulder of the former, and breaking his collar-bone. Assistance having been obtained, he was driven home; but, with his collar-bone still unset, he returned to Simonsbath, where his son, who had been taken up insensible, was detained. Both patients were on Wednesday reported to be going on well.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The following are among the chief competitions which took place last week:—

The F (Broadwood's) company of the Queen's (Westminster) held its annual prize competition. There were thirty prizes, ranging from £5 10s. to £1 1s. each, together with a series of eleven special prizes for attendance at outdoor parades. In the first series the prizes were won by Messrs. Linter, Henderson, Dyke, Tinto, H. Dove, Parkinson, Luce, Cook, Cayford, and Sanderson; in the second series by Messrs. Geering, Eadon, Ferguson, and Hubert; in the third series by Messrs. Sperry, Mead, D. Moir, and C. Irvine; in the fourth series by Messrs. Walmisley, Trail, Angold, Cayford, and Barnes; in the fifth series by Messrs. Wishart, Morgan, C. Moir, and Simpson; and in the sixth series (consolation, for recruits) by Messrs. Dove, Hobbs, and Bailey. Several special prizes were also shot for. The shooting competition for the company's monthly cups resulted in Private Linter winning the first (or Broadwood's) cup, and Private H. Dove the second prize. It will thus be seen that Private Linter has been successful in the principal events, this being the third year in succession that he has won the first aggregate prize. On Saturday, the 15th, there was held the annual competition for the divisional cup between the E and F companies, which together form the St. John's division. The F company were successful. This competition carries with it prizes and tokens for the three highest aggregate scores (provided mainly by the liberality of T. W. Helps, Esq.), and the first token and prize was won by Private Dyke, of F company, the second by Sergeant Brooking, of E company, and the third by Private Cook, of F company. On the 4th proximo there will be shooting at the ranges, Wormwood-scrubbs, for the possession of the challenge cup, value fifty guineas, given by Messrs. John Broadwood and Sons for competition amongst all the companies of the Queen's (Westminster) battalion.

The prize-meeting of the 29th Middlesex was held at Child's-hill, when a good series of prizes, of about 100 gs., divided into amounts ranging downwards from 10 gs., was fired for. The following were the winners:—Corporal Liebert, Lance-Corporal W. Giles, Corporal Kirk, Corporal Ifery, Sergeant Giles, Colour-Sergeant Mills, Colour-Sergeant Purcell, Private Jennings, Sergeant Field, Sergeant Ross, Private Leeming, Private Wade, Corporal Nobbs, Private J. Barker, Private J. Herbert, Private Copp, Private Lemaitre, Sergeant G. King, Corporal A. Musgrave, Private Garton, Corporal Rata, Private Tranter, Sergeant J. Watkins, Sergeant E. Jose, Sergeant Shaw, Sergeant Womocott, Corporal J. Sells, Corporal H. Rouse, Sergeant Douse, Lance-Corporal F. Watkins, Sergeant Rouse, Sergeant Pickworth, Corporal Connolly, Sergeant Tregear, and Lieutenant Wallington.

The annual prize-meeting of the 1st Surrey took place at Wimbledon, the winners being as follow:—The Pollock Challenge Cup was won by Private Hancock; the Bread-street Ward Challenge Trophy by Private Foster; the Sturly Challenge Cup by Private Sparks; the Ladies' Challenge Cup by Armoury Sergeant Watkins; the Macdonald Lodge Challenge Cup by Corporal White; the Hale Challenge Prize for running and shooting by Private Foster. Wimbledon Series: 25, Armoury Sergeant Watkins; 24, Private Gunston; £3 10s. each, Private W. Doggett, Private Cowles, and Private Evans; £3 each, Corporal White, Sergeant Garland, and Lieutenant Neville; £2 10s. each, Private Cransh, Private Foster, and Sergeant Barrow; £2 each, Sergeant Davis, Lance-Corporal M'Gowan, and Private Tease; £1 10s. each, Corporal Messenger, Private Hancock, Sergeant Cooper, and Private Sparks. Honorary Members' Prizes: £3 3s., Mr. F. Palmer; £2 2s., Mr. H. Puckle; £1 1s., Mr. Strachan. Recruits' Prizes: £2 2s., Private Gunston; £1 1s. each, Private Hooper, Private Dodds, Private Clay, Private Thompson, Private Selby, and Private Davies. Aggregate Prizes: £7 7s., by Armoury Sergeant Watkins; £6 6s., Mr. Foster; £5 5s., Mr. White.

The annual prize-meeting of the 5th Surrey took place at Reigate, with the following results:—First Competition: The Married Ladies' Challenge Cup and £2 2s., Corporal W. Vosper; £1 1s., Sergeant A. Knight. Second Competition: The Single Ladies' Challenge Cup and £2 2s., Lieutenant J. Searle; £1 1s., Private J. Dealing. Third Competition: £2 12s. 6d., Lance-Corporal Crust; £1 11s. 6d., Private A. Apted. Fourth Competition: First Series, £3 3s., Sergeant A. Knight; £2 2s., Lance-Corporal Crust. Second Series, £2 2s., Private A. Breeden; £1 1s., Private M. J. Edwards. Third Series, £1 1s., Bugler Hillier. Fifth Competition: Officers' Prizes, £1 4s., Lance-Sergeant G. Pent; £3 10s., Sergeant F. W. Killick; £3 3s., Lieutenant J. Searle; £2 10s., Private F. Norman; £2 2s., Corporal W. Vosper; and Private W. Fry.

The Monthly Challenge Prize of the 7th Surrey was fired for at Wimbledon, and the winner was Private Suttill.

The 1st Cambridgeshire Administrative Battalion R.V.C. had their annual prize-meeting at Wisbech. Each of the nine companies was represented by six men, previously selected. The three leading marksmen finished with 53 (the distance being 200, 400, 600 yards, five shots at each, any position). Private Samuel Fulcher, Cambridge, eventually won the challenge shield given by the late Colonel Fryer; Bugler-Major Baker, Cambridge, won the Earl of Hardwicke's challenge cup; and Quartermaster Searle, Whittlesey, was third on shooting off the tie. Each of these took £3 13s. 4d. The other prize-men were Privates Joselyn and Hoskin, Ely, and Private Clifton, 1st Hunts. The volley-firing prize, a challenge cup given by the Earl of Sandwich, was won by No. 1 company.

In a match at Bedford between teams of ten men each from the Bedford, Cambridge, and Peterborough corps, Bedford won with 653 points, Cambridge coming second with 623, and Peterborough next with 589.

The tenth competition for the brigade challenge medal of the Queen's Edinburgh Rifle Brigade took place in the Hunter's Bog, Edinburgh, and resulted in another victory for the holder, Private Dowie, he making 32 points against 22 by the challenger, Private M'Donald, in ten shots at 600 yards.

Sandown Park Racecourse was on Tuesday sold by order of the Court of Chancery. It was bought by Colonel Owen Williams for £51,200.

An important addition has been made to the harbour accommodation at Glasgow. The new dock at Stobeross, named, by her Majesty's permission, the "Queen's Dock," was on Tuesday opened by the Lord Provost, and the first vessel that entered was christened the Victoria. The Lord Provost, at the luncheon which was subsequently held, characterised the new dock as one of the triumphs of the engineering age. It is sixty-one acres in extent, including warehouses, quays, and sheds, and of this quantity thirty-three acres are under water; the lineal yards of quayage will be 3344, while the existing other quayage of the harbour is only 7200 yards; the depth of water in the dock will be 20 ft. at low water, and the cost of this undertaking will be about £1,600,000.

LAW AND POLICE.

At the Central Criminal Court on Tuesday the grand jury returned true bills against Dr. Baxter Langley, the chairman, and Mr. Swindlehurst, the secretary of the Artisans and Labourers' Dwellings Company, and Mr. Saffery, an auctioneer, on a charge of fraudulently obtaining money in connection with this company. In accordance with an arrangement made on Monday, the trial is postponed to the next sessions. Joseph Allen was charged with having stolen, in May last, 1100 yards of silk, the property of Mr. Spiers, silk-merchant, of the Borough; and Morris Harris was charged with having feloniously received the same. The defence of Harris was that he had bought the silk in good faith of a man named Johnson, who had been charged in common with Allen with the robbery, and who had absconded from his bail. The jury acquitted Harris and found a verdict of guilty against Allen, who was sentenced to five years' penal servitude. On Wednesday John Ridley Baker, a clerk in the service of the Rio Tinto Company, was sentenced at the Central Criminal Court to fifteen months' hard labour for stealing scrip certificates. Ernest Maxwell, for obtaining money by false pretences from Mrs. Gathorne Hardy, wife of the Secretary for War, was sent to hard labour for the same term; and Frederick R. F. Banbury, a solicitor, was sentenced to twelve months' hard labour, having been found guilty of bigamy and fraud. Patrick and Lewis Adolphus Staunton, Elizabeth Ann Staunton, and Alice Rhodes were placed on their trial for the wilful murder of Harriet Staunton. The Attorney-General opened the case for the prosecution, his speech occupying nearly two hours. Evidence was given by Harriet Butterfield, mother of the deceased; two porters at the Bromley railway station, who deposed to the circumstances under which the prisoners assisted in putting Harriet Staunton, then very ill, into a first-class carriage; a ticket-collector at the Penge station; Mr. Hilder, station-master at the same place; the cabdriver who drove the deceased to the apartments that were taken for her; and Emma Chalklin, the landlady of the lodging-house. The case was proceeding at the time of going to press with our early edition.

At the Middlesex Sessions on Monday two labourers, named Stamford and Webb, were sentenced to three months' imprisonment and hard labour for stealing pictures from the Great Eastern Railway Company. On Tuesday Charles Hall, who has been five times convicted for stealing rugs, was for the same offence sent to prison for twelve months. For stealing a labourer's jacket, James Ward, an old offender, who was represented to be the trainer of young thieves, several of whom are now undergoing sentences in reformatories, was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude and a subsequent seven years' police supervision. For stealing a watch and other property, John Dunn, who had several times previously been convicted of crime, was on Wednesday sentenced to ten years' penal servitude, to be followed by seven years' police supervision. Two young women by whose instrumentality the prisoner was captured received a reward of £2 each. Thomas Cockley, found guilty of inflicting severe personal injuries on three men, was committed to penal servitude for seven years.

The Police-Inspectors Meiklejohn, Druscovich, Palmer, and Clarke, and the solicitor, Edward Froggatt, were brought up at Bow-street yesterday week on the adjourned charge of conspiring to defeat the ends of justice. The cross-examination of Superintendent Williamson was continued, and Mr. Poland, for the Crown, stated that letters had been obtained implicating Meiklejohn in the main charge of being a party to the forgery and fraud. A number of post-office clerks gave evidence as to the sending of telegrams, and the remainder of the sitting was occupied in reading over the evidence of the convict Kurr. The convict Kurr was further examined on Saturday with reference to the defendant Clarke. The remainder of the day was occupied with the proof as to some more telegrams. Tuesday was occupied in reading over the evidence given by the convict Benson while under cross-examination, and in the further examination of that witness by Mr. Poland with regard to the charge against Inspector Clarke. The witness gave particulars of conversations which he stated he had had at Shanklin with Clarke, on the visits of the latter to him there, and swore that on several occasions he had given sums of money, both in gold and notes, to that officer for information. A young lady was brought into Court to look at the defendants, a circumstance which produced a warm remonstrance from Druscovich and Meiklejohn, but the magistrate declined to interfere. The greater part of Wednesday was occupied in the reading over of the evidence of the convicts Benson, Bale, Frederick Kurr, Murray, and Stenning. The latter stated, in reply to Mr. Cowie, that on leaving the court on the last occasion Mr. Froggatt whispered to him, and said he would send £2 to his (the convict's) wife because of the favourable evidence he had just given. Mr. Froggatt explained that on that occasion he was totally unaware of all that he was doing, his mother having only died a day or two previously. Several other witnesses were called to corroborate certain points in the evidence. The proceedings were resumed on Thursday. One or two bank clerks were examined, and the depositions of some witnesses were signed by them. Sir J. Ingham told Froggatt that his case would go for trial, and that two sureties in £500 each, or four in £250 each, would be required. Kurr underwent some further questioning, and Benson was cross-examined by Mr. Lewis. Superintendent Williamson, being asked as to Clarke's conduct, said that his character had always been irreproachable, and that unbounded confidence was placed in him. He further stated that Clarke had assisted materially in breaking up the Walters and Murray gang of swindlers, and it was very likely indeed that there would be great antagonism among a certain class against him. The case was again adjourned.

W. H. Russell, twenty-six years of age, a lithographic printer, and Alfred Hiett, aged twenty, a labourer, were charged at Bow-street on Monday with being concerned in a burglary and jewellery robbery on the night of the 8th inst. at the shop of Mr. Christopher David Kent, in Red Lion-street, Holborn. The prisoners had pawned a quantity of the stolen property, consisting of gold and silver watches, rings, and jewellery, at Birmingham and Liverpool. The prisoner Hiett gave himself up at Liverpool while drunk, and Russell was subsequently apprehended. A good deal of the jewellery was found upon them. They admitted the offence, and said they committed the robbery because they were starving. The day of the robbery was Sunday; and, as they could not get rid of any of the property, they were obliged to carry it about with them all day, during which time they nearly starved. They were committed for trial.

Alfred Thomas Wilson, who described himself as an American, was again brought up at the Mansion House on Tuesday, charged with having in his possession a one-thousand dollar bond, part of the proceeds of a robbery in Switzerland. The extradition of the prisoner was demanded by the Swiss authorities; but the prisoner is believed to be an Englishman, and the treaty between England and Switzerland expressly prohibits the extradition of their own subjects. A further remand was therefore granted.

Charles Martin, or Martineau, and John Carr, who stand charged on suspicion of being concerned in the stealing of bonds of the value of £70,000, while in course of conveyance between London and Paris, have been further examined at the Mansion House, and remanded.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

The Registrar-General's weekly return states that during last week 5497 births and 3109 deaths were registered in London and twenty-two other large towns of the United Kingdom. The natural increase of population was 2388. The mortality from all causes was at the average rate of 20 deaths annually in every 1000 persons living. The annual death-rate was 13 per 1000 in Edinburgh, 24 in Glasgow, and 20 in Dublin. The annual rates of mortality per 1000 last week in the twenty English towns, ranged in order from the lowest, were as follow:—Sheffield, 14; Bristol, 14; Portsmouth, 15; Brighton, 15; Bradford, 16; London, 19; Oldham, 19; Leeds, 20; Norwich, 20; Plymouth, 20; Newcastle-on-Tyne, 20; Leicester, 20; Birmingham, 21; Nottingham, 21; Sunderland, 21; Manchester, 23; Hull, 24; Wolverhampton, 26; Salford, 26; and Liverpool, 28. The annual death-rate from the seven principal zymotic diseases averaged 4.1 per 1000 in the twenty towns, and ranged from 2.2 in Newcastle-on-Tyne to 8.6 in Liverpool and 10.7 in Wolverhampton. Diarrhoea and fever caused the high zymotic death-rate in Hull, and nine more fatal cases of scarlet fever were returned in Wolverhampton. Smallpox caused but 12 deaths in the twenty towns, of which 10 occurred in London and 2 in Liverpool.

In London 2368 births and 1261 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 63, whereas the deaths were 104 below, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The annual death-rate from all causes, which in the four preceding weeks had steadily declined from 19.3 to 17.4 per 1000, was last week 18.6. During the past eleven weeks of the current quarter the death-rate has averaged but 19.6 per 1000, against 21.7 and 22.3 in the corresponding periods of 1875 and 1876. The 1261 deaths included 10 from smallpox, 32 from measles, 38 from scarlet fever, 7 from diphtheria, 23 from whooping-cough, 30 from different forms of fever, and 86 from diarrhoea; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 226 deaths were referred, against numbers declining steadily from 346 to 182 in the four preceding weeks. These 226 deaths were, however, 103 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years, and were equal to an annual rate of 3.3 per 1000. The 23 fatal cases of measles corresponded with the number in the previous week, and included 4 in Pancras and 3 in Islington. The 38 deaths from scarlet fever showed a marked increase upon the numbers in recent weeks, and included 13 in the east and 9 in the south groups of districts; 5 occurred in Islington, 3 in Clerkenwell, and 6 in Bethnal-green. The 32 deaths from whooping-cough also considerably exceeded recent weekly numbers, and included 16 in East London, of which 5 occurred in Haggerston and 4 in Bethnal-green. The 30 deaths referred to fever, although 8 below the corrected average weekly number, exceeded the number in any previous week this year; 3 were certified as typhus, 23 as enteric or typhoid, and 4 as simple continued fever. The 3 fatal cases of typhus occurred at 128, High-street, Poplar; at the Stockwell Fever Hospital, admitted from 15, North-terrace, Pancras; and at 61, Hollington-street, Camberwell. Ten deaths from enteric fever were recorded in North London, including 5 in Islington, of which 2 were fatal cases in the Fever Hospital admitted from Clerkenwell and Bow. The 86 deaths from diarrhoea, of which 79 were of children under five years of age, were 57 below the corrected average; the death of a child, aged two years, in Stepney, was referred to choleraic diarrhoea. The deaths from smallpox, which had been 20 and 8 in the two previous weeks, were 10 last week, of which 5 occurred in the Metropolitan Asylum Smallpox Hospitals, 2 in the Highgate Smallpox Hospital, and 3 in private dwellings. Four of the fatal cases belonged to the west, three to the east, and three to the south groups of registration districts. Five of the fatal cases were certified as unvaccinated, and in the 5 other cases the medical certificates did not give any information as to vaccination. The number of smallpox patients in the Metropolitan Asylum Hospitals, which in the sixteen preceding weeks had declined from 984 to 206, further fell last week to 181; 35 new cases were, however, admitted during the week, against 24 in the previous week. The number of patients in the Highgate Smallpox Hospital, which had been 26 and 19 at the end of the two preceding weeks, was 18 on Saturday last. Two of the six deaths referred to puerperal fever were recorded in Belgravia sub-district. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had been 103 and 111 in the two previous weeks, rose to 152 last week, and exceeded the corrected weekly average by 9. Different forms of violence caused 39 deaths: 34 were the result of negligence or accident, including 14 from fractures and contusions, 2 from burns and scalds, 3 from drowning, 4 from poison, and 3 of infants under one year of age from suffocation. In the large public institutions 245 deaths were recorded, or 19 per cent of the total deaths; of these 150 occurred in workhouse establishments, 89 in hospitals, and 6 in lunatic asylums.

In Greater London 2864 birth and 1496 deaths were registered, equal to annual rates of 34.2 and 17.9 per 1000 of the population. In the outer ring 4 deaths from smallpox were recorded in West Ham, and 5 deaths were referred to fever.

Writs have been issued for the election of a temporal peer of Ireland to succeed the late Baron Headley.

Reports received at Dundee estimate the catch of the Dundee whaling fleet at 765 tons of oil, valued at a little more than £30,000.

As a result of the labours of a home missionary working among the hop-pickers, forty of them, including several adults, were baptised in the parish church on Sunday last.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 8d.
Six months, 14s.; Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s.; Christmas Quarter, 8s. 3d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

Copies will be sent to the following places for 8s. 4d. (on thin paper, 82s.) the year:—Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, China, Ceylon, Cape of Good Hope, Denmark, Egypt, France, Germany, Gibraltar, Greece, Holland, Honduras, Heligoland, India, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malta, Mauritius, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Serbia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, and the United States of America. To Australia, New Zealand, India, China, and Japan, by the Brindisi route, 40s. (thin paper, 88s. 4d.) the year.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to George C. Leighton, of 198, Strand, London.

THE FUNERAL OF M. THIERS: THE CEREMONY IN NOTRE DAME DE LORETTE.

THE QUEEN IN THE WESTERN HIGHLANDS.

LOCH MAREE, FROM KINLOCHEWE.

BEN EAG, LOCH MAREE.

THE FUNERAL OF M. THIERS.

Several Illustrations were given last week of the procession along the Boulevards, from the late residence of M. Thiers in the Place St. Georges, and from the Church of Notre Dame de Lorette, to the Père-la-Chaise Cemetery; and of the proceedings at the family vault, where orations were delivered by M. Grévy, M. Jules Simon, and other friends of the deceased French statesman. We now present a view of the interior of the church during the performance of the religious service. Here the daylight was excluded, and was superseded by that of a multitude of wax tapers. The architectural outlines of the church were lost in the mass of black drapery, which covered the walls. The sable hangings were relieved by broad white borders, spangled with the black spots which the French call larmes, or tears, and the larger spaces were marked by crossed plumes. The whole interior of the sacred edifice was completely shrouded in black, except the higher portions of the nave, where the frescoes were dimly distinguishable in the general gloom. In the centre of the nave was the catafalque, a massive structure, the canopy of which was supported by four Corinthian capitals of silver. Four well-modelled statues, in silver, representing Faith, Hope, Charity, and Religion, stood out in fine relief from the black drapery at the four corners, and the catafalque was surrounded by candles burning in tall candelabra of silver. The nave was reserved for the Senators, Academicians, and other functionaries, the Republican deputies guarding, as it were, the remains of him who was their leader and guide. The Belfort banner was carried close up to the catafalque. The funeral being unofficial and democratic, not a single uniform was to be seen. Even those Generals and Admirals who were present appeared en civil, and the black coats and white ties in the nave were relieved by no colour except the red fez of Midhat Pasha and his secretaries. The chorister boys in the sanctuary wore red soutanes and caps, and black girdles. The guests having been marshalled into their appointed seats, the service began with the customary unaccompanied chant, so mournful in its effect that the response, with its organ accompaniment, seemed by comparison almost triumphal. The white-surplised priests, who stood holding lighted candles round about the bier, with the acolytes robed in black, walked up to the sanctuary, preceded by the Suisse with the cross. Then began the most impressive portion of the Requiem service, to which singers from the Opera lent a beauty which rather added to its incomparable solemnity. The behaviour of the congregation was quiet and devout; and the ceremony was never once marred by the moving about and gossiping which frequently disturb funeral services in Paris.

LOCH MAREE AND BEN EAG.

The Queen's sojourn of six days in the wildly romantic highlands of Western Ross-shire ended with her return last Tuesday to Balmoral Castle. She stayed at the Loch Maree Hotel, on the shores of that picturesque lake, which lies in the rugged bosom of grand and stern-looking mountains, twelve miles beyond Ach-na-shen, the nearest station of the railway that crosses Northern Scotland from Dingwall to the west coast opposite Skye. When that railway was completed and opened, several years ago, we gave some Illustrations of its remarkable scenery; and we now present a view of Loch Maree and one of Ben Eag or Ben Each, a noble mountain of pure white quartz rock, which rises above the hamlet of Kinlochewe. There is a still larger mountain, Ben Slioch, which is 4000 ft. high, and many others around Loch Maree, Gairloch, and Loch Torridon, which places were visited by the Queen and Princess Beatrice. The shores of Loch Maree, consisting of barren sandstone, are generally bare of vegetation except a few stunted pine-trees. The length of this lake is eighteen miles, and it has more than twenty small islands. One of these, Eilean Maree, upon which the Queen and her Royal Highness landed, is studded with larch, fir, and other trees down to the water's edge. There was a well on the island, the water of which, tradition says, proved effective in curing cases of insanity. Close to the well stands a tree, in the bark of which every visitor is expected to place a coin: no doubt the Royal party would follow this custom. It is said that a Prince and Princess of Norway are buried here, under an ancient stone, with a two-handed sword carved upon it. A romantic story is told of the cause of their deaths. The Princess had agreed to meet her lover on his return from some expedition. It was resolved that the meeting should take place on Loch Maree, on which she had a pleasure-boat. If she were in health she was to have a white flag at the masthead; if the contrary, a black one. On her lover appearing in sight of the lake he was shocked at seeing the black flag flying, and, hastening in an agony to a boat, was quickly on board. In sport she had resolved to feign herself dead, and was laid out in state. The moment he appeared in sight the attendants feigned to be all in deep affliction. Overcome by emotion, he drew his dagger and plunged it into his heart, dying in a few minutes. The Princess determined she would not survive him, and followed his example. They were buried in Island Maree.

Her Majesty has expressed great admiration of the scenery which she beheld in the district.

The fifth International Medical Congress has been sitting in the University of Geneva.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Without wishing for one moment to detract from Silvio's gallant victories, we think it must be generally conceded that he has been an exceptionally lucky colt. Just before the Derby, Chamant, who could fairly claim the title of champion three-year-old of 1877, met with an accident; and in the race Rob Roy, whose owner had backed him to win little less than £100,000, was so hampered by Thunderstone that his success was rendered impossible. Then, with respect to the St. Leger, a severe attack of influenza prevented Fontainebleau from undergoing a proper preparation; and, as the favourite swept round the bend, the wily Archer was sending Silvio along clear of everything, while nearly all the rest of the field were engaged in a cannon game, which put two or three, who had been running prominently, hopelessly out of it. Still, the most prejudiced must admit that there is a staying Blair Athol amongst us at last, and the detractors of the Cobham chestnut must "ever hereafter hold their peace." The great surprise of the race was, undoubtedly, the form shown by Lord Bradford's pair, Zucchero and Manœuvre; and, as they have only 6st. 9lb. and 6st. 6lb. in the Cesarewitch and Cambridge-shire respectively, Wadlow should once more be very formidable in the autumn handicaps. Thursday's running was not particularly interesting except to the bookmakers, who had about the best day they have enjoyed this season. The meeting of Childeric and Clémentine over six furlongs created immense interest, as the colt's running in the Champagne Stakes was thought to be far too bad to be true, and, accordingly, he was almost as good a favourite as the filly. Censor, a promising young See-Saw in Lord Wilton's stable, did not come in for much support; but for all that he ran a tremendous race home with the other two, and finished a dead-heat with Clémentine, Childeric beating the pair by a neck. There was a good deal of bumping from the distance, and Lord Falmouth's representative bored the other pair on to the rails, so an objection followed as a matter of course, but it was over-ruled. We can only account for this complete change of form by the supposition that Childeric could not act in the mud on the first day; still it seems doubtful if he is the flyer that he was believed to be, and, moreover, we hear that he unfortunately shows incipient signs of roaring. Only eleven numbers were hoisted for the Portland Plate, which is the smallest field that has ever taken part in the race, except in 1871, when exactly the same number went to the post. There were as many false starts as ever, owing to the natural desire of the jockeys to get off well; but at last they were dispatched on fairly even terms. Lollypop (9st.), who had been specially kept during the week for this event, looked very formidable at the distance, but then tired under the weight, and, a few strides further on, Rosbach (7st. 12lb.) came away full of running, and beat Woodquest (6st. 11lb.) very easily indeed.

After his St. Leger triumph, Silvio was sent straight home, to be kept for his Newmarket engagements, Lord Falmouth depending solely on Lady Golightly in the Park Hill and Doncaster Stakes, both of which the filly secured without difficulty, as might naturally have been anticipated when Helena and Albert Edward were the most formidable of her opponents, both of whom she had defeated at York. The withdrawal of Skylark, and the breaking down of Charon, rendered the Cup far less interesting than it would otherwise have been; still many people fancied that Hampton could not concede 24lb. to Chesterton, who has done so very well this year. The latter made play at his best pace, and used every effort to cut down Hampton; but the little horse, after lying off for more than two miles, drew up to him without an effort, and won with ridiculous ease. Hampton's career has certainly been an extraordinary one; and that a horse should win a great hurdle-race in the spring and secure such events as the Northumberland Plate and Goodwood and Doncaster Cups in the same season is, we believe, without precedent, in the history of the turf. Well may Robert Peck say that Hampton is the best stayer he ever trained! And those who asked contemptuously how much weight Doncaster could have given him are beginning to wonder whether the boot would not have been upon the other leg.

As we remarked last week, the sales of blood stock at Doncaster were by no means so successful as usual, and, though matters improved considerably before the end of the meeting, still the 273 yearlings sold only averaged 185 gs., as against 235 gs. for 246 lots last season. Taking a cursory glance over the long list, we find that the Yardley contingent, which was chiefly by Sterling and Musket, was almost given away, 300 gs. being the highest price obtained; still, it must be admitted that several of them were not very grand specimens. Ten from Stanton did better, a nice colt by Brown Bread—Hygeia, and therefore own brother to the useful Hilarious, being knocked down for 750 gs. A young Winslow, in Mr. Pain's ring, also fetched the same price. Lord Scarborough's seven fairly put buyers upon their mettle, and averaged 480 gs., Lord Zetland giving no less than 1050 gs. for a beautiful sister to the luckless Gem of Gems. On Thursday there was a genuine sensation, as Captain Macchell gave 3000 gs. for Blue Blood, by King Tom—Mari-gold, and therefore own brother to All Heart and half brother to Doncaster. He is certainly a magnificent colt, almost too magnificent, for there is just a doubt whether his legs will carry his great frame through the wear and tear of training. Mr. Cookson's sold fairly well, though not at sensational prices; and the Sheffield-lane string must have realised a famous profit, Mr. Mitchell-Innes, the owner of Glen Arthur, giving 1000 gs. for an own brother to the second in the Derby. We must not omit to mention that two colts bred in Germany, and imported by Mr. Bell, the manager of the Cobham Stud, testified to his fine judgment to the tune of 1825 gs. Mr. I'Anson's youngsters always sell well, and this time eight averaged exactly the same as Lord Scarborough's—viz., 480 gs. This fine result was mainly due to a splendid filly by Macaroni—Bonny Bell, who made 2200 gs., the highest sum ever paid for a yearling of her sex.

William Gale, who started at Lillie-bridge about a month ago to try to walk 1500 miles in 1000 hours, covering a mile and a half at the commencement of each hour, bids fair to accomplish a feat that will put Captain Barclay's historical performance quite into the shade. He has now walked upwards of 900 miles, is apparently as fresh and well as when he started, and has only lost about 5 lb. in weight.

THE TRADES CONGRESS.

Under the presidency of Mr. J. D. Prior, of Manchester, the tenth Congress of Trades Unions was opened at Leicester on Monday. There were present 136 delegates, representing 463,837 members. Mr. Merrick was elected president and Mr. G. Walker secretary. The report of the committee alluded to the Parliamentary inquiry on the subject of employers' liabilities for injuries to their servants, and recommended the Congress to authorise the reintroduction of the bill of last Session. Several other subjects were reported upon.

On Tuesday the president, Mr. D. Merrick, gave the annual address from the chair, speaking in favour of boards of conciliation and arbitration. He also replied to the remarks of Mr. Bright at Manchester last week. Mr. Macdonald, M.P., spoke on the subject of the liability of employers for injury sustained by their workmen, and said he should bring in a fresh bill on the subject. Resolutions were passed thanking Mr. Lloyd Jones for his lectures at Exeter Hall in reply to Professor Leone Levi, expressing regret at the death of Mr. Odger and sympathy with his widow and family, and condemning as inadequate the report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the question of compensation for injury by employers to workmen, and requesting Mr. Macdonald, M.P., to reintroduce his bill on the subject. In the evening the delegates attended a working men's meeting, when a resolution was passed against any interference by this country in the struggle between Turkey and Russia.

On Wednesday the Congress discussed at some length the questions of the employment of women, the enforcement of the Factory and Workshops Act, the codification of the criminal law, and the relations between London cabmen and the public. A public meeting was held in the evening, at which speeches were made in support of trades unions.

On Thursday Mr. Brassey spoke on "Work and Wages in 1877." He said that wages might be higher here than elsewhere, but labour was cheaper here from its effectiveness and saving of supervision. The English workman might claim the merit due to the cheapness in cost and excellence of quality that had gained us our pre-eminence in the export trade of the world. The present depression was not even mainly due to the conduct of workmen, but due also to that of the employers, who overstocked the markets, caused goods to be sold at ruinous prices, and engaged in speculative building. The construction of superfluous Atlantic liners on the Clyde had done more to make labour scarce, and therefore dearer, than all the machinations of local trades unions. Industry had also been injured by the abuse of the Joint Stock Acts.

The proceedings were continued throughout the week.

A board meeting of coal-miners was held at Barnsley on Tuesday, when the unanimous feeling was expressed that, if the reduction of wages was persisted in by the masters, it should not only be strongly resisted, but met by a demand on the part of the men for 6½ per cent. advance. A belief existed that the proposed reduction was in anticipation of a demand by the men.

Two hundred labourers and milesmen of the Great South of Ireland Railway have struck, demanding an increase of wages from 14s. to 18s. per week and a redress of grievances. They complain that Englishmen and others have been appointed to good places, and that Irishmen have been dismissed and strangers introduced in their stead. The men had not previously made any complaint. On Friday and Saturday, last week, large numbers of them walked in procession on the line, and even took possession of carriages and travelled by them. The strike has greatly impeded the traffic. The strike has extended to the men employed at North Wall; but there is no interruption of traffic, as the drivers are not concerned in the strike. About 2000 men are idle. The difficulty arises from an impression that the English gangers were receiving better pay than the Irish. At the Cork end of the line on Tuesday the malcontents marched in bodies over the small lines, and induced their fellow-workers to join them.

The prolonged strike on the Clyde has at last terminated. At a meeting of the Clydesdale shipwrights on Monday night it was resolved to accept arbitration on the masters' terms.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER: It restores the hair to its natural colour, and prevents the hair falling out, crusting, dandruff, and leaving the scalp in a clean healthy condition. It imparts peculiar vitality to the roots of the hair, restoring it to its youthful freshness and vigour. Daily applications of this preparation for a week or two will surely restore faded, grey, or white hair to its natural colour and richness. It is not a dye, nor does it contain any colouring matter or offensive substance whatever. Hence it does not soil the hands, the scalp, or even white linen, but procures the colour within the substance of the hair. It may be had of any respectable Chemist, Perfumer, or Dealer in Toilet Articles in the Kingdom, at 3s. 6d. per bottle. In case the dealer has not "The Mexican Hair Renewer" in stock and will not procure it for you, it will be sent direct by rail, carriage paid, on receipt of 4s. in stamps, to any part of England. Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 403, Oxford-street, London.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

WHAT BEAUTIFIES THE HAIR?

What gives luxuriance to each tress,
And places each one's tresses?
What adds a charm of perfect grace,
And Nature's gift enhances?
What gives a bright and lustrous gloss,
And what says each reviewer?
"That quite successful is the use OF 'THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER!'"

What gives luxuriance to each tress,
And makes it bright and glowing?
And keeps it free from dandruff, too,
And healthy in its growing?
What does such wonders? Ask the press,
And what says each reviewer?
"That none can equal or approach
'THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER!'"

What gives luxuriance to each tress,
Like some bright halo beaming?
What makes the hair a perfect mass
Of splendid ringlets beaming?
What gives profusion in excess?
Why, what says each reviewer?
"The choicest preparation is
'THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER!'"

What gives luxuriance to each tress,
And makes it so delightful?
Because to speak the honest truth
Is only just and rightful.
What says the people and the press,
And what says each reviewer?
"That most superb for ladies' use Is 'THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER!'"

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

It has gained for itself the highest reputation, and a decided preference over all other hair dressings, as evidenced from certificates and testimonials from the most respectable sources. Being compounded with the greatest care—combining, as it does, all the most desirable qualities of the best hair preparations of the day, without the objectionable ones—it may be relied on as the very best known to chemistry for restoring the natural colour to the hair, and causing new hair to grow on bald spots, unless the hair-glands are decayed; for if the glands are decayed and gone no stimulus can restore them; but if, as is often the case, the glands are only enfeebled, THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER will renew their vitality, and a new growth of hair will follow. Read the following testimonial:—
From Messrs. Wm. Hayes and Co., Chemists, 12, Grafton-street, Dublin:—We are recommending THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER to all our customers as the best of the kind, as we have been told by several of our friends who tried it that it has a wonderful effect in restoring and strengthening their hair."

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION FOR LADIES.

Would you have luxuriant hair,
Beautiful, and rich, and rare?
Would you have it soft and bright,
And attractive to the sight?
This you really can produce,
If you put in constant use
THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

The hair it strengthens and preserves,
And thus a double purpose serves;
It beautifies—improves it, too,
And gives it a most charming hue,
And thus in each essential way,
It fulfils your every wish each day.
THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER

If a single thread of hair
Of a gayish tint is there,
This "Renewer" will restore
All its colour as before,
And thus it is that vast renown
Does daily now its virtues crown—
THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER!

No matter whether faded grey,
Or to the like the leaves away,
It will renew the human hair,
And make it once itself appear;
It will revive its beauty,
And every ancient wish supply—
THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER!

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

The constitution of the person and the condition of the scalp have much to do with the length of time it requires for new hair to grow; also the fact that thick hair will depend much upon the vital force remaining in the hair-glands. New hairs are first seen to start around the margin of the bald spots near the permanent hair, and extending upwards until the spots are covered more or less thickly with fine short hair. Excessive brushing should be guarded against, as seen as the small hairs make their appearance; but the scalp may be sponged with rain water to advantage occasionally. The scalp may be pressed and moved on the bone by the finger ends, which quickens the circulation and softens the spots which have remained long bald. On applying the hair-dressing it softens the scalp, and in cases where the hair begins to fall a few applications will arrest it, and the new growth presents the luxuriance and colour of youth. It may be relied on as the best hair-dressing known for restoring grey hair to its original colour without dyeing it, producing the colour within the substance of the hair, imparting a peculiar vitality to the roots, preventing the hair from falling, keeping the head cool, clean, and free from dandruff, causing new hair to grow, unless the hair-glands are entirely decayed. THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER makes the hair soft, glossy, and luxuriant. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers, at 3s. 6d.; or sent to any address free on receipt of 4s. in stamps. HENRY C. GALLUP, Proprietor, 403, Oxford-street, London.

THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER.

When the hair is weak and faded,
Like the autumn leaves that fall,
Then is felt that sudden feeling
Which does every heart enthrall,
Then we look for some specific
To arrest it on its way,
And THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER
Bids it like enchantment stay.

It arrests decaying process,
Though the hair is thin and grey.
It will strengthen and improve it,
And work wonders day by day.
It restores the colour,
And brings back its beauty, too;
For THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER
Makes it look both fresh and new.

What is the greatest hair restorer,
That the present age can show,
What produces wonders daily,
Which the world at large should know?
Why, THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER
Eminently stands the first;
Thus its fame by countless thousands
Day by day is now rehearsed.

What beautifies, improves, and strengthens
Human hair of every age?
Why, this famous great restorer,
With the ladies is the rage,
And THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER
Is the very best in use.
For luxuriant tresses always Does its magic powers produce.

THE WORDS "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER" are a Trade-Mark; and the public will please see the words are on every case surrounding the bottle, and the name H. C. GALLUP is blown in the bottle. The Mexican Hair Renewer, Price 3s. 6d. Directions in German, French, and Spanish. Prepared by H. C. Gallup, 403, Oxford-street, London. May be had of most respectable Dealers in all parts of the world.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM OF HIRE.

PIANOFORTES of every description by all the most celebrated makers from Two Guineas a Quarter.

HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, from One Pound Five Shillings per Quarter.

SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES, at immense Reductions for Cash, or on the Three-Years' System.

CHAPPELL'S ENGLISH 20-GUINEA OR SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, in Canadian Walnut or Mahogany. This instrument combines good quality of tone and excellence of workmanship. Has a lovely touch, and is capable of enduring hard practice without going out of order. Owing to its size, it is admirably adapted for the boudoir or small room where space is an object. In Solid Oak or White Ash, 22 gu.; Rosewood or Walnut Case, 27 gu.

MARCH OF THE PASHAS, for the Pianoforte. By JOHN FRIDHAM. Beautifully illustrated with Portraits of Mehmet Ali, Suleiman Pasha, and H. Bart Pasha. Price, post-free, 2s. net. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW POLKA BY CH. D'ALBERT. THE FANFARE POLKA. By CHARLES D'ALBERT. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. net; Orchestra, 2s.; Septet, 2s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NEW DANCE MUSIC.

SWEETHEARTS. Waltz on Arthur Sullivan's popular Song. "One of the best waltzes ever written by the above favourite Composer." 2s. net.

TRIAL BY JURY LANCES. on Airs from Sullivan's popular Work. 2s. net.

TRIAL BY JURY QUADRILLE. 2s. net.

TRIAL BY JURY POLKA. 2s. net.

RINK GALOP. 2s. net.

PLEUR DE THE QUADRILLE. 2s. net.

PASCEMENT ALSE A Time Tempo. 2s. net.

SULLIVAN'S POLKA (New Edition). 1s. 6d. net.

The above, arranged for Full Orchestra, 2s.; Septet, 2s. each. N.B. A Complete List of M. D'Albert's Popular Dance Music will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LIST of NEW SONGS.

THE DISTANT SHORE (sung by ARTHUR SULLIVAN) 2s. net.

THE ROWAN TREE (sung by M. W. BALFE) 2s. net.

THOU'ST PASSING HENCE, MY BROTHER (sung by ARTHUR SULLIVAN) 2s. net.

IF (sung by B. McGUCKIN) PINSUTI. 2s. net.

THE CAPTIVE SKYLARK PINSUTI. 2s. net.

THE SKYLARK SINGS PINSUTI. 2s. net.

BOOKS AND FLOWERS PINSUTI. 2s. net.

OH! FOR THY WINGS PINSUTI. 2s. net.

THE EVERLASTING SHORE PINSUTI. 2s. net.

SWEETHEARTS (sung by ARTHUR SULLIVAN) 2s. net.

CRADLE SONG CARRINGTON LEE 2s. net.

THE LAST LETTER CARRINGTON LEE 2s. net.

WHEN THOU ART NIGH GOUNOD 2s. net.

I'LL SING THREE SONGS OF ARABY F. CLAY 2s. net.

THE FATE OF A ROSE HENRY SMART 2s. net.

MY LOVER ACROSS THE BLUE SEA S. ADAMS 2s. net.

THE DAY MY LOVE WENT AWAY L. GRAY 2s. net.

NOT FAR AWAY H. TOURS 2s. net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TRIAL BY JURY. Dramatic Cantata. Written by W. S. Gilbert. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed with immense success at the Strand Theatre. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d. net. TRIAL BY JURY. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d. net. THE JUDGE'S SONG. 2s. net. THE LOVE-SICK BOY. Defendant's Song. 1s. 6d. net. RUKE'S FANTASIA. 2s. net. SMALLWOOD'S FANTASIA (easy). 1s. 6d. net. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

L'ORGANISTE PRATIQUE. 240 Easy Pieces for Organ or Harmonium, by J. LEYBACH. In 2 vols., price 6s. each net; or in eight parts, each 2s. net. The above will supply a want long felt by amateur performers on the organ or harmonium, as all the pieces are very pretty without being difficult. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

SYDNEY SMITH'S PIANOFORTE METHOD. Price Five Shillings.

This unrivalled work is now firmly established as the Pianoforte Instruction-Book in nearly all the principal educational establishments in Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, the United States of America, India, Australia, New Zealand, &c. It is supplied direct by the Publishers, or may be had of any Musician in the world. London: ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FOUR NEW PIECES. Figaro. Fantasia on Mozart's Opera. Cynthia. Serenade. Souvenir de Bal. Air Danco. London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

SIR WILLIAM STERNDALE BENNETT'S BARCAROLLE (from the Fourth Concerto).—This beautiful Composition is now published in the following forms:—Piano Solo. 4s. Piano Duet. 4s. Organ, arranged by Dr. Stowell. 4s. London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

GAVOTTE, in E Minor. By SILAS. Played by Madame Esposito at her Concerts in England and America with immense success. A new edition of this celebrated Gavotte is now ready. Price 2s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square.

ASHDOWN and PARRY'S CATALOGUES OF MUSIC.

PART 1. PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONIUM.

PART 2. VIOLA.

PART 3. HARP, CONCERTINA.

PART 4. VIOLIN, VIOLONCELLO, ORCHESTRA, &c.

PART 5. FLUTE, CORNET, CLARINET, &c.

Sent gratis and post-free to any part of the world. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square, London.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST. All Music post-free at half price.

FLORIAN PASCAL'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES. Each post-free, 1s. stamps. Explanatory Note—M.E. Moderately Easy. M.D. Moderately Difficult.

Javotte, Favorite de Louis XIV. Thirteenth Edition. M.E. Danquet (de Bocherini). Eleventh Edition. M.E. Nell Gwynne (a Reminiscence of the Court of Charles II.). Third Edition. M.E.

Antrefois (Souvenir de Marguerite de Valois). Nineteenth Edition. M.D.

Marche au Tournoi. Fourth Edition. M.D.

Scrubberello (Burla Toscana). M.D.

Brac-a-Brac, No. 1. E. Third Edition. M.D.

Chanson d'Amour. M.E.

La Luthia (Esquise Espagnole). M.D.

Un Sonnet du Ciel (Ch. de Bedetti). M.D.

An Album (Lequie) (M. de Bedetti). M.D.

Air de Ballet. Sixth Edition. M.D.

Review.—"Exquisitely quaint and captivating for originality, simplicity, and attractiveness combined. These compositions are unique."

Just issued by the same Composer:—Les Vieux Temps (Gavotte). La Princesse (Gavotte Moderne).

II. WEIST HILL'S COMPOSITIONS AS PLAYED AT ALEXANDRA PALACE.

NEW VALE.—TRUE LOVE. Net 2s. "Marked by far more thought and musical ability than dance music usually is."—Review.

New Waltz. Gailoup. Bash-Bazouk. Net, 1s. 6d.

Gavotte. Madame de Pompadour. 1s. 6d.

NEW WAR MARCHES.

Osmanni. Dedicated to the Heroes of Plevna. Net, 1s. 6d.

Hi-Lart Pasha. With magnificent and lifelike Portrait. Net, 1s. 6d.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 24, Bebb's-street; and 125, Cheapside.

NEW MUSIC.

W. T. BEST'S FIRST ORGAN BOOK. Forty pages, music size. An Elementary and Practical Guide for Organ Students. This day, price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

J. W. ELLIOTT'S NEW HARMONIUM TUTOR. Containing everything necessary to be learnt for playing the Harmonium. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day. Price 1s.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

HENNING'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLIN. A celebrated German Method. Now for the first time published in English. It includes 102 Progressive Exercises. Forty pages, music size. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

EDWARD HOWELL'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLONCELLO. Founded on Romberg's Method. A Complete and Practical Instruction Book, for the use of all Students who wish to master the instrument. Twenty-four pages, music size. This day. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

DR. CALLCOTT'S GRAMMAR OF MUSIC. Boosey's New Shilling Edition. This day.

VACCAJ'S SINGING METHOD, and BALFE'S BILLAD TUTOR. Boosey's New Shilling Editions. This day.

MUSIC FOR THE SEASIDE. BOOSEY'S MUSICAL CABINET. New Numbers. Price 1s. each post-free, 1s. 1d.

Arthur Sullivan's Ten Songs. Ruff's Piano Album.

Santley's Ten New Songs. Rubinstein's Piano Album.

Virginia Gabriel's Ten Songs. Brahms's Piano Album.

A. S. Gatty's Twelve Ballads. Lamotte's Waltz Album.

Longfellow & Balfe's Ten Songs. Waldeutele's Waltz Album.

Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street, London.

TRUE HEARTS. New Song, by the Composer of "Nancy Lee." This day. Sung by Miss Ellen D'Alton.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

ONE ONLY. By WEKERLIN. This exquisite Romance, sung with equal success by Mr. Edward Lloyd and Mr. Santley, may be had of all Music-sellers in town and country. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

Price 2s. each net.

STILL WATERS RUN DEEP. By PINSUTI.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE. By PINSUTI.

AS YOU LIKE IT. By PINSUTI.

Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

FAIR IS MY LOVE. By HATTON. Mr. Santley will sing this celebrated song at all the concerts during the approaching tournee with Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 2s. net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

IF YOU WERE AT YOUR WINDOW. By MOLLOY. The Words by Weatherly. Price 2s. net.

"If you were at your window,
And I were passing by,
I wonder would you greet me,
And smile to see me nigh."

Molloy's version must be ordered. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. On the Celebrated Song. The Waltz of the Season. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by HAMILTON AIDÉ.

Remember or Forget. The Fisher.

Spanish Boat Song. Maiden Love is Six Years Old.

Let me Dream of Happy Days. Brown Eyes, or Blue Eyes.

Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ALFRED SCOTT GATTY.

Rothsay Bay. One, Morning, oh! so early.

Old Sweet Story. Parture.

May is in the Mow. Apart.

Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.

The Lost Chord. Let me Dream Again.

Living Poems. Sleep, my Love, Sleep.

Golden Days. Looking Back.

Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by F. H. COWEN.

It was a Dream. Almost.

Springing. Marguerite.

Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by DOLORES.

Destiny. The Fairies.

Clear and Cool. Clear and Cool.

Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOS.—BOOSEY and CO. have a large Stock of Instruments by all the great Makers, which they offer, according to their custom on the close of the season, at greatly reduced prices. The majority of these Pianos have been hired for one season only, and are as good as new.—Sole address, 235, Regent-street.

BOOSEY and CO.'S BRASS INSTRUMENTS FOR AMATEURS.

THE DISTIN CORNET, from 25 10s.

THE DISTIN CELEBRATED LIGHT VALVE CORNETS, 7 and 9 gu., are the best Cornets manufactured.

THE DISTIN MINIATURE CORNET-A-PISTONS, 9 gu.

THE DISTIN BALLAD HORN in C, 9 gu.

INSTRUMENTS OF DRAG AND POST HORNS AND BAND INSTRUMENTS at all prices.

THE DISTIN MONTHLY BRASS BAND JOURNAL, 10s. 6d. per annum.

The above instruments were exhibited by Boosey and Co., at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and were awarded a Prize Medal. "For power and good quality of tone, fine workmanship." Estimates for Bands of all sizes, also illustrations and prices, to be had of the sole manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 235, Regent-street, London.

MUSIC.—STANDARD SCHOOL BOOKS.

Hamilton's Pianoforte Tutor. 1s. 6d. in cloth, 2s.

G. F. West's Appendix to Hamilton's Piano Tutor. 6s.

Hamilton's Dictionary. 1s.

Hamilton's Singing Tutor. 6s.

In cloth, 8s.

Czerny's 101 Studies (Hamilton and Wallace's Edition). In two books, 4s. each, or in one book, 10s. 6d.

Czerny's Etude de Vitesse. Two books, each 6s. (W. V. Wallace's Edition), or in one book, 10s. 6d.

Sutton's Elements of Theory of Music. 2s.

Clarke's Catechism of Music. 1s. 6d. in cloth.

Clarke's Catechism of the Elements of Harmony. 2s.

London: Sole Publishers, ROBERT COCKS and Co.

A SINGING QUADRILLE. Illustrated. Composed for the Pianoforte by COTSFORD DICK. Post-free for 24 stamps. This quadrille includes every imaginable nursery favourite song. Their reproduction in this now fashionable dance will delight and please both young and old.—Edinburgh Courant.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

DON'T FORGET ME. A New and very sweet Song. By CIRO PINSUTI. Haunts the memory. Compos. C. to D. Also, by the same Composer, IN SHADOW LAND. The same arranged as Piano Solos by Brinley Richards. All post-free for 18 stamps each. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

WHAT SHALL I SING TO THEE. For Soprano or Tenor. The favorite song of the day. Words by R. M. Music by CIRO PINSUTI. 2s.; post-free at half price. London: Sole Publishers, ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Order everywhere.

NEW MUSIC.

KING HENRY'S SONG. By ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Introduced in the revival of "Henry VIII." Just published, Price 4s. Half price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

THE FIRE KING. New Cantata. By WALTER AUSTIN. Produced at the Leeds Festival on Wednesday Evening, Sept. 19. Piano and Vocal score, price 6s.; post-free, 6s. 6d. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

THE FIRE KING.—THE PAST IS BUT A TROUBLED DREAM. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd. Also, TO ARMS! War Song. Price 4s. each. Half price.—METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

SEA NYMPHS. The New Operetta. By LECOCQ (now being represented at the Folly Theatre). The Libretto (written by H. B. Farnie) and the Music complete, with all stage directions, published at 2s. 6d., post-free, in Metzler and Co.'s Edition of Comic Operas. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WHISPERING KISSES. The New Song. By E. JONAS (from the popular French play, "Bébé"). Sung by Miss Violet Cameron in "The Circle" at the Folly Theatre with the greatest possible success, and is nightly encored. Post-free, 18 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MR. BARTON MCGUCKIN. MINE OWN. A New Song. By H. GADSBY; Words by F. E. Weatherly. Price 4s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MADAME LIEBHART. FAR FROM HOME. New Song. By G. B. ALLEN. Sung with the greatest success at Madame Liebhart's Concerts. Price 4s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

EDITH'S SONG. From Tennyson's "Harold." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

A WINTER'S TALE. From Tennyson's "Harold." "Two young lovers in wintry weather." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WAR SONGS OF THE EAST. By H. B. FARNIE. In handsome cover, price 1s.; post-free, 18 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA SERENADE. Waltz. By METRA. A most attractive and popular waltz. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA VAGUE. Waltz. By METRA. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

W. SMALLWOOD'S NEW PIECES for PIANOFORTE. Illustrated. 10s. 6d.

CRYSTAL LEWDIOPUS.

AVELETTE. Gondola Song.

FAIRY DREAMS.

Post-free, 18 stamps each. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. Now ready. New Illustrated Book. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 231. Nine Stops. Viola Dolce, Seraphone, &c. Price 28 gu.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 312. Ten Stops. With Octave Coupler and Sub-Bass. Price 40 gu.

METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. Section I.—No. 1. Pianoforte Tutor. FORBES BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S NEW EDITION of POPULAR WORKS. For List of Pieces already published Catalogues will be forwarded, post-free, on application to FORBES BROTHERS, 272, Regent-street, London; and Cross-street, South King-street, Manchester.

JOSEPH P. KNIGHT'S NEW SONGS; Words by Weatherly. RALPH THE RANGER. This Day, 1s. 6d.

THE WATCHMAN. C. for Bass; E flat, Baritone. 2s. net.

THE ANCHOR. F. for Bass; G. for Baritone. 2s. net.

PEPITA (Gipsy Song). G. Mezzo-Sopr.; A. Soprano. 2s. net.

Sole Publisher, W. MORLEY, Junr., 70, Upper-street, N.

BAISER DE PRINTEMPS. LAMOTHE'S loveliest and most popular Waltz, played with greatest success at all Continental Festivals, and by all the Regimental Bands of the Service and Volunteers. 2s. net. CUMINGHAM BOOSEY and Co., and all Music-sellers.

A. S. GATTY'S BEST SONGS.

A DAISY SONG. TRUE TILL DEATH.

Sung by Madame Cave-Ashton. Sung by Mr. Maybrick.

CUMINGHAM BOOSEY and Co., and all Music-sellers.

DRUMMER-BOY'S POLKA. By ARDITI. Great success. Re-demanded nightly with acclamation. "The Drummer-Boy's Polka," by the same composer, introducing the drummers of the Goldstrams, was likewise spontaneously re-demanded."—Daily Telegraph. Price 3s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LE TORTORELLE VALSE. By ARDITI. Also encored nightly. "A delightfully flowing and melodious waltz, from the pen of Signor Arditi. 'Le Tortorelle' obtained a hearty encore."—Daily Telegraph, Aug. 13. Price 4s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, W.

P. J. SMITH and SON'S IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS. "The best and most substantial instrument produced." 9, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET, W.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violas, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarinets, Flautoletto, Guitars, Banjos, Accordions, Flutinas, Cornets, Saxhorns, Drums, and Musical Instruments of every description. Largest assortment in the kingdom. BUTLER'S Manufacturing, 25, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 gu. upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, No. 33, Great Pultney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufacturing, No. 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

NOTICE.—Manufacture of SPOONS and FORKS.—Messrs. ELKINGTON and CO. beg to announce that, having succeeded in carrying out several important improvements in the above manufacture, they are now enabled to offer their guaranteed qualities at such prices as, while fully maintaining their high quality, place them within the reach of all classes. Revised Illustrated Price-List can be had on application. Address—ELKINGTON and CO. LONDON—22, Regent-street, W.

LIVERPOOL.—25, Church-street.

MANCHESTER.—St. Ann's-square; or to the Manufactory, NEWHALL-STREET, BIRMINGHAM.

GASELIERS, in Crystal, Glass, Ormolu, or Bronze.—Medieval Fittings, &c. A large assortment always on view. Every article marked with plain figures. D. HULETT and Co., Manufacturers, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

AT PETER ROBINSON'S
WAREHOUSE FOR BLACK GOODS,
REGENT-STREET.
For TWO GUINEAS and up to FIVE GUINEAS COMPLETE.
CHOICE BLACK MATERIAL COSTUMES.
In the New Style of Skirt.
(Princess Polonaise and Skirt.)
Patterns and Photos free.

URGENT MOURNING.
"ON RECEIPT OF LETTER or TELEGRAM,"
MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on application—no matter the distance—with an excellent fitting Dressmaker (if required), without extra charge.
PETER ROBINSON, 226, 228, 230, 232, Regent-street, London.

DEEP MOURNING ORDERS.
DRESSES, Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, and all make-up articles, in the most appropriate and best styles, at the lowest possible cost. Dressmaking and Millinery, by clever and expert artists.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by PETER ROBINSON, 226, 228, 230, 232, Regent-street, London. The Court and Family Mourning Warehouse.

BLACK SILKS.
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, is now selling some remarkably CHEAP BLACK SILKS, productions of the best makers, from 2s. to 4s. per yard less than the Lyons market prices. Excellent qualities at 2s. 6d., and 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 3s. 8d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 11s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 13s. 6d., 14s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 16s. 6d., 17s. 6d., 18s. 6d., 19s. 6d., 20s. 6d., 21s. 6d., 22s. 6d., 23s. 6d., 24s. 6d., 25s. 6d., 26s. 6d., 27s. 6d., 28s. 6d., 29s. 6d., 30s. 6d., 31s. 6d., 32s. 6d., 33s. 6d., 34s. 6d., 35s. 6d., 36s. 6d., 37s. 6d., 38s. 6d., 39s. 6d., 40s. 6d., 41s. 6d., 42s. 6d., 43s. 6d., 44s. 6d., 45s. 6d., 46s. 6d., 47s. 6d., 48s. 6d., 49s. 6d., 50s. 6d., 51s. 6d., 52s. 6d., 53s. 6d., 54s. 6d., 55s. 6d., 56s. 6d., 57s. 6d., 58s. 6d., 59s. 6d., 60s. 6d., 61s. 6d., 62s. 6d., 63s. 6d., 64s. 6d., 65s. 6d., 66s. 6d., 67s. 6d., 68s. 6d., 69s. 6d., 70s. 6d., 71s. 6d., 72s. 6d., 73s. 6d., 74s. 6d., 75s. 6d., 76s. 6d., 77s. 6d., 78s. 6d., 79s. 6d., 80s. 6d., 81s. 6d., 82s. 6d., 83s. 6d., 84s. 6d., 85s. 6d., 86s. 6d., 87s. 6d., 88s. 6d., 89s. 6d., 90s. 6d., 91s. 6d., 92s. 6d., 93s. 6d., 94s. 6d., 95s. 6d., 96s. 6d., 97s. 6d., 98s. 6d., 99s. 6d., 100s. 6d., 101s. 6d., 102s. 6d., 103s. 6d., 104s. 6d., 105s. 6d., 106s. 6d., 107s. 6d., 108s. 6d., 109s. 6d., 110s. 6d., 111s. 6d., 112s. 6d., 113s. 6d., 114s. 6d., 115s. 6d., 116s. 6d., 117s. 6d., 118s. 6d., 119s. 6d., 120s. 6d., 121s. 6d., 122s. 6d., 123s. 6d., 124s. 6d., 125s. 6d., 126s. 6d., 127s. 6d., 128s. 6d., 129s. 6d., 130s. 6d., 131s. 6d., 132s. 6d., 133s. 6d., 134s. 6d., 135s. 6d., 136s. 6d., 137s. 6d., 138s. 6d., 139s. 6d., 140s. 6d., 141s. 6d., 142s. 6d., 143s. 6d., 144s. 6d., 145s. 6d., 146s. 6d., 147s. 6d., 148s. 6d., 149s. 6d., 150s. 6d., 151s. 6d., 152s. 6d., 153s. 6d., 154s. 6d., 155s. 6d., 156s. 6d., 157s. 6d., 158s. 6d., 159s. 6d., 160s. 6d., 161s. 6d., 162s. 6d., 163s. 6d., 164s. 6d., 165s. 6d., 166s. 6d., 167s. 6d., 168s. 6d., 169s. 6d., 170s. 6d., 171s. 6d., 172s. 6d., 173s. 6d., 174s. 6d., 175s. 6d., 176s. 6d., 177s. 6d., 178s. 6d., 179s. 6d., 180s. 6d., 181s. 6d., 182s. 6d., 183s. 6d., 184s. 6d., 185s. 6d., 186s. 6d., 187s. 6d., 188s. 6d., 189s. 6d., 190s. 6d., 191s. 6d., 192s. 6d., 193s. 6d., 194s. 6d., 195s. 6d., 196s. 6d., 197s. 6d., 198s. 6d., 199s. 6d., 200s. 6d., 201s. 6d., 202s. 6d., 203s. 6d., 204s. 6d., 205s. 6d., 206s. 6d., 207s. 6d., 208s. 6d., 209s. 6d., 210s. 6d., 211s. 6d., 212s. 6d., 213s. 6d., 214s. 6d., 215s. 6d., 216s. 6d., 217s. 6d., 218s.

RESERVES ADVANCING TO THE FRONT.—A SKETCH

BEFORE PLEVNA, BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1877.

THE BATTLES AROUND PLEVNA.

The Russian and Roumanian army beleaguering the fortified positions of Osman Pasha on the hills around Plevna have been engaged in a series of terribly fierce and sanguinary conflicts, with very doubtful prospects of success. The history of these actions must begin with Tuesday week, the 11th inst., when they assaulted and captured several of the Turkish redoubts, at a frightful cost of life, after bombarding and cannonading them since Friday, the 7th. The important Grivitza or Grivica redoubt was also taken. The Daily Telegraph of last Wednesday contains a letter from one of its Special Correspondents who was at Plevna with Osman Pasha, and who gives us the only account from the Turkish side. He states that he rode out of Plevna last Saturday, with six Circassians, and passed through the Russian lines, getting away unobserved; that he arrived at Orkhanieh after a long ride, and thence went on to Sophia, whence his telegraphed letter is dated. It speaks much of the frightful carnage and slaughter of the Russians at Plevna, but affords scarcely any precise information. The Special Correspondent of the Daily News with the Russians contributes a very animated and interesting narrative, which was telegraphed in full to that enterprising journal, and which we take leave here to borrow, with due acknowledgments of its value and literary merit:—

PRELIMINARY REPULSE OF A TURKISH ASSAULT.

"When the battle of Tuesday began it was about eleven o'clock, and I was on the ridge behind Radisovo. We had just lunched, when suddenly a lively fire was heard on the skirmish line away to the left, in the direction of the Lovcha road, followed by a heavy fusillade. Mounting my horse, I rode down the ridge behind Radisovo, where the fire seemed raging hottest. For some time it was impossible to ascertain whether the Turks or Russians were attacking. The fog and smoke were so thick that nothing could be seen. It was only by the fusillade that the progress of the fight could be judged. I afterwards ascertained it began in this wise:—

"Skobelev and Meritinsky, in order to begin the attack on their side upon the redoubt, had to advance their troops on to the hill immediately fronting the redoubts in the bend of the Sophia road. It was from this hill that the attack had been made upon Skobelev four days before, and the hill had since been abandoned by the Turks, except a few skirmishers. Skobelev advanced at eleven o'clock to take possession of this hill. The Turks immediately opened fire upon him. This was the beginning of it.

"The Turkish attack spread from the Lovcha road over Plevna, and up the Radisovo ridge, a position which has already been described. In the middle of this ridge is a low hill or hump. From this point down to the end of the ridge, which is scarcely a mile from Plevna, the Russians had planted twenty-eight guns, the greater part of which were not more than 1000 or 1200 yards from the Turkish redoubts and trenches. These guns were a continual threat and danger to the Turks, who had suddenly decided to try and carry the Radisovo ridge. The attack here was directed principally against the hump or hill already spoken of, opposite one of their own redoubts. It was impossible, owing to the fog and smoke, to see the position of the combatants on either side. The fight lasted until nearly two o'clock. The Turks made three attacks upon Skobelev, which were successfully repulsed, and two on the Radisovo ridge.

"The three fights with Skobelev were short, quick, and sharp, neither lasting more than five or ten minutes. This was owing to Skobelev's manner of defence. He ordered his troops to reserve their fire until the Turks came within a hundred yards, then to open upon them a sudden and terrible fusillade against which no troops could stand. This drove them back almost immediately. Three times they came to the charge, and three times were they repulsed in the same sudden and furious manner.

"The two attacks upon the Radisovo ridge lasted longer, and appeared to be repulsed with less ease. Not until about two o'clock did the fire die away, showing that the fight for the moment was over. Then the fog lifted slightly, and the position on both sides could be seen. The Turks in the trenches down towards Plevna were trying occasional shots, distinguished by little puffs of smoke, with masses here and there in the redoubts, showing, with an occasional shot from their cannon, that they had been repulsed with heavy loss—how much it is impossible to state; but, as the loss of the Russians fighting under cover was more than 500, that of the Turks must have been between 2000 and 3000. The three days' artillery fire had evidently done them, however, very little harm, and it showed how strong they felt themselves to risk a repulse, knowing to a certainty that it would be followed almost immediately by a Russian attack. Indeed, in my opinion, this repulse did more to prepare the way for the Russian attack than the whole three days' artillery fire had done. They had suffered severely, and must have been more or less discouraged and demoralised, as troops—even the best—always are at such a moment. It was most favourable, therefore, for the Russian attack, which was begun almost immediately; so that the fire had hardly ceased half an hour when it began again with unexampled fury.

THE BATTLE OF KARAHASSANKOI: TURKISH INFANTRY TAKING THE RUSSIAN POSITION IN A BULGARIAN GRAVEYARD.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

"I took my stand on the old position near the Lovcha road, between Krüdener's left and Skobelev's right, from which point I had as good a view as could be obtained for the fog and smoke at the bottom of the Radisovo ridge. Immediately to the right of Plevna, where Kriloff commanded, and round the redoubts in the bend of the Sophia road, where Skobelev was attacking, the fog was so thick that the greater part of the time I could only follow the attack by the sound and the smoke. What I now relate I saw with my own eyes, and part I have learned from Skobelev himself and the officers who took part in the combat.

KRILOFF'S UNSUCCESSFUL ATTACK.

"A little to my right, where General Kriloff attacked the redoubts down near Plevna, the fire had been raging with fury nearly two hours, a steady, continuous roll and crash, intermingled with the louder thunder of cannon, which filled the air with the uproar of the bullets and shells. During all this time there was little to be seen along the crest of the Radisovo ridge, where the Russian guns could be perceived at work, with figures flitting round them, dimly seen through the smoke, strangely magnified by the intervention of the fog, until the gunners appeared like giants, and the guns themselves, magnified and distorted by the same medium, appeared like huge uncouth monsters, from whose throats at every instant leaped forth globes of flame. There were moments when these flashes seemed to light up everything around them. Then the guns and gunners appeared for an instant with fearful distinctness, red and lurid, as though tinged with blood. Then they sank back again in shadowy indistinctness. The uproar of the battle rose and swelled until it became fearful to hear—like the continuous roar of an angry sea beating against a rock-bound coast, combined with that of a thunderstorm, and with the strange unearthly sounds heard on board a ship when labouring in a gale.

"This terrible storm of battle continued without ceasing for nearly two hours. The Russian guns were pouring their fire into the redoubt, and the Russian infantry into the trenches, while the attacking columns were advancing cautiously under cover of the smoke and fog and standing cern, to get a position as near as possible before making the final rush. At about five o'clock the smoke lifted again, carried away by a gust of wind. At this moment I saw before the redoubt, down near Plevna, a mass of Russian soldiers rise up in a field of Indian corn, and push forward with a shout. The Turkish fire just then seemed to have been dominated—nearly silenced—by the terrible storm of shot and shell poured in by the Russians. The moment seemed favourable for the assault. Either the Turks were abandoning these redoubts, or they were lying behind the parapet awaiting the attack. Which was it? we asked. The question was soon answered. The Russian shout had scarcely died away when there flashed along the parapet of the redoubt a stream of fire that swayed backwards and forwards like a current of electricity, while the smoke rose over the redoubt in one heavy white mass. One continuous crash filled the air with bullets, from which, to the spectator looking on, it did not seem possible for even a rabbit to escape.

"Into this storm of bullets plunged the Russians, with a shout as though of joy, and then disappeared into a little hollow, and for the moment were lost to view. Then they emerged again, disappeared in the low ground at the foot of the glacis, rushing onward as though the bullets were but paper pellets, but, alas! sadly diminished in number. Would it be possible for them to reach the parapet? Was it possible for flesh and blood to break that circle of fire? To me it seemed utterly out of the question. Did but one bullet in ten find its billet, not one of those gallant fellows would return through that corn-field. While waiting to see them emerge from this little hollow my excitement was so great, my hand trembled so, that I could not hold the field-glass to my eyes, and for the moment was obliged to trust my naked vision. They were evidently very near the redoubt. A rush might do it. Victory was almost within their grasp, but they required a fresh accession of strength; a rush of new men from behind; another wave coming forward with new impetus to carry the first up over the glacis; a second wave, and perhaps a third, each bringing new impulsion, new strength. I looked for this wave of reserves. I looked to see if reinforcements were coming up—if the General was doing anything to help the gallant fellows struggling there against that circle of fire. I looked in vain. My heart sank within me, for I saw that all this bravery, all this loss of life, would be useless. While these poor fellows were madly fighting their lives away by hundreds in a desperate struggle, when the victory was trembling in the balance, not a man was sent to help them. They were left to die overwhelmed, broken, vanquished; it was sublime and was pitiful. I see a few of them struggle up the glacis one by one. They drop. They are not followed, and here they come again, a confused mass of human beings rushing madly back across that corn-field, less than half of those who went forward. When this disorderly remnant was seen flying back, broken, destroyed, two more battalions were sent to pick them up, and carry them back to the assault. Two more battalions! They might as well have sent a corporal and two more men. Two more regiments were what was required, and they should have been sent at the moment when that mass of men rose up in the corn-field and went on with a cheer. The new troops would have reached the glacis just as the assault began to waver, would have carried the hesitating mass onward, and all would have gone into the redoubt together. Instead of this, General Kriloff sent two battalions, and that when it was too late. The poor fellows went over the hill singing gaily, and disappeared in the fog and smoke. I could have cried for pity, for I knew that most of them went uselessly to simple slaughter. It was impossible for these fresh battalions to renew the assault with the slightest chance of success. These two battalions, like the rest, were doomed to almost certain destruction.

"The fog again settled down over the redoubt, hiding Turks and Russians alike. I could tell by that fearful rifle fire that they were going at it again, and I turned away. Soon the cessation of the firing told that it was over, but the second attack was more easily repulsed than the first, and I perceived likewise that the whole Russian attack made from the Radisovo ridge by Krüdener and Kriloff was repulsed all along the line. It was inevitable; I foresaw it from the first. The mistake was made and repeated continually by the Russians of sending too few men against such positions, according to old rules made before breech-loading days.

SKOBELEFF'S CAPTURE OF THE TWO REDOUBTS.

"I will now relate the events which occurred on the Russian extreme left, commanded by Prince Meritinsky and General Skobelev. Here the attack was conducted in a very different manner. While the battle was raging in front and to the right of me, it raged with no less fury round the redoubts and on the other side of the Lovcha road, but up to the moment of the second repulse of Kriloff, Skobelev had not yet made his assault. He had well prepared the ground, however. At four o'clock he had brought down twenty pieces of artillery to the spur of the ridge overlooking Plevna. Not more than a thousand yards distant from the redoubt, I saw an immense volume of smoke rising, and heard a terrible thunder, which was not more than five or six hundred yards away on my left. It was evident that Skobelev, risking his artillery in this advanced position, was determined to make a desperate effort to capture the redoubt in front of him. The redoubt Skobelev was attacking was a double redoubt in the bend of the Lovcha road down near Plevna. He had advanced his troops down the slope of the mountain to within easy range. As the Turks immediately opened fire upon him from the redoubt he returned the fire with steadiness and precision, putting his men under cover as much as possible, his cannon pouring a steady stream of shell and canister into the redoubt as well. In fact, he worked his cannon so much that several pieces have been spoiled. He had evidently determined to risk everything to capture this redoubt, and if Plevna were not taken it would not be his fault. For three hours he kept up this fire, and just after Kriloff's second repulse, the Turkish fire having somewhat relaxed, dominated by the Russian, he thought the moment had come for making the assault. He had four regiments of the Line and four battalions of sharpshooters. Still keeping up his murderous fire, he formed under its cover two regiments, the Vladimirovski and another, in the little hollow at the foot of the low hill on which was built the redoubt, together with two battalions of sharpshooters, not more than twelve hundred yards from the scarp. Then, placing himself in the best position for watching the result, he ceased fire and ordered the advance. He ordered the assaulting party not to fire, and they rushed forward with their guns on their shoulders, with music playing and banners flying, and disappeared in the fog and smoke. Skobelev is the only General who places himself near enough to feel the pulse of a battle. The advancing column was indistinctly seen, a dark mass in the fog and smoke. Feeling, as it were, every throb of the battle, he saw this line begin to waver and hesitate. Upon the instant he hurled forward a rival regiment to support, and again watched the result. This new force carried the mass further on with its momentum; but the Turkish redoubt flamed and smoked, and poured forth such a torrent of bullets that the line was again shaken. Skobelev stood in this shower of balls unhurt. All his escort were killed or wounded, even to the little Kirghiz, who received a bullet in the shoulder. Again he saw the line hesitate and waver, and he flung his fourth and last regiment, the Libensky, on the glacis. Again this new wave carried the preceding ones forward until they were almost on the scarp; but that deadly shower of bullets poured upon them; men dropped by hundreds, and the result still remained doubtful. The line once more wavered and hesitated. Not a moment was to be lost if the redoubt was to be carried. Skobelev had now only two battalions of sharpshooters left, the best in his detachments. Putting himself at the head of these, he dashed forward on horseback. He picked up the stragglers; he reached the wavering, fluctuating mass, and gave it the inspiration of his own courage and instruction. He picked the whole mass up and carried it forward with a rush and a cheer. The whole redoubt was a mass of flame and smoke, from which screams, shouts, and cries of agony and defiance arose, with the deep-mouthed bellowing of the cannon, and above all the steady, awful crash of that deadly rifle fire. Skobelev's sword was cut in two in the middle. Then a moment later, when just on the point of leaping the ditch, horse and man rolled together to the ground, the horse dead or wounded, the rider untouched. He sprang to his feet with a shout, then, with a formidable, savage yell, the whole mass of men streamed over the ditch, over the scarp and counterscarp, over the parapet, and swept into the redoubt like a hurricane. Their bayonets made short work of the Turks still remaining. Then a joyous cheer told that the redoubt was captured, and that at last one of the defences of Plevna was in the hands of the Russians. Having seen as much as I have seen of the Turkish infantry fire from behind trenches and walls, I thought it was beyond flesh and blood to break it, a belief which had just been strengthened by Kriloff's repulse, which I had just witnessed. Skobelev proved the contrary; but at what a sacrifice? In that short rush of a few hundred yards, three thousand men had been left on the hillside, on the glacis, the scarp, and the ditch—one fourth of his whole force."

CAPTURE OF THE GRIVICA REDOUBT.

The narrative in the Daily News is here continued by a second observer of this series of conflicts, writing next day (Wednesday week):—

"When we rode to the rear we saw no reason to doubt that the Grivica redoubt was still in Turkish hands, knowing as we did that the assault made upon it at three o'clock had been repulsed, and we set down the smoke rising round below it to an attempt on the part of the Turks to drive back the Roumanian artillery, which had passed the redoubt, and were in action, absolutely in its front. In reality, however, the Grivica redoubt fell that night before the determined bravery of the Roumanians. I have obtained the following information concerning this struggle:—

It appears that at half-past two p.m. the redoubt was attacked by two Roumanian brigades, each consisting of four battalions, and three battalions of Russians. The Roumanians attacked from the east and south-east, the Russians from the south and south-west. The attack was made in the following manner:—First a line of skirmishers, with men carrying scaling ladders, gabions, and fascines among them. The latter had their rifles slung on their backs, and were ordered in no case to fire, but merely to run forward, fill up the ditch, and place their ladders behind. Then followed the second line in company column formation for the attack, followed by the third line to support the assault.

As above stated, the attack was made by the Roumanians, and it is said that by some mistake the Russians arrived half an hour too late. Be that as it may, the assault was repulsed, and all retired except two companies of infantry, which rallied, and, keeping under cover, maintained a brisk fire against the work.

At half-past five the attack was renewed by a battalion of the Roumanian militia, followed by two Russian battalions of the 17th and 18th Regiments. The redoubt was then carried, and the Turks withdrew to the other redoubt a little to the north of the captured work. But it was soon apparent that the redoubt could not be held without reinforcements, and three Roumanian battalions, with a battery of artillery, were ordered forward. They lost their way, however, in the fog, and were thus precluded from rendering the required assistance, consequently when the Turks returned to the attack the allies were driven out.

The third assault soon followed, and the work was finally captured at seven p.m. Four guns and a standard were the trophies of the feat of arms. More than once during the night did the Turks advance with the shouts of "Allah!" but no serious attack was made.

RECAPTURE OF REDOUBTS BY THE TURKS.

The two redoubts on the south-western road, which General Skobelev had captured on the Tuesday, were retaken by Osman Pasha next day, of which, again, the Daily News Special Correspondent gives the following account:—

At sunrise (on Wednesday week) the Turks began an attack upon the captured redoubts, and the storm of battle again raged with fury here, while all was quiet everywhere else. The desperate attack of the Turks was repulsed. Another attack was made, and another repulse; and this continued all day, until the Turks had attacked and been beaten five successive times. The Russian losses were becoming fearful. General Skobelev had lost, he thinks, 2000 men in attacking the redoubt. By the afternoon he had lost 3000 more in holding it, while his battalions shrivelled up and shrank away as if by magic. One battalion of sharpshooters had been reduced to 100 men. A company which had been 150 was now forty. An immense proportion of officers were killed or were wounded. Only one commander of a regiment is alive; scarcely a head of a battalion left. Two officers of the staff are killed, one of whom was Verestchagin, brother of the famous artist. Another brother was wounded. General Dobrovolsky, commander of sharpshooters, was killed. One officer was blown to pieces by the explosion of a cannon. Captain Kurapatkin, chief of the staff, standing beside this officer, had his hair singed and suffered a severe contusion. Only Skobelev himself remained untouched. He seems to bear a charmed life. He visited the redoubt three or four times during the day, encouraging the soldiers, telling them help would soon arrive; Plevna would soon be taken; victory would soon crown their efforts; telling them it was the final, decisive blow struck for their country; for the honour and glory of the Russian arms; and they all replied with the same cheery shouts, while their numbers were dwindling away by hundreds. He again and again sent for reinforcements, and again and again informed the Commander-in-Chief that the position was untenable. The afternoon wore away, and no reinforcements came. General Levitsky, as we have been informed, formally refused reinforcements, either because he thought the position, in spite of General Skobelev's representations, was tenable, or because he had no reinforcements to give. General Kriloff, on his own responsibility, sent the remnant of a regiment which had attacked the redoubt which we saw rush forward, and then back through that Indian-corn-field. Of the 2500 there was barely 1000 left, so it was utterly incapable of going into action that day, and even this regiment arrived too late. General Skobelev had left the redoubt at four o'clock to go to his tent on a woody hill opposite. He had been there scarcely an hour when he was informed that the Turks were again attacking the right flank on the Lovcha road immediately above Plevna. He galloped forward to see, and was met by an orderly with the news that the Turks were again attacking the redoubt a sixth time. He dashed forward towards the redoubt in hopes of reaching it in time, but was met by a stream of his own men flying back. They were exhausted by forty-eight hours' incessant fighting, and were worn out, hungry, and dying of thirst and fatigue. Owing to the inactivity of the Russians during the day, the Turks had been enabled to collect an overwhelming force, which had made one last desperate effort and had succeeded in driving the Russians out. One bastion was held till the last by a handful of men. They refused to fly, and were slaughtered to the last man.

"It was just after this I met General Skobelev, the first time that day. He was in a fearful state of excitement and fury. His uniform was covered with mud and filth, his sword broken, his Cross of St. George twisted round on his shoulder, his face black with powder and smoke, his eyes haggard and bloodshot, and his voice quite gone. He spoke in a hoarse whisper. I never before saw such a picture of battle as he presented. I saw him again in his tent at night. He was quite calm and collected. He said, 'I have done my best; I could do no more. My detachment is half destroyed; my regiments do not exist; I have no officers left; they sent me no reinforcements; and I have lost three guns.' They were three of the four guns which he placed in the redoubt upon taking it, only one of which his retreating troops had been able to carry off. 'Why did they refuse you reinforcements?' I asked. 'Who was to blame?' 'I blame nobody,' he replied. 'It is the will of God.'"

The Grand Duke Nicholas, in a bulletin dated Saturday last, states that the Russian batteries cannonaded Plevna all day on Thursday and Friday week, the enemy not replying. Yesterday week the Turks made an energetic attempt to recover the Grivica redoubt; but, after an engagement lasting three hours and a quarter, they were repulsed. The Grand Duke states that the Russian losses before Plevna amount to about 12,500 men, and that of the Roumanians down to yesterday week to 3000. Adding the loss yesterday week in the defence of the Grivica redoubt, we get a total of 16,000 men. The more recent operations and movements around Plevna, to the latest hour of preparing our weekly publication for the press on Thursday evening, will be recorded in our current notice of the progress of the war.

Captain Frank Johnstone, Royal Artillery, late Adjutant at the Royal Military Academy, has been appointed to succeed Captain Hume, as Deputy-Governor of Dartmoor Prison.

General Grant was presented with the freedom of the city of Glasgow on Thursday week. The Lord Provost, in making the presentation, referred to the General as being descended from a good old Scottish stock, and said he might be called the Wellington of America. On the following day General Grant was presented with the freedom of the burgh of Ayr. In returning thanks for the honour, he expressed the pleasure it gave him to form so close a connection with the land and home of Burns. The General and party returned to Glasgow on Saturday afternoon, and went to Tarbet, on Loch Lomond, where they spent Sunday. From Tarbet they went to Inverary on Monday. They will make a round of the English provincial towns in the order of Newcastle-on-Tyne, York, Sheffield, Birmingham, and Leamington, whence they go to London.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Greece, politically and socially, has sustained a severe loss in the person of the valiant old Admiral Canaris, who died a few years since at the great age of ninety years—Duke Schomberg's age; Catinat's also (I think). Albeit the Admiral was the most famous worthy in the kingdom of the Hellenes, I fail to find his name in "Men of the Time," a sufficiently exhaustive repertory, nevertheless. I have no difficulty in turning up the names of Bavius and Mavius, Esquires (who were poets), and the "great Mr. Twamley, the inventor of the patent floodgate iron." What is Fame?

Heroic old Canaris, who was originally the captain of a merchant-vessel trading between Odessa and Constantinople, fought all through the Greek War of Independence, and, with his fire-ships, did immeasurable damage to the Turkish navy. He was repeatedly Prime Minister of Greece; but was always glad to resign office, and to retire to his cottage and cultivate his cabbages, as Cincinnatus did. I fancy that when I was in Athens last spring somebody told me that the Admiral could neither read nor write. However that may have been, it is certain that he made at least a beginning in the study of those accomplishments no less than fifty years ago; since I find in a note to one of Béranger's songs, written in 1827, an anecdote describing Canaris (even then a renowned man) coming out of school with his books and slate under his arm, and surrounded by a crowd of little Greek boys.

Lord Sandon has been cheered to the echo lately at Liverpool and at Burslem for two solid speeches in which his Lordship expressed the opinion that the Fine Arts need only a minimum of encouragement from the State, and that the patronage of art had best, in the main, be left to private enterprise and private patronage. I am, I trust, neither a Protectionist nor a Tory; but I fail to see how, in any civilised country, anything of the nature of a national school of art can flourish without constant aid and protection from the Government. Historical painting in England was in a literally deplorable state (read Haydon's life, and consider Hilton's career) until the building of the new Houses of Parliament gave the Government an opportunity of employing some of the foremost of our historical painters; and the noblest branch of pictorial art is again languishing because the Government have no more commissions to give. Sir Henry Cole would never have been able to organise the vast national Science and Art Schools, of which the nucleus is South Kensington, without direct support and assistance from the State; and the great Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862, albeit financially undertaken by private guarantors, were under the immediate patronage of the Consort of the Sovereign, were administered by Royal Commissions, and were substantially public enterprises.

There is at present, I grant, an immense demand for works of art of the gentle and pretty kind; and the picture-dealers, I hear, are making a very good thing of it. But, assuming for the sake of argument that we had in our midst professors of sacred and historic art of the calibre of an Ary Scheffer, a Paul Delaroche, a Horace Vernet, a Kaulbach, a Cornelius, or an Overbeck, who, if you please, is to purchase their works? My Lord Atticus, will you commission a picture of the Battle of Blenheim (I do not know of a single grand picture of Marlborough's famous victory), twenty feet by fifteen? Mr. Macenas, M.P., would you care about an example of mural decoration as colossal, say, as the hemicycle of the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris? I hope that I shall not be met by the mischievously fallacious assertion that the English people have no aptitude for the pursuit of High Art. The English have an aptitude for whatever is noble; and a nation which has produced two of the grandest epics in the whole world and the very grandest series of dramas that the world has ever seen should be ashamed of withholding public patronage from painters capable of illustrating on the largest scale the works of Milton, of Spenser, and of Shakespeare. We saw what private patronage could do in that direction in the case of Alderman Boydell. If the Alderman had had the State at his back, we might have possessed long since a thoroughly National school of painting and sculpture.

The contractors for building the new Law Courts in the Strand cannot, I should say, be accused of sluggishness in the performance of their task; and Mr. Street's colossal pile seems to be rising with the rapidity of Aladdin's palace. But just as the Law Courts grow grander and more imposing to the view, so does poor little old Temple Bar, close by, seem to assume every day a more shrunken, dilapidated, and woe-begone appearance. The dejected structure has long since been doomed to destruction by public opinion, and more recently the sentence has been confirmed by a vote of the Court of Common Council; but still do the "proper authorities"—whoever they may be—persist in not pulling the tottering Bar down. I believe even that there is an influential party in the City who not only resent the removal of the shambling structure, but cherish hopes that it may be permitted for many a long year to obstruct the traffic between the East and the West of the metropolis.

It is a sad pity, of course, to have to raze to the ground an edifice which was designed by Sir Christopher Wren; but I would respectfully point out that more than a hundred years ago we were fain to pull down a much more beautiful Bar—the splendid Tudor gate, which spanned King-street, Westminster, and which was designed (so tradition declares) by Hans Holbein. The apartments over that gate were, at the beginning of the eighteenth century, in the occupation of Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester; and there Mrs. Delany (Swift's Mrs. Delany, Queen Charlotte's Mrs. Delany, Lady Llanover's Mrs. Delany) spent a part of her girlhood. I am sorry for Holbein's gate. I am not sorry for Temple Bar. I shall throw up my cap when the Bar is pulled down; and, proceeding to the Cock Tavern, I shall bid the plump head waiter fetch me a pint of port, wherein I shall drink oblivion to an ugly old monument which awakens only the gloomiest of historical memories.

Meanwhile, Mr. George Edmund Street, most ingeniously combinator of Gothic architects, has another important labour in hand at Dublin. The restoration on a scale of great magnificence of the venerable Christ Church Cathedral, the cost of which has been defrayed by the individual munificence of an Irish gentleman, Mr. Henry Roe, is rapidly approaching completion; and it is stated that Mr. Street will have completely finished his work by next February. In generosity and public spirit the donation of Mr. Henry Roe furnishes a noble pendant to the restoration of St. Patrick's Cathedral at the charge of Sir Arthur Guinness. Christ Church was founded, it is stated, by the Danes; and among the prelates who have occupied its cathedral throne was the renowned Archbishop Lawrence O'Toole, who, with the assistance of Earl Strongbow and other Anglo-Normans, enlarged the church, and added to it a choir and two chapels. In 1486 the impostor, Lambert Simnel, was crowned as "Edward VI." in Christ Church. Since the seventeenth century the edifice has been subjected to continuous neglect and dilapidation, and when the Irish Church was disestablished, eight years ago, there was an imminent danger of the fabric being sold and of its passing into other than Protestant hands. An appeal was then made to Irish Churchmen, and Mr. Henry Roe stepped forward and, single-handed, undertook to restore the Cathedral. By the time the work is completed he will have expended more than ten times the amount of the original modest estimate.

Mem: A generous Churchman is wanted to restore St. Margaret's Church, Westminster: £50,000 would do the thing handsomely.

I should have mentioned, last week, that Major-General Edward Lowe, the son of the late Lieutenant-General Sir Hudson Lowe, sometime Governor of St. Helena, has been kind enough to set me right as to the nature of the testimonial presented in 1815 by the city of Marseilles to his distinguished father. It was a silver vase, and not a golden rose, and the vase is in Major-General Lowe's possession. And this reminds me of the somewhat curious fate of an "Echo" written in this column. I cannot remember how many months ago, for I have travelled many thousands of miles and have had to write all kinds of queer things since then. But this particular Echo happened to have been penned in vindication of the memory of the late Sir Thomas Reade, C.B., who was Deputy-Adjutant-General to Sir Hudson at St. Helena. A very unjust attack had been made on Sir Thomas in a London periodical; and, to the best of my ability, I drew attention in this column to the facts of the case. Last February, being at Constantinople, I made the pleasant acquaintance of Mr. Reade, H.M. Consul at Rustchuk, and this gentleman showed me a little pamphlet which his brother, H.M. Consul at Cadiz, had had printed at Gibraltar. The Consuls were sons of Sir Thomas Reade. In the pamphlet had been reprinted my "Echo" and a leading article which, in a daily newspaper, I had written on the St. Helena subject. H.M. Consul at Rustchuk, hearing that I was "connected with the press," was somewhat anxious to know who "G. A. S." of the Illustrated London News, might be. I replied that I knew him "excellent well," and that he was a fishmonger.

Moral: The unfortunate people who write columns of gossip can never know on whose toes they may be treading when they indulge in causeries. Relate an anecdote about Perkin Warbeck, and it is not impossible that a remote descendant of the late P. W. will write to inform you that you are entirely in error, and that the real version of the transaction is so and so. For this reason, I strive to tread on the toes either of the living or the dead as little as I can help; but, notwithstanding my most sedulous striving to be inoffensive, I daresay that I give offence to a great many worthy people. Do you remember the terrible tempest of indignation which arose in Ireland when Mr. Thackeray made an incidental allusion to Catherine Hayes the murderess. The impulsive press of the sister isle would have it that the illustrious novelist had gone out of his way to insult an accomplished and estimable Irish vocalist, the late Miss Catherine Hayes.

MR. STANLEY IN AFRICA.

Mr. Henry M. Stanley has succeeded in crossing Africa from east to west. A despatch from him conveys the tidings of his having followed the Lualaba river down to the Atlantic Ocean, proving, by actual travel from end to end, its identity with the River Congo. The sufferings of his party were very great. Frank Pocock and the African boy Kalulu died during the journey. He has sent to the Daily Telegraph the following despatch, dated Aug. 10, from Embona, Congo River, West Coast of Africa:—

On the 8th inst. I arrived at this place from Zanzibar, with 115 souls, in a fearful condition. We left Nyangwe in Manyema Nov. 5, 1876, travelling overland through Uregu. Unable to make progress through the dense forests, we crossed the Lualaba, and continued our journey along the left bank, through North-East Ukuu. Natives opposed us, harassed us day and night, killed and wounded our people with poisoned arrows. Our struggle through these cannibal regions became almost hopeless. We endeavoured to appease the savages with gifts and mildness. Our gifts they refused; our patient behaviour they regarded as cowardice. To make our position still more deplorable, our escort of 140 men engaged at Nyangwe refused to proceed farther. At the same time the natives made a grand effort to crush us altogether. We defended ourselves, but there was only one way to escape from our hapless position—unless we accepted the alternative of returning and abandoning the work which we had begun—and this was by making use of our canoes. Though we had decided advantage over the savages on the water, still each day was but a repetition of the day previous. It was desperate fighting, pushing on down river with might and main until, in the midst of these successive struggles, we were halted by a series of great cataracts—five in number—not far apart—south and north of the Equator. To pass these we had to cut our way through thirteen miles of dense forest, and drag our eighteen canoes and exploring boat overland, frequently exchanging the axes for the rifles as we were attacked. After passing these cataracts we had a long breathing-pause from the toil of dragging our canoes overland. At 2 north latitude the great Lualaba emerged from its almost direct northerly course to north-west, then south-west; a broad stream from two to ten miles wide, choked with islands. In order to avoid the exhausting struggle with so many tribes of desperate cannibals, we had to paddle between the islands, until, compelled by hunger most extreme, after three days passed without absolutely any food, we resolved to meet our fate, and struck for the mainland on the left bank. Happily, we had reached a tribe acquainted with trade. They possessed four muskets from the West Coast, and they called the great river Ikutu Ya Congo. We made blood brotherhood, and purchased abundance of provisions; and endeavoured to continue our course along the left bank. Three days later we came to a powerful tribe all armed with muskets, who, as soon as they sighted us, manned fifty-four large canoes, and attacked us. Not until three of my men were killed did I desist from crying out we were friends, and offering cloths. For a distance of twelve miles the greatest and most desperate fight on this terrible river was maintained. This was the last save one of thirty-two battles on the Lualaba, which river, after changing its name scores of times, became known, as we approached the Atlantic Ocean, as the Kwango and the Zaire. As the river runs through the great basin which lies between E. long. 26 deg., and E. long. 17 deg., it has an uninterrupted course of over 1400 miles, with magnificent affluents, especially on the southern side. Thence, cleaving the broad belt of mountains between the great basin and the Atlantic Ocean, it descends by about thirty falls and furious rapids to the great river between the Falls of Yellala and the Atlantic. Our losses have been most severe, and my grief is still new over the loss of my last white assistant, the brave and pious young Englishman, Francis Pocock, who was swept over the Falls of Massassa on June 3 last. The same day I with seven men was almost drawn into the whirlpools of Mowa Falls; and six weeks later myself, and the entire crew of the Lady Alice, was swept over the furious Falls of Mbolo, whence only by a miracle we escaped. My faithful young companion Kalulu is also among the lost. From Boma I take the expedition by steamer to Cabinda, thence to St. Paul de Loanda. Mr. Price, of the firm of Hatton and Cookson, of Liverpool, will bring my letters to you per Angola.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

The daughter of Dr. Livingstone has sent to the Daily Telegraph a telegram of congratulation on the success of Mr. Stanley's explorations.

In despatches from Loanda, dated Aug. 22, Mr. Stanley states that his people have been very kindly received by the Portuguese authorities. He fears that most of them will need a month and some of them five months to completely recover.

The sixth exhibition in connection with the Penzance School of Art, which, as mentioned last week, was opened on the 10th inst., closed last Saturday, and proved a great success, the amount received being greater than on any former occasion. Seventy paintings and drawings were sold.

OPENING OF THE MANCHESTER TOWNHALL.

The new Townhall at Manchester, of which we gave an Engraving last week, was formally opened on the 13th inst. by the Mayor, Mr. Abel Heywood. In the evening there was a banquet, presided over by the Mayor, and among the guests were the Lord Chief Justice, the Bishop of Manchester, Mr. John Bright, Lord Winmarleigh, and several members of Parliament representing Lancashire towns. Mr. Bright, in responding to the toast of the House of Commons, remarked that for some time the health of that body had been indifferent, and he suggested as a remedy that it should be sent to the country. Referring to the present state of the cotton trade he warned the people of Manchester that they were pursuing a course that was not without its dangers, for the shortening of the hours of labour concurrently with an increase of wages would have exactly the same effect as foreign tariffs on their productions. The right hon. gentleman also spoke at some length on the question of Indian administration. He said that we hardly did anything except under the pressure of some great emergency and calamity. The calamity of the Mutiny overthrew the East India Company, and he hoped from his heart that the calamity which had overtaken part of India, and which stirred the hearts of all the people of England, would have the effect of opening up a new and better policy. We had spent more than £100,000,000 in making railways in India, and many of them were profitable; but when the Government undertook to provide railways they did it largely from the idea that they would be of great service in a military point of view. He believed, however, that if we had spent one third of the money spent on railways in canals for navigation and irrigation none of those famines which during the last few years have swept away, or are sweeping away, two or three millions of the population would have occurred; the condition of the people would have been immensely better, the production of the soil enormously and incalculably increased, the traffic between England and India in its supply of articles we want would have been greatly increased, and its power from its greater wealth of consuming the productions of our industry would also have been far beyond anything we had hitherto seen. Mr. Bright, referring to the plans of Sir Arthur Cotton, said he believed it was calculated that the whole of the canals Sir Arthur proposed might have been made for the sum, probably, of twenty-five millions, certainly not more than thirty millions, sterling, which, after all, was a mere bagatelle, because it was merely a million or two in interest, and only about three times as much as was spent in that miserable Abyssinian war. If there is some little matter of that kind (Mr. Bright said) Parliament grants ten or twenty millions, and the thing is done. They say the honour of the country is concerned. Can there be any more concerned than this, that we whose fathers conquered India with its two hundred millions of people, can there be anything in which our interests are more concerned than that we, their children, should, if possible, turn that conquest to the greatest account, and having received—we know not how or why—that great responsibility, we should endeavour, if possible, to fulfil it. Almsgiving was often very good, but not always. Almsgiving now was general on behalf of the Indian suffering. Let every man's purse be open, if his heart be open, and let him give; but (Mr. Bright added) I tell you this, without the slightest hesitation, that though what he gives will carry its blessing with it now to some poor wretch in that country, still it will do little for the future. What you want is a new, and a wiser, and a broader policy, and that policy I much fear you will never have from the Government of Calcutta until the people of England say that it is their policy and must be adopted.

The festivities in connection with the opening of the Townhall were continued yesterday week by a reception and ball in the evening. The reception was held by the Mayor and Mrs. Heywood, and the ball was attended by between 3000 and 4000 guests. During the day a handsome album, containing portraits of all the members of the Council and of the principal Corporation officials, was presented to the Mayoress, and the Mayor received several deputations from trade societies, who presented him with congratulatory addresses.

On Saturday there was a procession of trade and friendly societies, numbering 45,000 persons. The weather was fine, and the principal streets of the city through which the procession walked were thronged with spectators. The procession was six miles long, and was accompanied by about sixty bands and a large number of banners.

FREE PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

A return ordered by the House of Commons last June has just been made showing the practical results of the Free Libraries Acts, which ought, if statistics afford any criterion in such matters, to have accomplished a very considerable work in the way of popular enlightenment.

In England and Wales, the corporate towns that have availed themselves of the provisions of these Acts by the establishment of lending libraries represents a population, according to the Census of 1871, of upwards of 3,700,000 people; while reference libraries have been instituted for the use of upwards of 3,300,000. Other places not coming under the head of corporate towns, but representing in the aggregate about a quarter of a million of people, have set up lending libraries by virtue of these Acts, while 189,000 have adopted the reference library.

Scotland does not appear to have availed itself very extensively of this legislation, populations representing only about 200,000 people having set up libraries of either kind.

The class of reading indulged in throughout England and Wales may be roughly indicated by stating that theological and philosophical volumes read from public libraries number about 53,000; works in geography, history, and travel, 238,000; law, politics, &c., 52,000; art and science, 119,000; "fiction and juvenile books," about 171,000; literature, poetry, and the drama, 224,000; and magazines and pamphlets upwards of 15,000. There are a few other minor sections which bring up the total for the year ending with the date of this return to about 800,000 borrowers, the "total uses" of books for the same period having been 4,849,035.

The lectures founded by Sir Thomas Gresham will be read to the public on the following days in the months of October and November, in English, at six o'clock p.m., in the Theatre of Gresham College, Basinghall-street, in the following order:—Rhetoric: Mr. Thomas F. Dallin, M.A., Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Oct. 2, 3, 4, and 5. Physics: Dr. Symes Thompson, M.D., Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Oct. 9, 10, 11, and 12. Geometry: The Very Rev. B. M. Cowie, B.D., Dean of Manchester, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Oct. 16, 17, 18, and 19. Law: J. T. Abdy, LL.D., Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Oct. 23, 24, 25, and 26. Astronomy: The Rev. E. Ledger, M.A., F.R.A.S., Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Oct. 30 and 31, and Nov. 1 and 2. Divinity: The Very Rev. J. W. Burgon, B.D., Dean of Chichester, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Nov. 6, 7, 8, and 9. Music: Dr. Henry Wyld, Nov. 13, 14, 15, and 16.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE VALLEY OF THE VID: VIEW FROM KRETA, CAMP OF THE FOURTH DIVISION OF THE ROUMANIAN ARMY BEFORE PLEVNA.

THE BATTLE OF KARAHASSANKOI.

Our Map is designed to illustrate the advance of the Turkish army commanded by Mahomet Ali Pasha from the Lom to the Yantra, and the positions occupied by the Russians at the end of last week. On Saturday last the Czarowitch had established his headquarters at Monastir, to the north of Biela. The 12th Army Corps stood to the north, extending as far as the Danube, across which a military bridge was being constructed, to compensate for the loss of the ferry at Pirgos, near Rustchuk, which the Russians had been compelled to abandon. The 13th Russian Army Corps appears to have been near Biela, and the 11th Corps was coming up from Timova. We are not aware whether the 7th and 10th Corps likewise form a part of the army of the Czarowitch; but it is probable that they do. There are several of the places mentioned in recent telegraphic despatches which we are unable to discover on the maps, as their spelling has evidently been deteriorated in the course of the names being transmitted through the telegraphic wires. This much is certain, that "Couvadje," or "Kovidja," where the Turks achieved a victory on the 12th inst., is Kopatz or Kovachina, to the west of Popkoi. The "Keuksir" defile, and the "Kouzu-kulile" near it, we venture to identify with Kukluk-Bashi and Sakalinin, to the south-west of Popkoi. A portion of the Russians probably retreated in that direction, and the villages of Kadikoi, Yousoughan, and Kurdler would then be identical with the Kadikoi, Yusufhan, and Kurtalan of our map, all these being situated on or near the Yarli, to the E.N.E. of Timova.

COUNTRY BETWEEN THE LOM AND YANTRA, SHOWING RUSSIAN POSITIONS AND TURKISH LINES OF ADVANCE.

Our Special Artist with the Army of Mahomet Ali Pasha, the Turkish Commander-in-Chief, now furnishes several illustrations of the important action of the 30th ult. at Karahassankoi, on the river Lom, where a portion of the army of the Czarowitch suffered the first of a series of defeats, by which that army was driven back on the Yantra; so that the fortress of Rustchuk, with the Bulgarian shore of the Danube some distance above that city, was entirely freed from danger of Russian approach. The Times' correspondent with Mahomet Ali Pasha writes the following account of this battle of Karahassankoi:—

"On Wednesday afternoon the troops here began to move out and take up their positions under cover of the woods on the face of the hills looking towards Popkoi and Haidarkoi. As battalion after battalion marched away, it was easy to see that something important was intended for the next day; and so it proved. Soon after daybreak on Thursday morning, Aug. 30, the Commander-in-Chief, with Prince Hassan of Egypt commanding the forces at Yenikoi, Salih Pasha commanding the division under the Prince, General Baker Pasha, and their respective staffs, rode up the mountain to the right, and took up their position just under the crest. A little bower had been made here by the soldiers the day before, and very grateful were we for the shade as we sat all that live-long day watching the combat that raged beneath us.

"So soon as we had taken our station we were informed of the details of the plan which it was proposed to put into execution. The main object was to drive the Russians from their advanced positions on the Lom in front of the Turkish army to Rasgrad—namely, from Sadana to Kosekoi, and to do as much more as an advance from the now strongly-held position at Yenikoi might enable them to accomplish. With this intention it had been arranged that Nedjib Pasha should advance from Adakoi with three brigades of infantry and one in reserve, two batteries of artillery, and two squadrons of cavalry; while Salih Pasha should advance from Yenikoi with two brigades of infantry, two batteries of artillery, and two squadrons of cavalry. From the elevated position where we were placed we could see the whole distinctly as far as Rasgrad on our right, and away beyond Osman Bazar on our left, and we also could see down into the Russian camps and batteries on the heights beyond Popkoi, so that the entire battle-field was before us; but there were two great disadvantages attendant upon the height of our eyrie which went far to mitigate the benefits of such an extended view. In the first place, the valley at our feet had all the appearance of a level plain, instead of which in reality there is very little flat ground in it at all, and in fact, consists from end to end of a series of billowy mounds, for the most part covered with corn and maize; but in others, where the undulations are a little higher, covered with a thick scrub, giving magnificent cover to skirmishers; and, in the second place, the distances were so considerable that in many cases it was impossible, even with the aid of a powerful field-glass, to make out exactly what they were doing.

THE WAR: BATTLE OF KARAHASSANKOI—TURKISH INFANTRY STORMING THE FIRST LINE OF RUSSIAN TRENCHES.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

"As we scan the scene before us, it is clear that yesterday's continuous movement of troops has not passed entirely unnoticed, and that they are prepared for something, but it would seem that they do not exactly know what, and that they have no clear idea from whence the attack will proceed. The advantage of this state of things was obvious, and probably had a considerable effect in assisting the Turks to obtain the very successful results which crowned their efforts, as I am sure that throughout the day the Russians were outnumbered. Still, in fairness to the Turks, it must be remembered that the enemy were entrenched in positions of great natural strength. The enemy's cavalry are prowling about all over the plain, as if anxious to discover what the Turks intended doing, for I have no doubt, so far as they had an opinion, it was that the attack would come from Yenikoi. All doubt on the subject was cleared up, however, when about nine o'clock the Russian batteries in rear of Sadana opened fire on the advancing Turks. Nedjib rapidly brought his artillery into play, and the Russians being apparently weak, made but a slight resistance. The village took fire about half-past ten, and almost immediately after we could see the Russians retiring gradually along the road under the hills upon Karahassankoi. Their guns were well and steadily handled—indeed, the artillery practice on both sides was in the main remarkably good. As we watched the clouds of dust which marked the retreating columns, every now and then we saw the guns take up a favourable position, unlimber, and throw two or three rounds among the advancing skirmishers. These never flinched, however, but steadily crept along, apparently at the same even pace. Sadana was entered and passed, for they halted not a moment there, at 11.30; and now the Russian batteries open upon them from the rear of Kutebelar, but to no purpose. The Turks reply with energy, the village is soon in flames, and again the enemy fall back, this time, as it seems to us, rather precipitately.

"Once, however, under the protection of the batteries of Karahassankoi, they seem determined to make the best of a very strong position, and it begins to look for the first time as though the issue of the struggle were doubtful. The Turks are clearly brought to a dead halt. How can they advance against that storm of shell as well as the deadly precision of the fire of the Russian skirmishers? But we know that Nedjib has another brigade in reserve, and we look every moment for its arrival, but it never comes. The excitement becomes intense; for well we know that no troops in the world can long withstand such a fire as that, and then on the left we see some clouds of dust denoting Russian movements of some kind, and we anxiously ask one another what it can be. At last we make them out: they are reinforcements, consisting of a regiment of both infantry and cavalry, coming out from behind the point of the hill at the back of Karahassankoi, and, descending boldly into the valley, they will shortly threaten the left flank of Nedjib's attacking force. We see the Commander-in-Chief look grave. He confers with Prince Hassan. They peer longingly to the right for the brigade which ought now to be swinging to the front, but it is not there. The moments are precious. Those poor fellows over against us are doing their best, but they are at last clearly overmatched. They have been at it ever since about five o'clock this morning. The heat is intense. They can clearly no longer hold their own. We fear the result, when looking down beneath us we see Salih's brigade, not where it was in the morning, hidden away under cover of the spurs of the mountains around us, but dashing with all the ardour of fresh troops across the plain. Away they go in really fine style, the Egyptians on the left making for Haidarkoi, while the Turks on the right go straight at Karahassankoi. Now the battery to the right rear of Haidarkoi opens with precision on the advancing Egyptians, and their mettle is likely to be soon well tried. But we, too, have a battery of two guns on a spur beneath us; and, better than all, another of three guns on the crag just above our heads, and these now deliver a rapid and well-directed fire right into the Russian battery.

"At this moment the excitement increases, the never-ceasing crack of the rifles from beneath us, the roar of the guns around us, the hundred puffs of smoke all over the field, which tell of a deadly fire we cannot hear, show that the struggle is at its height. Baker Pasha jumps up and suggests a flank movement on a portion of the enemy's line, and disappears to carry it out. He takes a battalion of infantry in hand, and away he goes straight at the enemy. Our battery on the heights ultimately decides the day, for the Russian battery at Haidarkoi cannot stand six rounds. We see the horses come galloping in from the rear and one gun is limbered up and off like lightning. Before the other two can get away the last Turkish shell explodes under one of them, and hurls the whole—men, horses, and gun alike—into space. The Egyptians, immensely relieved, rattle into Haidarkoi, where the Turks from the left of Salih's corps join them, and away they make for Popkoi. And now we see the camp at Popkoi disappearing as if by magic; and, looking away to Karahassankoi, we see the flames bursting forth in various parts, and the heavy clouds of dust winding away behind the hill tell us that at last the day is ours. We see the Turkish batteries about six o'clock installed on the plateau to the left of Karahassankoi open fire on the retreating Russians, the exasperated enemy now and then replying, but always from a greater distance.

"As we watch the columns of the enemy as they slowly wind round the hills and disappear, we close our glasses. Mahomet Ali Pasha and Prince Hassan deserve credit alike for the excellence of their plan and for the gallant way in which the troops concerned have carried it out. In reality only a reconnaissance in force, it bid fair at one time to assume almost the dignity of a battle, and had the Russians sent up sufficient reinforcements in time it might have done so in reality; but the engagement at Karahassankoi will be memorable in the history of this war as being the first time in Europe when the Turks have crossed the open to attack the enemy, and been entirely successful, even although the Russians held extremely strong positions. In these circumstances, great credit is undoubtedly due to them, and no one can deny that they fought really well. They did not occupy Popkoi, as it is too far advanced in the plain, and could easily be shelled from the hills on the other side; so it remains a deserted village between the two armies. The Turkish losses are admitted to be about 400 killed and wounded—the major part, of course, in Nedjib's division; the Russians are estimated at about 1200, which seems to me not excessive. Baker Pasha and Colonel Briscoe had their horses wounded under them by a shell which burst between them, and Baker Pasha was decorated with the Second Class of the Osmanli for his conspicuous gallantry. The Russians have now taken up their position on the crest of the hills on the other side of the Kara-Lom, and when the Turks advance again they will have harder work still to drive them out. Are the Russians really beginning to lose heart or not? We shall probably soon see."

Our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, writes us an interesting letter upon this occasion; it is dated the 31st ult., at Karahassankoi:—

"I send you a few sketches of the battle here, which took place yesterday, and lasted about nine hours with great fury. I should tell you that, some time back, his Excellency Nedjib Pasha had invited me to join his brigade, which I most willingly did, pitching my tent within fifty yards of his. I had been with him two or three weeks, without the slightest thought to break the usual monotony of camp life. But on Wednesday evening last, as the sun was setting, his Excellency called on me at my tent, and in the conversation told me that he intended to attack the Russians next day, as all the Generals were agreed to take the offensive at once. This was grand news, as I was most anxious to see his brigade engaged. No sooner had he left me, than my preparations were made for some days' hard work. Next morning, at daybreak, we heard the bugles sounding 'To arms' or 'Fall in'; and then the real bustle commenced. Opposite my tent were some guns; soon came the artillery horses, with their riders, fully equipped, and, in a shorter time than it takes me to write it, they had been hooked up, and were off. After giving directions to the driver of my baggage-cart to follow with my tent and luggage that of the General wherever he went, I called for my horses, and soon started off to the camp gates to see the troops march out. Those who have never seen Turkish troops going to battle can scarcely imagine what they are like. In the faces and bearing of these men as they went past, headed by their officers, you might see daring, endurance, boldness, determination, and every quality that a soldier should have who is going out to face a formidable enemy. Their attire was peculiar in some respects. The Turkish soldier is not booted after the European fashion; he has a queer kind of sandal, which is laced over the foot and up the legs. These brave fellows, too, wore ill-shaped jackets and baggy trousers, which had undergone so much rough wear and exposure to the sun and contact with the earth that you could hardly find two garments of the same colour. But who cared? They were going to fight for their country, and fight they did, in a manner that I had never seen before, though I had, as a Special Artist for the Illustrated London News, been in four previous campaigns elsewhere.

"Nedjib Pasha had headed his troops, and was gone on to examine the ground. I had lost sight of him, as I remained behind with the troops; but when nearly all had passed I put spurs to my horse, and, followed by my dragoman and Circassian, rode on up hill and down, through fields of maize or Indian corn, and over ploughed fields, about four miles. I passed the sentries and came up with his Excellency on the top of a hill, surrounded by regular cavalry and irregular Circassians, Zeibeks, and Bashi-Bazouks, all ready and waiting his orders to go out to feel the enemy. He was looking over a most lovely tract of ground, the yellow corn showing a beautiful contrast to the green woods, in which it was known the Russians were hidden. After welcoming me and inviting me to come to his side, the Pasha ordered off some regular cavalry to his left, and the Circassians were then told off to the right, both to advance until they discovered the enemy.

"Some moments of anxiety were passed, until suddenly a staff officer came up, saying he had seen the white dresses of those we were searching for. On satisfying himself this was the case, Nedjib Pasha ordered up a gun, which, after its being unlimbered, he himself sighted. We held our breath for the first shot in the battle. At last the word was given, 'Atesh ver!' (Give fire!) and with a boom and a hiss, away went the messenger of death. 'It has fallen short!' was the universal exclamation. 'Load again!' Then, 'Atesh ver!' and away went another shell, this one with better effect. It fell right in amongst a body of cavalry, who at once rode away.

"All this time the Turkish infantry had been steadily advancing, under cover of the tall maize in the fields. We approached a village, behind which some masked batteries now opened fire upon us. This was eagerly answered by the troops of Achmed Eyoub, who had been coming up on our right. We now see his cavalry on our right, advancing at a gallop. What are they doing? Surely not trying to take the battery? Yes, they have tried it, but they are beaten back. The Turkish infantry next advance, pouring in a deadly shower of bullets. They come steadily over the hill; other troops come behind them. The roar of the enemy's cannon still continues, and smoke rises on every side.

"The battle has fairly begun. Achmed Eyoub's troops are eager to take their revenge for what the Russians have just done in setting fire to the village there, lying in a lovely hollow between the combatants. An hour is passed; the foremost troops move down into the valley and we lose sight of them. At last, an aide-de-camp rides up breathless, to say the Russians have begun to retreat. At the same time we see another grand charge of cavalry on the cannon. The enemy's cavalry come out suddenly to meet it. They both halt, turn, and gallop off; then again the order is given to charge, and they meet with such ferocity that the two lines go completely through each other. The Russians must have suffered severely, for they rushed off in rear of their cannon, which had by this time limbered up and galloped off. Another aide-de-camp rides up to say we have taken the village. More troops are moved forward; the enemy's cannon fire is but slow. Achmed Eyoub still advances on the enemy, who are contesting the ground foot by foot; but he forces them back.

"Nedjib Pasha, seeing how the day is going, wishes also to advance. So we all ride forward; and as we go through the village so lately in the hands of the Russians I cannot help feeling pity for those who have suffered so severely—not only the killed, but the wounded. To my right hand lies a soldier with his head smashed, but still living; another, to my left, with his arm and shoulder terribly pounded, is supported by two of his comrades. Nedjib Pasha speaks to them kindly, and tells them that the ambulance waggons are following, and they will soon be relieved. One man comes by alone, with his right hand smashed to pieces; and, waving it about, he tells the General not to mind him. 'It is only a hand; and what does he care for that, when it has killed four Russians? God protect and be with you!' is the almost delirious man's blessing as he passes his Chief.

"We mount another hill, upon which the enemy's fire is still kept up very heavily; so much so that the General, turning round, advised me not to follow him. But I thought an Englishman, though merely a Special Artist, was bound to go where a Turk could go; so up the hill I went. I found it, certainly, a warmer place than was pleasant. As we were just moving off, when Nedjib Pasha had given his orders, a shell came amongst us, and burst forty yards off. Four men were close by: they were all scorched, and their faces and hands blackened and burnt, from the bursting charge of powder, but not one of them was hit by the pieces of shell. Yet it was horrible to see these men burnt so badly, and so far from any assistance.

"We then rode through another field of Indian corn, and suddenly came in sight of another beautiful valley, with the village of Kizila lying at the farther end, at the base of a ridge of hills or mountains. Here the fight was most furious, for the Russians had long lines of intrenchments. Our soldiers were steadily firing and advancing; but all at once a dash forward was made, and so fierce did it appear that we held our breath and no one spoke. The Turks were actually storming the trenches. After a terribly bloody conflict, they drove the Russians out at the point of the bayonet, as I show in my sketch. This was a grand thing, as it tended so much to demoralise the enemy. The Russians then retreated to a Bulgarian churchyard in a forest. Here the same style of fighting went on: the Turks began with firing on their knees, and at last, with a roar and a yell, rushed up; but this time the Russian fire was so deadly that they had to retreat. Again they advanced, and again they were repulsed; but the third charge was too determined to be resisted. The Russians had to give way, leaving knapsacks and arms in the hands of the victors.

"While this had been going on, other troops were storming the village. But I think a better idea can be formed of the fierce battle raging there from the sketch I send with this letter than from anything I can write. Our cavalry in this case were of immense service, as they drove the Russian infantry up and down the streets, but then the Russians took to the houses, and our infantry had to come up and clear them out. In Bulgarian villages, the entrance-doors are placed almost at right angles to the streets, so that the enemy had only to put up large stones, or clumps and roots of trees against them, to form capital barricades. As these commanded the whole street, the difficulty of taking the streets was very great; but the previous successes had lent extra energy and courage to the Turkish troops, and on they rushed in the face of an awful fire, until this village was taken with as great a success as the trenches and graveyard.

"All this time, our artillery had been pounding away at each of the enemy's positions. It was now growing late in the afternoon, and the fight had lasted seven or eight hours. Nedjib Pasha was anxious to put an end to it for the day, but the soldiers would not stop. They still pressed on; but now a very difficult bit of forest and another churchyard had to be taken. An officer galloped up, to say their commander had no ammunition, and wanted more troops. These were instantly dispatched; the men darted off at the double quick march, and the ammunition followed. As soon as these fresh troops arrived, they poured in such a fire that the enemy at once gave way, and rushed through the village of Karabounar down into the valley. The next thing we heard was that we had taken the Russian Commander's head-quarters, with all its effects, tents, and baggage, even the officers' coats, which were still hanging on the tent-pegs. This was a grand time for the Circassians and Bashi-Bazouks, who rushed in and looted everywhere; so that half an hour later, when I went in with the General, every article had disappeared.

"The end of a grand victory had arrived, and I began to think of my sleeping-quarters. But the several Generals had to meet and discuss their new positions, so that it was ten o'clock at night before we left the battle-field. As neither my own araba nor Nedjib Pasha's, with the tents, had come up, I had to sleep on the ground with a dew falling as heavy as rain. This morning we thought the Russians might attack us, as reinforcements had come up to them; but they appear to have thought better of it, and at the present moment we are as quiet as an army can be. We are all congratulating one another, but we shall see what to-morrow brings forth.

"I should not forget to mention that Lord Blantyre's surgeons, who were on the field all day, attended to no less than 251 wounded amongst them, and dispatched them to Rasgrad, to be transported thence to Varna by rail. These gentlemen, Messrs. Busby, Wattie, Boyd, and Lake, are attached to Nedjib Pasha's brigade, and will follow him wherever he goes. Nedjib Pasha is one of the most agreeable Turkish gentlemen I have had the pleasure of meeting in Turkey."

THE WINTER ASSIZES.

The new Orders in Council under the Winter Assizes Acts introduce a few changes in the places where the Winter Assizes for some of the united counties are to be held. These changes are thus stated in the Solicitors' Journal:—

The assizes for the winter assize county No. 3 (Lincoln and Nottingham) are to be held at Nottingham, instead of Lincoln; for No. 4, at Leicester, instead of Derby; for No. 5, at Northampton, instead of Warwick; for No. 6, at Ipswich, instead of Norwich; and for No. 7, at Gloucester, instead of Worcester. But the most important change is the omission of the county of Essex from the district for the purposes of the winter assizes of the Central Criminal Court. It will be remembered that loud complaints were raised last December as to the inconvenience arising from witnesses being brought from Chelmsford and Colchester to the Old Bailey. It is now provided that so much of the county of Essex as is not by the Central Criminal Court Act included in the Central Criminal Court district shall be united to winter assize county No. 6. It is much to be hoped that some regulations will be made by the assize Judges at the ensuing winter assizes as to taking the business from each of the united counties together, and in some regular order. At the last winter assizes great inconvenience resulted from the absence of any such arrangement. At Manchester, for instance, the trials from the counties of Cumberland and Westmorland were scattered all over the calendar, and the witnesses and others concerned who had come from those distant places were in many cases kept several days in Manchester. Nothing would seem to be simpler than to announce that cases from the same county will be heard in sequence, and to state the order in which the different counties comprised in the united winter assize county will be taken.

FALSE NAMES.

Most people just now are either reading, or skimming, or pretending to have read, the great trial in which our convicts are being called upon to prove that their natural enemies the detectives are in many instances at the least as bad as themselves; and it is a course of reading which introduces us to a world new (let us hope) to most of us, and sufficiently queer and unwholesome.

In this secret minor world flourishing in the midst of the great one there are few things odder than the way in which every one of its inhabitants goes about, quite as a matter of course, under, at fewest, a couple of names. It is a small matter; one takes it for granted that a thief should have a nom de guerre, almost as one takes it for granted that there should be thieves; but if one reflects, this fact alone tells of a set of lives full of most curious experiences. To have two names, to pass probably for a member of two different professions or businesses—it is almost like being two people. Did you ever spend even three or four days under a name not your own? It must surely be an intensely unpleasant thing to do. To begin with, one must feel as if one were continually acting a lie (though this would no doubt be a minor consideration to a professed picker and stealer); and one must be always in a state of watchfulness against self-betrayal, which would, in a few days even, tell terribly on the nerves of a man of ordinary sensitiveness.

Even when a man has only done some isolated act—say published a book—under a feigned name, we know how difficult it is to keep the secret. It was not so very long before the real name of the "Author of Waverley" was a secret known to all the world; and one hardly likes to remember the efforts made by a man so honest to preserve his anonymity. Sir Walter ought never to have told a lie, even though it were so harmless as one as the denial of his greatest claim to glory.

The most famous pseudonymous writer of the day succeeded far worse in keeping her name—and sex—from the knowledge of the world, manfully though she strove to retain her masculine title. Yet there was one means she did not adopt, which might have kept her personality in the background for some time longer, though at the cost of giving her sudden fame to another. "Adam Bede" was scarcely published before a clergyman living in the country where the scene of that novel is laid wrote to proclaim as the author not Marion Evans (whose name is now so universally known that we do not fear to transgress the laws of literary courtesy in mentioning it), but—a gentleman before then unheard of, and since then unknown, with a comic name which I will not drag anew from its natural obscurity. Whether this gentleman was a really existent person, or a figment of the clerical brain, George Eliot might have allowed him to shelter the modesty which did not wish for personal fame, and the pride which desired to be judged by men as a man; but her publishers, doubtless with her consent, wrote to declare that her works were not written by the gentleman with a comic name, or—and here was surely a little touch of feminine amour propre—by anyone with a name at all like it.

It is characteristic of the difference between George Eliot and Charlotte Brontë—a difference of which Mr. Swinburne's estimate is hardly likely to be a popular one—that the former should have boldly assumed an entirely masculine name, while the latter and her sisters, obeying "a sort of conscientious scruple," chose the ambiguous—though equally misleading—names of Currer, Ellis, and Acton Bell. It is also a curious fact that the identification of the bearer of an epicene title with the author of "Jane Eyre," the fashionable novel of the day, was followed by a rush of similarly indefinite pseudonyms. But the number of our greatest modern writers who have begun under assumed names is very large—Thackeray and Dickens head the list of stars of the first order. Michael Angelo Titmarsh was very well, if not very widely known before it was even suspected that William Makepeace Thackeray was to be perhaps the very greatest name of the middle of the nineteenth century; and Boz and Phiz had made their way into very many English households before they were supplanted by the less eccentric titles of Dickens and Brown. Tennyson, again, though he did not assume a false name, did not make known his real one, when first (in 1832) the since-famous "Poems by Two Brothers" were published; and his great and poetical contemporary, Thomas Carlyle, shot some of his earlier shafts from behind the mystic personality of Herr Diogenes Teufelsdröckh.

There is perhaps hardly a more celebrated anonym than that of the English Opium-Eater, which differs from most of the others I have quoted in the important respect that it was not mere whim which induced De Quincey to publish his confessions under a title which did not reveal their authorship. I do not know whether he took much care to keep his secret; but one cannot but think that nobody would willingly confide to the public, in however fantastic a form, the fact that he indulged in a vice so degrading and so overpowering—though, indeed, after Rousseau, it is difficult to say what a diseased vanity will not publish to the world.

Very different men have had reasons as powerful, but very different, for writing under names evidently assumed. Charles Kingsley was as opposite as a man could be to De Quincey—at once infinitely his superior and his inferior; but he also belongs to the great army of bearers of noms de plume, and his reason for disguise was no doubt a good one. When he wrote the "Letters of Parson Lot" there was so strong a prejudice against him in many quarters that the signature of his name might have undone all the good those honest, over-earnest, strained, well-meant and yet in a way affected, letters were intended to do. Still, the probability is that every man who knew Kingsley's other writings knew by whom those letters were written; his effective but very faulty style is of all the least disguisable—even in his little pamphlet "by Lord Dundreary" (on the great Hippocampus question) it peeps out oddly, and his inability to talk like the modern "swell," even for five minutes, is made curiously evident.

Another entirely different man wrote anonymously many works, for again another reason. Bulwer Lytton—to speak of him by the best-known form of his variable name—intentionally put aside, time after time, his great and hardly earned reputation, to start fair, in some field of fiction hitherto untrod by him, among unknown men. Even his last completed work, "The Coming Race," created by its freshness and novelty a sensation, and was "the book of the season" when no one dreamt it was Lytton's; and it proved that this remarkable man retuned to the end the faculty of keeping abreast with the generation, moving as they moved, and producing works of art to the taste—one might almost say of the grandchildren of his earliest admirers, so long is the line of such different successes as "Pelham," "Alice," "Night and Morning," "Harold," and "The Caxtons." Such triumphs were a payment which one is glad that so indefatigable a worker received; for one cannot help believing that, useful as he must be to the social historian of the nineteenth century, Lytton's fame can hardly last beyond it.

Of all forms of anonymity, the most annoying is that which is glaringly false—the disguise through which one sees at once, through which one is meant to see, and which it is yet supposed to be the correct thing to consider impenetrable. One has seen letters signed by the well-known initials—say of one of the irritable race of poets—attacking with a savagery almost peculiar to our decade some carping critic or some rival maker of verses; and one asked, in a very bad temper, what possible object was gained by this playing at being nobody. If I, the poet Jones, am aggrieved either at what I think the reviewer Smith's unfairness, or the poet Brown's undeserved fame, why, if I find it absolutely impossible to hold my tongue, do I not either stab safely in the back, like a coward, or hit straight out, with no concealment whatever, like a man? Neither gods nor men can endure half-and-half people.

Still, for assumed names, or initials, or blanks where names should be, I think every great writer we have had since the great Elizabethan age—and not a few then—has adopted their shelter. Wherefore, since everybody does it, it is right; wherefore, everybody will continue to do it; and all the little anonymous people of the day may go on thinking themselves unrecognised Scotts, Dickenses, George Eliots, and George Sands—as, indeed, there is not the least shadow of a doubt that they will.

LORD SANDON ON SCIENCE AND ART.

Lord Sandon, M.P., presided at the annual meeting of the Burslem School of Science and Art on Monday evening, and referred to the question of Government aid to science and art, remarking that he had already expressed his fear of the danger which might follow if the Government subsidised science and art too largely.

He regarded with very grave apprehensions the growing feeling of the country that the State should help individuals and localities out of their difficulties. Interferences by Government in such matters as education, factories, sanitary regulation, merchant shipping, and so on, were necessary interferences; but, instead of being tokens of great advancements, they were rather confessions of local and individual failure, because if individuals and localities had done their duty in these matters it would not have been necessary to deal with them by Acts of Parliament. Legislation of this kind interfered with the freedom of the people in the long run, and must also impede the progress of the nation; so that, he ventured to say, they had cause to be a little bit afraid of Government interference. Supposing this interference were exercised more and more with respect to science and art, they might advance with greater rapidity, and have greater completeness in artistic training, and greater uniformity; but surely there was danger that they would lose in formality, in mannerism, and in want of originality and responsibility. They had to guard against that decay of national character which was perfectly certain to follow if they trusted too much to the interference and tutelage of the central Government. He thought Government ought only to interfere with matters which were of importance to the whole community, and could not be done by individuals or localities themselves.

His Lordship went on to refer to the commercial position of England, and said we had commanded the markets of the world by the excellence, solidity, and cheapness of the goods we supplied; but, in respect of quality, he feared some of our products were deteriorating, and it would require great exertions to maintain cheapness. The hours of labour were much shorter than they used to be, there were more frequent holidays, wages were higher, and there was a higher rate of living; and it was impossible that these should not interfere with the cheapness of goods. Other nations were multiplying their manufactures and were determined to beat England in the race, and supply themselves with articles hitherto obtained from this country. How, then, was England to maintain her commercial supremacy?

The first thing necessary was to secure the character of the goods supplied, and to see that they were as solid and as free from blame as they were formerly. The mere fact of goods being British used to be considered a guarantee of quality, and if they had not the artistic value which the products of some other nations possessed, the world relied upon the goodness of the articles.

It was necessary to have artistic cultivation, so that they could compete with southern countries, and here came the use and the national importance of schools of art and science, and one of the reasons why Government was justified in supporting schools of art. It was necessary, as they had shorter hours of labour, to have the assistance of every kind of scientific apparatus in the treatment of every branch of manufacture, and to have much more artistic cultivation. With these two potent auxiliaries he believed we should be able to regain our position in the markets of the world. That was the justification in his mind of the Government interference with localities, as that by the authorities at South Kensington, who had done work such as the nation might be proud of.

He was glad of the opportunity of testifying to the value of the services rendered to the country by the permanent officials of South Kensington, to whom, and not to the Ministers of the day, belonged the credit of what had been done in that Department for the advancement of art.

Referring to the increasing leisure of the working classes, Lord Sandon expressed a hope that the spread of education would, by awakening a desire for study and cultivation during hours of leisure, fill up the gap in our social system which wanted filling up. He rejoiced, therefore, at the opportunities which were widely offered to the whole of our populations of study and mental improvement, without which great evils must follow from increasing leisure. There was no reason why the charms of drawing, music, and other accomplishments should not be found in the humblest homes, and it should be borne in mind that when they were doing their best to elevate and make happy the homes of England they were doing a great national work.

LIFE-BOAT SERVICES.

The ketch Pallas, of Jersey, fifty-eight tons, went ashore on the north-east part of the Goodwin Sands on the morning of the 18th inst. Her perilous position being observed from the lightship, they fired signal guns of distress, in response to which the Broadstairs life-boat and the Ramsgate Harbour steamer Aid, and life-boat Bradford proceeded to the Sands. The Broadstairs boat was the first to reach the spot, and, with the assistance of the lugger Florence Nightingale, she was instrumental in getting the vessel off the Sands, when the anchor was slipped, and she proceeded in the direction of the Downs, some of the life-boat men and the lugger's crew going on her to assist if necessary. The Broadstairs life-boat was returning to her station when the yacht Nelly, of London, was seen in distress, with her rudder gone. The life-boat men at once went to her help, and took her safely into Ramsgate Harbour.

At Castletown, Isle of Man, on the night of the 13th inst., during a terrific gale, lights were seen at sea, showing that a vessel was in a dangerous position off that place. Accordingly, the Castletown life-boat of the National Life-boat Institution was launched, and found the French barque Blanche Louise ashore. Four of the crew were taken into the boat, but the master refused to leave his ship, and the life-boat then returned to her station. She had only just regained the harbour when there was another call for her services, the schooner Maggie Kelso, of Ardrossan, having also stranded. The life-boat man promptly put off again, and rescued the schooner's crew, three in number.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will and two codicils (dated respectively June 23, 1873, Oct. 22, 1874, and July 9, 1877) of Mr. William Longman, late of Paternoster-row and of Ashlyns, Berkhamstead, Herts, who died on the 13th ult., were proved on the 12th inst. by Mrs. Emma Pratt Longman, the widow, William Longman and Charles James Longman, the sons, and Reginald Moore Bray, the nephew, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £200,000. The testator leaves to his wife all his household and movable effects, his stock in the Stationers' Company, and £1000; he also leaves her for life a town residence and such annual sum as, with the amount she is entitled to under her marriage settlement, will make up £1500 per annum; to his executors, £100 each; to his eldest son, £40,000; to each of his two younger sons, £20,000, and he also provides for their succeeding to his share of the business of Messrs. Longmans, Green, and Co.; upon trust for each of his daughters, £15,000; and the residue of his property to all his children.

The will and codicil (dated Dec. 27, 1866, and Sept. 14, 1872) of Mr. Stanley Orred Percival, late of No. 27, Holland-park, Notting-hill, who died on the 23rd ult., were proved on the 10th inst. by Stanley Percival, Frederic Percival, and Thomas Helier Percival, the sons, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £90,000. There are various bequests in favour of his wife and seven children, and the residue of his estate the testator leaves to his five sons.

The will and codicil (dated May 29, 1874, and March 12, 1877) of Mr. Frederick Thomas Turner, late of No. 8, The Cedars, Clapham-common, who died on the 21st ult. at the Lord Warden Hotel, Dover, were proved on the 7th inst. by Mrs. Celia Maria Turner, the widow, and Frederick Becker Turner and Oswald Turner, the sons, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £70,000. The testator bequeaths to each of his said sons £15,000 Consols and £500 cash, and his residuary estate upon trust for his wife for life or widowhood; at her death or second marriage, £10,000 Consols is given to his daughter Helen Mary and £4000 Consols to his daughter Celia, in addition to the amount settled on her at her marriage. The remainder of his property he gives to his said two sons.

The will (dated Aug. 24, 1847) of Mr. Henry Danby Seymour, late of No. 209, Piccadilly, who died on the 4th ult., at Brynurse, Cannington, Somersetshire, was proved on the 1st inst. by Alfred Seymour, the brother and sole executor, the personal estate being sworn under £70,000. The testator gives, devises, and bequeaths all his real and personal estate to his said brother.

The will with two codicils (dated July 22, 1874, and June 21 and July 17, 1877) of Mr. William Earle Lytton Bulwer, late of Heydon Hall, Norfolk, who died on July 21 last, at No. 24, Portman-square, was proved on the 12th inst. by Mrs. Elizabeth Bulwer, the widow, William Earle Gascoyne Lytton Bulwer, the son, and Clement William Nuthank, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £50,000. Amongst other legacies, testator gives £2500 and certain furniture and effects to his wife, and makes other provision for her benefit; the residue of his personal estate he leaves upon trust for his wife for life and then for all his children.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION.

The annual report of the Howard Association, 5, Bishopsgate-street Without, recently issued, contains much interesting information on prisons, capital punishment, industrial education, intemperance, &c.

The committee state that the past year was a very laborious but also a very successful one for the Howard Association. The committee have had the satisfaction of seeing several of the objects which they have perseveringly advocated at length taken up by the Government, and either secured by accomplished legislation or put into a favourable position for attainment. Amongst these objects may be named a large diminution of the numerous small and unnecessary gaols, arrangements for the more systematic adoption of reformatory and profitable prison labour (special regard being had, at the same time, to the duty of avoiding undue competition with the labour of honest workers outside the prisons), the better treatment of unconvicted prisoners, the payment of magistrates' clerks by salary instead of by fees, the diminution of needless imprisonment in cases where fines might be advantageously substituted, and more effectual provision for a diminished resort to imprisonment for the petty offences of young children. These and other desirable objects have been greatly promoted and forwarded by the Prisons Act, the Justices' Clerks' Act, and the (Magistrates) Summary Jurisdiction Amendment Bill of the last Session. In view of the active position which the Howard Association has for years taken in the advocacy of these measures, the committee feel that they have good cause for congratulating the members of the association on the progress thus attained in these objects. And in some other directions of Parliamentary progress the aims of the association have been materially advanced.

It had been intended by the International Prison Commission, of which Dr. E. C. Wines, of New York, is the universally esteemed president, to hold the second quinquennial congress in 1877; but the lamentable war in the East, and other disturbing causes, necessitated the postponement of the congress, which is now intended to be convened in August, 1878, at Stockholm. The Swedish Government has acted very nobly in encouraging this assembly. Through its high-minded Monarch, Oscar II., and his Foreign Secretary, official invitations have been issued (1877) to other Governments, generally, to accredited State representatives to the congress. This step will greatly add to the importance of the gathering.

A formal announcement is made in the Moniteur Universel of June 13, 1877, that "the labours and example of the English Howard Association have caused the establishment of a similar society in France," under the guidance of M. Dufaure, Senator Béranger, M. Mercier (President of the Court of Cassation), and other eminent Frenchmen. Mr. Charles Lucas, a well-known member of the Institute of France, has also addressed a letter to the Howard Association congratulating this body on having inspired the foundation of so promising an organisation on the other side of the Channel.

On the application of Superintendent Jarrett, the magistrates of Hertford petty sessions have awarded 10s. to a boy named Patmore, for an act of bravery. A dog in a rabid state was recently at large at Hertford, and, after it had bitten three persons and twenty dogs, it was held by Patmore until it was killed by the police.

1. Nedjid Paaha, with Staff, directing the battle.
2. Turkish cavalry descending the hill.

3. English surgeons at work.
4. Turkish infantry advancing at the double.

5. Turkish infantry.
6. Turkish infantry skirmishing.

7. Russian infantry hidden in the trees.
8. Russians.

THE WAR: BATTLE OF KARAHASSANKOI—TURKS ATTACKING THE RUSSIAN CAMP.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF THE ARTISTS.

oods, firing.

9. Village on fire in several places.
10. Russian guns.

11. Russian guns, playing on Achmed Eyoub and on village.

12. Russian infantry, hidden at entrance to village.
13. Achmed Eyoub's guns.

WARRING THE RUSSIANS IN THE VALLEY OF KIZILA.

OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

MUSIC.

We gave last week the details of the arrangements for the Leeds Musical Festival, which opened on Wednesday morning with Mendelssohn's "Elijah," followed by an evening concert, at which Mr. Walter Austin's dramatic cantata, "The Fire-King," was produced, the second part of the concert having consisted of a miscellaneous selection. Thursday morning's programme included Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night" music, preceded by various instrumental and vocal pieces, Handel's "Solomon" (with Sir M. Costa's additional accompaniments) having been given in the evening. Yesterday (Friday) morning was to bring forward the specialty of the festival—Professor G. A. Macfarren's new oratorio, "Joseph," composed expressly for the occasion, the evening having been appropriated to a miscellaneous concert. The festival is to close to-day (Saturday) with Bach's "Magnificat" in D, Mozart's "Requiem," and Beethoven's oratorio, "The Mount of Olives." Of the performances generally we must speak next week.

There appears to be no diminution in the attractiveness of the Covent-Garden Promenade Concerts. Repetitions of some of the specially successful pieces and the occasional addition of novel features serve to maintain the interest of the performances. The several vocalists named in our previous notices continue to be well received, and the refined violin-playing of Mlle. Pommereul and the brilliant execution of that skilful pianist M. Henri Ketten are prominent items in each night's programme. The Handel and Haydn selection of last week proved so successful that it was repeated on Wednesday.

The "Liebhart" concerts at the Agricultural Hall are still proceeding successfully—"The British Army Quadrille," in its novel adaptation, continuing to be a popular feature.

"Norma" was given again on Tuesday by the Crystal Palace Opera Company, under the direction of Mr. Henry Corri; the principal character sustained by Madame Ida Gillies Corri. For Thursday a second performance of Mozart's one-act comic opera, "L'Impresario," was announced.

THEATRES.

The reappearance of Mr. John S. Clarke at the Haymarket is always an interesting event to a large circle of playgoers. Such is the force of Mr. Clarke's genius, it never fails to gratify the most fastidious critic. How frequently soever this versatile actor may perform Major Wellington de Boots or Paul Pry, the public are still willing to witness an exhibition of humour in which this performer is unrivalled. Accordingly, on Saturday "The Widow-Hunt" and Mr. Poole's celebrated comedy commanded a large and attentive audience. The actor was never in better spirits, and was well supported.

The Folly Theatre has been redecorated, and now presents as elegant an auditorium as any in London. Last Saturday a lively adaptation of a new French piece was produced, under the title of "Up the River," with music by Hervé. The affair is but a trifle, a simple incident between an amorous couple at a steam-boat pier, in which Miss Violet Granville, with Mr. Bedford and Mr. Clavering Power, contrived to please the audience. The second piece was of a more romantic character, with music by C. Lecocq, and entitled "The Sea-Nymphs." These submarine persons are beloved, to their chagrin, by two sea-monsters, Kraken and Torpedo. A revolt is improvised and expressed in a revolutionary song, which the monsters endeavour to suppress, when help arrives in the persons of two lovers, Smith and Jones, who were acquainted with the two ladies in their previous mortal estate on the earth. An appeal is made to Neptune, who, taking the two champions for Davy Jones and the First Lord of the Admiralty, decides in their favour. Aided with some beautiful scenery, representing a Stalactite Cavern, and by the excellent acting of Miss Kathleen Corri and Miss Violet Cameron, the piece cannot fail of being long attractive. This was followed by the comedy-bouffe of "The Creole," adapted by Messrs. Robert Reece and H. B. Furnie, and acted in one act and five tableaux. This piece has proved successful at the Brighton theatre, and will no doubt win favour on the London boards. There is considerable invention shown in the situations, and some novelty. Offenbach's music, moreover, is provocative of much merriment, and secures the triumph of the new drama. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was present.

On Monday, at the Olympic, an adaptation of Mr. Wilkie Collins's "Moonstone" was performed for the first time. All novel readers are well acquainted with the incidents of this clever story, and appreciate the mesmeric interest which it contains. The adaptation for the stage has the advantage of having been prepared by the novelist himself. Mr. Collins has arranged it upon a safe plan. He has successfully resisted the temptation to found his plot upon the principle of surprise, and has substituted for it that of expectation. This is the true dramatic principle, as the reader will perceive who takes the trouble to peruse what Coleridge wrote upon it so long ago in his "Biographia Literaria." By the observance of this principle, much pain is spared the spectator of the play, when the perplexed agents in the action are placed in situations of moral difficulty. When Miss Bella Pateman, as Rachel, shows her conviction that Franklin is guilty, and is irritated by the calmness which he maintains, the spectator is relieved by the knowledge of circumstances which the latter feels assured will in the end produce a right understanding between the lovers. Mr. Henry Neville in this scene acts with equal judgment and force. The acting, indeed, throughout is marked by the constant excellence which attends the prosperous efforts of competent artists. The humorous characters, in particular, were well filled, and thoroughly appreciated by the audience. The sustained interest, however, was too intense to admit of frequent and noisy applause; but in the end the general approbation was vehemently expressed.

We hear that Mr. and Mrs. German Reed have met with more than usual success in the provinces; and that they announce their intention of continuing their tour on future occasions. They will begin a new season at St. George's Hall on Oct. 1, with "A Happy Bungalow," Mr. Corney Grain's new musical sketch, and "A Night Surprise." Novelties are in preparation by Mr. F. C. Burnand and Mr. Gilbert A'Beckett.

The Moore and Burgess Minstrels have this week inaugurated a new season at St. James's Hall. They take credit for the length of time during which they have kept their doors open—in fact, they have never been closed since September, 1865. Nearly 6000 consecutive performances have been given, exclusive of those at the Crystal and Alexandra Palaces, and several theatres. The present programme is satisfactory; the entertainment requiring a company of more than thirty-five artistes. Mr. G. W. Moore as "Bones," is now assisted by Mr. Walter Howard as "Corner-Man." The songs and ballads are, as usual, admirably sung, and all are conceived with a degree of elegance which precludes vulgarity.

Madame St. Claire, the proprietress and manager of the Royal Park Theatre, announces that all cabmen, upon production of their badges, will be admitted free during the run of "Arrah-na-Pogue."

Death has been busy with dramatic celebrities. Mr. Henry Compton, of whose merits as a Shakespearian actor we cannot speak too highly, died on Saturday night, in his seventy-third year, after long suffering from an internal cancer. The name of Compton was merely professional, his real name being Mackenzie. He passed a long probation in the provinces before coming direct from the York circuit to the Lyceum in 1837, whence he went to Drury Lane, and continued there under the managements of Mr. W. J. Hammond and Mr. Macready. Subsequently he became a member of the company at the Princess's, under Mr. J. M. Maddox, and at the Olympic under Mr. W. Farren. At the Haymarket and Globe he was also engaged, and at the Lyceum played the Grave-digger in "Hamlet" for a long time two seasons ago. On June 1 last he received a complimentary benefit at Drury Lane, which realised a large sum.

The American papers announce the death of Mr. Edward L. Davenport, at the age of sixty-one. This gentleman had been upwards of forty years upon the boards. He will be remembered in England as having played for two seasons—with Mr. Macready at Covent Garden in 1847, and afterwards when the great tragic actor took his farewell of the stage; and as also having married here Miss Fanny F. Vining. His last appearance was in Philadelphia, as Daniel Druce, in Mr. Gilbert's well-known drama.

SAVINGS BANKS.

From the Postmaster-General's report we learn that during 1876 there were 188 new offices opened for savings bank business—153 in England and Wales, 23 in Scotland, and 12 in Ireland—the total number of such offices at the close of the year being 5448. Seven trustee savings banks—viz., those at Chertsey, Newnham, Chesterfield, Beaumaris, Birstall, Islington, and Bridgend, were closed, the total number of old savings banks being thus reduced to 466. The amount transferred to the Post Office Savings Banks during the year was £132,937. The number of accounts opened at the end of 1876 was 1,702,374. The sum at the credit of depositors was £26,996,550, being an increase of £1,809,205 on the total of the previous year. The number of deposits made in 1876 was 3,166,136, and the number of withdrawals 1,195,603, the average amount deposited being £2 16s. 9d., and the average amount withdrawn £6 10s. 4d. The sums deposited during 1876 amounted to £8,982,350, and the sums withdrawn to £7,792,477. The interest credited to depositors on accounts for the year was £619,331, being £47,747 in excess of the sum credited for 1875.

The Controller of the Post Office Savings Banks states that during the year 1876 authority was given to 172 penny banks, in various parts of the kingdom, to invest their funds in the Post Office Savings Bank, the number being twenty-three more than during the previous year. The increase since the end of last year has been still more remarkable, no fewer than 117 penny banks having been authorised during the quarter to March 31, exceeding by forty-one the number during the corresponding quarter of 1876. Of the 289 penny banks thus authorised in fifteen months, eighteen were in board schools, twenty in Sunday schools, and thirty in other schools, one being in a Poor-Law Union school, under the management of the master and the chaplain of the workhouse. Farthing deposits are received in this bank, and, although the deposits are probably all pauper children, as much as £4 18s. was invested on behalf of the penny bank between April, 1876, when the account was opened, and Dec. 31. The Oxfordshire branch of the Provident Knowledge Society continues to be very successful in its operations, a large number of penny banks having been established during the year through its influence. All these penny banks invest their funds in the Post Office Savings Bank, and are under the management of local trustees.

A somewhat similar society has recently been formed in Dublin under the name of the "Irish Penny Bank Association," its object being the establishment of penny banks in Ireland, and it is the desire of the association to place each penny bank formed under its auspices in connection with Post Office Savings Bank. The correspondence in connection with penny banks is considerable, and occasionally somewhat troublesome. For instance, a clergyman who had undertaken the management of a penny bank in which such a rate of interest had been allowed to depositors as to cause a deficiency at the end of each year, applied for advice as to what rate of interest should be given so as to encourage the depositors, and, at the same time, make the penny bank self-supporting; and he also asked for instructions as to the easiest and best method of calculating the amount of interest which should be apportioned to each depositor.

Frequent applications continue to be made for permission to deposit sums considerably in excess of the limit fixed by Act of Parliament. One applicant stated that he wished to invest £500 or £600, and, as he could not deposit so large a sum in the Post Office Savings Bank, he asked if the department would recommend him to any bank "that cannot break," and whether the Bank of England "is safe like the Post Office Savings Bank;" adding, "I am more concerned about the safety of the bank than the interest it pays."

A man, describing himself as an auctioneer, to whose sister an acknowledgment relating to the account of some other person had been mis-delivered, wrote stating that he had no doubt the money had been placed in the savings bank by some person for her, and he forwarded a printed facsimile of the acknowledgment, carefully retaining the original under the erroneous idea that it was evidence of his sister's right to the deposit.

The mis-delivery of another acknowledgment resulted in the following curious complication:—Among the workmen employed in some alterations at a nobleman's country seat were two bearing the same Christian name and surname, but unconnected and unacquainted with each other, one being a joiner and the other a mason. The joiner, who was a depositor, having received no acknowledgment of a deposit of £3, obtained a duplicate. The mason, who was not a depositor, became insane and was removed to a lunatic asylum about the same time; and the original document, intended for the joiner, having fallen into the hands of the mason's mother, she concluded that the account was his, and made a claim for the money towards defraying the expenses of his maintenance, and was with difficulty undeceived.

A whale measuring twenty-six feet was caught at Penmon, near Beaumaris, yesterday week, and was taken to Bangor, where an agricultural show was being held, for exhibition.

Amongst the many schemes for the future water supply of Liverpool is a new one, by which it is proposed to bring the supply from Wales, by impounding the waters of the river Vyrnwy, at Llanwyddyn, Montgomeryshire, and the waters of the river Tarrat, at Llangedwyn, embracing a water-shed of somewhere about 80,000 acres. The distance from Llangedwyn by the route it is proposed to adopt is sixty-six miles, or about twelve miles nearer than the Bala Lake scheme.

THE METROPOLITAN INNER-CIRCLE RAILWAY.

The Metropolitan District Railway Company has given formal possession of land adjoining the Mansion House station to the Inner Circle Completion Company, in order to enable them to commence the necessary works for the new or link line from that point to the Metropolitan Railway near the present Aldgate Station, and so to surround inner London with a continuous circle. The Act for the link line was first obtained in 1874, and in consequence of various obstacles which interfered with the commencement of the undertaking a second Act was passed in 1876 to extend the time originally granted. It is under this second Act that the works are now about to be put in hand; and they must be completed within two years from Aug. 7 last.

Beginning at the Mansion House Station, the new line will follow Queen Victoria-street as far as Cannon-street, and thence will pass under Cannon-street to the point where King William-street, Gracechurch-street, and Eastcheap meet. Here it will turn to the north, passing under buildings which will be taken down, and fall into Fenchurch-street between Rood-lane and Cullum-street. It will then follow the line of Fenchurch-street to a point a few yards eastward of the site of Old Aldgate Pump, and thence turn northwards, passing under Houndsditch to unite with the Metropolitan Railway by the Clothes Exchange. After leaving the Mansion House Station, the first new station will be at Cannon-street, between Walbrook and St. Swithin's-lane, to allow of interchange of traffic with the South-Eastern Railway. The next will be at the corner of Gracechurch-street and Eastcheap, on the site of the National Provident Institution, and the third in Aldgate, at a point between the site of the Old Pump and Jewry-street.

From the Eastcheap Station to Fenchurch-street a new street will be made, for which the Metropolitan Board of Works and the Commissioners of Sewers have undertaken to pay half a million sterling. It will be 3-16ths of a mile long, measuring from the statue in King William-street, and it will serve a very important purpose in relieving the corner of Fenchurch-street and Gracechurch-street from the press of traffic which is now to be found there during the busiest hours of the day.

By the conditions of the Act of Parliament, and of the several agreements which have been entered into, the work is to be begun at both ends and carried on until the two portions meet. As soon as the whole is completed, the present Metropolitan and District trains will run the entire Circle in opposite directions, so that passengers will be able to proceed from any point of the Circle to any other point by train running either east or west. The total length of the link line will be one mile and four chains, and the total estimated cost is £2,100,000.

The completion of the new portion will leave the present Aldgate Station of the Metropolitan Railway outside the Circle, as well as the short piece of line extending from this station to the proposed junction. It seems probable that this short piece will be rendered useful by being continued under Aldgate to unite with the goods terminus of the Blackwall and Blackwall Extension Railway, and with the goods lines from the London Docks, which now terminate immediately on the south of Aldgate; and it is further expected that communications will be made with the passenger lines at the Fenchurch-street Station.

ST. MARGARET'S, WESTMINSTER.

The old Church of St. Margaret is now undergoing restoration, and, in consequence, the usual Sunday services are being conducted in the Cloisters, Westminster Abbey. It has been affirmed that King Edward the Confessor caused this church to be erected close to the Abbey which he was then building, dedicating it to St. Margaret, the virgin martyr of Alexandria. About 200 years afterwards the church was destroyed by accident, and rebuilt by the parishioners and merchants of the Staple. Some other parts are said to have been rebuilt in the reign of Edward IV., and particularly the south aisle by Lady Mary Billing and her husband, Sir Thomas Billing, Chief Justice of England in that reign. In the reign of Edward VI. the church was in imminent danger of being totally destroyed; for the Duke of Somerset, wanting materials for the palace he had begun to erect, determined to demolish the church. But the parishioners resisted the workmen and put a stop to the Duke's plans. In 1735 the tower was rebuilt, and the church finally ceiled, with money granted by Parliament. The stained-glass window in St. Margaret's church has a long history. The magistrates of Dort, in Holland, being desirous of presenting King Henry VII. with something worthy to adorn his magnificent chapel then building at Westminster, directed this window to be made, which was five years in finishing. King Henry and his Queen sending their pictures to Dort, whence their portraits in the window are taken. King Henry died before the window was completed, and it fell into the hands of an Abbot of Waltham, who placed it in his Abbey church, where it remained till the dissolution of that Abbey by Henry VIII. (A.D. 1540). To preserve it from being destroyed it was removed by Robert Fuller, Abbot of Waltham, to a private chapel at New Hall, in Wiltshire, an ancient seat belonging to the Earls of Ormond. In Queen Elizabeth's reign New Hall was the seat of Thomas Ratcliff, Earl of Sussex, and afterwards his family sold the window to George Villars, Duke of Buckingham. His son sold it to General Monk, who, to preserve it, caused it to be buried underground during the Civil Wars. After the restoration, General Monk caused the window to be replaced in the chapel of New Hall. That chapel was suffered to become ruinous by his successors, but the window was still preserved. It lay for some time cased up in boxes, until Mr. Conyers purchased it for his chapel at Copthall, near Epping, and paid an artist named Mr. Price a large sum of money for repairing it. There the window remained until his son John Conyers, building a new house at some distance from the old seat, had no further use for it, and sold it for the sum of 400 guineas to the committee appointed in 1758 for the repairing and beautifying of St. Margaret's Church.

The interesting article on Salaries and Pensions in our last Number was taken from the Times.

The Earl of Derby was present at the Annual County Sessions for Lancashire, at Preston, on the 13th inst. His Lordship was elected chairman for the year, and Mr. Hibbert, M.P., vice-chairman.

The number of electors on the present register for England and Wales, now being revised by barristers holding "Courts of Revision," is 2,377,761, of whom 350,587 are in counties, 1,514,716 in boroughs, and 12,458 in Universities.—An official document has been issued showing the total cost and other charges connected with the printing of the register of electors in the counties and boroughs of England and Wales. In the English and Welsh counties the net cost, exclusive of the payment of the barristers, was £15,008; and in boroughs the expense was £21,195; making a cost of upwards of £36,000, added to which was some £30,000 for the Courts of Revision.

NEW BOOKS.

Attuned to horrors and atrocities as the public have lately become, they may be able to read, not without wincing but without turning absolutely sick, the almost incredible stories revealed, with scarcely pardonable minuteness, in The Hunting-Grounds of the Great West, by Richard Irving Dodge, Lieutenant-Colonel of the United States Army, with an Introduction by William Blackmore (Chatto and Windus), a volume containing "a description of the plains, game, and Indians of the great North American desert," and furnished with a large number of striking illustrations by Ernest Griset. One would fain seek refuge in incredulity from the effect of the dreadful scenes depicted; but they rest upon authority too indisputable to allow of such a relief. One would be inclined to say that the object of the book is to provide a plea for the prompt and complete extermination of whatever remnant may be still left of the Red Indians, and that a strong effort is required to prevent one from admitting the plea incontinently. If the Cossack is a fiend and the Bashibazouk a devil, there is no word in the English language which can do justice to the superinfernal infamy of the Red Indian. What gives us pause in the midst of our haste is a doubt whether the white man is altogether guiltless of the red man's transformation, if there has been any transformation, from a merely noble savage into an unspeakable demon. For, if a sense of wrong will convert, as we know it will, even a civilised being into an inhuman brute, into what may it not be expected to convert the original savage? However, to return to the book. It is divided into three parts—the first relating chiefly to the physical aspect of the country lying between the Missouri river on the east and the Rocky Mountains on the west; the second to the game and sport which were and are to be found in that range; the third to the life and character of the North American Indians. The first, of course, principally concerns the man of science, though it claims the attention of others also; the second appeals almost exclusively to the sympathies of the sportsman; the third is full of interest for everybody belonging to the great human family. Indeed, so absorbing are the contents of the third part, that, when we arrive at the end of the volume, the mind is almost entirely occupied with the reflection suggested by them, to the all but utter oblivion of the other two parts. Geographical and geological questions, peculiarities of climate, incidents of travelling and camping out, the delights and perils of hunting—all these seem paltry and insignificant matters in comparison with the ghastly picture drawn of three hundred thousand wretches in human form, who are, it is estimated, the whole "number of Indians of all descriptions at present inhabiting the United States." The revolting character attributed in the third part to the North American Indian is confirmed by Mr. Blackmore in his interesting "Introduction," in which he states that "it would be as true to depict the tiger as quiet and docile, as to represent that the Indian has one particle of consideration, feeling, or mercy towards either his enemy or captive." And yet, in the same introduction, Mr. Blackmore is just enough to give us the other side of the story, as it was told by a captive chief, in simple, pathetic language, which it is impossible to read without emotion. "I was once a boy," said he, in subdued tones; "then I saw the white man afar off. I hunted in these woods, first with a bow and arrow, then with a rifle. I saw the white man, and was told he was my enemy. I could not shoot him as I would a wolf or bear; yet like these he came upon me. Horses, cattle, and fields he took from me. He said he was my friend. He abused our women and children, and told us to go from the land. Still he gave me his hand in friendship. We took it. Whilst taking it, he had a snake in the other. His tongue was forked. He lied, and stung us. I asked but for a small piece of these lands, enough to plant and to live upon, far south—a spot where I could lay the ashes of my kindred. And even this has not been granted me. I feel the iron in my heart." This the reader should keep in his memory as he proceeds with the book, and, learning by degrees what white men, and, worse still, white women, have been made to suffer, longs to spring at the red man's throat: it may have a sobering effect. At the same time it must be acknowledged that, if the author's account be correct, the red man is by nature and education a monster of wickedness; he is as cruel towards the inoffensive animal that serves him well as towards the pitiless man who has done him grievous wrong. On the other hand, it is obvious to remark that the men who are called the pioneers of civilisation are not generally the cream of the white race; they consist rather of such men as flocked about David in the cave of Adullam; they are, for the most part, to judge from what one reads, persons whom it would be a compliment to call simple ruffians; and they, by the time the really civilised white man comes in contact with the Red Indian, have probably led the latter to regard the former as the incarnation of all that is abominable. If it be true that "it is the first step that costs," there is no great difficulty in accounting for the price which white men have to pay for their settlement upon the lands of aboriginal races. Still, it is certainly not easy to point out how the ordinary process can be altered so long as it remains the law of life that pioneering should nearly always be undertaken by the most necessitous adventurers, and that the most necessitous adventurers should nearly always be the most unscrupulous and the most ruffianly. The name of "Sitting Bull" is at present in men's mouths; and Mr. Blackmore, in his introduction, gives some particulars of "the war of 1876 against the Northern Sioux under the leadership" of that chief.

Circumstances tend to strengthen the vitality of such works as Clouds in the East, by Valentine Baker (Chatto and Windus), though the time which has elapsed since its publication might at any other period have been fatal to it. But Turkey and the Turks are still topics of exceeding interest; and no less may be said as regards Russia and Russian advances in Central Asia. Now, the author of this large volume has something, founded upon personal observation, to say about them all. Persia and Russia, however, rather than Turkey and Russia, are his main subjects. For the manner of his journeying was on this wise. He, in the days of the scare about Khiva—that is, in April, 1873—determined, having leisure at his disposal, "to endeavour to penetrate the mystery which hung over those Eastern deserts; and to bring back, if possible, political, geographical, and strategical information that might be valuable." Accordingly, furnished with useful letters from the Prince of Wales to the Grand Duke Michael, he travelled by way of Vienna, Rustchuk, Constantinople, Sinope, Trebizond, and Batoum to Tiflis; and thence, by the Grand Duke Michael's permission, to the Atrek. His object—to cut a long story short—was to reach Merv; but, for excellent reasons, he had to abandon the attempt. However, his failure does not prevent him from giving a history of the place, the particulars being "derived from a variety of sources." Having failed in his main purpose, he turned his face to the west and pushed on homewards, exploring, on the way, the "northern slopes of the Kuren Dagh." A great deal of interesting information, both in going and returning, was collected and is recorded; and some stirring adventures were encountered. Ultimately he and his comrades—among whom, it is presumed, was Lieutenant Gill, R.E., whose services may, no doubt, be traced in the elaborate maps attached to the volume—reached Teheran, and, in due course, Moscow, St. Petersburg, Königsberg, Berlin, Brussels, Ostend, and Charing-cross. Thus was a notable trip accomplished; and the story of it is told with great spirit and in soldierly style, with the accompaniment, moreover, of illustrations more remarkable for their high colour, perhaps, than for anything else. The narrative is in itself well worthy of attention; but, as regards usefulness, it will probably be considered to possess less of that quality than is to be found in the wonderfully elaborate maps and in the "political and strategical report on Central Asia" which is appended to it by the author. It is, of course, impossible to discuss here in detail the positions laid down in that report; but, as the author's opinions are not without weight, it may be well to state briefly that he is of those who look with apprehension upon the proceedings of Russia in Central Asia, and that he concludes his review of the general question with nine suggestions for our action in future.

Anybody who feels disposed to read "a popular account of the Jummo and Kashmir territories," with the aid of a map and some photographic and other illustrations, would do well to try The Northern Barrier of India: by Frederic Drew (Edward Stanford), a volume in which the author has selected from his larger work upon the same subject "those parts which are most likely to interest the general reader." The point of the book, of course, lies in its bearing upon the question of an invasion of India; and it is satisfactory to learn that "our Northern Barrier is one through which but two or three passages lead; and the gates that guard them, if opened by a stranger, may close behind him, while the door in front might prove too strong to be forced." It may whet appetite, if the reader's mind be recalled to certain memorable events of some thirty years ago. After the famous battle of Sobraon, then, "Kashmir (which in 1819 had been conquered by the Sikhs from the Afghans) was detached from the Sikh territories and handed over to the Raja of Jummo," who was the celebrated Gulab Singh, and who, on this increase of his dominions, received the higher title of Maharaja. In 1857 Gulab Singh died, and was succeeded by his son Ranbir Singh, to whose court our author went in 1862, and in whose service he remained for the next ten years, being originally engaged for "the geological exploration of the mountains," an occupation in which he spent several successive summers. He was afterwards employed in "the management of the Maharaja's Forest Department," and in his last year of service he "was intrusted with the governorship of the Province of Ladakh." Moreover, he passed several months of every winter "at Jummo, in daily attendance" at the Maharaja's Court, so that he has good reason to say, "the ways and doings of the Darbar became almost as familiar to me as the customs of my own country." And of those ways and doings he, speaking with unusual authority, gives a very interesting account. He had the good fortune to be present, in 1871, at a Royal wedding in Jummo, an event which, he somewhat quaintly observes, does not occur "often" in that place—as if it were an everyday occurrence elsewhere—and which he, of course, describes at some length. From Jummo he passes to what he calls "the region of the Middle Mountains," then to Kashmir, and lastly to Ladakh. Of the last-mentioned province he may claim, for a reason already given, to speak with especial knowledge; and he describes with some detail the manner of his reception when he went to take up his governorship; and he dwells with much circumstance upon the physical features of the various districts. In conclusion, he, as a practical man, calls upon the reader "to judge, from the facts laid before him, to what degree and in what sense" the territories so minutely described "constitute a Barrier for India on this its northern frontier." There are, it is made out, three "roads through these territories by which a bold invader might dream of attempting to reach India;" and cause is shown why each and all may be regarded as offering almost insuperable obstacles. "Kashmir, when reached," it is admitted, "could afford forage and supplies for a large force; but a large force," it is pleasant to know, "could yet more easily be poured in from the other side by the Power who holds the Punjab, and unless the invader could advance to, and command immediate victory in, the Plains, his position in Kashmir would soon become precarious." It is not surprising to find that our author, in common with all who have any pretension to express a trustworthy opinion upon the subject, has a good word to say for Kashmir and its delights. In latitude, he observes, it about corresponds "with the following places—in Asia, Baghdad and Damascus; in Africa, Fez, the capital of Morocco; in America, South Carolina. But the elevation above the sea, of five or six thousand feet, gives it a far more temperate climate than what any of these enjoy." It is, indeed, "no wonder that Englishmen who can get leave thence to it as they do in the summer time;" and it will be no wonder if Englishmen who cannot thence to it should thence instead to our author's account of it.

When enterprising travellers, though having no connection one with another, make for the same point, it is almost inevitable that their narratives, as well as their roads, should have some point or points of contact; and this will be found to be the case with A Ride through Islam, by Hippiusley Cunliffe Marsh, Captain 18th Bengal Cavalry (Tinsley Brothers) and Colonel V. Baker's "Clouds in the East." Colonel Baker, in his work, alludes to "an English officer" who "wanted to make his way from Teheran to India. He got to Herat, and was very well received by Yakoob Khan, when orders came from the English Government that he was not to be allowed to proceed, and that no Englishman unprovided with an order from the British Government was to be received at Herat, or allowed to enter Afghanistan." This "English officer," from the internal evidence of the "Ride through Islam," was, no doubt, Captain Marsh, whose work, though his expedition was earlier in date than Colonel Baker's, was not published until some time after "Clouds in the East;" and, though it may bear witness to a greater measure of success in point of penetration towards the desired object, is far more meagre in respect of information and of far less scientific value than the latter. Captain Marsh, in fact, explains that his book is merely an expansion of "notes" which originally appeared in an Indian newspaper, and that, as he was unable "to carry any instruments," it contains "very little, if any, addition to geographical knowledge." The narrative, nevertheless, is full of interest, both as a record of an adventurous expedition and as an additional contribution towards the better understanding of some questions connected with our dominion in India. A map is given, and on it the author's route is so plainly marked out as to be followed at a glance; from Constantinople to Poti, to Tiflis, to Bakur, to Teheran, to Meshed, to Herat, to Candahar. Then there came that unpleasant order, already noted; and the gallant traveller was debarred from taking "the northern road," and had to "proceed to India via Quetta and Shikarpore, or Khelat." At Quetta attempts were made to dissuade him from continuing his journey by the Bolan Pass; but he was resolute, and, in due time, arrived safe and sound at Jacobabad, "our frontier station in Sind." He now had no difficulty in reaching Shikarpore and Sukkur; and there his ride may be said to have come to an end. It cannot be necessary to state that it is only by a stretch of language that the author can be said to have "ridden" through Islam; he had got as far as Teheran before he took seriously to that method of travelling, but it is worthy of remark that he did the last nine hundred miles of his journey, from Meshed to Jacobabad, on one horse, a Turkoman—a breed highly spoken of by Colonel Baker, who boasts of having introduced into England "the first and only thoroughbred Turkoman that ever reached this country," an importation "likely," in the importer's opinion, "to prove of immense value in giving a strain of extraordinary stoutness to our thoroughbred stock." There must be very few Englishmen who have such an opportunity as fell to the lot of Captain Marsh of conversing with Yakoob Khan and of examining the city and fort of Herat; and, therefore, the chapter in which he describes the use he made of his opportunity is sure to be read with curiosity and attention. In his "conclusion" Captain Marsh delivers himself of his ideas touching the Russian movements in Central Asia. He is apparently dismayed at what he sees; and he holds that "to preserve internal tranquillity and progress in India, we must interfere (with all the emphasis of italics) in the politics of Persia, Afghanistan, Kashgar, and the small States north of the Oxus and Indus, to the exclusion of Russian interests, prestige, or intrigue." And yet, so widely do doctors differ, that, whereas Colonel Baker is dead for the occupation of Quetta, Captain Marsh is led to "consider the occupation of Quetta by our native troops as a false move; but if they were withdrawn and a Political Officer be established permanently at the Court of the Khan of Khelat, we should enjoy all the advantages of a spirited move, without any of its drawbacks." And the charge of being a political Gallio would perhaps be brought against the Englishman who, perplexed at the different views expressed about the threatening attitude of Russia in Central Asia, should console himself with the reflection that the Russians at present have their hands pretty full of invasion and are not very likely to undertake another for some time to come, either by way of Afghanistan or by any other way.

It is always profitable to compare notes with a not only studious, thoughtful, and earnest, but also practical, energetic, and, to a certain extent, public man, who has the courage of his opinions; and, for that reason, service is done by the publication of such works as Critical Miscellanies, by John Morley (Chapman and Hall), of which a second volume, containing a "second series," not very long ago made its appearance. The contents were originally published in the Fortnightly Review, of which their author is the accomplished editor, and they are now, with revisions and enlargements, submitted for the consideration of readers and thinkers who may not have had the advantage of seeing them in that magazine, or who may desire to possess them in a collected form, without the accompaniment of other matter. There is advantage in such publications if they induce people to study, as their author has studied, the subjects discussed, or, having already studied them, to compare ideas and conclusions with him; there is danger if they lead people to take at second hand, however able that hand may be, a particular view of debated points. Robespierre and Turgot, whom the author has chosen, among other themes, for his criticism, may, at the first blush, seem to offer small opportunity for the exhibition of any new, original, or striking analysis of character; but the author, apart from the charm of his style, has that to say which removes the reproach of staleness. M. Taine, Mr. Mill, and Lord Macaulay are, or were, of our own date; and, though they have by no means escaped the notice of the critic, they have not yet arrived at the stage of antiquation. Certainly the most interesting of the author's criticisms are those which he bestows upon the late Mr. Mill, for whom he evidently felt a respect, a reverence even, to say nothing of affection, which, nevertheless, is not permitted to interfere with an honesty of purpose which Mr. Mill himself, if his character has been properly understood, would have been the first to commend. Mr. Mill as a teacher undoubtedly did good in his generation, and the good which he did will live after him; but, though his admirers and friends should write rhapsodies about him, it is doubtful whether he will ever be for the majority of men anything more than a shadowy abstraction.

THE COMMERCE OF LITERATURE AND ART.

The "Annual Statement" prepared at the Custom House, showing our foreign trade, states that in the year 1876 the imports of books from abroad into the United Kingdom were of the weight of 13,897 cwt., and of the value of £150,099, the largest supplies being from France and Germany. Our exports of books comprised 82,089 cwt., of the value of £881,833, the production of the United Kingdom, besides foreign or colonial books of the value of £12,723. Our largest export of our books was to Australia, the year's value being £334,136; and the export to British India was of the value of £79,778, to British North America £68,102, and to British South America £40,007. Our exports of our books to the United States in 1876 were of the value of £191,966, and our imports of books thence £18,473. Our imports of prints and engravings in 1876 comprised 5,654,377 in number, of the value of £50,017, coming almost entirely from France and Germany; our exports of such articles consisted of our own produce to the value of £72,563; and foreign or colonial productions of the value of £2251.

On the other hand, in the items we have now to mention our imports exceeded our exports. We imported in 1876 pictures, drawings, and photographs of the value of £549,561, chiefly from France and Belgium; our exports of these articles comprised 6599 pictures, of the value of £301,945, chiefly among productions of the United Kingdom, and sent chiefly to France, and foreign or colonial pictures, &c., of the value of £47,767. Of works of art other than pictures" our imports, chiefly from France and Italy, were of the value of £129,629. The record of our export of such works shows only foreign or colonial productions of the value of £40,830, for there is no such item as "works of art" in the list of exports of productions of the United Kingdom. If there was any such export it must be among "unenumerated articles," not deemed of importance enough to be named, though they make a large item in the whole. The unenumerated exports in 1876 were of the value of £6,385,936, five sixths being the produce of the United Kingdom.

Sir John Lubbock, M.P., lectured in the Royal Pavilion last week to the members of the Brighton Literary Association on the Relation of Plants to Insects.

A new Guildhall at Looe was opened on the 13th inst., and addresses were given by Sir Colman Rashleigh, M.P., Mr. Tremayne, M.P., and Mr. Courtney, M.P.

THE WAR: RECONNAISSANCE ON THE RIVER VID BY GENERAL LASKAREFF.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

HANGING BULGARIANS IN THE STREETS OF ADRIANOPLE.

THE RED CRESCENT AMBULANCE, WITH LORD BLANTYRE'S SURGEONS, ON THE ROAD TO THE FRONT.

NOTICE.—The New IRIDESCENT GLASS.—This beautiful iridescent glass can now be obtained at OETZMANN and CO.'S in a great variety of articles, useful and ornamental. Also the best quality in Della Bistic's Tinted Glass, Oetzmänn and Co., Complete House-Furnishings, 67 to 79, Hampstead-road (near Tottenham-court-road).

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

OETZMANN & CO.

67, 69, 71, 73, 77, & 79,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,

NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD,

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street; Bedding Factory, Eagle-place, London, N.W.; Carpets, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishings, Dining-rooms, China, Glass, Paper-Hangings, Pictures, Brasses, Clocks, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout.

THE IMMENSE RANGE OF PREMISES formerly the EAGLE BREWERY having been REBUILT and added to the SHOWROOMS. It is now one of the largest Furnishing Establishments in the world. Comparison of price and quality respectfully solicited before deciding elsewhere. Country Customers in delivery of Goods by their own large PANTHEONIC VANS, and fixing in position by competent persons. Descriptive Catalogue, the best Furnishing Guide extant, post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

CABINET and UPHOLSTERY
DEPARTMENT.—Elegant Drawing-room Suites, handsomely carved Italian Walnut Wood, upholstered in rich Worsted Damask, from 8 guineas; ditto, in rich Silk and Satin, 20 to 30 guineas; elegant Black and Gold Suites, from 12 guineas; superior ditto, from 18 to 20 guineas; Solid Mahogany Dining-room Suites, 8 guineas; ditto, fine Spanish Mahogany, upholstered in best morine leather, 14 guineas; massive Mahogany Dining Tables, from 22 to 25 guineas; handsome Walnut large oval Centre Table, 3 guineas.

SIDEBOARDS.—OETZMANN and CO. Sideboards, with high plate-glass back and carved mountings, price 15 guineas; massive Spanish Mahogany or Oak ditto, very handsome, 25 guineas; noble Spanish Mahogany or Oak ditto, handsomely carved, and lofty plate-glass back, made and finished in the best possible manner, price 35 guineas. A variety of English and other designs in rich Spanish Mahogany or finest carved Oak, from 25 to 50 guineas.—OETZMANN and CO.

OETZMANN and CO.'S BED-ROOM
SUITES.—One of the largest and best assortments in the kingdom to select from, displayed in Show-rooms 22 ft. long, with Bedsteads and Bedding fitted up for inspection. Bed-room Suite, consisting of Wardrobe, Chest of Drawers, Washstand, 2 Salt Tables and Glass Topped Alter, Three Chairs, and 10-bedstead Cupboard, from 6 guineas, complete. Some new and elegant designs at 15, 18, and 21 guineas. Large and handsomely decorated Bed-room Suites in ash, pitch pine, and other woods, at 28, 30, 50, and 75 guineas; also in black and gold, 30 guineas upwards.

BEDDING DEPARTMENT.—Strong Iron Bedsteads, from 6s. 6d. each; superior Iron French ditto, 15s. 6d.; handsome Arabian Bedsteads, from 25s. 6d. upwards; excellent Mattresses, full size, 12s. 6d.; good Feather Beds, full size, 3s. 6d.; ditto Bolsters, 7s. 6d.; ditto Pillows, 3s. 6d. each; handsome 3-ft. Mahogany Washstands, with marble top, 18s. 6d.; Mahogany Toilet Vanities, with marble top, 12s. 6d. (size of plate 16 inches by 12 inches); 6s. 6d.—OETZMANN and CO.

PAPERHANGINGS.—OETZMANN and CO.—PAPERHANGINGS at WHOLESALE PRICES. A great saving in price. All the new patterns are now on view at the Show-Rooms.—OETZMANN and CO.

CARPETS. FURNITURE.
CARPETS. FURNITURE.
CARPETS. FURNITURE.
CARPETS. FURNITURE.

ARTISTIC FURNISHING.—OETZMANN and CO. are introducing a variety of Elegant Persian and Indian Designs in Rugs and Mats, to meet the requirements for Artistic Furnishing, at moderate cost. Large Rugs (excellent copies of real Persian and Indian) from 10s. each. A visit of inspection solicited.—OETZMANN and CO.

ANGLO-TURKEY CARPETS.
OETZMANN and CO.—These superior Carpets, of which Messrs. OETZMANN and CO. have the exclusive sale, are of first-class British manufacture, have all the style and appearance of real Turkey Carpets, at little more than the price of good Brussels, and are very durable. Price-lists post-free on application. For the convenience of those residing at a distance, a large place, showing the Border and Centre of Carpet, sent on receipt of 2s., which will be deducted from price of Carpet or returned upon return of pattern. Hearths to match, 6 ft. long by 2 ft. 8 in. wide, 41s. 6d.—OETZMANN and CO.

CARPET DEPARTMENT.—Stout Tapestry Brussels Carpet, 1s. 9d.; handsome pattern ditto, from 2s. 2d. to 2s. 8d. per yard; superior Brussels, new designs, from 2s. 11d. upwards; Kidney Carpet, all wool, 1s. 11d. per yard; Patent Felt Carpeting, from 11d. per yard; superior Rock-dye ditto, handsome designs, double width, 1s. 11d. per yard; excellent Stair Carpet, from 6d. per yard; best quality, all-wool ditto, 1s. per yard.—OETZMANN and CO.

EVERYONE SHOULD SEE the large, handsome AXMINSTER HEARTH RUGS that OETZMANN and CO. are now selling at 3s. 11d. each, nominal price 12s. 6d. An immense variety of Designs and Colours to suit every pattern in Carpets. A visit of inspection solicited.

DRAPERY DEPARTMENT.—Large White Quilts, 24 yards by 2 yards, 4s. 11d.; handsome Marcella ditto, 9s. 9d.; White Wool Blankets, from 6s. per pair (see Special Reduced List, sent post-free); Large Whitey ditto, 24 yards long, 9s. 11d. per pair; handsome Cloth Table-Covers, from 4s. 11d.; magnificent damasked Table-Covers, 10s. 11d.; (4) Chintzes, new patterns, 44s. per yard; Cretonne ditto, from 6d. per yard.—OETZMANN and CO.

EXHIBITION PATTERNS COAL VASE.
OETZMANN and CO.'S new Special Designs for the Season, much admired, handsomely japanned, and richly burnished gold ornamentation, with opal handles, strong base lining, a great convenience and saving in wear. Price complete, 21s.—OETZMANN and CO.

ROYAL WORCESTER CHINA, from the celebrated ROYAL PORCELAIN WORKS can be obtained from OETZMANN and CO., Complete House-Furnishings, 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, who are a SOLE VENDORS of the CLEOPATRA TOILET SERVICES (ever, basin, &c., complete—nine pieces), from 10s. 6d. per set. Descriptive Price-lists of the same can be had post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

CHINA and GLASS DEPARTMENT.
A Alexandra Pattern Toilet Services (ever, basin, &c., complete, nine pieces), 7s. 11d.; handsome ditto, 8s. 9d.; Richly-Cut Decanters, 5s. 6d. per pair; Cut Wine, from 2s. 6d. per dozen; superior ditto, richly cut, reduced to 5s. 9d. per dozen; Gift Clocks, under glass shades, from 10s. 9d. upwards; Cottage Clocks, from 6s. 9d. each; Elegant Lustres, Vases, Parian Figures, &c.—OETZMANN and CO.

OETZMANN and CO., COMPLETE
HOUSE FURNISHERS, 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, Hampstead-road (three minutes' walk from Tottenham-court-road and Gower-street Station, Metropolitan Railway). Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality. Orders per post, large or small, receive prompt and faithful attention in the selection. Close at Seven, and on Saturdays at Four o'clock. Descriptive Catalogue post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free,

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

MAPLE and CO.

FURNITURE.

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNITURE.

New ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the Price of Every Article required, post-free. MAPLE and CO., 145, Tottenham-court-road, London.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.

100 Suites of various designs in stock, from 64s. to 250s. MAPLE and CO., 145, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CARPETS.

British and Foreign, of every description. 500 Pieces best Brussels, old patterns, 3s. 9d. per yard. MAPLE and CO., 147, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CRETONNE CHINTZ.

Just received from Mulhouse a Manufacturer's Stock of about 1000 Pieces, at prices varying from 10d. per yard to 250s. MAPLE and CO., 148, Tottenham-court-road, London.

SILK DAMASKS.

The largest and most varied assortment at old prices. Satins, Silks, Cordelines, Silk Reps of all Colours, in Stock. MAPLE and CO., 149, Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO.

CARPETS.

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

MAPPIN and WEBB,

MANUFACTURERS,
Mansion House-Buildings, City, London.
The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

MAPPIN and WEBB'S TABLE

CUTLERY.—BEST QUALITY DOUBLE SHEAR STEEL.

	Table.	Dessert.	Carver.
34-inch Ivory, per doz.	15s. 0d.	11s. 0d.	7s. 0d.
34-inch Ivory, balance, per doz.	15s. 0d.	11s. 0d.	7s. 0d.
34-inch Ivory, balance, per doz.	15s. 0d.	11s. 0d.	7s. 0d.
34-inch Ivory, stout, per doz.	15s. 0d.	11s. 0d.	7s. 0d.
4-inch fine Ivory, per doz.	15s. 0d.	11s. 0d.	7s. 0d.

Oak Boxes always kept ready in stock. Illustrated Catalogues post-free.

MAPPIN and WEBB,

MANUFACTURERS,
76, 77, and 78, Oxford-street, West End, London.
The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

JOHN MORTLOCK

begs to call attention to the
"EVERY-DAY" DINNER SERVICES,

complete for 12 Persons, £4 15s.
Colours are indestructible.
The Pottery Galleries,
203 and 204, Oxford-street; 30 and 31, Orchard-street,
Fountain-square, W.

PLATE.—GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE.

Limited, Manufacturing Silversmiths,
11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS.
Fiddle Pattern, 7s. 8d. per ounce; Queen's Pattern, 8s. 0d. per ounce. Many other patterns, plain or highly ornamented.

	12 Table Spoons.	12 Table Forks.	12 Dessert Spoons.	12 Dessert Forks.
12 Table Spoons	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Spoons	25 10 0
12 Table Forks	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Forks	25 10 0
12 Dessert Spoons	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Forks	25 10 0
12 Dessert Forks	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Spoons	25 10 0
12 Dessert Spoons	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Forks	25 10 0
12 Dessert Forks	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Spoons	25 10 0
12 Dessert Spoons	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Forks	25 10 0
12 Dessert Forks	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Spoons	25 10 0
12 Dessert Spoons	20	11 10 0	12 Dessert Forks	25 10 0

Set of Fiddle Pattern 261 2 8 Set of Queen's Pattern £22 14 0
A Pamphlet, illustrated with 30 Engravings, containing the prices of articles required in furnishing, gratis and post-free on application.

For the use of committees a work has been published, with large lithographic drawings of plate kept ready for presentation.

WIPE YOUR FEET.

TRELOAR'S MATS,

69, LUDGATE-HILL.

TRELOAR'S Catalogue of Decorative and Durable Floor Coverings, free by post.—Address, 69, Ludgate-hill.

EPPS'S

COCOA.

AMERICAN CENTENNIAL

PRIZE MEDAL.

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.

Its pure, strong, delicate aroma, and invigorating qualities have established its position as a first-class dietetic article.

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.

"The Caracas Cocoa of such choice quality."—Food,

Water, and Air (Dr. Hassall).

"A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

FRY'S EXTRACT OF COCOA,

"than which, if properly prepared, there is no nicer or more wholesome preparation of Cocoa."—Food, Water, and Air.

Edited by Dr. Hassall.

TENTH INTERNATIONAL MEDAL

awarded to J. S. FRY and SON.

TAYLOR BROTHERS'

MARAVILLA COCOA,

DELICIOUS AND INVIGORATING.

MARAVILLA COCOA.

"It may justly be called the perfection of prepared Cocoa."—British Medical Journal.

MARAVILLA COCOA.—"The 'Globe' says,

"Taylor Brothers'

MARAVILLA COCOA has achieved a thorough success, and supercedes every other cocoa in the market. Entire solubility, a delicate aroma, and a rare concentration of the purest elements of nutrition, distinguish the Mar-villa Cocoa above all others. For invalids, dyspeptics, and consumers of Cocoa in general, we could not recommend a more agreeable or valuable beverage."

Sole Proprietors, TAYLOR BROTHERS, London.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.

BROWN and POLSON'S

CORN FLOUR,

WITH STEWED FRUIT OF ANY KIND.

WILLIS'S "THREE CASTLES."

Thackeray in the "Virginiana" says:—

"There's no sweeter Tobacco comes from Virginia, and no better brand than the 'Three Castles'."

Sold only in Packets, protected by our Name and Trade-Mark.

W. D. and H. O. Wills, Bristol and London.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

FIRST SHOW OF
A UTUMN SPECIALS.

We are now offering a Special Purchase of PARISIENNE SILKS, of extreme Richness, in New Shades,
at 2s. 6d., 3s. 3d., and 3s. 9d. per yard; Patterns free.

ONE THOUSAND PIECES OF

BLACK SILKS (Extra Width),
at 2s. 6d., 3s. 3d., and 3s. 9d. per yard. Patterns free.

COLOURED GENOA VELVETS,
to match every silk,
short pile, well covered, suitable for gowns,
6s. 11d. per yard. Any length cut. Patterns free.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

NEW AUTUMN GOODS.
SILK COSTUMES
of the most fashionable description, in all the New Colours, from Paris Models, commencing at 34s.

THREE HUNDRED

BLACK SILK COSTUMES, at 44s. These dresses are made from good Lyons Silk, and are specially recommended.
Five yards Silk given for Bodice.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-ST., W.,

having concluded the purchase of large quantities of and Squirrel Furs, they are now on Sale, as quoted below:—
Russian Seal Fur Jackets, loose shapes, 24 to 28 in. deep, 6 to 10 gs.
Ditto, fitting shapes, 30 to 36 in. deep, 9 to 20 gs.
South Sea Seals, loose shapes, 2 to 4 gs.

THE LATEST PRODUCTIONS IN

MANTLES and PALETOTS.

Cashmere Circulars, lined Fur, 2 to 5 gs.
Cashmere Paletots, lined Fur, 3 to 8 gs.
Silk Circulars, lined Fur, 3 to 10 gs.
Silk Paletots, lined Fur, 6 to 15 gs.

THE NEW DIAGONAL

CLOTH PALETOTS, 2 gs. to 5 gs.

The New Beaver Cloth Paletots, 2s. 6d. to 5 gs.
New Black and White Paletots, 1s. 6d. to 42s.
Waterproof Mantles and Ulsters, 17s. 6d. to 42s.

A LARGE COLLECTION OF NOVELTIES FOR

AUTUMN and WINTER DRESSES,

In every variety of Fabric and Shade of Colour, from 12s. 6d. to 42s. the Full Dress. Patterns free.

IN 62 NEW SHADES OF COLOUR.

CACHEMIRE DE PARIS.

This elegant material is all wool, beautifully soft, and richer in its coloring than any article previously introduced.
48 inches wide, 2s. 11d. and 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free.
PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

FOR TRAVELLING AND SEASIDE WEAR.

SCARBORO' SERGES (all Wool),

at 18s. 6d. and 22s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Patterns free.
In all the New Shades of Navy Bronze, Vert, &c.

IN WHITE, BLACK, AND ALL NEW COLOURS.

VELVET - FINISHED VELVETEENS, beautifully soft, rich, and very wide.

This charming fabric can be had in Black, from 2s. 9d. to 3s. 6d. per yard, and in 35 choice Shades of Colour at 3s. 9d. per yard for ladies' wear.
PETER ROBINSON, 102 to 106, Oxford-street, W.

VERY FASHIONABLE THIS SEASON.

CASHMERE MERINOES,

45 in. wide, 17s. 6d. the Dress.
Patterns free.
The richness and variety of colour in this useful fabric have never been equalled.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

New Designs in
Cashmere and Silk Costumes, 4 gs.
Specialties in Travelling Costumes, 38s. 6d. to 7 gs.
Mirrored Washing Silk Costumes, 42s. 6d.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

EGERTON BURNETT'S

ROYAL WELLINGTON SERGES.

"The Court Circular," "The Queen," "Myra's Journal," &c., unanimously testify to the superiority of Egerton Burnett's Serge as a material for ladies' wear. He has repeatedly called attention to these admirable SERGES. He has repeatedly had the honour of supplying them direct to the ROYAL FAMILY, and orders are daily arriving from all parts of the kingdom. Being woven from the finest wools, and of a permanent patent dye, which neither rain nor salt water can affect, they surpass all others in appearance and durability.

Prices from 1s. 11d. to the finest at 4s. 6d. per yard.
E. B. & S. NEW, HAND-MADE VIROGNE (CACHMIRE) and FOUR SERGES are most fashionable.

A SPECIAL STRONG MAKE IS MADE FOR BOYS' AND GENTLEMEN'S SUITS, 44 in. from 3s. 9d. per yard.

Patterns-Books of the various male and shades sent free by post, and carriage is paid to Bristol or London on parcels over £2.
Goods packed for exportation.

EGERTON BURNETT, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

BLACK SILKS manufactured by Messrs.

Bonnet, of Lyons.—These Silks are SOLD on most advantage terms, 13s. 6d. per yard, and are manufactured by Messrs.

Bonnet can be more fully relied upon for wear than any other description of Black Silks.

SEALSKIN and FUR-LINED MANTLES.

These may seem out of place at this season of the year, but purchasers may rest assured that they have, by buying early, the first choice of the best furs and patterns, and can now get them at a cheaper cost.

SIX-AND-A-HALF GUINEA BLACK

SILK COSTUMES.—Engraving of Messrs. JAY'S Six-and-a-Half Guinea Costumes forwarded on application gratis; also a pattern of the quality of Black Silk from which these Costumes are made.

IMPROVED JANUS CORD.—Ladies who at this season of the year choose to wear black dresses will find JANUS CORD, at 13 guineas the full dress length, one of the most economical and best fabrics manufactured for ladies' dresses.

JAY'S.
The London General Mourning Warehouse, Regent-street, W.

"WEAR-RESISTING" (Regis.)

BOYS' SUITS.

SAMUEL BROTHERS.

Suit for a Boy 3 ft. 8 in. in height,
C Class, 27s.; D Class, 31s.
Prices varying according to height.
Pattern &c., post-free.

SAMUEL BROTHERS, Sydenham House, 65 and 67, Ludgate-hill.

WOOLLEN CLOTHS.—Waterproof

Tweeds, Macclesfield Cloths, Sealskins, Fur Boaters, and other materials for Ladies' Suits; also every kind of Woollen Goods for Gentlemen's and Boys' wear.

SKETCHES OF THE WAR, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE ENGLISH HOSPITAL AT ERZEROU M AS IT IS.

THE SAME HOSPITAL AS IT WAS.

EXTERIOR OF THE ENGLISH HOSPITAL AT ERZEROU M.

the hands of two American missionaries, Messrs. Pierce and Cole, who had attended to them bravely, according to their capability, and had added much to their comfort by providing clean shirts and things, for as many as they were able. The servants, dressers, and others of the hospital had received no pay from the Government for a long time, and consequently their duties were utterly neglected.

"A few days' really hard work on the part of the new medical officers soon made a vast alteration in the aspect of the place. The gangrenous and erysipelous cases were separated from the others, and cleanliness, attention, carbolic acid, and proper diet worked a marvellous change in the general condition of the patients. A room was fitted up in a rough and ready manner as an 'operation theatre;' and already, in spite of great opposition on the part of the authorities, a considerable number of amputations have taken place. The patients operated upon were grateful to a degree which would surprise anyone who did not know their abject condition before English help came. Bedsteads have been provided, and are still being made, at the expense of the general funds of the hospital, of which Mr. Zohrab kindly acts as treasurer.

RUSSIAN MODE OF CONSTRUCTING AND DEFENDING TRENCHES.
FROM A SKETCH AT THE BATTLE OF KARAHASSANKOI.

"These funds are, unfortunately, at present very limited, but we trust the English will not let them long continue so. A small salary is regularly paid to all the employés of the hospital, in addition to what they get, or ought to get, from the Government; and by these means a general feeling of satisfaction has been created. The patients, being attended to regularly and skilfully, have assumed an air of cheerfulness and satisfaction previously unknown among them; and the servants of the establishment, knowing that they are not working absolutely for nothing, perform their duties in a manner which shows an interest in what they do, and adds to the comfort and welfare of the patients.

"An intimation has been received that four additional surgeons have been commissioned by the same nobleman, and that they are on their way to Erzeroum. When they arrive, the operations of the English Hospital will be capable of very great extension; and probably an ambulance will be organised to proceed to the front, so as to render immediate assistance to the wounded, of which they stand in such great need."

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 1994.—VOL. LXXI.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1877.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE.
By Post, 6d.

THE WAR: TURKISH ASSAULT ON THE RUSSIAN POSITIONS IN THE SHIPKA PASS, AUGUST 20.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN GAMRIER, R.N., A CORRESPONDENT OF THE "TIMES."

BIRTHS.

On the 19th inst., at Mossley Hill, near Liverpool, the wife of Edward Edmondson, of a daughter.

On the 23rd inst., at 98, Lower Baggot-street, Dublin, the Lady Harriot Unbury, of a son.

On the 12th inst., at Palermo, the Marchesa di Gallidoro, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 13th inst., by special license, at the Castle, Ballyraggett, the residence of Lady Harriet Kavanagh, by the Bishop of Ossory, assisted by the Rev. Robert le Poer McClintock, Rector of Castle Bellingham, cousin of the bride, James Peddie Steele, Esq., B.A., M.D., Edin., to Sarah Louisa, youngest daughter of the late Rev. William and Lady Louisa le Poer Trench.

On the 19th inst., at Bolton Abbey, by the Rev. J. Nelson, Vicar of Luddenden, assisted by the Rev. A. R. Macduff, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Major Arthur Ewart, Madras Cavalry, son of the late Henry Farrer, Esq., of Scalby Hall, Cumberland, to Eliza Annie, younger daughter of Richard Bracken, Esq., of Woodlands, Luddenden, near Halifax, Yorkshire.

On the 19th inst., at Christ Church, Ealing, by the Rev. J. S. Hilliard, M.A., Incumbent, Lieutenant-Colonel William Raffles, Tacker, Royal Engineers, to Harriette Elizabeth (Etta), sixth surviving daughter of the late James Charles Yorke, formerly Captain 5th Dragoon Guards.

On the 12th inst., at the Isle of Orleans, Quebec, Edward Brenton Archibald, son of E. M. Archibald, Esq., C.B., her Majesty's Consul-General at New York, to Caroline Roberta Mann, daughter of Joseph W. Leaycraft, Esq., of Beauhieu, Isle of Orleans, Quebec.

DEATHS.

On the 24th inst., at the Grand Hotel, Paris, Mary Culshaw, of Liverpool, aged 57 years. Friends will please accept this intimation.

On July 15, on the passage to Sydney from the Fiji Islands, Charles Mayo, Government Medical Officer of Fiji, and Fellow of New College, Oxford, eldest son of the late C. Mayo, Esq., of Winchester, aged 40.

* * The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 6.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 30.

Eighteenth Sunday after Trinity. Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m. Rev. Samuel Bardsley, Rector of Christ Church, Spitalfields; 3.15 p.m. Rev. Canon Lightfoot; 7 p.m. Rev. J. G. Pilkington, Vicar of St. Mark's, Dalston.

MONDAY, OCT. 1.

Cambridge Michaelmas Term begins. Pheasant-shooting begins. British Museum closed for a week. National Gallery closed. Society of Engineers, 7.30 p.m. (Mr. G. W. Usher on Rural Sanitation). Printers' Pension, Almshouse, and Orphan Asylum Corporation, elections, Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-st. London Hospital College, conversation, 8 p.m. Birmingham and Midland Institute, inaugural address by Professor Tyndall, the President, 8 p.m.

TUESDAY, OCT. 2.

New Election of an Alderman - Ward of Cheap. Conference of Librarians at London Institution, 10 a.m. 7 p.m. (three days). Graham Lectures, 6 p.m. (Mr. Dallas on Rhetoric); and following days.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 3.

Horticultural Society, Fruit and Floral Committee, 11 a.m.; general meeting, 3 p.m. Microscopical Society, 8 p.m. (Mr. H. C. Sorby on an Improved Method for Distinguishing Axes of Double-Refracting Crystals). Entomological Society, 7 p.m.

THURSDAY, OCT. 4.

International Conference of Librarians; banquet by the Lord Mayor. Toxophilite Society; extra target.

FRIDAY, OCT. 5.

Tunbridge Wells Agricultural Association Show. Birkbeck Institution, 8 p.m.: Mr. W. J. Wilson, beginning of course of six lectures on Physics (on Fridays).

SATURDAY, OCT. 6.

New Moon, 9.58 p.m. Society of Schoolmasters, 2 p.m. Royal Dramatic College, meeting at Willis's Rooms (Mr. H. Irving in the chair).

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY. Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOM.		WIND.		General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum, read at 10 a.m.	Minimum, read at 10 p.m.	Force.
September	Inches.	° F.	° F.	° F.	0-10	° F.	° F.	Miles.		In.
19	29.966	55.6	50.8	85	9	59.8	53.4	N. N.W. N.W.	107	0.080
20	29.765	48.8	47.1	94	10	54.8	47.0	N.W. N.W. N.	64	.105
21	29.794	46.4	38.5	76	4	54.2	39.6	N.	184	.000
22	29.925	46.9	38.3	74	6	55.3	38.7	N. N.W.	135	.000
23	29.892	48.4	43.5	85	—	55.8	32.7	W. N.W.	127	.010
24	30.068	49.1	39.5	72	7	56.5	42.6	N.W. N. N.W.	106	.000
25	30.179	45.8	40.5	83	9	54.8	34.8	N.N.E. W.	53	0.005

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:

Barometer (in inches) corrected .. 29.973 29.796 29.781 29.938 29.885 30.042 30.221
Temperature of Air .. 57.5° 52.3° 49.2° 49.7° 53.2° 53.2° 49.3°
Temperature of Evaporation .. 54.3° 51.5° 44.7° 45.3° 49.7° 48.3° 45.3°
Direction of Wind .. N.W. N.W. N.W. N. N.W. N.W. N.N.E.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 6.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
12 6	10 7	11 7	12 5	11 40	10 10	9 54

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS, "THE BRAZEN SERPENT," "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," and "CHRIST ENTERING THE TEMPLE," each 33 ft. by 22 ft., with "Dream of Pilate's Wife," "Christian Martyrs," &c., at the DORE GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, W. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

CRYSTAL PALACE PICTURE-GALLERY.—Open all the year round for the RECEPTION and SALE of PICTURES by the British and Foreign Schools. For Particulars apply to Mr. G. W. WASS.

MASKELYNE and COOKE. Daily at Three and Eight o'clock. EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Fifth year in London. The present programme embraces Psycho and Zoro, the twin automatic mysteries; the sensational scene, in exposure of so-called spiritualism, in which Mr. Cooke flouts about the room taking the cabinet with him—the most astounding feat ever accomplished; and many other illusory items of novel and original character. Such is the success of the entertainment, it is advisable to book seats in advance, for which there is no charge. Admission, 6s., 3s., 2s., 1s. W. MORSON, Manager.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—Great Success.—HAMILTON'S RUSSO-TURKISH WAR. Vivid representations of the most important events of the Campaign. Magnificent Scenes in Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Vienna, &c. EVERY EVENING at Eight. Wednesday and Saturday, at 2.30 and 8.15.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS will introduce an ENTIRELY NEW PROGRAMME. The whole of the Songs contained in the list of musical portion of the Entertainment will be changed. New Dances, New Whimsicalities, and New Burlesque Sketches. The New Programme will be given EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT, and on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at THREE and EIGHT. Fanteuil, 5s.; Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Doors Open at 2.30 for the Day Performance; at 7.30 for the Evening Performance. No fees. Ladies can retain their bonnets in all parts of the Hall.

KENNEDY'S SONGS OF SCOTLAND.—GREAT ST.

JAMES'S HALL. Every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY, at Eight. Monday, Oct. 1.—"A NIGHT WITH THE JACOBITES." Wednesday, 3.—"SPECIAL GLEE NIGHT." Friday, 5.—"A NIGHT WITH BURNS." Saturday, 6.—SELECTIONS FROM PREVIOUS PROGRAMMES. Front seats, 3s.; Balcony, 2s.; Admission, 1s.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—Sole Lessee and

Manager, F. B. Chatterton.—On MONDAY and during the Week, at Seven, SARAH'S YOUNG MAN; at Eight, ENGLAND IN THE TIME OF CHARLES II.; Messrs. S. Amory, J. Fernandez, W. Torres, E. F. Edgar, Pennington, A. Glover, H. Collier, &c.; Mesdames Leighton, Gertrude Dorr, A. Murray, D'Arcy, and Willis. At 10.45, THE CONSCRIPTION.—Messrs. C. Lauri and F. Sims, Miss Kate Hamilton, &c. Prices from 6d. to 55s. Box-Office open from Ten till Five Daily.

THE MOONSTONE. By WILKIE COLLINS. A New Drama. EVERY EVENING at 8.30.—OLYMPIC THEATRE.

MR. and Mrs. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT will Re-open next MONDAY EVENING, for the Season, with A HAPPY BUNGALOW; AT THE SEA-SIDE (first time), by Mr. Corney Graft; and A NIGHT SURPRISE.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

Now ready.

THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK for 1878. containing Twenty-Four Engravings from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—viz., Gates of Constantinople, Ports on the Bosphorus and the Black Sea, Old Modes of Locomotion, &c.; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Licenses; Eclipses, Remarkable Events, Post-Office Regulations, and a great variety of Useful and Interesting Information. The Trade supplied by G. Vickers, Angel-court (172), Strand; and H. Williams, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1877.

The spirit of M. Thiers still speaks with all but supreme authority from the grave in which his remains were so recently deposited. A Document written entirely by his own hand, the first part of which he had revised, and for the revision of the latter part of which he had set apart the very day on which his decease happened, gives to the world the last thoughts of this great Statesman as to the past, present, and future political position of the French Republic. The Paper takes the shape of an address to the ninth arrondissement of Paris, drawn up nominally with a view to the information of his constituents in regard to the issues involved in the pending General Election, but really with the object of enlightening the Electorate of France on the principles to be submitted to its judgment, by means of Universal Suffrage, on Oct. 14 next. It not only puts, with the dignity and accuracy of a great historian whose moral influence in all men of all parties in France are proud to recognise, the case of the existing Government and the country with a clearness of arrangement and a force of diction that nullify all possibility of its being misunderstood, but it also suffuses the whole discussion with caustic humour, which can hardly fail of covering both the President of the Republic and his Ministers with ridicule and confusion. Its statements of facts are such as may be borne witness to by every Frenchman of every party. Its logic is keen and irresistible. Almost every sentence of it gleams with patriotism. It is fraught, from beginning to end, with a wisdom and a foresight seldom displayed in an Electoral Document; and it might almost seem to have been written as an answer to Marshal MacMahon's Manifesto, so thoroughly is the drift of that Manifesto anticipated and replied to. Under any circumstances, the tenour of it would make a deep impression upon the French people; but, containing as it does, the last words of a statesman who had rendered himself both by his talents and his achievements dear to France, it is invested with an atmosphere of deep solemnity, giving to it even greater authority at the present moment than, perhaps, even his living voice would have possessed.

The first part of this Address vindicates the character of the late Chamber of Deputies. The circumstances under which it was elected and the great preponderance of public opinion which it represented constituted a not unreasonable ground of apprehension that it might have "made use of reprisals" against the Conservative party, who had been unscrupulously active in pushing Monarchical traditions into the foreground. M. Thiers himself confesses to some misgiving lest this Chamber, the first elected since the institution of the Republic, most of the Deputies elected to which were new men, and as yet little accustomed to the practice of public affairs, might by its conduct increase rather than diminish the difficulties of the situation. In point of fact, however, M. Thiers emphatically confirms the judgment of its illustrious President, M. Grévy, that it had never ceased for a moment, by its prudence, its moderation, and its patriotism, to deserve well of France. In regard to its Finances, to its reconstruction of the Army, to its legislation for the Church, to Foreign Affairs, and to the attitude it exhibited towards the Senate, whose preference for a Monarchical form of Government was never concealed, it completely dissipated the apprehensions of Conservative politicians, and made concessions which in England might have been considered so extreme as to imperil the liberty guaranteed by the Constitution. Its memory is vindicated from the attacks which have been made upon it by the readiness with which it waived its own rights "in deference to instincts foreign to its own nature, and to prejudices which it did not share."

The triumphant vindication of the late Chamber of Deputies, however, is but a preliminary and secondary object of this Address. The substance of it is taken up with a demonstration, historical in its form, but almost mathematical in its severity of reasoning, that for France, in her present circumstances, the Republican form of Government is not only better fitted than any other, but is absolutely necessary, to the conservation of order. Monarchy, says M. Thiers, is not possible. It would have, for near or immediate consequence, civil war. He therefore exhorts the nation to solve by the vote of Oct. 14 the question which he says is "the torment of France"—namely, that between the Republic and Monarchy. Having expatiated on this question, he concludes this part of his subject by the following exhortation—"Let us, then, make the Republic the honest, wise, Conservative Republic, which is not impossible; for it began when the interested heirs of the destroyed Monarchies came to agitate it, and to cause mad and criminal threats to resound in our ears. And you, electors, cause these despisers of all truth to understand for the last time, decisively, the truth which will be the result of your vote—'The Nation alone is Sovereign. The Republic is the form of government by means of which its Sovereignty is exerted.'" Or, in other words, "the only wise and useful end to which the Nation should put this crisis may be thus described—National Sovereignty, a Republic, scrupulous legality, freedom of worship, peace."

The effect of this posthumous Address, so far as it has been put in contact with the minds of the French people, is described as having been almost magical. The Government of President MacMahon are taking every means to circumscribe its circulation. They might as well try to grasp water in their fists. They are doing the work of those whom they profess to regard as the enemies of their country. They cannot put the hand of officialism upon the mouth of the deceased Thiers, without rousing in the minds of those who are most favourable to their policy something of a recalcitrant spirit. When will they who have to deal with mankind upon a large scale appreciate the moral of the fabled contest between the Sun and the Wind? It is certain that the suppression of M. Thiers's Address cannot but render the Republicans of France more tenacious of the principles which they hold. It is not quite certain that the attempt may not shake the faith of not a few fair-minded Monarchists. But, however this may be, it undoubtedly serves to define more clearly the issue at stake. Whenever a Government of the day puts itself on the side of illegality, it weakens all the deeper sentiments of patriotism to which it affects to make its appeal. Even if it could succeed in stifling the voice of M. Thiers, as it issues from the tomb, it could only thereby render the message which it was intended to enounce more significant and more potential. It is an experiment which almost all ages of history have condemned as utterly vain, and, for its own purpose, generally mischievous. It will not, we think, succeed in the present instance. It will rather tend to assure a success which might otherwise have been doubtful. The 14th of October is close at hand. Till then, so far as the elections are concerned, M. Thiers still lives and speaks with redoubled authority.

THE COURT.

The Queen, Princess Beatrice, and the Duke of Connaught attended Divine service on Sunday at Crathie church. The Rev. John Barclay, of Greenock, officiated. Her Majesty and the Princess have made various excursions on Deeside, and have driven to Birkhall, the Linn of Quoich, and other picturesque localities. The Duke of Connaught has had good sport deerstalking. The Right Hon. R. A. Cross is the Minister in attendance upon the Queen, and has generally joined the Royal circle at dinner. Sir Thomas and the Hon. Lady Bidolph have dined with her Majesty.

The Queen, having been informed by the Lord Mayor on Wednesday that the Indian Famine Relief Fund at the Mansion House exceeded a quarter of a million, caused the following telegram, in reply, to be sent on Thursday morning by the Secretary of State in attendance:—

Balmoral, 9.15 a.m.

I am desired by her Majesty the Queen to thank your Lordship for your telegram stating that the Indian Famine Fund now being raised at the Mansion House already exceeds a quarter of a million sterling, and that your Lordship hopes and believes that it will largely increase. Her Majesty feels deeply the readiness with which the sufferings of her people in India have touched the hearts of her people at home.

Her Majesty has commissioned Mr. George H. Park, of Inverness, to make drawings of some of the most picturesque views about Loch Marce, lately visited by the Queen and Princess Beatrice, of which we gave two illustrations last week. Mr. G. H. Park is a son of the late Mr. Patric Park, a sculptor of high merit. Some of Mr. George Park's water-colour drawings and oil paintings were inspected by the Queen during her sojourn in Talladale.

By her Majesty's permission some members of the Social Science Congress came from Aberdeen on Saturday, and visited the grounds of the castle.

The Countess of Erroll has arrived at the castle as Lady in Waiting on her Majesty, and the Hon. Mary Pitt has succeeded the Hon. Mary Lascelles as Maid of Honour in Waiting to the Queen. The Duchess of Roxburghe and Sir William Jenner have left and Dr. Marshall has arrived at the castle.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales inspected Sir George Wombwell's home-farm yesterday week, and also planted two trees—Wellingtonia gigantea—as a memorial of his visit to Newburgh Park. He afterwards drove to Coxwold and inspected the church and Shandy Hall. Subsequently the Prince, accompanied by his host and hostess, went to Helmsley, and visited the Earl and Countess of Feversham at Duncombe Park. His Royal Highness was received by the Earl of Feversham at Helmsley station, where a guard of honour, consisting of the tenth company and the second battalion of North Yorkshire Rifles, was drawn up. The Prince drove to Duncombe and lunched, after which he visited Griff farm to inspect the Earl of Feversham's splendid breed of shorthorns. The Prince planted a silver fir-tree on the garden terrace in commemoration of his visit, and afterwards visited the beautiful ruins of Rivaux Abbey, and partook of tea in the temple on the terrace. His Royal Highness returned to Newburgh Park in the evening, and left on Saturday morning for London. The Princess of Wales, with her children, arrived at Clarence House, St. James's, the previous day from the Isle of Wight. The Prince and Princess went to the Olympic Theatre on Saturday evening, and to the Opéra Comique on Monday evening. Their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by Princes Albert Victor and George Frederick, left Clarence House on Tuesday for Abergeldie Castle, which was reached on Wednesday afternoon.

Princess Louise of Lorne, accompanied by the Marquis of Lorne, visited Carlisle on Thursday week for the purpose of opening a bazaar in aid of the Cumberland Infirmary, and to open a new viaduct, the construction of which had been rendered necessary through making railway extensions within the city. The Princess and the Marquis of Lorne, who were the guests of the Hon. Percy Wyndham, M.P., and Mrs. Wyndham, at Isell Hall, arrived in Carlisle at noon by special train, and were received at the station by the Mayor and Corporation and a guard of honour, consisting chiefly of a troop of the Westmorland and Cumberland Yeomanry Cavalry. A procession having been formed, her Royal Highness drove to the viaduct, and, after a brief ceremony, declared it open. The Princess next proceeded to the infirmary, where she was received by the Bishop and the Dean of Carlisle and other dignitaries, by whom she was conducted over the institution. The bazaar was held in the Victoria Hall, where addresses were presented, after which her Royal Highness declared the bazaar to be open. The Princess was entertained at luncheon by the Mayor, after which she again visited the bazaar, and then returned to Isell Hall. On Saturday her Royal Highness returned to Carlisle and distributed the prizes to the successful students at the School of Art, which ceremony took place in the bazaar. In the Albert Hall, in which the presentations took place, was a statue in terra-cotta of Robin Hood, executed by the Princess and sent as a contribution; it had been announced that it would be disposed of in an art-union; but in the meanwhile it had been purchased by Mr. Howard, of Greystoke Castle, for 200 guineas. It is about two feet in height, and represents the outlaw Sherwood Forest resting upon the stump of a tree, with an arrow in his right hand, and apparently peering into the forest. The Princess during the day visited the various places of interest in the city. Her Royal Highness and the Marquis of Lorne left Isell Hall on Monday for Muncaster Castle, on a visit to Lord Muncaster.

Prince Leopold, who for the last few days has been the guest of Sir Coutts Lindsay at Balcarras, arrived on Tuesday night at Mount Melville, the residence of Mr. J. Whyte Melville, the Convent of Fifeshire.

The Duke of Cambridge has returned to Gloucester House from Homburg and Paris.

The Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, attended by Baron Both and Captain G. Winsloe, arrived at St. James's Palace from Paris on Saturday last to join the Grand Duchess. In the afternoon his Royal Highness paid visits to the Duchess of Cambridge, the Princess of Wales, and the Duke of Cambridge.

Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimer and the Countess Dornberg have joined the company visiting the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland at Dunrobin Castle.

His Excellency Count Schouvaloff has rejoined the Countess at Brighton since visiting the Earl of Derby at Knowsley.

The marriage of the Hon. Richard Bingham, R.N., son of the Earl of Lucan, and Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Lady Henry Moore and the late Mr. Henry Cole, of Stoke Lyne, Oxon, was solemnised at St. Michael's Church, Chester-square, yesterday. The bride was given away by her half-brother, the Marquis of Drogheda, and was attended by three bridesmaids—Miss Sophy Cole, sister of the bride; the Hon. Lavinia Hardinge and the Hon. Hilda Sturt, nieces of the bridegroom. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Thomas Brand, R.N. The ceremony was performed by the Hon. and Rev. Edward Bligh, cousin of the bride.

GENERAL GRANT.

General Grant and Mrs. Grant arrived in Newcastle-on-Tyne from Edinburgh on Thursday week. The Mayor, Sheriff, and a number of Town Councillors were on the platform to receive the General. There were also present Mr. Siemens, the president of the Iron and Steel Institute, and many of the members. The volunteers formed an escort. The party was driven, amid cheers, to the Mansion House. General Grant visited several objects of interest yesterday week, and was presented by the Chamber of Commerce with an address. In replying, General Grant said there ought to be a feeling of amity between Great Britain and America, which were two nations but one people, and he thought that feeling was growing on the side of the Americans. The two States not only ought to be at peace with each other, but they ought to strive to keep the peace in all the world besides. General Grant was also presented with addresses by the Corporations of Jarrow and Tynemouth. On Saturday General Grant was presented at the Mansion House, Newcastle-on-Tyne, with an address from the Corporation of Gateshead. He afterwards visited Sir William Armstrong's works. A gathering of the trade and other societies of Northumberland and Durham took place on Newcastle Town Moor on Saturday afternoon. A large number of people lined the streets and accompanied the processionists to the moor, where it was estimated that 40,000 or 50,000 people were assembled. Mr. T. Burt, M.P., presented an address to General Grant, who briefly replied. In the evening General Grant was entertained at dinner by the Mayor and Corporation of Newcastle.

At noon on Monday General Grant arrived at Sunderland, and was received by the Mayor, Mr. Samuel Storey, Mr. Burt, M.P., Mr. Gourley, M.P., and others. The day was observed as a general holiday. Thousands of members of the trade and friendly societies walked in procession, with bands and banners. Shortly after one o'clock the Mayor laid the foundation-stone of a free library and museum, in the presence of a large number of spectators. The General was presented with an address of welcome from the Mayor and Corporation, and another address by the trade and friendly societies.

On arriving at Sheffield last Wednesday General Grant was received at the station by the Mayor and Corporation. A procession was then formed to the Cutlers' Hall, where congratulatory addresses were presented by the Cutlers' Company and the Chamber of Commerce. General Grant briefly replied, and afterwards held a reception.

THE WAR IN BULGARIA.

The Turkish defence of Plevna, maintained with extraordinary fortitude and skill by Osman Pasha and his indomitable army since the first week of September, has obtained substantial reinforcements of men and stores, by the safe arrival of Chekret Pasha, with 16,000 troops and a long train of waggons, which entered Plevna on Sunday last. They came by road west of Plevna, through Orkhanieh, from Sophia. The Russian attack on Plevna has settled into a siege. Since the day when General Skobelev was driven from the redoubts he had captured, there has been no fighting of serious consequence. The Roumanians, however, have persisted in making fresh attempts against the second Grivitzza redoubt. They are now only eighty yards from it, the distance between the two redoubts being about 250 yards. It is expected that the assault against it will be made in two or three days. The Roumanian fighting spirit and endurance of hardships are admirable. This redoubt taken, there is another about half a mile distant; then two or three intrenched camps along the northern ridge, whose western termination is the elevated position of Olizitza, overhanging the River Vid. The Turks are not pushing counter-saps, and if the assault be delivered with resolution the redoubt should certainly fall. It is stated on good authority that the total losses of the Russians and Roumanians during the recent operations before Plevna exceed 25,000 men killed and wounded.

We have received from Herr Schönberg, our Special Artist, sketches of the positions and operations before Plevna, which will be published in our next.

Of the three infantry divisions of the Russian Guard which have reached Biela two have been dispatched to Plevna, and the third is proceeding towards the Jantra. Nearly the whole of the cavalry of the Guard are destined for Timova. Continuous rain has hindered military operations.

There is a rumour that on Tuesday last the Russian centre attacked Plevna, but was repulsed with the loss of four guns and over 7000 men. No official confirmation of this news has as yet been received. It appears that when the leader of the Turkish relieving forces last week reached Dibnik, a village in the middle of the plain westward of Plevna, Osman Pasha sent twelve battalions to operate in conjunction with him. They beat back the intercepting detachments of the Russians, who were between both fires, and inflicted severe loss on them. It is believed impossible now for the Russians to effect anything advantageous before Plevna.

The army of the Czarewitch has fortified its position on the Jantra, near Biela, and its communications with Sistova, and with the bridge over the Danube. It has had to fight Mahomet Ali Pasha between the Jantra and the Lom. Yesterday week the Turkish Commander-in-Chief made a reconnaissance all along the Russian position on a line of hills east of Verboka, where the enemy was found strongly intrenched. The impetuosity of the Turkish troops forced on an action, though inadequate in numbers to the task of dislodging the enemy. Three battalions in the centre attempted to carry the enemy's positions by assault. An offensive movement was made against the Russian left at Verboka, which succeeded in drawing off attention from those in the centre, who had carried the lower line of trenches and approached within 400 yards of the upper line on the edge of the scarp, which was below their batteries on the crest of the ridge. Being unsupported, the centre was unable to effect more than this, but it held its ground, though under a heavy fire. The movement against the Russian right developed a strong defence; after which the troops were drawn out of action. The attack made on the Russian left, having effected its object, ceased at nightfall, and towards midnight the troops in the centre were withdrawn from the ground they held. The Turks engaged were ten battalions of infantry, two squadrons of cavalry, one battery in position at Tcherkorna, and one with the attacking force. The Russian force consisted of the infantry of the Thirty-second Division and a body of cavalry, with twenty-four guns in position. The losses on both sides must have been heavy, for the Russians fought with more determination than usual, while the Turks surpassed them in bravery, having advanced in small numbers against an enemy strongly intrenched. Next morning saw the Turkish troop on their return to the previous day's scene of action, ready to retake the ground they had reluctantly given up.

Mr. Melton Prior, our Special Artist with this Turkish army on the Lom, has sent us sketches of its recent actions, which will appear in our next publication.

A Turkish detachment has occupied a rather strong position on Roumanian territory facing Silistria, and covered by the guns of that fortress. The Turks intend making an attempt to cut the railway communication between Galatz and Bucharest, and are now engaged in fortifying the bridge connecting the Turkish shore at Silistria with the island opposite.

A Turkish despatch from Asia Minor announces that on the 19th inst. six battalions of infantry, with twelve guns from the Russian camp at Igdyr, threatened the position held by Mustapha Pasha at Halkali, south of the former place. The Russians were repulsed with the loss of many killed, and fell back to their intrenchments. We give some illustrations of the fighting near Kars on the 18th and 25th ult., from sketches by Mr. J. Bell, our Special Artist; and several more will be engraved for our next.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.

The Mansion House Fund, to relieve a portion of the vast and dire suffering that prevails in Madras and Southern India, from the want of food caused by a general failure of the grain crops in two or three successive years, has nearly reached the amount of a quarter of a million sterling; and the sum of £200,000 has been sent to Madras for that benevolent purpose. This lamentable occurrence has reminded many persons acquainted with India of the insufficient means of artificial irrigation, by canals, tanks, and wells, and by wheels for raising and diffusing water, in some of the districts where the crops have failed, and the people are now most severely distressed from the effects of drought. We learn that these wheels can be made for about six to ten rupees each, and the well may be sunk 60 ft. for as many shillings, which will supply water to irrigate enough land to provide for twenty people. The larger wheels, driven by oxen, will cover several acres with water, producing large crops of grain three times a year, and in some cases four times a year. In the Punjab the natives make the earthen pots, the straw ropes, and the wheels of hard wood, and put up the whole thing without as much iron as one nail. The well is lined with a thick rope of straw, pinned together with double-pointed pegs of bamboo, and sinks down as the sand is dug up below it. This lasts for a year, if necessary, when a brick lining can be put inside; this, however, is seldom done to wells less than 6 ft. diameter. Our illustration is from a sketch by Mr. John Calvert, an old resident in India, and author of "The Kulu Valley."

Mr. Wyld has issued a Map of India showing the Famine Districts of 1860-1, 1865-6, 1873-4, and 1877.

THE RUSSIAN GENERAL SKOBELEFF.

In the judgment of experienced military men, spectators of the Russian campaign in Bulgaria, General Skobelev, though but thirty-two years of age, is the only commanding officer who has yet shown any considerable degree of ability, with so much energy and enterprise as cannot be surpassed. His achievements in the capture of Lovcha, performed jointly with Prince Imeritinsky, and more recently, on the 11th inst., in the storming of two of the redoubts at Plevna, which would not have been retaken by Osman Pasha, on the next day, but that General Skobelev was denied the reinforcements he wanted to hold that which he had fairly won, seem to be the only brilliant deeds of arms hitherto recorded on the Russian side. The Emperor Alexander has received him with high honours, and promoted him from Major-General to the rank of Lieutenant-General. At the outset of this campaign, he commanded a brigade of Cossack horsemen, but was soon appointed to the General Staff. He speaks English perfectly, and the Special Correspondents both of the Times and of the Daily News have repeatedly acknowledged his frank and courteous behaviour towards them. In giving the portrait of General Skobelev, we may as well quote what one of those writers has said of him personally:—

"Major-General Skobelev is a character—one of the most striking men I have ever met; he is a son of Lieutenant-General Skobelev, of the Russian army, and has been in every campaign the Russians have had since he was old enough to enter the field. In Khokand, where everything was considered in a critical state, young Skobelev was left to cover the retreat of the army with five battalions and twenty guns. His elders in rank and years had selected him to bear the disgrace of the expected catastrophe; but he did not fancy this situation of affairs, attacked the enemy (numbering forty battalions) in the night, threw them into a panic, and utterly routed them, remaining master of the province. For this he was made a Major-General at thirty-one, and became the object of much envy and calumny at the hands of the officers whose heads he had passed over. At the recent battle of Plevna he had his brigade of Cossacks and a battalion of infantry, the latter numbering about 700 men. Three hundred and forty of this battalion fell in the desperate contest, 170 of them being killed outright; unsupported, the remnant were compelled to fall back; but they retreated in good order, bringing away all the wounded, and actually left the deadly line of battle singing one of their wild but very melodious mountain airs. A Major-General, young, tall, and handsome, Skobelev is the ideal of a beau sabreur of the old Murat type. Brave almost to recklessness, yet possessing a certain shrewd aptitude for estimating chances and the strength of positions, he will make his mark in this campaign should his carelessness of personal danger not bring him some fatal bullet;—he has already been wounded six times during his career."

Our Portrait of General Skobelev is copied from a photograph by Bergamasco, of St. Petersburg.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Under the fostering care of Lord Rosebery, Mr. Houldsworth, and other prominent northern sportsmen, racing in Scotland is making great headway, and the three days' meeting which was held at Ayr last week was a decided success in every way. Dalham (8 st. 10 lb.) was backed against the field for the Ayrshire Handicap, and the united exertions of Webb and F. Archer landed him a clever winner. Mindful of the old horse's vagaries at the post in the Brighton Stakes, Archer was in attendance at the start with a formidable whip, and so well did he second the exertions of Webb, who rode the rogue, that he got well off at the first attempt, and had matters pretty much his own way. The crushing weight of 9 st. 9 lb., however, proved quite too much for him in the Ayr Gold Cup on the following day, which fell to Mr. Houldsworth, by the aid of Ivy (5 st. 12 lb.), whose victory was, naturally, wonderfully popular. There were two very good days' sport at Alexandra Palace at the end of last week. The course has been greatly improved by some judicious alterations and additions, and capital fields started for most of the events. Nothing that occurred, however, needs special comment, and we may safely pass over the small gatherings at Chelmsford, Lichfield, and Kingsbury.

A most interesting First October Meeting began at Newmarket on Tuesday, and the two days' racing that have taken place at the time of writing have already produced several important changes in the Cesarewitch betting. To begin with, Hilarious made such a rare fight with Thunderstone in the Grand Duke Michael Stakes that his position has been decidedly strengthened. Then Augusta fairly cantered away from Great Tom and Footstep over the D.I., and, as a natural result, Great Tom has retired to long odds, while Balagny, who is handicapped to receive 22 lb. from Augusta, and is said to be her superior at level weights, has been firmly established at the head of affairs, notwithstanding the fact that those who prefer public form to private trials will not have the colt at any price, but prefer to pin their faith to the filly. A capital field of twenty-two came out for the Great Eastern Railway Handicap, but betting did not take a very wide range, Ernest (7 st. 11 lb.) starting such a hot favourite that speculation was almost paralysed. The favourite got away badly, and was never really formidable; and, though Polly Perkins (7 st. 4 lb.) appeared to be winning easily until the ascent for home was reached, she then tired to nothing, and could only finish a poor second to Mandarin (8 st. 7 lb.), Bay Athol (7 st. 6 lb.) being third. Shortly after this Lord Falmouth and Archer had a rare innings, as Redwing defeated Flashman and two others for the Boscawen Stakes, Jeannette walked over for the Buckenham Stakes, and Hydromel, a dark son of Parmesan—Niké, finished with rare gameness in the Hopeful Stakes, and managed to get home half a length in front of the Emily filly.

The sport on Wednesday was by no means so good as on the preceding day; still, there were one or two races that may have considerable bearing on the future. Lady Golightly, after being prepared for the fray, did not antagonise St. Christophe in a Triennial Stakes, run across the Flat; so, of course, long odds were laid upon him. It is quite clear, however, that he requires a far greater distance than this easy mile and a quarter to display his best form, and he had to be fairly ridden out to beat the moderate Briglia by a neck. It was anticipated that this slovenly performance would have the effect of depressing Balagny, a stable-companion of St. Christophe, in the Cesarewitch quotations; but this did not prove to be the case. Mourle, another French horse, cantered away from King Ban, one of Lord Falmouth's long string of two-year-olds, in the Granby Stakes; and the latter, who, for a wonder, appears to be very moderate, pulled up lame.

William Gale is toiling on manfully at his colossal feat of walking 1500 miles in 1000 hours. At the time of writing he has walked 1167 miles in 778 hours, and there seems every probability that he will be successful in the attempt.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA: MODE OF PUMPING UP WATER IN THE PUNJAUB.

THE WAR: HOSPITAL FOR WOUNDED WOMEN AND CHILDREN AT KARAGHATSCH.

THE WAR: A VISIT TO THE RUSSIAN BATTERIES AFTER THE SIEGE OF KARS.—FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

GENERAL SIR A. KEMBALL AND LIEUTENANT M'DOUGALL AT THE BATTLE OF JAHNILAR.—FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE WAR: LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SKOBELEFF, OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

THE WAR: NIGHT ATTACK ON A ROUMANIAN OUTPOST AT RUBEN, BEFORE PLEVNA.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Marshal MacMahon returned to Paris on Monday from his château of La Forêt.

The leading topic of comment and conversation in Paris this week has been the Manifesto of the late M. Thiers, which was issued on Monday. It was addressed to the electors of the ninth arrondissement. The Manifesto was entirely written by M. Thiers, but he only revised the first portion. The document is published without any modification. It explains in the plainest language the well-known ideas of M. Thiers. In the first place, he justifies the Chamber lately dissolved, and praises the moderation and wisdom displayed by the members in their proceedings. He points out that the Chamber did not deserve the reproach of Radicalism, and explains that the reason of his preference for a Republican form of Government was in consequence of the impossibility of establishing a Monarchy. M. Thiers then goes on to describe the actual situation of affairs as intolerable, there being a Republican form of Constitution with an anti-Republican personnel. He says that the Republic is the Government necessary for France with all men desirous of making her prosperous, and he strongly protests against the authors of the crisis of May 16. M. Thiers proclaims the sovereignty of the nation against the recent dissolution, a power which can be enforced solely by the Republic. To contravene this principle will be a case of usurpation, and he insists upon freedom of election and freedom of the press. In conclusion, he sums up his principles thus:—Sovereignty of the National Republic, liberty, scrupulous legality, liberty of worship, and peace. A brief explanatory note from M. Mignet is published with the Manifesto.

The second trial of M. Gambetta took place on Saturday. M. Allon, his counsel, argued that the tribunal was incompetent, but the Court rejected the plea, and confirmed the sentence pronounced at the first trial. The final sentence on M. Gambetta cannot, according to the Paris correspondent of the Times, after all the legal means of delaying it have been exhausted, be delivered till Nov. 22—that is to say, a fortnight after the opening of the Session.

Official decrees issued last Saturday fix the elections for Oct. 14, the second ballots for Oct. 28, and the meeting of the new Chamber, as well as the Senate, for Nov. 7. The Minister of Justice has followed up these decrees by a circular to the Procureurs-Généraux, in which he reminds them of the chief regulations as to electioneering. He mentions among these the right of a judicial or administrative official present at any meeting to order it to disperse, as also a liability for delivering an illegal speech. He directs that electoral circulars and placards must bear the individual signature of the candidate, and says that all declarations of policy will be carefully read, in order not to allow the publication of outrages against the Chief of the State, violent language, menaces, or falsehoods. The Ministers held a Council last Tuesday for the purpose of finally settling the Government candidatures in those electoral districts for which candidates have not yet been provided, and particularly in certain arrondissements of Paris. At a meeting of Republican Senators on Tuesday evening it was resolved that the manifesto to be issued by the Left parties in the Senate should be published a few days before the commencement of the elections. The Committee of the Right have issued an electoral appeal, in which they call on all friends of order to unite for the overthrow of Radicalism. M. de Marcère, who was at one time Minister of the Interior of Marshal MacMahon, has issued an address to his constituents in which he says that the whole policy of the Government is hostile to the Republic, and it is for the country to say whether this state of things is to last. The Paris correspondent of the Times, speaking of the coming elections, says no idea can be formed abroad of the bitterness already arising between the political parties. They are like two hostile nations confronting each other and ready to come to blows.

It is formally announced that M. Jules Grévy has consented to become the candidate for the ninth arrondissement of Paris, in place of M. Thiers.

Mayors, Town Councillors, Freemasons, and newspaper proprietors continue to be summarily punished.

M. Le Verrier, the eminent astronomer, died on Sunday morning. His share in the discovery of the planet Neptune was only a marked incident in the course of prolonged investigations, which involved immense labour and were of high practical value. The learned societies of England have happily been forward in showing their appreciation of his merits. He was born on March 11, 1811, and was consequently in his sixty-seventh year. He became director of the Paris Observatory in 1854, but was dismissed by a decree of the Imperial Government at the commencement of 1870. In 1873 he was reinstated in the office at the instance of M. Thiers. M. Le Verrier was buried on Tuesday at Mont Parnasse. Amongst the pall-bearers was Dr. Hind, who made a speech at the grave in the name of the English savants.

ITALY.

The Parliament will, it is expected, be convoked this year in the middle of October, several weeks earlier than usual. The King is expected at Rome on the 15th. All the Ministers except two, who are ill, are now at Rome.

At the Consistory yesterday week the Pope proclaimed Cardinal Pecci Camerlengo, gave the hat to Cardinal Garcia, and appointed twenty-four Bishops. On Wednesday his Holiness received a deputation of Italian physicians, and, in reply to their address, urged upon them the necessity of combating the materialistic tendencies which were invading society. The health of his Holiness is good.

SPAIN.

All the members of the Royal family, including the Infantas of Montpensier and their daughters, went on Sunday to the Escorial, on a visit to the Queen-Mother, for the purpose of celebrating the birthday of Princess Mercedes.

Vice-Admiral Pavia has been appointed Minister of Marine.

HOLLAND.

The Budget for 1878 was submitted to the Second Chamber on Monday. The Minister of Finance estimated the total expenditure at 121,000,000 fl., and the revenue at 113,700,000 fl. The anticipated deficit of 7,300,000 fl. depends mainly upon the charges incurred by the war in Acheen, which in 1876 cost 26,500,000 fl., and will probably cost as much in 1877. This charge will, however, be diminished should it prove possible to reduce the number of troops employed. The Minister thought that the eventual deficit could be covered by the issue of Treasury notes, and said he did not regard the financial condition of the country as unfavourable. The revenue from the taxes was increasing, and the possible deficit might be considered due to temporary causes and to the wish of the Government to continue the public works now in hand, such as the construction of railways and the completion of the defensive system of the kingdom. The Minister will propose several reforms in the taxation.

The Chamber of Deputies adopted on Tuesday, by 44 against 28 votes, the paragraph of the address in reply to the speech from the throne containing the declaration that the Chamber and the Government are not at one on the education question. This is regarded as a vote of want of confidence.

GERMANY.

A telegram announces the arrival at Darmstadt of the Emperor William, with the Crown Prince and Count Moltke. It is the first state visit of a German Emperor to the city, and everywhere enthusiasm prevails.

The autumn manoeuvres having terminated, Prince William of Prussia, the eldest son of the Crown Prince, will proceed to Bonn to continue his studies at the university of that town.

Prince Bismarck, with his two sons, arrived at Berlin last Saturday afternoon.

A dinner was given at Berlin on Sunday in honour of Signor Crispi, at which about sixty members of the German Reichstag and the Prussian Diet were present. Among the guests were Herr von Bennigsen, President of the Lower House of the Prussian Diet, Herr Schultze-Delitsch, and several gentlemen connected with art and science. Count Launay, the Italian Ambassador, was also present. The banquet, which is said to have passed off most brilliantly, lasted until after midnight. The friendly relations existing between Italy and Germany were repeatedly dwelt upon in the speeches delivered.

GREECE.

It is announced from Athens that at a Cabinet Council held yesterday week the Ministers resolved to withdraw their resignations. The post of President of the Council, vacant by the death of Admiral Canaris, will not, it is stated, be filled by any member of the present Ministry.

AMERICA.

President Hayes has returned to Washington, well pleased with the Southern tour, and speaks warmly of the tone and temper of the people, and of the hospitable welcome he everywhere received.

At the Convention of the New Jersey Republicans resolutions were passed giving a qualified support to the policy pursued by President Hayes in regard to the South, and also to the question of reform, while, at the same time, the resolutions recognise the President's sincerity of purpose.

A fire occurred on Monday at Washington, by which the west and north upper halls of the Patent Office building were destroyed. The telegram reporting the disaster says:—"A large quantity of models, the number of which is estimated at from 50,000 to 75,000, were consumed by the flames. Many of them had been stored as rejected models. The loss includes models of some of the most important inventions extant and a number of valuable records pertaining thereto. Drawings and records of a great many models, being in a lower story, were saved. All offices subordinate to the department of the Secretary of the Interior, except the Pension Office, were located in the building. Their documents were saved, but in such a confused state that business will be seriously interfered with. Many of the lower rooms were flooded. The fire originated in the south-west corner of the building, and is believed to have been accidental."

Chattanooga has been visited by a severe flood, caused by heavy rains. It has swept away the entire crops, including the cotton crop in the valley of the Blackwarrior, Alabama. It is estimated that 30,000 bales have been destroyed.

THE CAPE COLONIES.

Advices received from Cape Town to the 4th inst. state that the disturbances on the border have quieted down. No troops, therefore, will be sent to the frontier. Sir Bartle Frere has reached King Williamstown, also the secretary for native affairs. A proclamation has been issued calling upon the natives to submit their disputes to the Government and stating that whoever breaks the peace will be called to account. The Galekas and Fingoes have retired, and things are settling into their usual course. Sir Bartle continues his journey through Transkei. There is a severe drought in the midland districts, and a loss of stock.

AUSTRALIA.

A telegram from Sydney dated the 21st inst., announces that the Ministry of New South Wales have resigned in consequence of their having been defeated in the Legislative Assembly on a question of supply.

The Emperor and Empress of Brazil arrived at Pernambuco on Thursday week by the mail-steamer Orénoque.

A telegram from Nagasaki states that the insurrection in Japan has been suppressed and its leaders killed.

The vessel containing Cleopatra's Needle left Alexandria yesterday week for England, in tow of the steamer Olga.

The Liebig Memorial subscription list is closed; and £5750 has been collected for a statue to be erected at Munich, and £1200 for that which will be placed in Giessen.

Mr. W. C. Sargeant, C.M.G., Crown Agent for the Colonies, has been selected by Lord Carnarvon to proceed on a special mission to the Transvaal in order to inquire into and report upon the liabilities and financial condition of the province, and to assist in organising the civil establishments.

The Standard has news that King Gélélé of Dahomey has expressed a wish to send an embassy to England, that he may learn, through his own representatives, something of the manners and customs of a country with which he has recently entered into a treaty, and that he may form an idea as to England's power and greatness.

The Daily News has intelligence from its correspondent at Alexandria that Colonel Gordon is on his way to the coast, having completely quelled the rebellion in Darfur. King John and Menelek were at Gondar. The latter has paid the former an indemnity in good ivory for the recent trouble. Menelek promises to be quiet, and remains ruler of Shoa. The Abyssinian chiefs demanded and received from the Egyptians all fugitives at Sennait. They also exacted around Massowa the taxes due to the Egyptians. From Zoola information has been received of an Egyptian officer and his men who were collecting taxes being fired on. Several were killed.

Messrs. W. S. Weekes and Co. dispatched from Plymouth on the 20th inst. Messrs. George Thompson, jun., and Co.'s ship Pericles, 1598 tons register, Captain James Largie, for Sydney, New South Wales, with Government emigrants. She takes out 74 married couples, 129 single men, 79 single women, 70 boys, 52 girls, and 16 infants; making a total of 491 souls, the whole of whom are under the medical charge of Dr. James Smith. The Pericles is a new ship, built at Aberdeen, this being her first voyage. She is especially fitted for the passenger trade, having between decks 8 ft. high, and being supplied with all modern appliances for the security of those on board and for ensuring a safe and prosperous passage. She was fitted for her first voyage under the superintendence of Mr. H. H. Speed Andrews, R.N., the dispatching officer to the New South Wales Government.—The Agent-General for Queensland has received a telegram announcing the safe arrival at Brisbane of the Windsor Castle on the 18th inst.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.

The prospect of India's future continues to brighten, or at any rate to be less gloomy. A telegram has been received at the India Office from the Viceroy, dated Sept. 23, reporting good general rain in all the districts of Madras, except parts of Coimbatore, and a small part of Salem, Tinnevely, and Madura; tanks are filling, and the crops reviving. The grain supply is maintained. In Bombay and Mysore the prospects are improving. In the North-West Provinces there has been little rain anywhere, and the autumn crop is almost lost. There has been no rain in the Central India States. In Hyderabad there has been good rain everywhere.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on Sunday as follows:—

"The dark cloud of the Madras Famine is at length beginning to exhibit a silver lining. The news of last week is good, and future prospects are hopeful. Plentiful rain has fallen in many of the worst famine districts, agricultural work is active, and the crops are making rapid progress. The number during last month in the relief camps of the town of Madras has decreased from 14,000 to 5000. The daily average of the past week was from 500 to about 40. People are rapidly deserting the relief works and hurrying away to their homes. The relief camps up the country are not yet thinned in a like proportion. A few weeks, however, will make a marked difference in the panic-stricken people, who had been reduced to so starving a condition previous to admission that considerable time must elapse before they are able to work. There can be no reasonable doubt that the tide of the great calamity has been turned; but vast numbers of those who survive the actual famine must still succumb from their enfeebled condition, the effect of rain and cold nights. Private charity, however, is most beneficially applied towards ameliorating their condition."

"A public meeting was held here on Friday last for the purpose of raising subscriptions. Mr. Justice Jackson presided, and it was influentially attended. Certain resolutions were passed, and a subscription-list has since been opened. The Maharajah of Burdwan has subscribed 10,000 rupees to the famine distressed."

"The Viceroy left Bangalore on Friday morning, and met en route the Duke of Buckingham and General Kennedy, who accompanied him to Vellore, and settled in conference the future famine policy. The Viceroy was to have made a public entry into Poonah yesterday, and leave for Simla to-day. All friction between the two Governments has, apparently, been quite removed, and they are now acting together in complete accord with the following alleged important results:—Uniform relief wages, food rates unsupervised, relief kitchens closed, petty local relief works stopped, and large numbers draughted to work on the railway embankment between Mysore and Bangalore. The strength of the people is so reduced that possibly the call for hard work may prove destructive; but the officials are enjoined that enfeebled persons are to have special consideration, and they will probably be further vested with large powers and ample discretion."

"At a public banquet given by the Maharajah of Mysore, the Viceroy, in the course of a speech, said the Angel of Destruction was busy in their midst, but thank God! not unaccompanied by the Angel of Hope."

"The Viceroy has promised the coffee-planters of Wynad and Coorg a grant of money for the unification of the coffee districts under the Madras Government."

By a special telegram from Madras, dated the 23rd inst., to the Pall Mall Gazette, we learn that the labourers in Mysore are flocking from the famine camps to the relief works. Under the system recently established by the Viceroy, the inmates in the Bangalore relief kitchens had fallen from 30,000 to 13,000 by last Thursday. The greatest care is taken by the officers in charge of relief works to provide special treatment for those who come on the works in an enfeebled state of body. Hence the successful results in so short a time. The general condition of Mysore is improving, but recovery from the famine cannot be hoped for before next spring; and the province will suffer for years from its effects.

THE RELIEF FUND AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

The following were the principal sums received on the 21st inst. from the provincial towns—namely, Leeds, second instalment, £1700; Dublin, ninth instalment, £500; Wolverhampton, fourth instalment, £300; Newton Abbot, £250; Northampton, second instalment, £250; Torquay, second contribution, £250; Dudley, £250; Stamford (including £50 from the Marquis and Marchioness of Exeter), £200; Runcorn, £200; Lewes, third instalment, £300; Newbury, second instalment, £100; Buckingham, £150; Portsmouth, third instalment, £200; Macclesfield, £400; Scarborough, third instalment, £125; Portland, £116; Penzance, £100; Newcastle-under-Lyme, £100; Carlisle, £100; Stourbridge, second donation, £100. A Warwickshire lady sent, under the initials M. G., £400. Among the church collections were the following:—St. Mary Magdalene and St. Matthias, Richmond, Surrey, £105; St. Matthew's, Croydon, £121.

Yesterday week over £12,000 was received, that being the largest amount paid in in one day since the opening of the fund. The principal contributions from towns were the following:—Hull, £1500; Perth, £750; Stockport, £750; Nottingham (second instalment), £700; Sunderland (second instalment), £700; Belfast (additional), £500; Dover (second instalment), £200; Teignmouth, £200; Dewsbury, £200; Shrewsbury (making £1000 in all), £150; Bodmin, £121 15s.; Sittingbourne, £100; Ludlow, £100; Barnsley, £400; Exmouth, £250; Daventry, £100; Tamworth, £100; Southampton (eighth instalment), £100; Denbigh, £100. The Company of Mercers contributed £1000; the readers of the Christian newspaper, £519 14s. 6d.; Messrs. Somes and Co., £150; the Marquis of Northampton, £100; S. G., £100; Messrs. Lucas, Micholles, and Co., £100.

During Saturday last the following additional contributions from provincial cities and towns were received:—Sheffield, £2500; Bristol, £1000; Exeter, £500; Wakefield, £500; Halifax, £500; Ipswich, £200; Boston, £200; Coupar-Angus, £100; Tipton, £100; Stoke-on-Trent, £100; Devonport, £100; Colchester, £100. A tenth instalment of £500 from Dublin was also paid in. Messrs. Mackinnon and Co. subscribed a further sum of £105, making in all £365; the Haberdashers' Company, £100; G. T., £100; the Cheshire Grand Lodge of Freemasons, £100. At Jersey, Mr. C. W. Robin collected nearly £200. Among the church and chapel collections paid in was—Earley Church, Reading, £142.

The Lord Mayor has received a telegram from the local committee at Madras, dated last Saturday, giving particulars as to the condition of the famine districts. At a meeting of the executive committee on Monday, after the reading of this telegram, it was resolved to send a further sum of £45,000 to India, making £200,000 in all. It was stated that telegrams had been sent, in the name of the Lord Mayor and the committee, to the Mayors of Adelaide, Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Wellington, Perth, and Hobart Town, asking their assistance in raising funds in the colonies. A telegraphic communication was received stating that the Grand Duchess of Hesse (Princess Alice) and her husband were deeply moved by the sad reports from the Queen's Eastern dominions, and forwarding a cheque for £50. The principal contributions from the provinces were—The county of Warwick (second instalment), £1000; Plymouth (second donation), £500; Whitby, £400; Penrith (second instalment), £350; Norwich (fourth instalment), £300; Nottingham (third instalment), £300; Falmouth and neighbourhood, £175; Hertford, £100; Carnarvon, £100; Dorchester, £100; Burslem, £100; Winchester (second donation), £100; Newport, Monmouthshire, £100; Taunton (fifth instalment), £100; Maidstone (fifth instalment), £100; Stockton, £500. Sir John Kelk subscribed £100. Among the church and chapel collections received were the following:—Christ Church, Surbiton, £132 9s. 10d.; Chelmsford Congregational Chapel, £102; Holy Trinity, Kilburn, £102. In the box outside the Mansion House £21 odd was found.

The sum of £8500 was received on Tuesday. The larger sums received included Birmingham (fifth instalment), £1000; Nottingham (third), £500; Kendal, £500; Keighley, £250; Kidderminster, £250; Southport (second), £250; Winchester (third), £150; Ambleside, £115 7s. 6d.; Newcastle, £100; Longton (third), £100; Southampton (ninth), £100; Bridport, £100; Messrs. J. Penn and Sons, £100; Christ Church, Worthing, £114; St. James's, Holloway, £165; Eton College Chapel, £146; Salterthwaite Church, £122; Mr. J. W. Nicholson, £105; and Dublin (eleventh instalment), £500.

The Mansion House Indian Famine Fund, which was started barely six weeks ago, reached, on Wednesday, a quarter of a million sterling, and a telegram announcing the fact was sent by the Lord Mayor to the Queen, and a general communication to the same effect made to the Prime Minister. A telegram dated Madras, Wednesday, has been received at the Mansion House expressing grateful thanks for the sympathy shown for and the aid sent to the sufferers by the famine, giving particulars of the measures adopted by the general committee in India, and stating that much suffering has been relieved in many remote places far from towns. The sum received on Wednesday was over £9000, and among the sums received were:—Dundee (additional), £1000; Hull (third instalment), £1000; Hereford, £200; Wells, £137; Bath (third), £300; Peterborough, £250; Huntingdon, £100; Halifax, £500; Worcester, £199; Walsall, £200; Stonehouse, £180; Rothesay, £300; Gravesend, £100; Aberdeen, £500; Portsmouth, £100; St. George's Chapel, Kemp Town, £147; St. Mary Magdalene, St. Leonards, £246.

The sum raised at the meeting held last week in the County Hall at Aylesbury amounted to upwards of £600 before the High Sheriff left the chair, and by Saturday the subscriptions exceeded £1000.

A meeting of the Bradford Relief Committee was held on Saturday. The Mayor stated that the total subscriptions now amounted to £7312, of which £4700 had been remitted to the relief committee at Madras, and he proposed that an additional £2600 should be remitted to Madras. The requisite authority was accordingly given.

At Plymouth on Monday night a mass meeting of townspeople was held in the Guildhall on behalf of the Indian Famine Fund; the Mayor presided.

The Edinburgh Committee reported last Saturday that the total sum received by them in aid of the fund amounted to £9850, of which £8000 had been sent to Madras.—On Monday night Lord Napier and Ettrick gave in the Free Assembly Hall a lecture on the famine in India. The Lord Provost presided, and there was a large attendance. Lord Napier spoke at length on the horrors of the famine, and mentioned that if the death-rate continued as at present till the harvest in February upwards of 600,000 deaths would be accounted as caused by famine.

A meeting was held at Dunblane last Saturday to organise the collection of subscriptions for the sufferers from the famine. Sir W. Stirling Maxwell, M.P., was called to the chair. A subscription was opened at the meeting, and £500 obtained.

It is announced from Cairo that the Treasury of the Public Debt has encashed the funds necessary to meet the coupon of the Egyptian 1864 Loan, due on Oct. 1.

The longest railway bridge in the world—that which carries the North British Railway over the estuary of the Tay—was formally opened on Tuesday.

A proclamation has been issued relieving the county of Armagh from the restrictions imposed on it in February, 1866, under the Peace Preservation Acts.

An improvement has been completed by the Improved Industrial Dwellings Company (of which Sir Sydney Waterlow is chairman) on about two acres of land lying between the Goswell and St. John-street roads, Clerkenwell, on the estate of the Marquis of Northampton, by the opening of a large number of dwellings for the artisan and labouring classes.

The fifty-fifth session of the Birkbeck Literary and Scientific Institution, Southampton-buildings, will begin next Monday. We understand that the council of the Working-Men's College, Great Ormond-street, has arranged for the ensuing session a series of lectures, in connection with the Science and Art Department, upon Human Physiology.—The eleventh winter session of the Working-Men's College, 91, Blackfriars-road, will begin on Oct. 1, with evening classes in all the usual subjects of education. Technical classes for carpenters, bricklayers, and other trades are added.

At noon on Thursday the foundation-stone was laid of the buildings to be erected at Nottingham in connection with the movement for the extension of University education among the people. Among those present were the Duke and Duchess of St. Albans, Lady Belper, Lord Carnarvon, Lord Manservants, the Hon. H. Strutt, the Right Hon. Mr. Gladstone, M.P., Mr. Morley, M.P., Mr. Isaac, M.P.; the Mayors of Nottingham, Derby, Leicester, and Lincoln. The proposed building, which is to be erected in Horse Fair-close, will cost about £50,000, towards which an anonymous local gentleman has given £10,000, and the remainder will be borrowed by the Corporation. The style is to be Gothic, and the building will present a very handsome appearance. It is the intention of the Corporation to make the building not only useful for promoting University education, but as a home for the free library, the natural history museum, science classes, and a laboratory. The stone was laid by the Mayor of Nottingham, and addresses were given by the Earl of Carnarvon, Mr. Gladstone, and Mr. Morley. The bottle which was placed in the foundation-stone contained among other things samples of hosiery, supplied by Messrs. J. and R. Morley, the principal being a stocking, as worn by her Majesty, the material being so light that a dozen weighed only three and a quarter ounces, composed of Italian silk.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Boys, H. J., to be Vicar of St. John's, Chatham.
Bull, Charles Cary; Curate of St. Mary's, Swansea.
Bennett, Theophanes; Chaplain to the 3rd East York Rifle Volunteer Corps.
Griffith, Hubert George; Perpetual Curate of Tretower, Brecon.
Groom, Arthur John; Rector of Ashwick-with-Leziate, Norfolk.
Hopley, J.; Vicar of St. John the Baptist, Leeds; Vicar of Seacroft.
James, David Owen; Vicar of St. Ishmael-with-Llanisaint, Carmarthenshire.
Jones, Thomas; Vicar of Edwyswryn; Curate of Manorleidy.
Kewell, W. E.; Incumbent of St. Cuthbert's, Newcastle-on-Tyne.
Owen, David; Curate of Killyland and Llandrindod, Brecon.
Groom, E. H.; Preliminary Curate of Ewel in St. Asaph Cathedral.
Powell, W.; Rector of Tretlan; Rector of Bangor, Teify-with-Hfeullan.
Richardson, John; Rural Dean of Cumberwell.
Sidney, C. W. H. H.; Curate of Burton, Pembrokeshire.
Smith, T. Wade; Vicar of Easton Royal, Wilts.
Thomas, William; Vicar of Llannganten; Perpetual Curate of Llanwryd.
Vaughan, W. W.; Vicar of Llanedegley; Curate of Llandewi Ystradenny-with-Llandhangel, Rhydythion.—Guardian.

The annual conference of the diocese of Oxford will be held in the Sheldonian Theatre on Oct. 4 and 5.

Mr. Kirkman D. Hodgson, M.P., has subscribed £500, and Sir C. H. Mills, Bart., M.P., £200, towards the fund being raised for the restoration of the parish church of Sevenoaks.

The Bishop of London has sanctioned for use in the churches in his diocese the special form of prayer, compiled by the Bishop of Winchester and approved by the Archbishop of Canterbury, for the sufferers by war and famine.

Mr. Sidebotham, M.P., laid the first stone of a new church at Stalybridge last Saturday. It is to be built on land given by Mr. F. D. Astley, and is to cost £2500. It will accommodate between 400 and 500 persons.

The Rev. Arthur Robins has during the last four years made the harvest thanksgiving at Holy Trinity Church, Windsor, one of the heartiest and most attractive of all the special services, but never was a greater success achieved in any church than on Thursday week.

A silver-gilt chalice and paten have been executed for Llandaff Cathedral. The chalice, which is 8½ inches high, is similar to the chalices presented a few years ago to St. Paul's Cathedral, and is the work of the same firm, Messrs. Lias and Son, St. Bride's-street, Ludgate-circus.

The Church of St. Peter, Northop, Cheshire, was reopened on Tuesday, after having undergone a most complete internal restoration, the cost of which, amounting to nearly £2000, has been borne by the Vicar, the Rev. Thomas Williams. A new organ has been presented to the church by the parishioners.

The Bishop of Ely began the primary visitation of his diocese on Tuesday at his cathedral, the custom of visiting that foundation having fallen into disuse for nearly a century and a half. In his charge he expressed a hope that he might contribute towards making the cathedral in a greater degree the centre and head of the diocese.

A meeting of clergy and laity of Bristol and Clifton was held on Monday—Bishop Anderson in the chair—to protest against the practice of auricular confession. A memorial to the Queen was adopted, praying that her Majesty would take such means as might be effectual to put down the practice of auricular confession within the Church of England.

The chancel, choir, side aisles, and tower structure of what promises to be, when finally completed, one of the handsomest churches in or around the metropolis was consecrated at Bexley-heath, Kent, on Tuesday by the Archbishop of Canterbury. The spire and two lofty transepts have yet to be added. The designs are by Mr. Knight, architect.

The Bishop of Salisbury consecrated the Church of All Saints, Branksome Park, Bournemouth, on the 20th inst. It is in the Early English style, from the designs of Messrs. Burton and Stevens; and it consists of a nave and chancel, but has been so arranged that a tower and transepts may be added at a future day. The cost will be between £3000 and £4000, which will be defrayed by Mr. Bury, the owner of the Branksome estate.

The new nave of Bristol Cathedral, which has been completed at a cost of upwards of £40,000, will, according to present arrangements, be opened on the 23rd of next month. The Archbishop of Canterbury will preach on the occasion, and also the Bishop of London, who was one of the Canons Residentiary of Bristol prior to his elevation to the Episcopate in 1853 as Bishop of Lincoln. It is stated that the Very Rev. A. P. Stanley, D.D., Dean of Westminster, will also preach at one of the special services.

Colonel Thursty laid the foundation-stone of the new Church of St. John-the-Baptist, Gannow, Bley, Burnley, on Saturday last. The undertaking was begun by the Rev. E. C. Maclure, M.A., Vicar of Rochdale, formerly Vicar of Habergham Eaves, and is the last on the list of three churches which are all now in the course of erection. The successful issue of the effort has been brought about by liberal and voluntary contributions, both on the part of private Churchmen and the Rector of Burnley (Canon Parker, M.A.), who has undertaken to support each church with an annuity of £150 a year to be met with £150 from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. St. John's Church is to cost about £7000.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Rev. Thomas Vere Bayne, M.A., censor and student of Christ Church, and Mr. Thomas Francis Dallin, M.A., late Fellow of Queen's College and Public Orator, have been appointed by the Home Secretary joint secretaries to the Oxford University Commission.—The Rev. Thomas Briscoe, D.D., formerly vice-principal and senior tutor of Jesus College, has been appointed Chancellor of Bangor Cathedral. Dr. Briscoe has been closely identified with Oxford for the past forty years, having obtained his Fellowship in 1834, and been appointed tutor of his college in 1835.

The Rev. J. Forrest Browne and Mr. Henry Davidson have been appointed joint secretaries to the Cambridge University Commission.

The council of King's College, London, have established a science course, including those subjects which, according to the new regulations, are required of candidates for the preliminary scientific examination or for the first and second bachelor of science examinations of the University of London. This course will also meet the requirements of candidates who study science for the Indian Civil Service, the Home Civil Service, the Indian Public Works Department, and other science examinations. In the course will be included demonstrations, and practical work in the physical, the chemical, and the biological laboratories.

The Lancaster Royal Grammar School, one of the most ancient of the educational establishments in the north of England, was reopened on Monday after considerable enlargement. The Bishop of Manchester said it was a hopeful thing for England that school discipline was free and generous, and that boys were not followed about at every turn as they would be in a French school by a preceptor.

Earl Fortescue, Lord Hervey, the Bishop of Truro, Sir Thomas Acland, M.P., Mr. S. Morley, M.P., and Mr. Wait, M.P., were at West Buckland Middle-Class School on the 20th inst., and all joined in recognising the importance of the middle class being better educated if they are to keep their voices in the government of the country.

Mr. Thomas Hughes, Q.C., distributed, last Wednesday, the prizes won by the students at the Oxford and Cambridge local examinations for the Manchester centre.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Lady Mayoress (Mrs. Cecil Price) will hold receptions at the Mansion House every Tuesday afternoon, from three to six o'clock, until the end of October.

The museum of the Royal College of Surgeons has received, as a present from the Hon. C. P. F. Berkeley, the skeleton of a crocodile, nearly sixteen feet long, which was shot by that gentleman last winter near Hagar Silsilis, in Egypt.

On Wednesday evening the Lord Mayor (Sir Thomas White) entertained at a banquet the magistrates and principal residents of the county of Essex, with which he has long been connected by family and other ties.

The School Board for London reassembled on Wednesday after the summer recess. Sir Charles Reed, in accordance with his annual custom as chairman, made a statement as to the work of the board and the results which have so far accrued.

To-day, being Michaelmas Day, the liverymen of the various guilds of the City will assemble at Guildhall for the election of the Lord Mayor for the ensuing official year, beginning in November next. In the ordinary course Mr. Owden, the senior Alderman, will be chosen.

The four-horse team which have worked the coach running this summer between London and Portsmouth were sold on Monday at Tattersall's. The stud consisted of forty-six horses, and several were of high blood. A pair of fast roadsters (Holdfast and Sprite) produced 152 gs.; Melrose, a roan horse, 50 gs.; and Bridgroom, 70 gs. The entire stud realised a total of 1928 gs., averaging 41½ gs. each.

Some German masons brought over to London to replace the men on strike at the New Law Courts, after working satisfactorily on Monday and Tuesday, did not return to their work on Wednesday morning. It was ascertained that about six o'clock they left in two vans, in one of which was their luggage. It is said that they have been shipped to Hamburg. Nothing is known of the means by which they were induced to leave.

The second show of poultry and pigeons at the Westminster Aquarium opened on Tuesday and continued open until Friday. The exhibition was extensive and good. Cups, pieces of plate, and money prizes to the amount of £750 were offered for competition, and nearly all the well-known breeders and fanciers put in an appearance.—A live whale, 9 ft. 6 in. in length, was on Wednesday received at the Aquarium, and deposited in a tank prepared for its reception.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers at the end of the third week of September was 76,575, of whom 36,502 were in workhouses and 40,073 received out-door relief. Compared with the corresponding weeks in the years 1876, 1875, and 1874 these figures show a decrease of 1035, 5264, and 14,937 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 552, of whom 373 were men, 141 women, and 38 children.

Mr. Joseph Moore, chairman of the Committee of Management of the Seamen's Hospital, Greenwich, desires, through our columns, to make an appeal to the public to assist him in decorating the wards of that institution with pictures, so as to dissipate the depressing monotony of dead walls upon the patients. There is ample space, Mr. Moore says, in the Seamen's Hospital to put up 250 specimens. Towards this number fifty have already been given by the residents in and around Blackheath and Greenwich, and, as the institution is free to seamen of all lands, and therefore truly national, it is hoped that very many of all classes will respond to this call. It is desired that the pictures should be simple in character, coloured prints and chromo-lithographs being preferable to engravings.

There were 2286 births and 1179 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 71, and the deaths 150, below the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The annual death-rate from all causes, which in the two preceding weeks had been equal to 17.4 and 18.6 per 1000, declined again last week to 17.4. The deaths from smallpox, which had been 8 and 10 in the two previous weeks, were again 10 last week. The number of smallpox patients in the Metropolitan Asylum Hospitals, which in the seventeen preceding weeks had declined from 964 to 181, further fell last week to 160. There were 22 deaths from measles, 30 from scarlet fever, 8 from diphtheria, 18 from whooping-cough, 31 from different forms of fever, and 71 from diarrhoea; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 190 deaths were referred, against 182 and 226 in the two preceding weeks. These 190 deaths were 103 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. In Greater London 2773 births and 1392 deaths were registered. The mean temperature was 61.1 deg., or 4.9 deg. below the average. The duration of sunshine during the week was 20.8 hours, out of the 86.5 hours that the sun was above the horizon.

At a Court of Aldermen on Tuesday, presided over by the Lord Mayor, the question of the admission of Sir John Bennett as a member of the Court was again heard. A petition, bearing eight signatures, but assigning no reason for its prayer, was presented against the election. The Court, after deliberation, came to the conclusion that Sir John Bennett was not a fit and proper person to discharge the duties and uphold the dignity of an Alderman of London, and it was resolved to issue a precept for another election.—Subsequently a meeting of Sir John Bennett's supporters was held at the Guildhall Coffee House. Mr. Wood, chairman of the election committee, presided. Speeches were made denouncing the decision of the Court of Aldermen by several gentlemen, and a resolution was unanimously carried pledging the meeting to support Sir John Bennett in his third candidature. In his address Sir John Bennett referred to the Court of Aldermen as the body into which he sooner or later intended to go. They by their proceedings, he said, were doing more than anyone else to help forward a reformation of the Corporation. The ballot would have to be introduced into the City; and it was perfectly monstrous that the Aldermen should be elected for life. He urged the citizens to recognise in himself their champion of electoral rights, and not to allow the Court to force upon them their own nominee. The Lord Mayor has fixed Tuesday next for the holding of the wardmote in Cheap Ward for the election, when Sir J. Bennett will, of course, be again re-elected. What next?

1. Moukhtar Pasha, Turkish Commander-in-Chief. 2. Raahid Pasha. 3. Ali Pasha. 4. Baron Schluga (Austrian). 5. Chevket Pasha. 6. Aarif Bey (Secretary). 7. Chevket Bey (Superintendent of Telegraphs).

THE WAR IN ASIA MINOR: BA FROM A SKETCH BY ONE

8. Hassan Pasha. 9. Mr. Charles Williams. 10. Mr. O'Donovan. 11. Turkish Position on hill, with guns. 12. Turkish troops on terrace. 13. Skirmishers. 14 and 15. Russian Batteries. 16. Russian Infantry.

BATTLE OF JAHNILAR, AUGUST 18.
OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Politics being rigorously (and happily) excluded from this column, I must not say anything about Mr. Gladstone's disingenuous denial of the imputation of having, in a letter addressed to one M. Negropontis, a Greek merchant at Constantinople, endeavoured to stir up the Greeks to go to war with Turkey. On the other hand, inoffensive literary criticism not being so inexorably banished from the "Echoes," I may be allowed to make a few remarks concerning the now famous Negropontine correspondence.

Mr. Gladstone's epistle to M. Negropontis was written in French; and ill-natured people are going about scoffing, and picking holes both in the style and the grammar of the letter. It is true that it contains, to begin with, nine gross grammatical blunders. "Honneur" should be masculine instead of feminine; "pièces y incluses" means nothing; "incessamment" is no longer used in French in the sense of "incessantly," but of "immediately"; "à faveur" should be "en faveur"; "en outre" is obsolete, and should be "d'ailleurs"; "avec tous les réserves" should be "sous toutes réserves"; "devoient" would be better as "doivent"; "une seule" should be "unique"; and "délimitation" should be "délimitation," if anything, since "délimitation" is a new-fangled word, more diplomatic than idiomatic.

Were there ninety and nine solecisms in the letter instead of nine (or as many more as the ill-natured people like to pounce upon) it would not, I apprehend, matter much. We can be good and happy without grammar. The Duke of Wellington made himself perfectly well understood in 1814 to the peasantry of the Pyrenean provinces when he put forth those remarkable proclamations couched in French, the style of which was enough to make an Academician shudder, but which was otherwise as "plain as a pikestaff." But why, in the name of all the proprieties, did not Mr. Gladstone write to M. Negropontis in Greek? The ex-Premier must be a perfect master of that language. There can be no greater error than to suppose that a modern Greek gentleman has not a due comprehension of Attic Greek. The chief difficulty in the way of colloquial intercourse between English Greek scholars and the Greeks themselves lies in the heroic obstinacy with which we cling to the barbarous system of pronunciation introduced into our Universities by Erasmus. What may be called "Batavo-Vandalic" Greek pronunciation was violently opposed by Bishop Gardiner; and for that very reason it (the Bishop being a Catholic) was as fiercely defended by the chief scholars of the Reformation. "This new pronunciation," writes quaint old Fuller, "has prevailed, whereby our Englishmen speak Greek, and are able to understand one another, which nobody else can." But M. Negropontis would have understood Mr. Gladstone's written Greek prose well enough. There is a wider difference between Chaucer and Macaulay than between Xenophon and an Athenian newspaper of the present day.

Infinitely would it rejoice me to read a letter from Mr. Gladstone to a friend beginning

Κυρίε μου,

Ἐπειδὴ εἶναι σήμερον λαμπρὸς καιρὸς, Ἐὰς περιμένο μετὰ τὸ γεῦμα, διὰ τὰ ὑπάρχοντα χάριν εἰς τὸν δάσος καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα θέλομεν πίνει τιεῖον εἰς τοὺς κήπους τοῦ Ἀουαδέν.

This is obviously Romaic, and not classical Greek; still, an adept in the ancient tongue would at once gather its meaning with the exception of Teion, which is Romaic for tea. "Hawarden" speaks for itself. But not one English Greek scholar in twenty might understand the above were it read aloud to him according to the rules of modern Greek pronunciation. "Geuma," for example, is pronounced "gefma"; "tauta," "tatta"; "charin," "khareen," the kh strongly guttural; "dia," "thea"; and "eis tous keepous," "eece tooce keepouce."

I hear that one of the most superb of the set-scenes in Mr. Wills's spectacular drama of "England in the Days of Charles II.," which Mr. Chatterton has just brought out with so much taste and splendour at Drury Lane, represents the Birdcage-walk and the Mall of St. James's Park. I would that I had seen Mr. William Beverly before he painted the particular tableau in question. I should have liked to show him one of the quaintest little volumes that I ever picked up in the course of a pretty long career of old-book hunting. It is called "The Plot in a Dreame; or, the Discoverer in Masquerade." It is dated 1681, and was printed for Mr. T. Snowden, to be sold at the sign of the Three Bibles, next Pope's Head-alley, over against the Royal Exchange in Cornhill. The author's pseudonym is "Philopatris," and the text is illustrated with copper plates. Lord Macaulay, I think, would have revelled in this work, which abounds in curious gossip about Titus Oates, Bedloe, Dangerfield, Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, &c.; but it is in the plates (some half-score of tiny etchings) that I especially take delight. There you may see Lord Stafford being beheaded: his Lordship lying his whole length along on the scaffold, with his neck on a block no higher than a footstool, and the executioner in a full-bottomed periwig; "Five Lords seduced by one Jesuit in the gardens of Somerset House;" "Ye grand Consult of Popish priests at ye White Horse Tavern;" "Master Kirby offering information to Dr. Oates;" and, in particular, "Two ruffians hiding to kill the King as his Majesty is walking in the Mall of St. James's Park." The Merry Monarch, with his hat on, is trotting along at his usual brisk pace, with four periwigged Lords in front and five more behind him, in Indian file, and with their hats under their arms.

Bella! Horrida Bella! There is in progress a dreadful polemic in the Republic of Letters. There appeared lately in the Contemporary Review a somewhat savage article censuring the personalities which (it was alleged in the article) too frequently appear in the columns of certain high-priced weekly journals. Among the periodicals criticised was the World. Forthwith up rises Mr. Edmund Yates, armed with a sledge-hammer, a nail, a branding-iron, a tomahawk, a knout, and a knuckle-duster, and proceeds, in a scathing leader in his own journal, to slaughter a poetical gentleman whom he assumes to have penned the paper in the Contemporary. My own humble name is incidentally mixed up in Mr. Yates's allusions to the early history of the poetical gentleman; but beyond this, I am glad to say, I have nothing to do with the dispute. I just mention it, here, first, for the reason that, although in this column I try to be as cautious as a cat examining the fastenings of the door of a canary bird's cage, one must not be utterly blind and deaf to all that is going on in the world; and this quarrel is, just now, the talk of half the clubs in London; and, next, because Mr. Yates has, in his reply, done himself, to my thinking, an injustice.

He recalls "a silly and unjustifiable attack" (I quote his own words) made by him on Mr. Thackeray some twenty years ago. Of the silliness of the celebrated critique on the great novelist which appeared in "Town Talk," and which led to Mr. Yates's exclusion and Mr. Charles Dickens's withdrawal from the Garrick Club, Mr. Yates may be, perhaps, the best judge. It is always permissible for a man to depreciate himself. But Mr. Yates never (to my thinking) made anything of the nature of an "attack" on Mr. Thackeray. His principal offence was that he published too minute a description of the personal appearance of the author of "Vanity Fair." He said that, with the exception of small whiskers, the great author's face was "otherwise clean-shaven;" and in particular he alluded to the novelist's nose. Now, nobody likes to have liberties taken with his nose. I have a nose of my own; and I had once to bring an action for libel and recovered five hundred pounds damages from a highly respectable firm of publishers because, in a book written by an esteemed literary confrère, my nasal organ had been by implication assailed. The jury (all honest men with noses of their own) sympathised with me. On the other hand, I may venture to state my belief that Mr. Thackeray was possessed by a perfectly unfounded delusion that Mr. Yates disliked him and bore him a personal grudge. Over and over again he has told me so; and over and over again I have been emboldened to tell him that he was thoroughly mistaken, and that there was no literary man in England who entertained a higher admiration for his genius, and a greater veneration for his character, than did Edmund Yates.

You will find, this week, my "Echoes" as heavy as an ironclad; but there are very few light matters, just now, to gossip about. The examination (just beneficently concluded) of the four detectives and the solicitor was scarcely a light-hearted topic; and the horrible Penge tragedy is certainly not a comic theme. Nor can one with decency be very sprightly about the war in Turkey, the Indian famine, the Colorado beetle, the recent collision in the Channel, or Marshal MacMahon's manifesto. Moreover, I am "moving." Is it possible to "move" without being intensely miserable? I don't know where I shall sleep to night. I have no home. I mean that I have two homes, but there are no carpets in either. Huge vans block up my door; the street boys are admiring themselves in the drawing-room pier-glass, which is propped up against the area railings; the cat is going melancholy mad; and the neighbours opposite have all their noses glued to the parlour window-panes, and evidently think that I have got the brokers in. Just now a man in a paper cap and a baize apron walked into the dining-room, where I am now writing on an empty claret case, and took away my last fender; I saw my vellum-bound edition of St. Augustin pass out a minute ago in a coal-scuttle; and there is nothing left in my library but a lust of good old George Cruikshank, standing on the bare boards, and an enormous beer-can beside him, quite empty; for the men who are "moving" me are afflicted with a deathless thirst. Strange irony of Fortune. Dear old George cheek by jowl with a can of half-and-half.

Alluding last week to the munificence of Mr. Henry Roe in undertaking the restoration of Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, I erroneously said that St. Patrick's Cathedral had been restored by Sir Arthur Guinness. I must rectify this slip of the pen. St. Patrick's benefactor was not Sir Arthur, but the late Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness, Bart. G. A. S.

THE WAR IN ASIA MINOR.

The Russian army in Asia has entirely failed in its renewed attempt to approach the great Turkish fortress of Kars, and has been compelled to fall back on the Georgian frontier. General Loris Melikoff, an Armenian in the service of Russia, to whom the campaign of this year in Armenia had been intrusted, now finds himself superseded in his command, and the Grand Duke Michael, brother to the Emperor Alexander, takes the direction of military movements; but there is no chance of doing anything effective in the short remainder of the season. The Russians were encamped on the 18th ult. at Kadikler and Kurukdara, eastward of Kars; they advanced that day to attack the position of Moukhtar Pasha, but were defeated with severe loss; after which they formed a new encampment at Kizil Tepe, only two miles from the former. This was attacked by the Turks, in their turn, on the 25th, and there was a more fiercely contested battle, in which the Russians, having lost 1000 men killed and wounded, could barely maintain their position, and got their left wing turned by the enemy. To explain the strategic importance of these actions a little topography is required. The Kars Tchai, which is the river on which Kars is situated, after passing through the works of the fortress, flows towards the north about six miles. Near Melikoi it turns sharply to the east, and again, twenty miles further down its course, at Ketchis, bends to the south and falls into the Arpa, twelve miles below the Russian fortress of Alexandropol, or Gumri, as the Georgian frontier town was named before it was converted into a Russian arsenal. Within the bend thus formed by the Kars river lies a high tableland, broken by peaks and deep ravines. Across this runs directly the high road from Kars to Alexandropol, crossing the Kars river twenty-eight miles from the fortress at Jamuskli. Between Kars and Jamuskli both the Ottoman and Muscovite main armies in Asia are encamped. The former occupies a position about twelve miles in front of Kars, with its left resting on the high road at Kalif Oghlu, and with detachments thrown forward to Mesrako. The centre holds the hill of Jahnilar Tepe; and the right, in strong force, commands a country road which runs by way of Bosanlik, Kadikler, and Tiknis to Gumri. This road, though of an inferior description, is of considerable importance, as along it the Turkish advance was made which led to the combat of Kizil Tepe. Beyond the hills held by the Ottoman army in the direction of Gumri the ground falls rapidly, but rises again, at a distance of fifteen miles, to the mountainous ridges on which are situated the villages of Kurukdara and Kizil Tepe. Here the Russian army has taken its stand. Its right occupies the former Russian and its left the latter, where it was turned in the action of that name, which was fought on the 25th ult. Such are the positions of the armies of the respective Commanders-in-Chief in Asia.

The Sketches by our Special Artist with the Turkish army in Asia Minor represent the battle which took place on the 18th ult., when the Russians, advancing from their camp at Kadikler, made an unsuccessful attack on the position of the Turkish Commander-in-Chief. Their immediate endeavour was to gain a lodgment upon the isolated hill of Jahnilar, which rises in the plain of the Arpa-Tchai, with steep and smooth sides, to the height of 800 ft. The outposts met in the plain below as early as half-past four in the morning, but it was nearly eight o'clock before the Russian line of attack was fairly developed. A heavy cannonade was then begun from the Russian left, opposite the right centre of the Turkish position. Here was a conical hill, forming a kind of natural fort, which was occupied by two battalions, with three Krupp guns. The Russian centre rested on the village of Soubatan, from which, after first taking it, they made their real attack upon the Jahnilar hill. Our Artist's sketch was taken at the moment when three Russian batteries, attacking this hill, were brought closer into action. In the foreground is the Mushir or Turkish Field Marshal, Ahmed Moukhtar Pasha, surrounded by his staff. He is watching the enemy through a telescope. It is still doubtful whether the attack on the Jahnilar hill position is to be supported chiefly from the enemy's centre or from the enemy's left wing. At Moukhtar Pasha's right hand are Rashid Pasha, Commander of the First Division, and Ali Pasha, who commands the cavalry. Behind him stands Baron Schiuga, correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna. The officers behind this gentleman are Moussa Pasha, commanding the Circassians; Chefket Pasha, commanding the Second Division, who seems to be pointing out the approach of the Russian guns; Chefket Bey, chief superintendent of telegraphs in the Kars district; Aarif Bey, Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief; and Hassan Pasha, Chief of the Staff. Two English newspaper correspondents—Mr. C. Williams and Mr. O'Donovan—are seated with this group of Turkish Generals and staff officers, who seem to be eagerly discussing the plan of the battle. The first and second brigades of the Russian column on the right got to the slope of Jahnilar about ten o'clock. Though much harassed by the Turks, who were established in rifle-pits on the upper part of the hill, the Russians managed to reach the second spur of the hill, which their skirmishers still held, when, just after mid-day, our Artist's sketch was taken. But their general attack had failed, and the main body of the Muscovite troops had begun to retire, under cover of their guns, and of a cloud of Cossacks, who now began to advance along the lower portion of the hill. Except a very few men killed in the vicinity of Soubatan, and half a dozen by shell-fire on the right, the Turks suffered all their loss at Jahnilar, where they had 114 killed and 352 wounded. That the Russian loss was more severe may be estimated from the numbers left on the ground, though it seems they had carried off the greater part not only of their wounded, but also of their dead. Their whole line fell back slowly upon their entrenched camps, on the Alexandropol road and at the village of Kizil Tepe. Here they were followed up by the Turks in force, until, at five o'clock in the evening, the Russians had found shelter behind the guns of their camp. They had about 35,000 men and 112 guns engaged during the day; the Turkish force was about the same in number, but had little more than half the artillery. In the foreground, near the right battery of the Turkish left, General Sir Arnold Kemball and Lieutenant Maitland Dougall, R.N., his aide-de-camp, watched the progress of the fight. They rode afterwards along the front of the line, as far as Soubatan, where a deplorable incident marked the arrival of the Russian troops. The inhabitants, being Mussulmans, had hidden their wives and daughters in their rude hovels, and barricaded their doors. The Russians, apparently fancying that Turkish soldiers might be concealed in the Turkish houses, broke these open, and, in one instance, where ordinary force failed, they fired through the door, killing a peasant and a fine young girl, just blossoming into womanhood. No such excuse as searching for concealed Turks can be found for the Russian dragoons, who penetrated as far as the next village, Hadji Weli, further along the Soubatan river. Here a woman, for having made some sharp reply to a Russian dragoon, was pistolled to death by three several shots, in the presence of an officer, who appears to have taken no steps to punish this foul murder.

Another of our Special Artist's Sketches is that of a visit of inspection to the Russian batteries, after the abandonment of the siege of Kars, in the month of July. It must, indeed, be acknowledged that there was no particular novelty or scientific merit in the works of the Russian military engineers against the great Armenian fortress. The hill, or rather piece of rolling moorland, upon which they were constructed, to the north-east of Kars, is covered with a deep layer of close-grained peat, which cuts with an almost mineral-like surface, but which when broken up resolves itself into exceedingly fine powder. The traverses and supply magazines were framed of the round or half-squared timbers used by the Armenian villagers for the posts and roofs of their houses; and over this substantial framework pieces of bass matting were laid, which prevented the crumbling through of the superincumbent earth. The service magazines were not by any means bomb-proof, as was shown by many a Turkish shot; but the depth of the parapets prevented any damage being done to the traverses, into which each gun company ran whenever a shot from the Ottoman side was signalled. The morning after the evacuation of these batteries the platforms were found to have been removed, and the works generally presented a dilapidated appearance, as though they had been deserted for a twelvemonth. The Turkish work in front is a mortar battery, which inflicted a good deal of damage on the besiegers. The timber which is seen lying about has ever since been used for cooking and camp-fires in the camp of Ahmed Moukhtar Pasha, and bids fair to last his troops well into the winter.

The annual meeting of the Educational Institute of Scotland was held in the High School, Edinburgh, last Saturday—Mr. Rattray, Aberdeen, president, in the chair. There was a large attendance. This institute has 2500 members.

According to annual custom on St. Matthew's Day, the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs went in state yesterday week to Divine service at Christ Church, Newgate-street, adjoining Christ's Hospital. The service was also attended by the treasurer and many of the governors of the hospital, and by the whole of the bluecoat boys, 700 in number.

Mr. John Bright, M.P., attended a meeting at Rochdale on Tuesday night, and distributed the Queen's prizes and the certificates of merit to the successful students of the science and art classes of the Rochdale Equitable Pioneers' Society. Addressing the meeting, he spoke of the progress of science and art during the past century, and of the mode in which modern scientific discoveries have been devoted to the improvement of the condition and comfort of the people. He referred especially to the manufacture of gas, the application of steam power to the purposes of production, and to the wonderful strides which of late years have been made by the cheap press. He pointed out that all inventions of modern science—such as the telegraph, the steam-boat, the locomotive, photography, and the sewing-machine—although they have added power to wealth, have done far more for the working classes.

The collection and preservation of portrait photographs may, perhaps, be an occasional charge of some of our fair readers. To them we would commend for that purpose a noble-looking volume of quarto size, strongly and handsomely bound in fine leather or velvet, with gilt clasps, which is called "L'Album Oriental." Its thick pasteboard leaves, each of which is double, with an inner leaf of paper separating its two sides from each other, are cut in diverse openings, some oval, some rectangular, of different sizes, for the secure insertion of cabinet photographs or cartes de visite; and the pages are beautifully adorned with floral and other designs in colour, views of scenery, ferns and grasses, foliage and fruit, swans, parrots, and other birds, moths and butterflies. Messrs. Charles Reynolds and Co., of Milk-street, Cheapside, the wholesale publishers of this Album, have shown much taste and skill in its production.

APOLLINARIS AND THE AHR VALLEY.

Tourists up the Rhine always recall with pleasure the moment when its picturesque beauties first burst upon their view, and the splendid panorama formed by the ruin-crowned peaks of the romantic Siebengebirge, the scene of the redoubtable exploits of the legendary Siegfried, where it begins to unfold itself. Higher up the river, past the shattered walls of Rolandseck and the shady green islet of Nonnenwerth, the cloistered retreat of the betrothed bride of the brave Roland when

False tidings reached the Rhenish strand
That he had fallen in fight, there rises up on the right bank of the river a beautifully wooded eminence known as the Apollinarisberg. Crowning its summit is the Apollinaris Kirche, a handsome modern Gothic edifice, erected at the cost of Count Furstenberg-Stammheim. It is decorated with some admirable frescoes commemorative of incidents in the life of St. Apollinaris, whose remains are here enshrined in an antique sarcophagus, and who is the patron saint not only of the church, but of a special crystal spring which gushes out of the limestone rock in the neighbouring Ahr valley.

The fertile plain bordering the Rhine has been known for centuries past as the Golden Mile, and here the Romans established a couple of colonies, the Remagen and Sinzig of to-day. Between these two little towns, at the latter of which, according to German traditions, Constantine had his famous vision of the Cross, the River Ahr—in summer a rippling streamlet and in winter a rushing torrent—falls into "the wide and winding Rhine." The road along the valley passes through Bodendorf and Lohrsdorf, a couple of little villages backed by vine-clad hills, and then winds round the base of the jagged basaltic mountain to which Kaiser Philip, the Hohenstaufen, gave the name of the Landskron, and which rises some thousand feet or so from the plain. A little white chapel is perched on the grassy ledge under the jutting walls of the ruined castle that crowns the mountain summit, and down below is the village of Heppingen, with a cross figured on the roofs of its quaint gabled houses, by way of protection against the evil spirit; while to the right a little stream, rushing down from the hills, capers along through copse and orchard, setting the huge blackened wheel of a rustic water-mill, half hidden among the summer foliage, in sluggish motion.

Keeping still, however, to the main road, in a few minutes we come upon a scene for which we were scarcely prepared. Rising up in the heart of this sequestered valley is an extensive range of buildings forming three sides of a square, with a tall chimney backed by vine-clad slopes towering aloft, and millions of glass and stone bottles in gigantic stacks occupying all the central space. Workpeople are moving briskly about, while a procession of huge carts, the lading of which is just completed, is preparing to start on the road to the Rhine. This proves to be the establishment of the Apollinaris Company, and in the walled-in inclosure beyond the arched gateway, surmounted by a statue of St. Apollinaris, is the spring yielding the pure and pleasant natural effervescent mineral water, which of late years has become so popular in England.

The existence and virtues of the Spring are of comparatively recent discovery. The Saint was a patron of wine long before any one dreamt of this water, and his image had been for centuries enshrined in a little niche at the foot of the terraced vineyard that rises up in the rear. But the "Vineyard of the Image of St. Apollinaris," as it was styled, did not flourish, despite this especial dedication. Rows of its vines refused to thrive, from some occult disease more baffling than even the phylloxera, till at length, in 1857, the owner, Herr Georg Kreuzberg, resolved to probe the matter literally to the roots. He did so, and found the soil strongly impregnated with carbonic acid gas. This induced him to consult Professor Bischoff, of Bonn, the celebrated geologist and chemist, who gave it as his opinion that such exhalations could only proceed from a mineral spring. Herr Kreuzberg thereupon commenced digging, and after arriving at a depth of some forty feet was rewarded by the discovery of the now famous Apollinaris Brunnen.

The buildings in the Ahr valley consist principally of a series of halls, communicating by stone archways, and lighted up by a long range of windows. The first is the bottle-washing department, where half a score of Lieschens and Lottelchens with looped-up petticoats and kerchief-covered heads were clustered round an apparatus not unlike a huge cart-wheel, revolving horizontally in the centre of a tank. From each of its four-and-twenty spokes shot up a peculiar jet of water, and on these jets the girls were deftly slipping and removing the bottles, when, on the completion of each revolution, the flow of water stopped for a moment. Four thousand bottles were thus being rinsed per hour, or from forty to fifty thousand per diem.

In an adjoining long gallery the operation of bottling the water was being carried on by means of machines communicating with the pipes in connection with the Spring, the water being pumped up by steam power. Here a busy throng of some fifty men and boys were hard at work filling, corking, and wiring the bottles—one man filling and corking while another wired—and carrying them away. There were twenty-one bottling machines in action, each with its corking apparatus attached, and with its combination of valves, taps, handles, and levers, recalling to mind an electric machine. Each machine will fill a couple of thousand bottles in the hours, the average total filled per day being forty thousand and upwards.

We naturally felt anxious to view the Spring, but its romantic beauty is sacrificed to the necessity which exists for covering it in. On descending a flight of steps at the back of the filling-room we reached a small inner court impregnated with a strong odour of carbonic acid gas, issuing in volumes from the Spring and confined in a large metal reservoir. The gas does, nevertheless, escape considerably, and is sometimes so overpowering that it is impossible to descend the steps, the gates inclosing which are kept locked to prevent accidents. Fifty feet below the surface is the Spring itself, which wells up some twenty feet, and is there met by the four supply pumps and the machinery specially erected to recondense the gas into the water prior to the latter being pumped up into the bottling-room. Thus the strong effervescence for which Apollinaris Water is remarkable is attained without admixture of any foreign ingredient. The artificial chemistry of the laboratory vainly endeavours to rival the refined operations of Nature; but, more than this, the British Medical Journal has shown that artificially aerated waters are often dangerously impure, and even impregnated with lead. "Water, water, everywhere, and not a drop to drink" is a common outcry in these days of sanitary reform. Facts recently brought before the Home Secretary by Dr. Lyon Playfair and Dr. Humphrey Sandwith, and the investigations of the Social Science Association, show that not only is the water supply of our cities contaminated by sewage in a way which filtration conceals without removing, but that seemingly pellucid springs are equally impure; whilst Professors Frankland, Letheby, and Dorenius assert that ordinary drinking water and many aerated waters, although to the eye transparent and sparkling, are "magazines of disease," leading to diarrhoea, fever, and various forms of blood poisoning.

The Apollinaris Water, springing forth from its deep rocky source, clear as crystal, soft as velvet, and effervescent as champagne, is not only of the highest purity, but preserves its sparkling freshness longer than any artificially aerated water. To its happy constitution it owes that peculiar softness of flavour which makes it such a pleasant adjunct to the dinner-table; whilst medical men assert that its anti-acid properties successfully combat the dyspeptic conditions to which English stomachs are peculiarly liable.

Crossing the tramway-intersected yard, with its huge, compact piles of empty bottles, we followed a string of trolleys laden with full ones to the packing department on the opposite side. Here were assembled a dozen waggons—huge oblong boxes on wheels, in each of which 4000 pints or 3000 quart bottles were already packed away—on the point of starting for Remagen, on the Rhine. At the quay of that pleasant little village, from which a glimpse is obtained of the magnificent panorama of the Seven Mountains and the picturesque Rolandseck, some long, flat-bottomed craft commonly lie moored. On board of these the bottles will be packed, with simply a layer of straw at the bottom of the boat, and another layer on the topmost rows of bottles, some planks being securely fixed over all. The smaller vessels, carrying from 95,000 to 110,000 bottles, will only descend the Rhine as far as Rotterdam, where their cargoes will be transhipped; but others, with their quarter of a million bottles, are to cross the sea, bound direct for the company's wharf on the Thames.

In 1875 six million bottles were thus shipped to England, a million to Holland, and another million to different parts of Germany. The Custom House lists of last June, however, show that in that month alone no less than thirteen hundred thousand bottles of Apollinaris water were unloaded at London; so that, on the whole, the Ahr valley profits largely by the badness of our drinking water. As the vessels proceeding from Remagen direct to the Thames can secure no return freight, the company are only too glad for them to take back, on their return voyage to the spring, the empty Apollinaris bottles whose contents have been consumed by thirsty Englishmen.

Within a few minutes' drive of the Apollinaris Brunnen, and on the opposite bank of the river, is Bad Neuenahr, with its large and comfortable Curhotel, its Trinkhalle, and its charming gardens, to which the healing waters of its mineral springs attract visitors from all parts of the world. Situated in the midst of this pleasant valley where the most picturesque scenery is combined with a mild and salubrious climate, it is not surprising that the baths of Neuenahr have rapidly become popular, and certainly a more agreeable place of resort for the summer and autumn months would be difficult to find. Delightful excursions may be made to the ruined castle of Neuenahr, crowning the lofty eminence which dominates the valley, or to the adjacent town of Ahrweiler, with its mediæval ramparts, conical capped gateways, towers with cannon-balls incrusting in their crumbling walls, and the picturesque Hauptstrasse, with its jumble of gabled houses, overhanging turrets, and quaintly-carved doorways.

Ahrweiler, when the Archbishops of Cologne were its lords and masters, was occasionally pawned by them to brother prelates for loans of some amount. Such prosperity as it now enjoys is due to the terraced vineyards on the adjoining slopes, which yield a generous wine, distinguished for its deep ruby colour when young, but which grows pale with age. All the local expenses are defrayed out of profits derived from the municipal vineyards. The poor are supported from the proceeds of vine lands left by the charitably disposed, besides which the clergy of the place derive their principal revenue from the same source.

Beyond Ahrweiler the vineyards stretch across the plain and ascend the rugged mountain slopes that run parallel with the rapid little river. On the left rises the Calvarienberg, surmounted by an extensive building which was formerly a monastery; while straight ahead, where the hills close in towards the river, is Walporzheim, which gives its name to the best wine vintaged in the Ahr valley. At the Gasthaus of St. Peter the tourist will be able to obtain a sample of vintage '68, a stout, full-bodied wine, somewhat potent, but of excellent flavour.

After leaving Walporzheim a narrow ravine is entered, through which the Ahr courses along over its pebbly bed, its miniature torrents flashing in the sunlight, and its limpid waters tinged with a thousand reflections. The pollard willows fringing the stream stand out in bright relief against the tall banks of shattered slate and towering rocks of dark grey basalt which, surmounted by coronets of gloomy pine-trees, and with vines rising up in irregular terraces or perched on all the more perilous ledges, close one in on either side. On one's left is a huge projecting mass of rock, well known as the "Bunte Kuh" or "Mottled Cow," and nestled here and there in the valley, where the gorge expands, are picturesque hamlets, vivid with fruitful orchards and flowery gardens, their steep-roofed cottages and barns clustering around quaint old churches, whose pointed steeples are dwarfed by the surrounding hills. Beyond the ruined nunnery of Marienthal is the village of Dernau, where the river and the ravine grow wider; and further on is Rech, with its ancient stone bridge ornamented with a gorgeously coloured statue of some local saint. The hills hereabouts are rounded at the summit and slope gently down into the valley, but the river-bed soon contracts again, and, at Maischoss, is shut in by vast perpendicular walls of rock. On an adjacent eminence are the remains of Schloss Saffenburg, blown up after its evacuation by the French, who were besieged here in 1703.

Further on, the rocky cliffs rise up still more precipitously, and the road runs through a narrow chasm, the Ahr, despite its meandering course, bubbling swiftly over the stones, past a picturesque water-mill known as the Lochmühle, the wheel of which is turned by water supplied from a subterranean canal, the work of condemned criminals who executed it to save their lives. In this direction Nature has provided no outlet from the valley except along the narrow bed of the river, over which the hanging rocks keep silent ward. A tunnel, however, solves the difficulty, and on emerging from it one finds oneself in Altenahr—a cheerful little village nestling between the river and the precipitous, rocky mountain on which stands the ruined castle that formerly belonged to the Counts of Blankenheim and Manderscheid, with the latter of whom the "Wild Boar of the Ardennes" claimed kindred. One toils up the steep ascent, whence an extensive view is obtained over the picturesque valley, with the glittering Ahr winding in labyrinthine fashion between the lofty peaks which rise up on every side, crowned with gloomy pines and patches of tangled underwood.

The finest scenery in the Ahr valley is to be found in the vicinity of Altenahr. The stream itself has its source in the picturesque little market town of Blankenheim, nestling among leafy woods under the ruined stronghold of its once famous Counts, on the borders of the mysterious volcanic Eifel land, where shattered feudal towers alternate with extinct craters, now transformed into lakes, and rippling trout-streams glide onward amid banks of scoræ and lava. Here too, among the lofty Hohe Acht and Nürburg heights, are the twin castles of Manderscheid, overlooking the Lieser, while above the glittering Kyll tower the stately ruins of Kasselburg and its neighbour of Gerolstein, which has been immortalised by Schubach's "Grande Duchesse." But we must bring this rambling discourse of the Ahr valley to an end.

SOCIAL SCIENCE.

At the opening general meeting of the Social Science Congress at Aberdeen on Thursday week Lord Gifford, one of the Judges of the Court of Session, gave an address on jurisprudence, in which he stated two propositions:—first, that law is a science; and, secondly, that legislation is not and never must be in the smallest degree arbitrary. The sections subsequently met and discussed several important subjects. The extent of our maritime jurisdiction was dealt with in the department of International Law, and in the Repression of Crime section papers were read on the subject of a training-school for boys intended for the Army. During the discussion on this topic Mr. Serjeant Cox stated, as the result of his experience at the Middlesex Sessions, that the most expert thieves were those who had been in reformatory schools. Trade unions and the extent to which they contributed to the well-being of Society formed the subject in the Economy and Trade section; in the Health section there was a discussion on the best means of utilising open spaces in towns, and the subject of competitive examination was discussed in the Education section. In the evening the congress was entertained at a banquet by the Corporation.

Yesterday week Lord Young (who as Lord Advocate had charge of the Scotch Education Bill in Parliament) gave an address to the association, as President of the Education Department. He stated the principles and reviewed the operations of the Education Act. Before 1872 Scotland had a national system of education, but it was, he said, necessarily of an ecclesiastical character. He referred to the large number of new schools built or resolved upon, and went on to express an opinion against direct supervision or control of local managers by a central authority. In the departments the principal questions under discussion were—in Law, to what extent it is expedient to control by legislative enactment contracts between landlord and tenant; in Education, the best means of securing a high standard of education; in Repression of Crime, the best kind of labour for prisons; in Public Health, the sanitary condition of our fishing population; and in Art, whether art-competitions are favourable to art progress. In the evening the president of the Art department delivered an address on the rise and progress of the art of portraiture in this country.

The Lord Advocate gave an address on the Repression of Crime last Saturday. He referred to the progress of the principle of reclamation as opposed to that of mere punishment in the treatment of criminals, and dwelt upon the necessity of establishing in the other parts of the United Kingdom a public prosecutor on the plan pursued in Scotland. In the Municipal Law section Serjeant Cox treated of the question of Land Law Reform. Major Ross, Chief Constable of Aberdeenshire, read in the Repression of Crime section a paper on the subject of our Detective System, setting forth a plan for the organisation of a more efficient detective service. A discussion followed, in which Sheriff Thomson, Mr. Baker (Gloucester), the Rev. Dr. Ace, the Lord Advocate, and others took part. Papers on various topics were read in other sections. In the afternoon there were excursions, one being to the grounds of Balmoral Castle, open by permission of the Queen.

Mr. Edwin Chadwick, President of the Public Health Department, gave an address last Monday morning on the progress made in the development of the powers of sanitation. He gave as instances the great decrease in the death-rates of orphan asylums, prisons, and other institutions under improved sanitary conditions. He described the different forms of disease attendant on different degrees of aerial impurity; and added that we had now gained the power of reducing the sickness and death-rates in most old cities by at least one third, and that amongst the general population a reduction by fully one half of the diseases of the respiratory organs might be effected by general public sanitation. The high value of town manure applied to agriculture, and the possibility of purifying sewage effectively before discharging it into rivers, were also dealt with. The consideration of the question whether further legislation was desirable to prevent the frauds of promoters of companies gave rise to an energetic discussion in the Law section. In the Education Department the remedies for irregular attendance and non-attendance of pupils at primary schools was the subject debated. The Art section deliberated on the best means of bringing art to the homes of the poor, the chief means suggested being the opening of picture-galleries and museums on Sundays. In the evening a meeting of working men was held in the Music-hall, at which the Lord Provost presided, and several of the members of the association addressed the meeting.

Mr. Caird, president of the Economy and Trade department, read an address on Tuesday, in which he contended that our food supply was not so great as it might be, owing to the aggregation of small holdings in the hands of encumbered proprietors. Miss Becker read a paper on woman's suffrage, contending that every woman, married or single, ought to have a vote; Dr. Macadam read a paper on the ventilation of drains and sewers; and Professor Hodgson read a paper on education, especially with regard to the wage-receiving classes. In the evening there was a conversation.

The business of the Congress was concluded on Wednesday. Mr. Hastings, the President of the Council, spoke of the work done by the council during the past year. They had, he said, been devoting special attention to the Poor-Laws, and in conjunction with certain Poor-Law Conferences had urged on the Government the desirableness of lessening out-door relief. This, they were persuaded, would reduce pauperism. Mr. Slater Booth, M.P., President of the Local Government Board, had expressed some agreement with their views. At a public meeting subsequently held thanks were voted to all who had promoted the success of the Congress. The association afterwards divided into two parties, one of which went to Haddo House, the seat of the Earl of Aberdeen, and the other to Dunecht House, the residence of Lord Lindsay.

The estate of Bordlands, Peeblesshire, which belonged to the late Mr. George Hope, has been sold for £25,000 to Sir James R. Ferguson, Bart.

The Sheffield School Board has approved of a scheme for a truant industrial school in premises situate about six miles from the centre of the town. The children to be dealt with are incorrigible truants, those of a more hardened class, though unconvicted of crime, and neglected children whose parents disregard attendance orders, and whom it is desirable to isolate for a time from baneful home influences. Of these three classes it is calculated that there are upwards of one hundred children in the borough. The industrial pursuits proposed to be introduced are wood-chopping, paper-bag making, gardening, shoemaking, clothes mending, and the making of simple articles of dress.

MILL AT HEPPINGEN.

CHAPEL ON THE LANDSKRON.

THE LANDSKRON.

THE RIVER AHR.

APOLLINARIS COMPANY'S WORKS.

APOLLINARIS SPRING.

ST. APOLLINARIUS CHURCH.

VINEYARD OF ST. APOLLINARIUS.

SKETCHES IN THE AHR VALLEY.

LAW AND POLICE.

The public mind has been relieved of a great burden. What has been called "The Penge Mystery" was solved, as far as it is in mortal power to solve it, at a late hour on Wednesday last; and the two brothers and two sisters indicted for the wilful murder of Mrs. Louis Staunton—Louis Adolphus Edmund Staunton, aged twenty-six, farmer; Patrick Llewellyn Staunton, twenty-four, artist; Elizabeth Ann Staunton, twenty-eight, wife of Patrick; and Alice Rhodes, aged twenty—were all found guilty, and sentenced to death.

Much morbid interest was taken in the trial at the Central Criminal Court. Well-dressed persons of both sexes thronged the large court of the Old Bailey from the beginning of the trial on Wednesday week to its close, and, with more curiosity than good taste, freely used loggnettes to gaze at the prisoners, of whom Louis Staunton appeared cool and calm throughout, whilst his brother and his brother's wife were evidently deeply affected by the position in which they were placed, and Alice Rhodes completely broke down once or twice. From a judicial point of view, the trial was most satisfactory. The case for the prosecution was ably conducted by the Attorney-General, the Solicitor-General, and Mr. Poland. Everything that could be adduced in favour of Louis Staunton was brought forward by Mr. Montagu Williams and Mr. Mathews. Marked ability was shown in the defence of Patrick Staunton by Mr. Edward Clarke. Mr. Douglas Straight and Mr. Purcell were the counsel for Mrs. Patrick Staunton; and Mr. Percy Guy acted for Alice Rhodes.

Little that was fresh in the well-known story of "The Penge Mystery" was brought to light. The unhappy history of Harriet Richardson's marriage and death was again told and retold. This heiress to a fortune of £4000 was married to Louis Staunton, then an auctioneer's clerk, twenty-four years of age (she being thirty-five), in the June of 1875, at Clapham, against the will of her mother, Mrs. Butterfield, who vainly appealed to Chancery to stop the marriage on the grounds of her daughter's imbecility. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Staunton went to live at 8, Loughborough-road; and there Mrs. Butterfield saw her daughter for the last time alive. Louis Staunton strongly objected to a repetition of his mother-in-law's visit for some reason or another; and the next time Mrs. Butterfield saw her daughter was when the latter lay dead in bed at Penge on April 15 last. Meanwhile Mrs. Louis Staunton had had a baby, and had been removed to a small house known as The Woodlands, at Cudham, where she boarded with Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Staunton, and whence her infant was mysteriously taken on April 8 last to Guy's Hospital by Louis Staunton, who gave instructions that on the death of the child (which soon ensued) it should be stated that he was left by "John Harris." The money Mrs. Louis Staunton was in possession of at her marriage had become her husband's absolute property; and in the autumn of last year, moreover, Louis Staunton realised the rest of his wife's fortune (£2200), in which she had only a reversionary interest. With these moneys he bought just about the same time a farm very near the Woodlands. This was Little Grays Farm. There he lived with Alice Rhodes, contributing £1 a week for the maintenance of his wife and child at the Woodlands. It was shown beyond doubt by the servant, Clara Brown, that here the poor woman was kept in close confinement, neglected, and maltreated. But she did not long survive her child. On April 12, when she was so weak she had to be lifted into the carriage, Mrs. Louis Staunton was taken from Cudham to 34, Forbes-road, Penge, in order to get better medical advice, according to her husband, who told the landlady "she had had a doctor at Cudham who did not understand her case." Here, however, her sufferings soon ended. She died very shortly after her removal to Penge; and Dr. Longrigg, guided by the statements of the prisoners, at first certified that the cause of death was "cerebral disease;" but, having subsequently made a post-mortem examination of the body in conjunction with Dr. Bright and Mr. Wilkinson, Dr. Longrigg coincided with his colleagues that starvation was the real cause of death. On the other hand, two of the medical men called for the defence (who laboured under the disadvantage of not having seen the body) asserted that the symptoms of the deceased were consistent with tubercular meningitis, and that they were not at all accounted for by the theory of starvation.

The learned counsel for the defence strove to prove the innocence of their clients, Mr. Clarke, as counsel for Patrick Staunton, displaying especial skill and ingenuity in urging that the cause of death was not any deliberate plan of starvation, but the effects of emaciation proceeding from some disease of which a gradual wasting away was the peculiar symptom. The medical evidence in support of this theory was to the effect that the state of her organs and the discolouration of her body might have arisen from tubercular meningitis, or diabetes, or Addison's disease.

But all these arguments were virtually demolished by the clear and comprehensive, fair and impartial, and remarkably complete Summing-Up of Mr. Justice Hawkins, whose admirable review of the case on Wednesday occupied ten hours and a half in delivery. The jury deliberated an hour and twenty minutes; and, shortly after eleven on Wednesday night, returned a verdict of "GUILTY" against Louis and Patrick Staunton, Mrs. Patrick Staunton, and Alice Rhodes, recommending both women (Alice Rhodes "strongly") to mercy. Sentence of death was immediately passed, Alice Rhodes alone pleading in stay of execution, "Only that I am innocent." A large crowd thronged round the doors of the Old Bailey, and cheers were sent up as soon as the verdict was learnt.

The inquiry into the charge against the Inspectors Meiklejohn, Druscovich, Palmer, and Clarke, and Mr. Froggatt, the solicitor, was concluded at Bow-street last Saturday, after having lasted twenty-eight days. On the conclusion of the evidence, Sir James Ingham, having heard the addresses for the defence, committed all the prisoners for trial on the charge of conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice, and as accessories after the fact to forgeries committed by Kurr, Benson, and others; and Meiklejohn was also committed as an accessory before the fact. Bail was accepted as before for Mr. Froggatt and Inspector Clarke, but was refused for the other three Inspectors.

RELIEF FOR THE VICTIMS OF THE WAR.

A telegram from Berlin states that, at the special request of Princess Reuss, the wife of the German Ambassador to Turkey, Queen Caroline of Saxony has dispatched twelve sisters to Constantinople under the charge of a Saxon delegate of the Red Cross Society.

The Foreign Office has received from Mr. Fawcett a shocking account of the condition of the districts of Kyzanlik and Yeni-Zaghra. He states that the road from Shipka to Kyzanlik is strewn on each side of the way with festering corpses, and adds that the lovely appearance of the country makes the scene, if possible, the more horrible. The whole country between Carlova and Yeni-Zaghra is depopulated, and is reeking with the odour of human remains.

A letter from Mr. J. S. Young, dated Constantinople, Sept. 9, to Colonel Loyd-Lindsay, reports that from all divisions of their medical staff engaged in attending the sick and wounded at the several scenes of action in Europe and Asia he continues to receive accounts of splendid work done. Dr. Leslie had his division during the fighting at Shipka continuously at work among the thousands of wounded, and from Aug. 14 to Aug. 20 he visited numerous refugees, women and children, some of whom were wounded. Dr. Crookshank's division was on the 1st inst. with the Turkish forces before Popkoi. From Varna Mr. Young transported on two occasions sick and wounded to Constantinople, the buildings at the former place having been overcrowded with the wounded sent down from the front. The Red Crescent Society was hard at work at Constantinople. The soup-kitchens established by Mr. Barrington Kennett for the wounded while being transported long distances have proved of great benefit.

Major-General Sir Henry Green, the honorary treasurer of the Stafford House Committee, has received the following letter from Mr. Barrington Kennett, dated Pera, Sept. 14: "I shall write you fully next week on many matters, sending you detailed accounts and estimates to the end of August. I am practising every economy, but my expenses cannot be kept below £1000 per month. I have to give up a splendid service which I was organising for removing the heavily wounded from Philippopolis to Constantinople for want of funds. I hope that you can put this before the committee. It is such a pity that I have to reduce my operations at this critical moment." At the last meeting of the committee it was decided, in view of the inadequacy of the funds remaining in hand to meet the pressing necessities arising out of the severe fighting, to lay this letter before the public, with an appeal for further subscriptions, in order that the work of relief, now more urgently needed than ever, may be carried on.

The Stafford House Committee have received a report from Colonel Coope of one of the distributions at the Constantinople soup-kitchen, showing the system on which it is worked. Nearly 3000 wounded have been received in all, and have been supplied with soup, coffee, tobacco, &c., at Tcholorion and Constantinople.

SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE AT EXETER.

Yesterday week the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the character of president of the Exeter Literary Society, addressed a numerous meeting of the members of the institution in the Royal Public Rooms. The right hon. gentleman was supported by Mr. A. Mills, M.P., Mr. Cuthbertson (Mayor of Exeter), and several of the more prominent inhabitants of the city. Sir Stafford Northcote, who was very cordially received, reminded the assembly that the society, whose autumn session was then being opened, had been established since 1841, and that during the interim it had done a great deal of good and useful work, which entitled it to the hearty and increased support of the citizens at large—a support of which it stood in need, as an effort was being made to obtain better premises, so that it might have better opportunity of development. He asked his hearers to consider the changes that had taken place since 1841. If they compared the educational advantages of the then population with those possessed by the people of the present day, they would see that the advance which had been made was enormous and almost indescribable. In 1841 the people of Exeter knew nothing of the railway system, and they were without any of the means of communication which were now so important. They knew nothing then—nor did England generally—of the electric telegraph; and the system of ocean steamers was only beginning to be developed. Beyond this, the penny post was only in its infancy, and there was no cheap literature such as was procurable at the present day. Not only were there no railways, but there were no railway libraries, and none of the cheap books or periodicals which tended to make a journey so much pleasanter than it would otherwise be. It was in the year 1841 that Punch, one of the great instructors of the age, and one of the most amusing periodicals, came into existence. He believed it was about the same time that the Illustrated London News made its appearance. Then, again, in 1841 the sum voted by Parliament for education was only £10,000, whereas now we counted by millions a vote which in those days was only reckoned by thousands. In 1841 we knew nothing of any education in the direction of science and art such as had been since developed by the Kensington Museum and the kindred institutions that had been established all over the kingdom during the intervening period, although about that time Mr. William Ewart was directing attention to the subject and sowing the grain of mustard seed that had borne such prolific fruit. Having reviewed the progress that had been made in science, literature, and art during the thirty-six years which the society had existed, and remarked upon the stirring political and social events of the same period, Sir Stafford proceeded to show the reverse of the medal. He said that, whilst our education was undoubtedly now far beyond what it had been, it was questionable whether strength of character had similarly improved, or if the intellectual condition of the country was by any means so satisfactory as it should be. Two great evils were the tendency to excitement and the growth of vanity. Examples of both he might take from the House of Commons. Unless there were some measures of a startling character passed in the Session there was a general feeling that Parliament had fallen back, and was not answering the expectations of the people. As to the second point, no intellectual disease was so mischievous as vanity and conceit in the present day. It was at the bottom of a large proportion of waste of time in Parliament, and was often most damaging to the cause which the persons who insisted on unnecessary speaking imagined they were advancing. The remedy would be for people to look to the work itself, and not to the men who were doing it.

THE TRADES UNION CONGRESS AT LEICESTER.

As was reported in our last Issue, Mr. Brassey, M.P., gave an address on Thursday week upon work and wages in 1877. He contended that England held her own in international competition; that if wages were higher labour was relatively cheaper, and that the depression of trade was mainly attributable to over-trading by employers and to the abuse of the Joint-Stock Companies Acts. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Brassey, and resolutions were passed in favour of the extension of the Employers and Workmen Acts to seamen, the reform of the patent laws, the abolition of imprisonment for debt, and the requirement of certificates of competency from persons placed in charge of engines and boilers.

Yesterday week Mr. Broadhurst was appointed secretary of the Parliamentary Committee which had been instructed to inquire and report as to the relations between skilled and unskilled labour. Resolutions were adopted against interference by the Parliamentary Committee in local trade disputes, and the decision in the Richardson intimidation conviction, and in favour of friendly relations between co-operators and trade unionists, the exemption of bakers from the Smoke Act, and the attitude of the Birmingham nut and bolt makers.

Resolutions were adopted last Saturday in favour of direct working-class representation and the assimilation of the county and borough franchise, with a redistribution of seats, and against the unfair competition of reformatories in the labour market. Sympathy was expressed with the locked-out operatives of Bolton. A motion in favour of the establishment of a trade organ was negatived, one for the admission of bona-fide foreign delegates was referred to the Parliamentary Committee, and one as to overtime was postponed. Sundry votes of thanks concluded the congress. Bristol will be the next place of meeting.

The Congress of the Sanitary Institute at Leamington will be opened next Wednesday by Dr. Richardson, F.R.S. The exhibition in connection with the Congress will be opened on the same day by the Mayor of Leamington.

The Attorney-General has appointed Mr. Montagu Williams Counsel to the Treasury for the county of Middlesex Sessions, in the place of the late Mr. William Cooper. Mr. William Furner, the Judge of the Sussex County Court Circuit, has announced his intention to resign. He has held office since 1847.

There were two or three contests with volunteer corps last week. The H company of the Queen's (Westminster) held their annual contest; the Grosvenor cup and a series of prizes were competed for at Rainham under the auspices of the Middlesex Rifle Association—the winning score, by Sergeant J. P. Wright, being within six of the highest possible; and the seventeenth annual prize-meeting of the Highland Association at Inverness, which brought together a large number of crack shots of the United Kingdom—the shooting throughout being excellent.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Immediately, crown 8vo, Price 6s.
UNDER THE BALKANS,
By
R. JASPER MORE.
With a
MAP OF THE COUNTRY ADJACENT TO PHILIPPOPOLIS, And
ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS.
HENRY S. KING AND CO., LONDON.

Will be published Oct. 1.
NEW NOVEL BY MISS BRAMSTON.
E M
By Miss BRAMSTON, Author of "The Carbridge," "Country Maidens," &c. One Volume. Price 1s. 6d.
MARCUS WARD AND CO., LONDON AND BELFAST.

THE TOURIST'S GUIDE TO THE ABBEYS, CASTLES, AND ANCIENT HALLS OF ENGLAND AND WALES; their Legendary Lore and Popular History. By JOHN TIMBS and ALEXANDER GUNN. 3 vols.; each volume complete in itself. Vol. I., SOUTH. Vol. II., MIDLAND. Vol. III., NORTH. Price 2s. 6d. each, post-free. 10s. 6d. for the set.
F. WARNE AND CO., Bedford-st., Strand.

NEW NOVEL BY MR. R. D. BLACKMORE.
Now ready, at all the Libraries.
EREMA; or, My Father's Sin. By R. D. BLACKMORE, Author of "Lorna Doone," "Alice Lorraine," &c. 3 vols.
LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, AND CO., 15, WATERLOO-PLACE.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE
(No. 216) for OCTOBER.
Price 1s.
CONTENTS OF THE NUMBER.
1. The Dominions of Odysseus, and the Island Group of the Odyssey. By the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P.
2. Young Musgrave. By Mrs. Oliphant. Chap. XXXI.—XXXII.
3. A New Manuscript of George Savile, First Marquis of Halifax. By the Hon. Hugh F. Elliot.
4. The Colours of Animals and Plants. By A. B. Wallace.
5. Gibraltar: Fortress or Colony. By T. H. S. Escott.
6. The University of Upsala. By K. M. Thordson.
7. La Grande Dame de l'ancien Régime. By Lady Augusta Cadogan.
MACMILLAN AND CO., LONDON.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 214.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for OCTOBER. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and Frank Dicksee.
CONTENTS.
"For Pervival." (With an Illustration.) Chap. IV.—Wishing Well and Ill. V.—Why not Lettie? VI.—Her Name. VII.—Jewell, Judith, or Charlotte Corday. VIII.—Perhaps I'm Letting Secrets Out.
The Means of Mars.
A Swiss Bath in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries. By John Carson, Western Highlands.
Hours in a Library. No. XVI.—Massinger.
Carving a Cocoa-Nut.
Experiences of an Indian Famine.
The Livings of London.
Erema; or, My Father's Sin. (With an Illustration.) Chap. LI.—Life Sinner. LII.—For Life, Death. LIII.—Brunetta Defiant.
LONDON: SMITH, ELDER, AND CO., 15, WATERLOO-PLACE.

LE FOLLET, the leading Journal, for OCTOBER, contains matchless illustrations of all the newest and most attractive styles of Ladies' Dresses, Bonnets, Hats, Lingerie (as adopted by the acknowledged leaders of fashion), &c. One shilling and sixpence, post-free.

CANCER—ITS CONSTITUTIONAL AND SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT: An experience of Twenty-five years. By the late Dr. J. PATTISON. Prefaced and Revised by his son, M. MONCHELLE PATTISON, M.D. (Un. New York).—KEENE AND ASHWAULT, 74, New Bond-street, London, W. Price One Shilling, post-free.

1p. 180, cloth 1s.; post-free on receipt of 12 stamps.
DOGS' DISEASES TREATED BY HOMOEOPATHY. By JAMES MOORE, M.R.C.V.S. Describes and Prescribes for all Common Diseases. JAMES EVES AND CO., 48, Threadneedle-street; and 170, Piccadilly.

PAINTING ON CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c. Practical Lessons by Mlle. la Baronne Delamardelle, Translated from the French by G. A. Bouvier. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 1d.—LECHESTER, BARNES, AND CO., 60, Regent-st., London.

VITREMANIE—An Easy Method of Decorating Windows in Churches, Public Buildings, and Private Houses equal to Real Stained Glass. Illustrated Handbook of Instructions, post-free, 1s. 2d. Particulars free. LONDON: J. BARNARD AND SONS, 389, Oxford-street, W.

SCRAPS FOR SCREENS AND SCRAP-BOOKS. A Large Collection of Coloured Scraps of the best kind—Flowers, Figures, Birds, &c., 1s. per Sheet; 12 Sheets, 10s. 6d. W. M. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

WHITE WOOD ARTICLES for Painting, For Painting, and Decalcomanie: Screens, Book-Covers, Glove, Knitting, and Handkerchief Boxes; Paper-Knives, Fans, &c. Priced List post-free. W. M. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. The People's Printing Press, for Authors, Amateurs, the Army and Navy, &c. Prospectuses forwarded on application to D. G. BERRI, 36, High Holborn, London, W.C.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS. Sold by all Stationers THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

PALACE SOAP, 20s. per lb., for State Apartments.—PIESSE and LUBIN, 2, New Bond-street, are the only makers of this exquisite Soap. Single Cakes, 5s.; or six in a carton, 37s. 6d. Piesse and Lubin also make some charming Flower-Scented Soaps, at 10s. per lb., such as Opoponax Soap, Violet Soap, Frangipani Soap, Attar Rose Soap, and others, in Cakes, 2s. 6d. each, suitable for superior use. Royal Laboratory of Flowers, 2, New Bond-street.

PIESSE and LUBIN. SWEET SCENTS FOUR CADEAUX.—Opoponax, Jockey Club, Patchouly, Frangipani, Lige-Aloe, White Rose, Paldium, and 1000 others from every flower that breathes a fragrance, 2s. 6d. each; three in a case, 7s. 6d. Sold by fashionable Druggists in all parts of the World.—Laboratory of Flowers, 2, New Bond-street, London.

PIESSE & LUBIN. HUNGARY WATER. Prophylactic, refreshing, invigorating. "I am not surprised to learn," says Humboldt, "that orators, clergymen, lecturers, authors, and poets give it the preference, for it refreshes the memory." Emphatically the scent for warm weather, for hot and depressive climate. A case of six bottles, 14s.; single sample, 2s. 6d.—2, New Bond-street, W.

ROUND SHOULDERS AND STOOPING Cured by the IMPROVED CHEST-EXPANDING BRACE. Removes pain and weakness, develops the chest, ensures a graceful figure for both sexes, invaluable to young children. Illustrations free.—HAMILTON AND CO., 401, Oxford-street, London.

ROUND SHOULDERS AND STOOPING HABITS Cured by Dr. CHANDLER'S CHEST-EXPANDING BRACE for both sexes. It assists growth, and produces a handsome figure. 10s. 6d. each.—66, Berners-st. Illustrations sent.

ANOTHER CURE OF BRONCHITIS and HOARSENESS by DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS. Mr. Buckley, Chemist, Knighton, writes:—"A case of periodical bronchitis was completely cured by their use." Sold at 1s. 14d. per Box.

FITS.—EPILEPTIC FITS or FALLING SICKNESS.—A certain method of cure has been discovered for this distressing complaint by a physician, who is desirous that all sufferers may benefit from this providential discovery; it is never known to fail, and will cure the most hopeless case after all other means have been tried. Full particulars will be sent by post to any person free of charge.—Address:—MR. WILLIAMS, 40, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

NEW MUSIC.

LOVED and LOST (Geliebt und Verloren)
WALTZES. By OTTO MULLER (performed at the Promenade Concerts, Theatre Royal, Covent-Garden). These celebrated Waltzes may be had of all Music-sellers. Solo or Duet, 2s. net.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street, W.

THE Popular Song, LOVED AND LOST.
The Words by Percy Fitzgerald, adapted to Muller's beautiful Waltz "Geliebt und Verloren." Sold by every Music-seller in the United Kingdom. Post-free, 2s.
DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

NEW WALTZ.—DER LETZTE KUSS
(The Last Kiss). By OTTO MULLER. Performed at the Promenade Concerts, Covent-Garden Theatre. This charming Waltz, by the Composer of the celebrated "Geliebt und Verloren" (Loved and Lost) Waltz, may be had of all Music-sellers.
Solo or Duet, price 2s. net.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-st.

A BIRD SANG IN A HAWTHORN
TREE.—J. I. HATTON'S most successful New Song for Soprano. "Exceedingly original, quaint, and truly charming;
a song that will add to the composer's fame."—
Sent for 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 147, Oxford-street.

MUSICAL-BOX DÉPÔTS, 56, Cheapside, and 22, Ludgate-hill, London.—Nicole's celebrated Musical Boxes, playing best secular and sacred music. Prices, 4s. to £120.
Enufboxes from 18s. to 60s. Largest Stock in London. Catalogue gratis and post-free. Apply to WALKER & M'COLLOCH, as above.

CHUBB'S FIRE and THIEF RESISTING
SAFES, steel-plated, and with their Patent Diagonal Bolts, are the most secure. Chubb's Patent Latches and Locks for all purposes. Cash and Dead Boxes. Prices—List sent free.
CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, St. Paul's, E.C.; and 68, St. James's-street, S.W.

DEANE and CO.'S TABLE CUTLERY, celebrated for more than 150 years, remains unrivalled for quality and cheapness. The stock, extensive and complete, affords a choice suited to every purchaser.
Ivory Handles. s.d. s.d. s.d. s.d. s.d. s.d. s.d.
Table Knives, per dozen. 16 0 19 0 22 0 25 0 32 0 35 0 40 0
Desert, ditto. 14 0 16 0 19 0 21 0 27 0 30 0 34 0
Carvers, per pair. 6 0 6 6 7 0 8 0 9 0 10 0 13 0

DEANE'S FENDERS and FIREIRONS.
Deane and Co.'s Show-Rooms for the display of these goods contain a large, cheap, and choice variety of patterns.
Fenders, Drawing-room. £2 5 3 5 5 6 8 11 11 £15 0
Fenders, Dining-room. 1 5 1 12 2 2 4 10 8 10
Fenders, Bed-room. 0 10 0 15 1 1 1 10 2 5
Fireirons. 0 10 0 15 1 1 1 10 2 5
Bed-room Fenders, from 3s. to 18s. Fireirons, from 3s. to 12s.
Deane and Co.'s Catalogue, with Furnishing Estimates, post-free.
Deane and Co., 46, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

SPOONS and FORKS.—SLACK'S SILVER
ELECTRO-PLATE is a coating of Sterling Silver over Nickel. The fact of twenty years' test is ample proof of its durability. Table Spoons or Forks, 3s. and 3s. per dozen; Desert, 20s. and 30s.; Tea, 12s. and 18s. Catalogue gratis. Orders above
25 carriage free.—Richard and John Slack, 336, Strand, London.

NOTICE.—Manufacture of SPOONS and FORKS.—Messrs. ELKINGTON and CO. beg to announce that, having succeeded in carrying out several important improvements in the above manufacture, they are now enabled to offer their guaranteed quality at such prices as, while fully maintaining their high quality, place them within the reach of all classes. The Illustrated Price-List can be had on application.
Address.—ELKINGTON and CO.,
42, Moorgate-street, W., E.C.

LIVERPOOL.—25, Church-street,
MANCHESTER.—St. Ann's-square; or to the Manufactory,
NEW HALL-STREET, BIRMINGHAM.

MAPLE and CO.

FURNITURE.

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNITURE.

New ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing the Price of Every Article required, post-free.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.
100 Suites of various designs in stock, from 64s.
to 200s.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CARPETS.
British and Foreign, of every description. 500 Pieces best Brussels, old patterns, 3s. 6d. per yard.
MAPLE and CO., 147, Tottenham-court-road, London.

CRETONNE CHINTZ.
Just received from Mulhouse a Manufacturer's Stock of about 1000 Pieces, at prices varying from 10d. per yard
These goods are about half the price they were.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

SILK DAMASKS.
The largest and most varied assortment at old prices
Satins, Silks, Cotelines, Silk Ropes of all Colours, in Stock.
MAPLE and CO., 146, Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO.

CARPETS.

TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

JOHN MORTLOCK

begs to call attention to the
"EVERY-DAY" DINNER SERVICES,
complete for 12 Persons, 24 15s.
Colours are indestructible.
The Pottery Galleries, 235 and 240, Oxford-street;
30 and 31, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W.

NOTICE.
CLEARANCE SALE OF CHINA,
EARTHENWARE, and GLASS, commencing OCT. 8.

Messrs. DAVENPORT and CO. beg to inform their friends and the public generally that they intend disposing of the whole of their surplus Stock of China, Earthenware, and Glass, on their Premises, 82, Fleet-street, London, and 30, Cannon-place, Liverpool, at a reduction of 25 per cent discount off usual prices.
Commencing Oct. 8, 1877.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.—PLATE-GLASS
MANUFACTORY to be SOLD. ON FRIDAY, OCT. 19 next, at Half-past Ten a.m., there will be sold by Public Auction at AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, at the instance of the Justice of the Peace, the extensive
RHENISH PLATE-GLASS MANUFACTORY, situate at nine miles distant of Aix-la-Chapelle, in the districts of Herzogenrath and Merkscheid. This manufactory consists of several brick buildings with tiled roofs, and is lying in its own grounds of fourteen British acres. Its situation is very favourable, the chief materials, as sand, coals, sulphates, &c., being found at close proximity to the establishment, wherefrom the manufactured products are forwarded by rail to all countries.
For further particulars apply to M. Theodore Theisen, Avocat, Rue St. Jacques 17, Aix-la-Chapelle.

M.R. STREETER'S DIAMOND
ORNAMENTS.
LONDON—MADE JEWELLERY, of exquisite design and workmanship. The only Jeweller in England whose stock consists solely of 18-Carat Gold.

ENGLISH KEYLESS LEVER WATCHES,
with all the latest improvements.
Of MR. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street.

"GOLD." By EDWIN W. STREETER.
Second Edition will shortly be ready.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES
are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1852;
Paris, 1857. Silver Watches, from 24 4s.; Gold, from 26 6s. Price-List sent free.—68, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 75, Strand.

£10. BENNETT'S WATCHES.
In return for a 40 Note, free and safe post, one of BENNETT'S LADY'S GOLD WATCHES, perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship, with keyless action, air-tight damp-tight, and dust-tight.—66, Cheapside, London. Good Chains at manufacturers' prices. P.O. to John Bennett.
BENNETT, 65 and 66, Cheapside.

NATIONAL ART-TRAINING SCHOOL,
South Kensington.—PUBLIC ART CLASSES in connection with the Training School. THE NEXT SESSION will commence on OCT. 1. Separate classes open to the public on payment of 1s. are established for students of both sexes, the studies comprising Drawing, Painting, and Modelling as applied to Ornament, the Figure, Landscape, and Still Life.
Candidates for admission, who are not already registered as students of the school, must pass a preliminary examination in French and drawing of the second grade. Special admission examinations will be held at the school at 10.45 a.m. and 7.15 p.m.
on Oct. 2, and at frequent intervals during the Session.
Application for information as to fees, &c., and for admission, on and after Oct. 1, to the Registrar, at the School, Exhibition-road, South Kensington, S.W.
By order of the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education.

THE FEMALE SCHOOL OF ART.
Patron, the Queen. Session Commences MONDAY, OCT. 1
(Day and Evening Classes). Instruction in drawing, painting, modelling, from flat, round, nature, life. Competitions for scholarships and prizes.
Adm. 1s. Prospectus and Forms of Admission at 43, Queen'ssquare, Bloomsbury, W.C.
By order. LOUTISA GAWK, Superintendent.

THE GROSVENOR SCHOOL OF ART,
16, North Audley-street, W. Conducted by Miss E. Daby
Williams. Students prepared for the South Kensington and Royal Academy Examinations. Classes reopen in SEPTEMBER. Life
Model and Antique, &c.

PROFESSOR TENNANT'S LECTURES on MINERALOGY, applied to GEOLOGY and the ARTS, at KING'S COLLEGE, are given on WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY MORNINGS, from Nine to Ten, and on THURSDAY EVENINGS, from Eight to Nine. The public are admitted on paying the College fees. The Lectures begin early in OCTOBER and terminate at Easter.

COMMUNAL COLLEGE OF BOULOGNE-
SUR-MER. Under the direct supervision of the Municipal Council. Founded in 1859. It offers to Families the following advantages:—A literary and scientific education or a superior commercial education. The pupils are examined quarterly by Inspectors of the French University and prepared for the Ecoles Polytechniques, Normales, Saint Cyr, Navy, &c. Prospectus and particulars on application to M. BAIST, Head Master. Next Term begins Oct. 8.

THE SOCIETY OF ARTS' ONE
SHILLING MOIST-COLOUR BOX. Unadulterated pigments. Box in japanned tin.—Lechertier, Barber, and Co., 40, Regent-st., London; and local Artists' Colourmen and Stationers.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND
(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861).
Bankers to the New Zealand Government.
Paid-up Capital, £275,000. Reserve Fund, £75,000.

DIRECTORS.
J. LOGAN CAMPBELL, Esq., President.
George B. Owen, Esq. W. I. Taylor, Esq.
Alfred Cox, Esq., M.G.A. James Watt, Esq.
Samuel Browning, Esq. Hon. Jas. Williamson, M.L.C.

LONDON BOARD.
The Right Hon. Sir James Fer- Falconer Larkworthy, Esq.
guson, Bart., K.C.M.G. Robert Porter, Esq.
Archib. Hamilton, Esq. Thomas Russell, Esq., C.M.G.
A. J. Mundella, Esq., M.P.

Head Office.—Auckland.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia: Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle.
In Fiji: Levuka.

In New Zealand: Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Wellington, Napier, Nelson, New Plymouth, Invercargill, Picton, and at seventy-seven other towns and places throughout the Colony.

The Bank grants Drafts on all their Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.

The London Office RECEIVES DEPOSITS of £50 and upwards for fixed periods of two to five years, bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum. The rate for shorter periods can be ascertained on application at the Office of the Bank.

F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

HYÈRES.—The most Southerly Riviera
Station and only inland climate. Quarter of Castellar, near the sea, among pine woods. Good Hotels, Villas, &c.—
Address: ENGLISH BANK and AGENCY.

THE GRANVILLE, ST. LAWRENCE-
ON-SEA, near Ramsgate.—Baths, Theatre, Concerts,
Billiard-Room, Board, with attendance, in the Grand Gothic
Dining-Hall, 12s. per day.—Address: THE MANAGER.

COUNTY GALWAY.—RECESS HOTEL.
BALLINAHINCH FISHERY.—SHOOTING.
Visitors at this Hotel will have the privilege of Angling on all the Lakes connected with this Fishery free of charge, from Oct. 10 to the 31st inclusive. These Lakes are fully stocked with salmon and sea-trout, netting having been prohibited for two seasons. Gentlemen can also shoot during this time, free of charge, over a tract exceeding 70,000 acres, but grouse cannot be shot after Oct. 15. Sportsmen retain their rights. For winter Turf and Coal, netting apply to J. O'Leighlin, manager,
Recess Hotel, Galway.

ST. SAVIOUR'S CANCER HOSPITAL,
North-end, Fulham, West Kensington Station, S.W., for the Treatment of Cancer and External Tumours by the Michelson and other processes, WITHOUT THE KNIFE. Out-Patients seen Daily, from Ten to Twelve. Bankers—Cocks, Biddulph, and Co., 43, Charing-cross. Treasurer—Edward H. Palmer, Esq., 11, King's Arms-yard, E.C. FUNDS are URGENTLY NEEDED
Recess Hotel, Galway.

HOMOEOPATHIC HOSPITAL (SELECT) for LADIES, Bolton House, 192, Clapham-road, Surrey.
Established 1857. A Private Home, where Patients suffering from serious diseases, and requiring special supervision, can obtain the best Medical and Surgical Treatment without incurring anxiety in their own homes. Treatise of successful cases forwarded gratis. Physician, Dr. HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS,
48, Throgmoe-street, and 170, Piccadilly.
Consultations daily, Eleven till One (Tuesday and Friday excepted) at 15, Welbeck-street, London.

NATIONAL INSTITUTION for
DISEASES OF THE SKIN.
Gray's Inn-road, King's-cross, London, W.C. Established 1864.
Physician, Dr. Barr Meadows, 47, Victoria-street, S.W.
Free to the necessitous. Payment required from other applicants.

THROAT IRRITATION.
EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.
Sold only in Boxes, 6d. and 1s., labeled
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMISTS,
48, Throgmoe-street; and 170, Piccadilly.

LAXORA LOZENGES.—This Preparation will be found the most valuable remedy for Constipation, Stagnation of the Stomach, Bile, Headache, and especially useful for Children and Ladies.
The "Lancet," June 9, 1877, reports:—"We have no hesitation in recommending this preparation. It is a great improvement on the preparations in common use for the same purpose, and will be really valuable in families."
"Medical Press and Circular," April 11, 1877:—"The Laxora Lozenges can be safely recommended."
C. R. C. Tichborne, Ph.D.:—"The Laxora Lozenges are efficacious, and nicely made."
Each Box contains Eight Lozenges, and sold, 1s. 14d., by all Chemists and Druggists; Wholesale, 82, Southwark-street.

DR. LELIÈVRE'S ICELAND MOSS
POULTICE, superior to all (patented), is exempt from all the inconveniences inseparable from Poultices made with Linseed or Bread. These spoil the Linen, boding, &c., dry up on the edges, rapidly ferment, giving a most unpleasant odour; and no dependence can be placed on the quality and freshness of the liniment. This New Poultice is instantaneous, for it is ready in a few seconds.
Sold retail by all Chemists.
Wholesale, BIGGILL and CO., 82, Southwarkstreet, London.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and for all delicate constitutions, ladies, and children. Of all Chemists.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, cure all disorders of liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

A LADY having a simple RECIPE that at once safely removes SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, preventing their appearance, has pleasure in forwarding it upon application to Mrs. Grace Newton, Newwood Villa, Thornton Heath, Surrey.

LADIES' SEALSKIN HATS, 1000 Seal
Turban Hats, 4s. 11d., 5s. 6d., and 6s. 6d., post-free. 150 Ladies' Alpine ditto shape, 15s. 6d.
BAKER and CRISP, Regent-street.

BAKER and CRISP'S CHEAP SILKS,
Dress Fabrics, Costumes, Jackets, and General
Drapery, &c. Patterns, Engraving, or Price-List free.—Regent-street, London, and Eastbourne.

LADIES' DRESSES! SERGES! SERGES!
Patterns post-free. All the New Colours and Makes in Wool Serges, from 9d. per yard.
Patterns free.—198, Regent-street.

LADIES' DRESSES.
All the New Snow Flakes and other Fancy
Materials, from the lowest prices. Patterns free.

LADIES' DRESSES.
All the New Cachemeres, French Merinos, and other Soft Woollen Fabrics, from 1s. 6d. yard.
Patterns free.—BAKER and CRISP, 198,
Regent-street.

LADIES' DRESSES.—VELVETEENS!
Velveteens!—The Royal Silk Mole-skin Velveteen, in Black and all Colours, from 1s. 8d. to 3s. 6d. yard. Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street, London.

COSTUMES! Engravings free.
All the New and most Ladylike Costumes,
Jackets, Ulsters, and Cloaks. Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SILKS, SILKS, SILKS.
The Richest Black, Coloured, Figured, and
Japanese Silks, from 1s. 11d. to 4s. 6d. yard.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

HENRY GLAVE'S
NEW SILK PATTERNS are now ready.
The Princess Black Silk, at 7s. 9d. A new
The Princess Black Silk, at 4s. 6d. make of
The Princess Black Silk, at 5s. 6d. extreme
The Princess Black Silk, at 6s. 6d. Richness.

BLACK SILKS, 1s. 6d. to 10s. the yard.
The Queen's Black Silk, at 7s. 11d. Superb
The Queen's Black Silk, at 8s. 11d. 6s. 11d. and 8s. 11d.
The Queen's Black Silk, at 8s. 11d. 6s. 11d. and 8s. 11d.
The Queen's Black Silk, at 10s. 11d. wear.

A Special Parcel of Coloured Silks, 2s. 11d. a yard.
A Special Parcel of Coloured Silks, 3s. 11d., 4s. 11d., 5s. 11d., and 6s. 11d.
A Special Parcel of Coloured Silks, 7s. 11d., 8s. 11d., 9s. 11d., and 10s. 11d.
The Velvet and Velveteen Stock is now complete.
A Special Lot of Black Velveteens at 1s. 11d., and Colours at 2s. 10d.

534, 535, 536, and 537, New Oxford-street.

HENRY GLAVE'S
COSTUME EXHIBITION and Fair at the
ALEXANDRA PALACE,
Saturday, Sept. 29, to Saturday, Oct. 6.
Special Arrangements for Sale Counter at the Palace.
Purchasers of Five Pounds and upwards, Railway
Fare Paid within 20 miles.
Photographs of all Costumes Exhibited will be ready in a few days.
534, 535, 536, and 537, New Oxford-street.

G A S K and G A S K.
NEW VIGONA CLOTH, 2 1/2d. per yard, in New Autumn Shades; also, fine FRENCH CACHEMERES, 2s. 11d., double width; and the fashionable SNOWFLAKE CLOTH, 10d.; with a large collection of NEW DRESS FABRICS, from 10d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.

PATTERNS FREE.
Oxford-street and Wells-street.

NEW AUTUMN COSTUMES, made of the fashionable Foreign and English Fabrics from novel and elegant Paris Models, 2s. to 6s. 6d.
RICH BLACK SILK COSTUMES, exceptionally good, 4s. 6d.
BLACK CLOTH SKIRTS, 2s. 6d., with a vast variety of new Costumes of all kinds equally cheap.
GASK and GASK, Oxford-street and Wells-street.

G A S K and G A S K.
New Lyons Silks, Blacks and Colours, still cheaper. The best makes of BLACK SILKS, recommended for wear, and every shade of Colour, in all qualities, 3s. 3d. to 7s. 9d. per yard.
NEW FANCY SILKS. PATTERNS FREE.
68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, Oxford-street; 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, Wells-street, London.

"WEAR-RESISTING" (Regis.)

BOYS' SUITS.
SAMUEL BROTHERS.
Suit for a Boy 3 ft. 8 in. in height.
C Class, 27s.; D Class, 31s.
Prices varying according to height.
Patterns, &c., post-free.
SAMUEL BROTHERS, Sydenham House, 65 and 67, Ludgate-hill.

SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA.—"The most perfect fitting made."—Observer. Gentlemen desirous of purchasing Shirts of the best quality should try Ford's Eureka. 40s., 45s. half dozen.—41 and 44, Poultry.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath.
Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the World; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living
"animalcules," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delicious fragrance to the breath. Price 2s. 6d. per Bottle.
The foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherries. Prepared by HENRY C.
GALLUP, 489, Oxford-street, London. Bottled everywhere.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use
"The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore to every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. Ask any Chemist for the "Mexican Hair Renewer," price 3s. 6d.
Prepared by HENRY C. GALLUP, 489, Oxford-street, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S
AUROLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. It restores perfectly harmonious. Price 3s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. of all Perfumers. Wholesale, HOVENDE and SONS,
5, Great Marlborough-street, W.; and 93 and 95, City-road, E.C.
London; Pinaud and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris;
31, Graben, Vienna; 44, Rue des Longs Chariots, Brussels.

DOES YOUR HAIR TURN GREY?
Then use HERRING'S PATENT MAGNETIC BRUSHES and COMBS. Brushes, 10s. and 15s. each. Combs, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 10s. 15s., and 20s. each. Pamphlets upon application.—5, Great Marlborough-st., W.; 93 and 95, City-road; and of all Perfumers.

SPANISH FLY is the acting ingredient in ALEX. ROSS'S CANTHARIDES OIL, which speedily produces Whiskers and Thickens Hair, 3s. 6d.; sent in blank wrapper for 54 stamps.—Alex. Ross, 246, High Holborn, London.

JOHN GOSNELL and CO.'S CHERRY
TOOTH-PASTE gives a beautiful Set of Teeth, makes the Teeth of pearly-like whiteness, and protects the enamel from decay.—Of all Chemists and Perfumers, at 1s. 6d. per Pot.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET
PERFUME, fresh as morning-gathered flowers, 2s. 6d.,
5s., 10s., per Bottle. Breidenbach's MACASSARINE, invaluable for preserving the Growth of the Hair, 1s. 2s. 6d., 5s. per Bottle
Of all Chemists, and the Makers, 1079, New Bond-street, W.

TOOTH-ACHE.

INSTANT CURE.

FORMS A STOPPING,
SAVES THE TOOTH.
J. Hounsell, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, writes:—"I consider Hunter's Stopping a specific for Toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief."
Of Chemists 1s. 14d. per Packet.

STOCKS and SHARES, Telegraphs,
Tramways, Railways, Banks, and other leading Securities.
WILLIAM ABBOTT, 10, Tokenhouse-yard, London, E.C.

NATURAL MINERAL WATERS OF VICHY.

Property of the French Government.
CELESTINS.—The water of this spring is very agreeable, sparkling, and slightly acidulated. Remedy for Complaints of the Kidneys, Gravel, Gout, Diabetes, Rheumatism, &c.
HAUTERIVE.—This spring contains a greater quantity of carbonic acid, and is especially recommended as a table water.
GRANDE-GRILLE.—For Complaints of the Liver and Biliary Organs, Indigestion, &c.
HOPITAL.—For Stomach Complaints, &c.
VICHY WATERS are pleasant to the taste, and may be drunk pure or mixed with wine or spirits.
CAUTION.—See that the name of the particular water required is on the capsule.
Sold by all Chemists, Wine and Mineral Water Merchants,
Price One Shilling per Bottle.

ELLIS'S RUTHIN WATERS.

PURE AERATED WATERS.

ELLIS'S RUTHIN WATERS.—Crystal
Springs. Soda, Potash, Seltzer, Lemonade,
Lithia, and for Gout, Lithia and Potash.
Corks branded "R. ELLIS and SON,
RUTHIN," and every Label bears their Trade Mark. Sold everywhere, and wholesale of R. ELLIS and SON, Ruthin, North Wales. LONDON AGENTS: W. BEST and SONS, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square.

EPPS'S AND COMFORTING.
JAMES EPPS and CO.,
HOMOEOPATHIC
CHEMISTS.

AMERICAN CENTENNIAL
PRIZE MEDAL.
FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.
Its pure flavour, delicate aroma, and invigorating qualities have established its position as a first-class dietetic article.

FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.
"The Caracas Cocoa of such choice quality."—Food,
Water, and Air (Dr. Hassell).
"A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

FRY'S EXTRACT OF COCOA,
more wholesome than Cocoa, and is no nicer or more palatable preparation of Cocoa. Food, Water, and Air.
Edited by Dr. Hassell.
TENTH INTERNATIONAL MEDAL
awarded to J. S. FRY and SON.

TAYLOR BROTHERS'
MARAVILLA COCOA,
DELICIOUS AND INVIGORATING.

MARAVILLA COCOA.
"It may justly be called the perfection of prepared Cocoa."
British Medical Journal.

NEW MUSIC.

CHAPPELL and CO'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM OF HIRE.

PIANOFORTES of every description by all the most celebrated makers from Two Guineas a Quarter.

HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, from One Pound Five Shillings per Quarter.

SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES, at immense Reductions for Cash, or on the Three-Years' System.

CHAPPELL'S ENGLISH 20-GUINEA or SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, in Canadian Walnut or Mahogany. This instrument combines good quality of tone and excellent workmanship. Has a lovely touch, and is capable of enduring hard practice without going out of order. Owing to its size, it is admirably adapted for the boudoir or any room where space is an object. In Solid Oak or White Ash, 22 sq. ft. Rosewood or Walnut Case, 27 sq. ft.

MARCH OF THE PASHAS, for the Pianoforte. By JOHN PRIDHAM. Beautifully illustrated with Portraits of Mehmet Ali, Suleiman Pasha, and Hobart Pasha. Price, post-free, 2s. net. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW POLKA BY CH. D'ALBERT.
THE FANFARE POLKA. By CHARLES D'ALBERT. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. net; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NEW DANCE MUSIC.

SWEETHEARTS. Waltz on Arthur Sullivan's popular Song. "One of the best waltzes ever written by the Net. above favourite Composer." 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY LANCER. on Airs from Sullivan's popular Works. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY QUADRILLE. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY WALTZ. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY POLKA. 2s. net.
TRIAL BY JURY GALOP. 2s. net.
FLUR DE THE QUADRILLE. 2s. net.
PASQUINAGE VALSE & Trio Temp. 2s. net.
SULLIVAN'S POLKA (New Edition). 2s. net.
The above, arranged for Full Orchestra, 2s. net. Septet, 2s. net. N.B. A Complete List of M. D'Albert's Popular Dance Music will be sent on application to CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO'S LIST of NEW SONGS.

THE DISTANT SHORE (sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd) .. 2s. net.
THE BOWMAN TREE (sung by Madame A. Sterling) .. 2s. net.
THOU'RT PASSING HENCE, MY BROTHER (sung by Santley) .. 2s. net.
IF (sung by B. McGuckin) .. 2s. net.
THE CAPTIVE SKYLARK .. 2s. net.
THE SKYLARK FREE .. 2s. net.
BOONS AND FLOWERS .. 2s. net.
OH! FOR THY WINGS .. 2s. net.
THE EVERLASTING SHORE .. 2s. net.
SWEETHEARTS .. 2s. net.
CRADLE SONG .. 2s. net.
THE LAST LETTER .. 2s. net.
WHEN THOU ART NIGH .. 2s. net.
I'LL SING THESE SONGS OF ARABY .. 2s. net.
THE FATE OF A ROSE .. 2s. net.
MY LOVER ACROSS THE BLUE SEA .. 2s. net.
THE DAY MY LOVE WENT MAVING .. 2s. net.
NOT FAR AWAY .. 2s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TRIAL BY JURY. Dramatic Cantata. Written by W. S. Gilbert. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed with immense success at the Strand Theatre. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d. net. TRIAL BY JURY Pianoforte Solo. 2s. 6d. net. THE JUDGE'S SONG. 2s. net. THE LOVE-SICK BOY. Defendant's Song. 1s. 6d. net. RUE'S FANTASIA. 2s. net. SMALLWOOD'S FANTASIA (easy). 1s. 6d. net. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

L'ORGANISTE PRATIQUE. 240 Easy Pieces for Organ or Harmonium, by J. LEYBACH, in 2 vols., price 6s. each; net, or in eight parts, each 2s. net. The above will supply a want long felt by amateur performers on the organ or harmonium, as all the pieces are very pretty without being difficult. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC PUBLISHED BY JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

H. WEIST HILL'S Compositions, as performed at the Alexandra Palace.
True Love Valse. 2s. net.
Alma Valse. 2s. net.
Son Image Valse. 2s. net.
Carlotta March. 1s. 6d. net.
Madame de Pompadour Gavotte. 1s. 6d. net.
Osmant Grand March. Dedicated to the Heroes of Plevna. 2s. net.
Above net, free by post.
JOSEPH WILLIAMS, Berners-street and Cheapside.

SIR MICHAEL COSTA'S NAAMAN. Vocal Score, complete, Octavo Edition. 4s. net. All the numbers of "Naaman" can also be had separately, including the celebrated Air, "I Dreamt I was in Heaven." 3s.; and the Triumphant March, "Naaman as Piano Solo, 3s.; Piano Duet, 3s.; and also as Organ Solo, with Pedal, 3s.

SIR W. STERNDAL BENNETT'S WORKS for the PIANOFORTE, in two vols. Cheap Edition now ready, including the celebrated Toccata, Scherzo, op. 13; Capriccio, op. 27; Three Sketches, &c. Price 5s. net each vol.; or, bound, cloth, 8s. net.

FRANZ ABT'S NEWEST SONGS.
ONE LITTLE WORD. 3s. net.
"Destined to be one of the reigning favourites. This gifted composer has written nothing more beautiful since 'When the Swallows'."—Empire.
'TIS I, MY LOVE. 3s. net.
"The music is of Abt's best, the melody is full of variety and charm."—Illustrated News.
New Vocal Duets by same Composer:
THE FAIRY DELL. 3s. net.
FAIR JEANETTE. 3s. net.

CATALOGUES SENT POST-FREE. Sole Agents for Moore and Burgess Minstrel's Songs. Whipping Agents on favourable terms.

LONDON: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 24, Berners-street, W.; and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. Section—No. 1. Pianoforte Tutor. Forbath Brothers, London and Manchester.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S NEW EDITION OF POPULAR WORKS. For List of Pieces already published Catalogues will be forwarded, post-free, on application to FORBATH BROTHERS, 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and Cross-street, South King-street, Manchester.

BAISER DE PRINTEMPS. LAMOTHE'S loveliest and most popular Waltz, played with greatest success at all Court and Society engagements, and by all the Regiments of the Service and Volunteers. 2s. net. CUMINGHAM BOOSEY and Co., and all Musicellers.

A. S. GATTY'S BEST SONGS.
A DAISY SONG. 2s. each.
Sung by Madame Cave-Ashton. TRUE TILL DEATH. 2s. each.
Sung by Mr. Maybrick. CUMINGHAM BOOSEY and Co., and all Musicellers.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarinettes, Flageolates, Guitars, Banjos, Accordions, Flutinas, Cornets, Saxhorns, Drums, and Musical Instruments of every description. Largest assortment in the kingdom. BUTLER'S Manufacturing, 26, Harcourt-street, London. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free.

NEW MUSIC.

NOTICE.—THE FOLLOWING SONGS WILL BE SUNG throughout the Provinces during the months of October and November by the various Artists singing on the Autumnal Tour. Price 2s. each, net. BOOSEY and Co., 235, Regent-street.

THE OLD SAILOR WIFE. By MOLLOY. Sung by Madame Antoinette Sterling every night at Mr. Lloyd's Provincial Concerts.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

FAIR IS MY LOVE. By HATTON. Sung by Mr. Santley at all Mr. Pyatt's Concerts. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

WHEN THE HEART IS YOUNG. By DUDLEY BUCK. Sung by Mrs. Osgood every night on Mr. Pyatt's Tour. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

THE OLD-FASHIONED WAY. By Madame SAINTODOLLY. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd every night on his Tournee in October and November. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by HAMILTON AIDÉ.
Remember or Forget. The Fisher.
Spanish Boat Song. Maid I Love is Six Years Old.
Let me Dream of Happy Days. Brown Eyes, or Blue Eyes.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ALFRED SCOTT GATTY.
Rothsay Bay. One Morning, oh! so early.
Old Sweet Story. The Departure.
Hay in the Mow. Annet.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
The Lost Chord. Let me Dream Again.
Living Poems. Sleep, my Love, Sleep.
Golden Days. Looking Back.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by F. H. COWEN.
It was a Dream. Almost.
Spinning. Marguerite.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by DOLORES.
Destiny. The Fairies.
Clear and Cool. Sea-weed.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

SONGS by PINSUTI.
Still Waters Run Deep. As You Like It.
All the World's a Stage. Sea-weed.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. On the Celebrated Song. The Waltz of the Season.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. Price 2s. net. Solo and Duet; Orchestra, 1s. BOOSEY and Co., 235, Regent-street.

ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S ANTHEMS and SACRED PART-SONGS IN THE CHORALIST. Price One Penny each.

ANTHEMS.
216. Rejoice in the Lord. 222. Love not the world.
218. Sing, O Heavenly Hosts. 223. Come, ye children.
221. O that thou hadst heard. 224. I will arise.
SACRED PART-SONGS.
164. It came upon the mid-199. Watchman, what of the night?
197. Lead, kindly light. 200. The way is long and dreary.
198. Through sorrow's path. 215. A hymn of the home-land.
Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

THE SONG OF THE MONTHS. Cantata by FRANCIS HOWELL, Composer of "The Land of Promise." Containing twelve numbers, illustrating the months of the year. Price 2s. 6d. complete. Separate parts for the chorus, price 6d. each volume. The band parts may also be had. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

RUBINSTEIN'S FIFTY BEST SONGS. With German and English Words. Also, RUBINSTEIN'S EIGHTEEN VOCAL DUETS. With German and English Words. Price 2s. 6d., paper; 4s., cloth, gilt edges. RUBINSTEIN'S PIANOFORTE ALBUM. Contains his Eleven most celebrated Pieces. Price 1s. RUBINSTEIN'S SIX PIANOFORTE STUDIES. Price 1s. RUBINSTEIN'S SIX PIANOFORTE PRELUDES. Price 1s. Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street.

BOOSEY and CO'S BRASS INSTRUMENTS.

Dr. CALLOTT'S GRAMMAR OF MUSIC.
W. T. BEST'S FIRST ORGAN BOOK.
J. W. BELLOTT'S NEW PIANOFORTE TUTOR.
HENNING'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLIN.
CASE'S VIOLIN TUTOR.
BRINLEY RICHARDS' FIRST LESSONS FOR THE PIANO.
GEORGE MOUNT'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE TUTOR.
DR. SPARK'S HANDY-BOOK OF CHORAL SINGING.
BALFE'S BALLAD TUTOR.
VACCAR'S SINGING METHOD, without Solfege.
HATTON'S SINGING TUTOR FOR LADIES' VOICES.
HATTON'S SINGING TUTOR FOR MEN'S VOICES.
KAPPEY'S CLARINET TUTOR.
EDWARD HOWELL'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLON-CELLO.
R. S. PATTEN'S FLUTE TUTOR.
STANTON JONES'S CORNET TUTOR.
CASE'S ENGLISH CONCERTINA TUTOR.
Boosey and Co., 235, Regent-street, W.

SECONDHAND PIANOS.—BOOSEY and CO. have a large Stock of Instruments by all the great Makers, which they offer, according to their custom on the close of the season, at greatly reduced prices. The majority of these Pianos have been hired for one season only, and are as good as new.—Sole address, 235, Regent-street.

BOOSEY and CO'S BRASS INSTRUMENTS FOR AMATEURS.
THE DISTIN CORNET, from £3 10s.
THE DISTIN CELEBRATED LIGHT VALVE CORNETS, 7 and 9 sq., are the best Cornets manufactured.
THE DISTIN MINIATURE CORNET-A-PISTONS, 9 sq.
THE DISTIN BALLAD HORN, in E.
THE DISTIN DRAG AND POST HORN, and BAND INSTRUMENTS at all prices.
THE DISTIN MONTHLY BRASS BAND JOURNAL, 10s. 6d. per annum.
The above instruments were exhibited by Boosey and Co., at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and were awarded a Prize Medal "For power and good quality of tone, fine workmanship." Estimates for Bands of all sizes, also instruments and prices, to be had of the sole manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 235, Regent-street, London.

WOOD and CO'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Kuhs's Village Blacksmith. Weiss .. 4s.
Kuhs's Merman's Song. Haydn .. 4s.
Kuhs's My Mother bids me Und my hair. Haydn .. 4s.
Kuhs's Adelaide. Beethoven .. 4s.
Kuhs's Where the bee sucks. Arne .. 4s.
Kuhs's Rigoletto, Quatuor. Verdi .. 4s.
Kuhs's Caprice on air of Louis XIII. .. 4s.
GESTHOLEN KUSSE (STOLEN KISSES) WALTZ. By HANS WALDENFELDT. "A truly charming set of waltzes, for which we predict a successful run."—Bright and melodious, with a delicious freshness. Post-free, 2s.
Wood and Co., 3, Guilford-street, Russell-square; and all Musicellers.

OSMAN PASHA MARCH (Turkish War March). By ADOLPH MEYER. "A bold, stirring march, effectively arranged for piano." Free, 2s. Wood and Co., 3, Great Marlborough-street.

PAUER'S GAVOTTE-ALBUMS.—Twenty Celebrated Gavottes by Corelli, Couperin, Rameau, Bach, Handel, Martini, Gluck, &c. Red 8vo vol., 2s. AUGER and Co., 61, Newgate-street; and Foubert's-place.

PAUER'S MARCH-ALBUM.—Forty Celebrated Marches by Couperin, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Cherubini, Beethoven, Weber, Rossini, Schubert, &c. Red 8vo vol., 2s.—AUGER and Co., 61, Newgate-street; Foubert's-place.

AUGENER and CO'S UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING MUSICAL LIBRARY is the largest in Europe. It contains 10,000 distinct works. Annual Subscription, 2 guineas.—London: 61, Regent-street. Prospectuses gratis.

NEW MUSIC.

KING HENRY'S SONG. By ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Introduced in the revival of "Henry VIII." Just published. Price 1s. Half price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

THE FIRE KING. New Cantata. By WALTER AUSTIN. Produced at the Leeds Festival on Wednesday Evening, Sept. 19. Piano and Vocal score, price 6s.; post-free, 6s. stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

THE FIRE KING.—THE PAST IS BUT A TROUBLED DREAM. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd. Also, TO ARMS! TO ARMS! War Song. Price 4s. each. Half price.—METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

SEA NYMPHS. The New Operetta. By LEOCOCO (now being represented at the Folly Theatre). The Libretto (written by H. E. Farnie) and the Music complete, with all stage directions, published at 2s. 6d., post-free, in Metzler and Co.'s Edition of Comic Operas. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WHISPERING KISSES. The New Song. By E. JONAS (from the popular French play, "Bébé"). Is sung by Miss Violet Cameron in "The Creole" at the Folly Theatre with the greatest possible success, and is nightly encored. Post-free, 18 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MR. BARTON MCGUCKIN.
MINE OWN. A New Song. By H. GADSBY; Words by F. E. Weatherly. Price 4s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MADAME LIEBHART.
FAR FROM HOME. New Song. By G. B. ALLEN. Sung with the greatest success at Madame Liebhart's Concerts. Price 4s.; post-free, half-price. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

EDITH'S SONG. From Tennyson's "Harold." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

A WINTER'S TALE. From Tennyson's "Harold." "Two young lovers in wintry weather." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WAR SONGS OF THE EAST. By H. B. FARNIE. In handsome cover, price 1s.; post-free, 13 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA SERENADE. Waltz. By METRA. A most attractive and popular waltz. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA VAGUE. Waltz. By METRA. Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

W. SMALLWOOD'S NEW PIECES for PIANOFORTE. Illustrated Titlespages. CRYSTAL DEWDROPS. AVELETTE. Gondola Song. FAIRY DREAMS. Post-free, 18 stamps each. METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. Now ready. New Illustrated Book. Post-free. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 235. Nine Stops. Viola Dulce, Seraphone, &c. Price 28 gs. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS. New Style 312. Ten Stops. With Octave Coupler and Sub-Bass. Price 40 gs. METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SYDNEY SMITH'S PIANOFORTE METHOD. Price Five Shillings.

This unrivalled work is now firmly established as the Pianoforte Instruction-Book in nearly all the principal educational establishments in Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, the United States of America, India, Australia, New Zealand, &c. It is supplied direct by the Publishers, or may be had of any Music-seller in the world. London: ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FOUR NEW PIECES.
Figaro. Fantasia on Mozart's Opera .. 4s.
Cynthia. Serenade .. 4s.
Souvenir de Bal .. 4s.
Air Danais .. 4s.
London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

SIR WILLIAM STERNDAL BENNETT'S BARCAROLLE (from the Fourth Concerto).—This beautiful Composition is now published in the following forms:—Piano Solo .. 4s.
Piano Duet .. 4s.
Organ, arranged by Dr. Steggall .. 4s.
London: ASHDOWN and PARRY.

GAVOTTE, in E Minor. By SILAS. Played by Madame Esipoff at her Concerts in England and America with immense success. A new edition of this celebrated Gavotte is now ready. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square.

ASHDOWN and PARRY'S CATALOGUES of MUSIC.
PART 1. PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONIUM.
PART 2. VOCAL.
PART 3. HARP, CONCERTINA.
PART 4. VIOLIN, VIOLONCELLO, ORCHESTRA, &c.
PART 5. FLUTE, CORNET, CLARINET, &c.
Sent gratis and post-free to any part of the world. ASHDOWN and PARRY, Hanover-square, London.

SONGS OF UNRIVALLED MERIT.
When night is darkest dawn is nearest. E. Land.
The Scout. By Campans. Only to know. Plamington.
Ragged and Torn. Riniault. Peptia. Joseph P. Knight.
Post-free, 2s. each.—W. MORLEY, JUN., 70, Upper-street, N.

SONGS. Published This Day.
Ralph the Ranger. By Joseph P. Knight.
The Mill-Maid. By W. C. Levey.
The Little Flower-Girl. By W. C. Levey.
Post-free, 1s. 6d. each.—W. MORLEY, JUN., 70, Upper-street, N.

DRUMMER-BOY'S POLKA. By ARDITI. Great success. Re-demanded nightly with acclamation. "The Drummer-Boy's Polka" by the same composer, introducing the drummers of the Coldstreams, was likewise unusually re-demanded."—Daily Telegraph. Price 3s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

TE TORTORELLE VALSE. By ARDITI. Also encored nightly. "A delightfully flowing and melodious valse, from the pen of Signor Arditi. 'Le Tortorelle' is a lovely melody."—Daily Telegraph. Price 4s. A. HAMMOND and Co., 5, Vigo-street, W.

PIANOS for HIRE, 10s. per Month. Seven octaves. No hire charged if purchased at any time within 12 months. THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, London, W.

PIANOS, 17s. 6d. per Month, on the Three-Years' System. Becomes the property of the hirer if the payments are kept up. Illustrated Catalogues, post-free, on application.—THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street.

PIANO, £14. Seven-Octave PICCOLO PIANOFORTE. Second-hand, in good condition, for ready money.—May be seen at 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS and CO'S MUSICAL BOX. Caprice for the Pianoforte. By J. LIEBICH (the first he composed), and performed by him at the Queen's Concert Rooms, Hanover-square, and twice encored. Free by post for 24 stamps. London: New Burlington-street.

POPULAR SONGS, VOCAL DUETS, TRIOS, and QUARTETS (Part Songs) selected from Messrs. Robert Cocks and Co.'s Catalogue. This list may be had gratis and post-free on application to 6, New Burlington-street, London.

MAY DAY (Air, Muller) arranged for the Pianoforte by WILLIAM SMALLWOOD. 2s.; post-free, 18 stamps. Also, by the same Composer, "Home Treasures," 25 Numbers, 2s. 6d. each; 12 of the Same, as easy Piano Duets, 2s. each; and his "Little Buds," 25 popular Melodies for beginners, 1s. each, all post-free at half price. London: Robert Cocks and Co.

I DREAMT THAT I DWELT IN MARBLE HALLS (beautiful melody by Balfe). Arranged for the Pianoforte by E. WOODWARD. 2s.; post-free, 18 stamps. London: Robert Cocks and Co.

MY LADDIE FAR AWAY and WHEN THE SHIP COMES HOME. Two excellent Songs. By Miss M. LINDSAY. Post-free for 24 stamps each. London: Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street.

DON'T FORGET ME. A New and very sweet Song. By CIRO PINSUTI. Haunts the memory. Composed, C to D. Also, by the same Composer, IN SHADOW LANDS. The same, arranged for Piano Solo by Brinley Richards. All post-free for 18 stamps each. London: Robert Cocks and Co.

WHAT SHALL I SING TO THEE. For Soprano or Tenor. The favourite song of the day. Words by Rea; Music by CIRO PINSUTI. 2s.; post-free at half price. London: Sole Publishers, ROBERT COCKS and Co.

THE CITY BELLS. New Vocal Duet. By FRANZ ABT. For Soprano and Contralto. Poetry by C. J. Rowe. 4s.; post-free, 24 stamps. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

SUMMER RAIN. New Vocal Duet. For Soprano and Contralto. By FRANZ ABT. Poetry by C. J. Rowe. 4s.; post-free, 24 stamps. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Order everywhere.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS' IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS. "The best and most substantial instrument produced." 9, CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET, W.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25s. upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, No. 33, Great Tully-street, Golden-square, W. Manufacturing, No. 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

E. DENT and CO., 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange, London, Manufacturers of CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, CLOCKS, &c. (Catalogues free). To her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and Foreign Sovereigns. Makers of the Great Westminster Clock and of the New Standard Clock of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

MAPPIN and WEBB, MANUFACTURERS. Mansion House-buildings, City, London. The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

MAPPIN and WEBB'S SPOONS and FORKS.
Electro-Silver Plate on Nickel. Fiddle or Plain. Best Qual.
12 Tablespoons or Forks, per doz. £1 10 0 £2 0 0
12 Dessert-Spoons .. 1 4 0 1 12 0
12 Teaspoons .. 0 12 0 0 16 0
Salt, Mustard, or Egg Spoons .. 0 5 0 0 8 0
1 Pair Sugar Tongs .. 0 2 6 0 3 6

MAPPIN and WEBB, MANUFACTURERS. 76, 77, and 78, Oxford-street, West-End, London. The Highest Quality at Lowest Prices.

REVOLVERS, PISTOLS.—COLTS' Government Army Revolver, Colts' Deringer Revolver for travellers and house protection, Colts' Deringer for the vest pocket. Price-List free. Colts' Fire-Arms Company, 14, Pall-mall, London.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL. (KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR. KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM) Proved by twenty-five years' medical experience to be THE PUREST. THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST EASILY DIGESTED. THE MOST RAPIDLY EFFICACIOUS.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL. THE ONLY KIND which produces the full curative effects in CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, AND WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.
DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL, Physician Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor. "I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL produces greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL is now the only Cod-Liver Oil used in the Royal National Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest."

LENNOX BROWNE, Esq., F.R.C.S.E., Senior Surgeon Central London Throat and Ear Hospital. "The action of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil has proved, in my own experience, particularly valuable, not only in those diseases for which it was originally employed, but also in many cases of weakness of the Singing and Speaking Voice, dependent on Bronchial or Laryngeal Irritation, and in all forms of Strumous Enlargement of Glands, and Discharges from the Ear."

DR. GILL, Consulting Physician Royal Asylum of St. Anne's Society. "Professor Trousdale remarks:—'Cod-Liver Oil constitutes at the same time a food and an agent of stimulation, perfectly suited to the organism when it is more or less deteriorated.' Before I noticed these observations by a eminent authority as Trousdale, I had been led to a similar belief by a considerable number of cases in which I had had an opportunity of watching the good effects of DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL."

DR. SAUNDERS, C.B., late Deputy-Inspector-General Army Hospitals, Superintendent London Medical Mission. "I have used Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil extensively among the sick poor of St. Giles', and consider it a valuable remedy, especially in the wasting diseases of children."

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL</

THE WAR: EFFECT OF MODERN BRECHLOADERS—"TURKISH LOSS, 800 IN ABOUT TEN MINUTES."
A SKETCH IN THE SHIPRA PASS, BY CAPTAIN GAMBER, R.N., A CORRESPONDENT OF THE "TIMES."

Our Illustrations of the desperate struggle that has been going on since the 20th ult. in the Shipka Pass are supplied by the sketches of Captain James Gambier, R.N., the "Naval Correspondent" of the Times with the army of Suleiman Pasha, from whose letters of the 24th and 28th ult., and of the 1st inst., here reprinted, our readers will obtain a clear idea of the Russian positions, and of the Turkish attacks upon them, as shown in our Extra Supplement Large Engraving, and in that which appears on our front page:—

“ In order to understand the plan of the battle which has now been raging almost incessantly for four days in the Shipka Pass, it is necessary to have an idea of the topography of the hills and the situation of the point or points of attack. Standing in the plain on the Thracian side, in the Valley of the Tundja, and looking towards the Shipka Pass, a dividing range of varying height is seen running parallel to the valley, about east and west. From this range descend into the plain spurs, which radiate, as it were, from the summit of the Pass, and form between them deep valleys of from 2000 ft. or 3000 ft. to 4000 ft. in depth, which in some places are thickly wooded, and in others are inaccessible from rocks and precipices. These spurs, however, do not unite at any one point on the main dividing range, but are separated from the spur which carries the high road across the Balkans by extremely steep valleys of 400 ft. or 500 ft. in depth.

"It is with three of these spurs that we are concerned, and the central one at the summit of the Pass is the Russian position. The approach to this position from this side is perfectly easy, as far as the road itself is concerned; for, after making one or two curves on the side of the spur, it is carried almost in a straight line north and south across the range and down into Bulgaria. But this spur is, towards the head of the Pass, broken at its crest by five low hills from 200 ft. to 300 ft. high. The first of these, on approaching from the Tundja side, stands prominently forward like a great buttress of rock, and completely commands the road, while in itself it is inaccessible except from the northern and, consequently, Russian side of the Pass. The summit of this rock has been converted into a very strong fortress, not only by artillery, which is completely sheltered, but by rifle-pits and earthworks, constructed in a continuous chain diagonally from the summit to the road. The second elevation has a series of rifle-pits, which approach the road to within a few yards, and enfilade the sides of the spur above and below the road. On the third, a small rise, are placed three guns in an earthwork, which command both sides of the valleys on the east and on the west of the position. The fourth elevation is the crowning point, a strong earthwork, with six large Krupp guns, whose diameter of bore, I think, from fragments of shell which fell near, and which I picked up, must be about 4 in. to 5 in. These six guns command the entire situation, and can fire on nearly all points of the compass as far as I could see. It also is defended by a line of intrenchments and rifle-pits at the base of the mound, and the approach to it on the western side is enfiladed by the guns on the first position, the rocky buttress, which can be traversed with that object, if required. The fifth position has a few guns in earthworks, intrenchments, and rifle-pits, and is mainly of use in preventing the Turks from entirely surrounding the Russian positions by crossing over the range through some of the high steep valleys and coming up the road. The centre spur is thus seen to have five distinct positions, which will require to be carried either simultaneously or held successively with great peril, as each separate position is commanded by the one behind it. The approach by the main road is rendered absolutely impossible, as the artillery fire is directed down it like the blast of a funnel. The sides of these places are so steep that the men have to crawl on hands and knees and cling to the brushwood to ascend, and wherever the ground affords a landing-place there they are subjected to the fire of artillery, mitrailleuses, and rifle-pits. Now, still looking up from the plain, we must briefly describe the right and left spurs, which are the positions of the attack. The spur to the right, or east, runs in steep, rocky, and occasionally scrubby declivities to a high peak nearly 5000 ft. above the sea level, and from this a magnificent panorama of both sides of the Balkans is obtained by turning the head. It completely commands the Russian position, and if the Turks had heavy guns, or, having them, found it possible to get them into position at this point, the Russians would be compelled to evacuate the Shipka Pass in two hours without costing the Turks more than a few men, instead of having already stood an incessant attack of four days, which must have destroyed at least 4000 Turks, killed and wounded, and is as far from being finished as it was when it began. But, unfortunately for the Turks, the guns they have succeeded in getting up into this position are not of sufficient range to reach the centre position of the Pass, and the utmost they can effect is to shell the rifle-pits at the second position, while they themselves are within easy range of the heavier Russian guns. A continuation of this spur, about 1000 yards further to the north, has also been occupied by the Turks, and on it are placed five mountain guns.

"To retain these positions is very arduous work, as everything has to be carried up from the valley with great labour—provisions, ammunition, and water—and when there, the sides of the hills are so steep that anything set rolling would soon be several thousand feet below, so that the ammunition waggons and limbers are moored with hawsers to stumps of trees or round projecting rocks. The heat, even at this elevation, is excessive, and hardly a breath of air serves to clear away the smoke. The incessant firing of the guns, the whizz of the Russian shells, passing two or three feet overhead or bursting on the parapet, the dearth of water, and the scorching sun make the Peak battery anything but a pleasant place. The spur on the left is almost as difficult of access, but is far more sheltered from the sun, being covered with fine forests. To a point on this line of hill the Turks have dragged, by sheer force of men and horses, two field guns, which are brought into play on the right rear of the Russian position. The assaulting columns on that side arrive within a few yards of the Russian earthworks, sheltered by their own guns.

"I have thus attempted to give some idea of the plan of this very remarkable battle; but, like all battles that have been fought among mountains, it conveys but a confused idea to the mind without the aid of a ground plan; and even with one, from the variety of positions that both attack and defence assume, and from the constant changes and intermingling of the contending parties, any use of the ordinary words that describe such scenes, such as flank, rear, front, or anything of the kind, ceases to be appropriate. It must, therefore, be understood in a broad sense that the plan of attack as conducted by Suleiman Pasha is as follows, and that the history of one day may be considered as almost identical with any of the other four, except that on the second day the Turks spent more time in strengthening by intrenchments the ground already gained than in actual assault.

"I have said that the three spurs which face us from the plain as we look towards the Pass may be considered as those concerning us in studying this battle. The centre is the Russian position, the right and left are the Turkish attack. On the right we see the Turks have succeeded in erecting two batteries, with a whole battery of field guns and two mountain guns in the one, and with a battery of mountain guns in the other. In the valley lying between this right spur and the Russian position, and on the slopes of the Russian spur, are upwards of twenty battalions of Turkish troops, some intrenched half way up the Russian side, others in the woods and near the summit, not more than 150 yards from the Russian rifle-pits. The guns from the Turkish batteries on the right spur play continually on these rifle-pits and on the earthworks on the Russian spur, firing over the heads of their own men in the valley. The men in the valley for four whole days, with immense loss, have made assault after assault on the whole left line of the Russians, and have been continually driven back by the fire of the centre Russian battery, which, as I said before, enfilades these hill-sides, or unable to effect a lodgment on the short piece of ground in front of the rifle-pits. At night the Turks intrench themselves, and dawn sees the bloody work begin again.

"The left spur is not of so much importance to the Turks, as regards artillery, as the spur on the right. Here at present they have only two guns in position, and in watching with my glass from the Peak battery I cannot discover that they do much good beyond diverting the fire of one or two of the Russian guns. But for the infantry attacks it is most important, as the approach to the rear of the rocky buttress is more easily made from this side. On this side, too, continued assaults have been made by the Turks, and I fear the loss in killed and wounded must have been extremely heavy in that valley. As from the Peak battery a bird's-eye view of the battle can be obtained, I have spent most of the last four days at that point, and have watched with admiration the courage and persistence with which the Turkish troops advance to the attack. Not once nor twice, but eight or ten times a day do they scale those steep wooded hills under a murderous fire, only to be hurled back when actually within a few yards of the summit. The fire of the Turkish artillery is extremely good—indeed, I may say I never saw better. After a few shots, they obtained the exact range of the rifle-pits at the second hill, and from these finally the Russian troops retreated in the utmost haste. At that moment the fate of the day, or days, and perhaps of Turkey, hung in the balance. The advance was sounded, and the assault should instantly have been made. There was the greatest enthusiasm and the wildest cheering at our position. The gunners worked like demons, and the hail of shell must have fallen with murderous effect on the flying Russians; but, for some perfectly unassignable cause, the Turkish troops in the valley did not respond. They had fallen back about half an hour before, and seemed temporarily dispirited. The moment of victory passed away, and in a short time we saw a Russian officer waving his arms and cheering back his men into the rifle-pits. It was a most exciting moment. After so much toil, so much blood, the Turks actually were masters of the day, but let the moment slip by. As night came on I turned to ride down the hill, passing in the steep paths with great difficulty the long line of wounded, some gasping out their last breath in an impromptu stretcher borne by four soldiers, some propped up on mules or horses, and others staggering along on foot, and I could not help shuddering to think how many more of their comrades would pass along that same road in the same pitiable position next day, because victory had been denied them when almost in their grasp.

“ For a short time on the morning of the third day of the attack it also seemed likely that the Turks would carry all the positions. The artillery on both sides of the Russian position had opened a very heavy fire, and the troops advanced with astonishing enthusiasm. Nothing could have been more gallant than the way in which, regardless of shot and shell, with their comrades falling by twenties and thirties at their side, they forced themselves up to within a few yards of the Russian intrenchments. Watching with a glass, it seemed absolutely certain that they would rush on the works and carry them by assault; but then the same thing occurred which I have in the last four days witnessed six or seven times. They suddenly fell back again, either from want of some one officer to lead them or from unlooked-for failure of courage at the last moment. It was strange, too, to watch the effect on the Russians of these rushes on the intrenchments. On one occasion a body of at least 1500 men fled precipitately, and only a few remained, keeping up a steady fire on the advancing Turks. Then, as the Turks recoiled, back they came again, and the fire would extend along the whole line.

“The number of Turkish troops on the first day of the attack was seven battalions only, an absurdly inadequate number, and quite proof sufficient that Suleman Pasha had very much underrated, not only the strength of the position, but the resistance that the Russians would offer. On the second and third day, as each evening brought in the tremendous lists of killed and wounded, and he found himself not one whit nearer his goal, he strengthened the attacking parties. Yesterday, there were twenty battalions in the front attack, six on the left, and eight on the right, besides a whole battery of field guns and, I think, eleven mountain guns on the right, with two or three field guns and two mountain guns on the left. It is difficult to give the exact number of troops; as a rough average, I take 600 men to a battalion when the fighting began last Tuesday. That would give about 21,000 infantry, besides the artillery and mountain guns. There are also great numbers of Bashi-Bazouks and Circassians prowling about the hills and in the rear of the army; but for what object, except to strip the dead, I have failed to discover. It is true their occupation in the valley is gone, for there is not a village in sight that is not a blackened ruin, and probably not an old man or woman left alive. I suggested the other day that while the precious blood of the regulars is flowing like water upon the hillsides, some of these worthless ruffians might be set to work to make trenches or to carry away the wounded. But it appears they are not engaged for this kind of work, and cannot be persuaded to do anything so unprofitable. The real cause of their presence in the hills is that they may not be far off when the Pass is cleared for them to descend on Gabrova, the tall minarets and shining roofs of which sparkle temptingly in the Bulgarian plain, suggesting unlimited loot, blood, fire, and lust.

“The Russian force must be very considerable, probably not less than 10,000 to 15,000 regulars, and a reinforcement of four battalions was seen to march up from Gabrova yesterday evening. On the left of the Turkish attack late in the evening the Turks succeeded in retaining hold of a very important piece of ground on a small outlying mamelon, on which they threw up intrenchments, and still have possession of it. Two guns have just gone up to be placed there, and from their fire, which will take the rock battery of the Russians in the rear, great things may be expected. It was near this spot that late yesterday evening the Turks were once actually in the Russian intrenchments on the lower slopes of the rock battery; and, so precipitate was the flight of the Russians, that they left 200 rifles behind them, which were captured. But the Turks were compelled to abandon these trenches from the enfilading fire of the centre battery. The Russians are making a very determined stand, and, with attacks coming from so many points, must find their whole force fully occupied. Through the night they succeeded in repairing all the damage done to their trenches and rifle-pits during the day.

"Throughout the day of Aug. 26 there was very little fighting in the Shipka Pass, but towards evening, after the moon had risen, the Russians made another, though far more feeble, attempt than that of Saturday night to dislodge the Turks from their positions on the Russian right. The fruitlessness of this second attack should have been apparent before the Russians sallied forth from their fortresses to make it, for it was not probable that even Turks would have allowed the whole day to slip by without strengthening their position. During all day yesterday there was an entire cessation of hostilities, and both sides were busy all day burying their dead. I am informed that 1200 dead Russians were counted on the hillside where the severest struggle occurred. I visited the spot yesterday, and from the extraordinary way in which the trees and bushes are cut to pieces by bullets, the only wonder is that any man could have come out alive from such a terrific fire. The surface of the ground was broken by hundreds of small mounds where the dead were buried; and so insufficiently had this been performed, that here and there a hand or a knee protruding above the earth-heaps gave a ghastly aspect to the gloomy woods. There was not a single Russian prisoner made nor Russian wounded man brought into the Turkish lines. There is no quarter given by either side.

"The Turks have now converted their positions on the hills flanking the Russian position into almost impregnable fortresses, and it is difficult to understand why the Russians ever permitted these places to fall into the hands of the enemy. Had the Turks any of the modern appliances of war, such as field telegraphy, systematic signalling, or electric lights for night work, the Russians could not have retained their positions for twenty-four hours. Being without these, however, the siege of this place may be indefinitely protracted, and for the following reasons:—In the first place, no simultaneous attack is possible without some less cumbrous method of transmitting orders than that alluded to in a former letter, where an orderly took six hours to find the Commander-in-Chief; secondly, for want of lime or electric light, the broad high-road, lying only 1500 yards from the Turkish guns, which leads to Gabrova is a perfectly safe line of communication all through the night, and the Russian reinforcements, provisions, and ammunition pass unmolested. I was very much surprised to see such admirable workmanship in the Turkish lines. Already deep trenches had been blasted out of solid rock, and the most perfect earthworks, neatly covered with turf sods, rose behind. The prevailing idea with the Turkish engineer seems to be to have an infinity of traverses. Once inside these fortifications it would be almost impossible to be shot from any point, and the bursting of a shell must be confined to a very small space. Beyond this fortress the ridge of the hill extending towards the Russian position has been defended by a succession of stout stockades, placed diagonally and enfiling each other. The largest trees have been cut down, and stout stakes driven into the earth, with interlacing branches of beech, and earth filled in on the top. The most advanced of these stockades is within 1200 yards of the Russian centre fortress, and as they push forward yard by yard the Turks construct an excellent shelter with bread-bags filled with earth, the spaces between the bags allowing sufficient room for the fire of musketry. The advanced posts are so near each other that the sentries indulge in mild banter, kept up through the Bulgarians as interpreters. It is occasionally diversified by some one on either side taking a friendly shot at any head he can see.

“As day by day passes in enforced inactivity on the part of the Turkish army besieging the Shipka Pass, the reckless waste of life of the first four days’ constant assaults on such a position becomes more evident. Another week’s contemplation of the grim grey rampart of rock which commands the Pass on this side, and from which the Russian guns peer ominously over road and valley, the crest of the almost inaccessible hills lying in a line of enfilade, and crowned with strong earthworks, with trenches and rifle-pits before them, and artillery behind, forces home the conviction, of which there was never much doubt, that 6000 of Turkey’s best soldiers have been sacrificed foolishly, if not wantonly. When forty battalions lie day and night for a week before a position too strong to be attacked, and we note the foolhardiness of the first four days’ fighting, when, on one occasion, seven battalions, and on another fifteen, and subsequently thirty-two, were hurled in sheer obstinacy against this position, it certainly becomes fair to ask why we should still be expected to accept Suleiman Pasha as a great General. Days have been spent in dawdling without one possible pretext, to end in an ill-planned, reckless attack on an impossible position, at an enormous cost of life to an army and to a country where the life of every soldier is of the very highest importance.”

The map illustrates the military progress of the Montenegrin army in 1912. Key locations marked include Mostar, Plova, Vlasovo, Sienitzza, and various other towns. The Montenegrin lines of advance are shown as dashed lines, and Turkish positions are indicated by solid lines. A scale bar at the bottom shows distances in miles.

Our small sketch-map exhibits the recent operations of the Montenegrin forces. Nicksich capitulated on the 9th inst.:

Bilek, and one of the forts in the Duga Pass, did so on the 16th; and, four days later, the remaining Turkish forts fell into the hands of the Montenegrins. Four separate bodies of these warriors are at present engaged beyond the frontiers of their country. The main force is marching through the Duga Pass upon Gachko (Gatzko) or Metokia, and upon Nevesinye and Mostar, in the Herzegovina, all these places being occupied by Turkish troops. A second corps is operating from Bilek, northwards, and will probably endeavour to effect a junction with the first corps. The third corps of Montenegrins, commanded by Socica, is operating against Hadz Pasha, who was defeated on the 16th inst. at Kopechitza, and driven across the Tara, either in the direction of Plevlje or Kolashin. Out of a total force of 10,000 men, the Turkish General is said to have lost one tenth. Lastly, there is a Montenegrin force, under Marko Milanof, in the south. That leader occupied the district of Gruda on Sept. 20, and an engagement with Riza Pasha was imminent.

MUSIC.

THE LEEDS TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

As recorded last week, this great music meeting opened in the Townhall on the Wednesday morning with a performance of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." The distribution of the principal solo music was similar to that of previous occasions, a special feature having been the exquisite singing of Mdlle. Albani in the soprano music of the second part, as at the recent Gloucester Festival. The other principal singers were Mesdames Edith Wynne and Patey, Mrs. Mudie-Bolingbroke, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Santley. In the oratorio, as in subsequent instances during the festival, the chorus-singing was especially fine.

The first part of Wednesday evening's concert was devoted to a performance of a dramatic cantata, entitled "The Fire King," composed by Mr. Walter Austin. The subject of the book is founded on Sir Walter Scott's ballad, and the text has been supplied by Miss Maud Hargreaves. The work opens with an overture, and the vocal portion of the cantata consists of a series of choruses and pieces for solo voices, mostly written in a smooth and agreeable style, but not presenting any points of originality or marked individuality. The characters in the supposed action were represented by Mrs. Osgood (Rosalie), Madame Patey (Zulema), Mr. Lloyd (Count Albert), and Signor Foli (the Fire King). Several of the pieces were applauded; among others, Rosalie's air, "Away, away to my love;" Zulema's solo, "Tis worth a thousand years to live;" the opening chorus of villagers, "Brightly smiles the happy morn;" and the other choruses, "Take the sword," and "Help, help! the day is lost." The cantata was conducted by Mr. T. Wingham, of the Royal Academy of Music, and the composer of the work was called forward at the close of its performance.

The second part of Wednesday's concert opened with Wagner's overture to "Tannhäuser," and closed with that by Nicolai to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," the intermediate portion having consisted of a miscellaneous vocal selection.

The earlier portions of Thursday morning's performances were miscellaneous—the first part having begun with the overture to "Der Freischütz," and finished with Beethoven's eighth symphony (in F), in both of which the admirable qualities of the band were specially manifested. Vocal solos were contributed by several of the principal singers, and Dr. Spark played a solo of his own composition on the great organ, which is so conspicuous a feature in the Townhall. The second part opened with Auber's overture to "Fra Diavolo," which was followed by three vocal pieces, one having been Handel's air, "Angels ever bright and fair," finely sung by Mdlle. Albani.

Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night" music formed the climax to the Thursday morning's programme. The romantic grandeur of the composition was worthily realised in its orchestral, choral, and solo details—the latter by Mdlle. Redeker, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Santley. The chorus-singing was again remarkable for its excellence—the movements "Disperse, disperse," and "Come with torches" having produced a marked impression.

On Thursday evening Handel's "Solomon" was given, the effects of the orchestral score being powerfully augmented by the additional accompaniments of Sir Michael Costa. Here, again, were opportunities for the display of the fine singing of the Yorkshire choristers, some of the choruses (double and single) in "Solomon" being comparable in beauty or grandeur with those of any other oratorio of Handel. Admirably sung as they were at Leeds, they produced a very great effect. The "Nightingale chorus" had to be repeated. That the pieces for solo voices were adequately rendered is sufficiently indicated by the names of the singers—Mesdames Edith Wynne and Patey, Mrs. Osgood, Mr. W. Shakespeare, and Signor Foli.

Yesterday (Friday) week brought forward the specialty of the festival—the new oratorio "Joseph," composed expressly for the occasion by Professor G. A. Macfarren. The earlier successes of this gentleman were made by his several English operas, and it was not until recently that he displayed capacities for the production of sacred music in the highest form—that of the oratorio—first by his "Saint John the Baptist," and recently by "The Resurrection," produced at last year's Birmingham Festival.

The text of "Joseph" has been selected from the Holy Scriptures by Dr. Monk, organist of York Cathedral. The supposed characters are—Jacob (bass), Reuben (tenor), Joseph (baritone), Benjamin (soprano), the nine brethren (semi-chorus), and Pharaoh (tenor), with impersonalities for soprano, contralto, and choristers.

The work consists of two parts, the scene of the first being laid in Canaan, that of the second in Egypt. In the former the leading incidents illustrated are: The peacefulness of pastoral life—disturbed by the jealousy of Joseph's brethren—their conspiracy to destroy him—his life spared by Reuben—approach of the Ishmaelites—they purchase Joseph from his brethren—his farewell to his country—the false report of his death brought to Jacob—the grief of Jacob, and the attempts of his sons and daughters to comfort him. The second part deals with:—The pomp of Pharaoh's court—he relates his dreams—the failure of the wise men to interpret them—Joseph is brought from prison, expounds them, and is installed as Governor with great splendour—description of the years of plenty and of famine—first interview between Joseph and his brethren—he requires them to produce Benjamin—they return to Canaan, and Reuben persuades Jacob to allow Benjamin to accompany them—second interview between Joseph and his brethren in the presence of the house of Pharaoh, when he makes himself known to them—arrival of Jacob and all his family—retrospective sketch of the story from Psalm cv.

"Joseph" consists of thirty-five pieces for solo voices and chorus, preceded by an overture. In this prelude some of the leading themes of the oratorio are skilfully introduced, serving to foreshadow the musical interest, and to give an effect of completeness to the whole work. As in the Professor's other oratorios, the choruses are the portions in which, generally, he has been most successful. Of these we may specify the chorus of shepherds, "O, praise God!" "Honour thy father and thy mother," "A voice was heard in Ramah," and "O Lord, have mercy upon us!"

The solo music derived every possible advantage from its interpretation by Mdlle. Albani, Mesdames Edith Wynne and Patey, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Santley, and Signor Foli. Among the special features in this respect were the duet (with chorus), "Commit thy way unto the Lord," sung by Mdlle. Albani and Madame Patey; the soprano song, "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of the world," and the solo, "I will open my mouth," both sung by Mdlle. Albani; the song, "Let us not kill him," rendered by Mr. Lloyd; and the duet, "Joseph, I love thee," by Mr. Santley and Signor Foli. Some of the dialogues by which the pieces are linked together are very impressive, and a beautiful sestet, "Forgive, if ye have aught against any," must be specified as one of the successful numbers.

The oratorio was conducted by the composer's brother, Mr. Walter Macfarren, conductor of the Royal Academy of Music. The applause was great throughout, three pieces having been encored (the duet, "Commit thy way;" the chorus, "See, Pharaoh;" and the sestet), and at the close the composer was called forward.

Of the characteristics and merits of "Joseph" we shall have further opportunity of speaking, before long, in reference to its performance in London.

The miscellaneous concert of the Friday evening was rich in interest and variety, both in its orchestral and vocal portions. In the former the excellence of the band again called for special recognition, as manifested in Joachim Raff's symphony in G minor, in Rossini's overture to "Semiramide," that by the late Sir Sterndale Bennett, entitled "The Wood Nymphs," the ballet music from Gounod's "Faust," and Spohr's overture to "Jessonda." The vocalists were Mesdames Sinico, Edith Wynne, and Patey, Mrs. Mudie-Bolingbroke, Mdlle. Redeker, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Santley, Signor Foli, and Mr. Tovey.

On Saturday morning last the festival was closed by the performance of three great works of different periods and of very opposite styles. First in the programme was Bach's "Magnificat" in D—one of many pieces which the composer produced for Catholic church service, in addition to his still more numerous works composed for his own form of faith, the Lutheran. Bach's "Magnificat" contains passages—particularly in the choral portions—of grandeur and science analogous to similar manifestations in his "Passions-Musik" and the great Mass in B minor. The chorus-singing in the "Magnificat" again displayed the excellence of the Yorkshire choristers. The solo pieces were rendered by Mesdames Wynne and Patey, Mr. Shakespeare, and Signor Foli.

The "Magnificat" was followed by Mozart's "Requiem," the last great work of the composer—produced, indeed, literally when on his death-bed. In its performance on Saturday the solo portions were sung by Madame Wynne, Mrs. Mudie-Bolingbroke, Mr. Shakespeare, and Mr. Santley.

With Beethoven's oratorio, "The Mount of Olives," the festival came to a close. Of this work we have so frequently spoken—and so lately as in reference to its performance at Gloucester at the beginning of this month—that we need not again comment on its many beauties; great, although somewhat secular and ultra-dramatic for an oratorio. The soprano solos were sung, as at Gloucester, by Mdlle. Albani; those for tenor and bass having been rendered respectively by Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Santley.

A supplemental concert was given on Saturday evening, of which it is unnecessary to speak in detail, as the performances consisted of a selection from the festival programmes.

Fresh tribute is here due to the admirable chorus-singing at the Leeds Festival, again displayed in the works performed on the closing day, the opposite styles and manifold difficulties of which offered a special test of the powers of the choristers, and proof of careful preparation under the superintendence of Mr. J. Broughton, the chorus-master.

Strong aid to the musical success of the festival was afforded by the experienced skill and unflinching energy of Sir Michael Costa in the direction of the performances, the result of which can scarcely fail to be largely beneficial to the Leeds medical charities, in whose behalf they are given—the attendances having been much more numerous than at the first festival, in 1874.

The series of "Liebhart Concerts" at the Agricultural Hall closed on Monday evening with an attractive programme; the occasion having been for the benefit of the popular vocalist after whose name the concerts were entitled.

The twenty-second series of Saturday afternoon concerts at the Crystal Palace will begin on Saturday next. During the series, many interesting works will be produced for the first time here: among others, a fugue for stringed instruments, from a manuscript symphony by Mendelssohn; Berlioz's symphony, entitled "Harold en Italie;" a concerto by Bach; Purcell's "Yorkshire Feast song;" for solos, chorus, and orchestra; a cantata, "The Lady of the Lake," by Professor G. A. Macfarren; an oratorio, "Hezekiah," by Mr. J. L. Hatton; a new symphony by Mr. Prout; a new overture by Mr. Stanford; Mr. Arthur Sullivan's new incidental music to Shakespeare's "Henry the Eighth;" a "Rhapsodie" by Liszt; a piece entitled "In Memoriam," by Reinecke; Goldmark's "Hochzeit" (or "Country Wedding"); Saint Saens's "La Rouet d'Omphale" and "La Jeunesse d'Hercule;" and the ballet music from Gounod's new opera "Cinq Mars"—all orchestral works.

The seventh season of the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society will open on Nov. 22. Ten concerts are to be given, and the performances will include Handel's "Messiah" and "Israel in Egypt," Mendelssohn's "Elijah" and "Hymn of Praise," Rossini's "Stabat Mater," Verdi's "Requiem," Macfarren's "St. John the Baptist," and Mr. Sullivan's "Light of the World." Mr. Joseph Barnby and Dr. Stainer will retain their respective posts of conductor and organist.

Mr. W. Carter will give a series of oratorio performances at the Royal Albert Hall, as follows:—Oct. 18, "Messiah;" Nov. 8, Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater;" Dec. 13, Haydn's "Creation;" Jan. 3, 1878, "Messiah;" Feb. 14, Mendelssohn's "Athalie" and Mozart's "Twelfth Mass;" March 14, "Elijah;" April 4, Mr. Carter's "Placida" and Handel's "Acis and Galatea." The vocalists already named are Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, Madame Nouver, Miss Anna Williams, Mdlle. Enriquez, Madame Patey, Mr. Edward Lloyd, Mr. W. H. Cummings, Mr. William Shakespeare, Signor Campobello, Mr. George Fox, and Signor Foli. Mr. Phelps will recite the verses in "Athalie." Mr. Edward Bending will preside at the organ.

The Wolverhampton Town Council has accepted the Duke of Cleveland's offer to lease fifty acres of the racecourse for the purposes of a people's park at a rental of £300 per annum, the Corporation having the right of purchase at £400 per acre at the expiration of the lease.

THEATRES.

DRURY LANE.

The reopening of the national theatre is virtually the commencement of the winter theatrical season. Mr. Chatterton has been careful to inaugurate it with as full and as powerful a bill as his position enabled him to command, by way of worthily furnishing forth his usual autumnal benefit. The entertainment commenced with an original one-act opera, furnished with music by Ferdinand Wallerstein, entitled "Barbazon." The libretto, by Arthur Matthison, is not without merit. The sub-title to the opera, "or, The Fatal Peas," suggests the leading theme. Mr. Matthison himself represents the Grand Duke of Barbazon, who musically laments the onerous complexity of his occupations. He is, in one person, Duke, King, Parliament, and also a father. His daughter Dulcinea (Miss H. Coveney), beloved by Count Otto (Miss Hembridge), is placed in an awkward fix. Every stranger, on arriving at Barbazon, is compelled to eat peas in the Ducal presence. The object is to ascertain whether he eats them with a fork. Unfortunately, Count Otto uses a knife, for which atrocity he is capitally sentenced. Before he dies, however, he is permitted to have one wish; and that is, to have presented to him on a golden toasting-fork the eyes of all who witnessed his eating peas in an unorthodox fashion. None but the Duke confesses to have seen the mortal offence; and he, to escape obvious consequences, is compelled to pardon the transgressor, and thus evade the penalty incurred. There is some brilliant music in the piece.

But we must pass over its merits to notice the great drama of the evening, taken from "Peveril of the Peak," and furnished with some fair blank verse dialogue, and much new business, by Mr. W. G. Wills, under the title of "England in the Days of Charles II." We have no intention of tracing the story, which is, indeed, too well-known to bear repetition. The action opens with a scene in Derby Castle, in the Isle of Man, in which Major Bridgenorth (Mr. S. Emery) pleads in vain for the life of his kinsman, William Christian (Mr. E. F. Edgar), to the haughty Countess of Derby (Miss M. Leighton). The papers found on the victim this lady intrusted to Julian Peveril (Mr. W. Terriss) for deliverance to the King. The subsequent incidents relate to the perils encountered by him in performing this duty, and to the agency of the supposed dumb Fenella (Miss Louise Willis), who preserves him from them, albeit thereby she secures him for her rival, Alice Bridgenorth (Miss A. Murray). Another agent in his preservation is the young man's honest servant, Lance Outram (Mr. Norman). Among his enemies, too, is Edward Christian (Mr. Fernandez), the brother of the executed William. He and Major Bridgenorth, aided by "the Saints," persecute the Countess; the noble lady, however, is ultimately delivered from their machinations, and at length brought to the presence of the jovial Monarch, who has pardoned her for the execution of William Christian. The two final acts are spectacularly illustrated with some court festivities, together with the pageant of a masque by Ben Jonson. In these scenes, too, are introduced the favourite dwarf of the First Charles, Sir Geoffrey Hudson (Mr. Charles Collard), whose appearance not a little contributed to the amusement of the audience. King Charles the Second is acceptably impersonated by Mr. Pennington, who successfully imparted to some of his speeches considerable elocutionary impressiveness. The scenery by Mr. W. Beverly is altogether in his best manner; and it will not have been his fault if this new historical adaptation should not happen to prove attractive. It is, besides, well acted throughout.

The Alhambra has put forward another of its peculiar attractions. "The King of Indigo" follows "Orphée aux Enfers." It is a grand opera-bouffe in three acts, the libretto by Mr. Burnand and the music by Johann Strauss. Babazook, a descendant of Ali Baba, like his ancestors, regards this Monarch's hidden treasure as his own. Similar results follow; but there is a want of plot. Madame Selina Dolaro and Miss Adelaide Newton did full justice to the songs. The piece was admirably put upon the stage.

A Scottish Musical Entertainment at St. James's Hall, by Mr. Kennedy, with his sons and daughters, deserves at least a brief record. The music is judiciously selected, and the monologue was effectively delivered. Many of the songs are given with great force and expression; the piano accompaniment being exceedingly well played.

Miss Glyn has begun her Shakspearean readings. She read the "Merchant of Venice" at the British Institution on Wednesday evening. The readings at her residence in Mount-street will re-commence on Oct. 30.

On Tuesday the whole of the troops at Aldershot assembled in the Long Valley and went through a field-day, under the command of Major-General Wardlaw, O.B.

The board of management of the Royal Infirmary at Manchester has resolved, on the recommendation of a committee, to offer each of the nurses and attendants £2 per annum in lieu of beer. The proposal met with some opposition, but it was carried by a large majority. Stimulants are not to be allowed to the nurses who may hereafter be engaged.

At the Sholebrooke sale of short-horns last week, by Mr. John Thornton, the total sum realised for twenty-six cows and eleven bulls was £12,996 10s. The highest priced cow was Grand Duchess Twenty-third, who made £2750 gs., the buyer being Lord Bective, who also bought Cherry Grand Duchess Fourth for 1800 gs. Grand Duchess Twenty-ninth was sold to Mr. Allsopp for 2450 gs., and Cherry Grand Duchess Eighth for 900 gs. to the same purchaser. Lord Bective gave 1550 gs. for a ten-month bull calf, Grand Duke Thirty-first; and 1000 gs. was paid by Sir George Phillips for Grand Duke Twenty-ninth. Another of the tribe was sold for 505 gs.

Operations connected with the submarine tunnel have been begun on the other side of the Channel, several pits having been sunk to the depth of about 110 yards. At the same time the French and English committees have drawn up the conditions of working for the route. The property of the tunnel is to be divided in half by the length—that is to say, each company will possess half of the line, reckoning the distance from coast to coast at low tide. Each company will cover the expenses of its portion. The general work of excavation will be done, on the one hand, by the Great Northern of France, and on the other by the Chatham and South-Eastern Companies, the two latter having each a direct route from London to Dover. All the materials of the French and English lines will pass through the tunnel in order to prevent unnecessary expenses and delay of transhipment, as in England and in France railway companies use each other's lines, and goods can pass from one line to another without changing vans. It is understood that an arrangement will be established for a similar exchange of lines between all the English and Continental railway companies when the tunnel is completed. The tunnel will belong to its founders. At the expiration of thirty years the two Governments will be able to take possession of the tunnel upon certain conditions.

THE WAR: BRINGING DOWN THE WOUNDED FROM THE TURKISH LEFT ATTACK IN THE SHIPKA PASS.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN GAMER, R.N., A CORRESPONDENT OF THE "TIMES."

DOWN THE WOUNDED FROM THE TURKISH LEFT ATTACK IN THE SHIPKA PASS.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN GARDNER, R.N., A CORRESPONDENT OF THE "TIMES."

Turkish Battery in Foreground, six field guns and five mountain guns.

1. Turkish First Division.

2. Mount St. Nicholas.

3. Turkish Left Attack.

GENERAL ATTACK ON THE RUSSIAN POSITION IN THE SHIPKA

FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN GAMBIE

1. Saka Road. 2. Rifle-Pits. 3. Russian Centre (1500 yards from Mount St. Nicholas). 4. Artillery Limbers tied to stumps. 5. Turkish Third Division.

S, AUGUST 24, SHOWING BOTH SIDES OF THE TURKISH ADVANCE.

, A CORRESPONDENT OF THE "TIMES."

FIRST ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP THE FOREST.

ATTACHING THE THREE TORPEDOES TO THE FOREST.

THE COLLISION IN THE CHANNEL.

We give two Illustrations of the means employed by order of the naval authorities, during five successive days of last week, to remove or blow up the hull or wreck of the Nova Scotia ship Forest, which came in contact with the New Zealand emigrant-ship Avalanche, off Portland, on Tuesday, the 11th inst., when the latter instantly sunk, and more than a hundred persons were drowned. The novel and difficult task, which was finally and successfully accomplished on Saturday last, has been imperfectly described in some daily papers, and the merit of its performance has scarcely yet been estimated as it should have been. The following more authentic and correct account of it is therefore commended to attentive reading.

Rear-Admiral W. M. Dowell, C.B., the senior officer of the Channel Squadron, at present lying in Portland Roads, having received instructions from the Admiralty to destroy the wreck of the ill-fated ship Forest, dispatched H.M.S. Defence (Captain R. P. Cator) on Tuesday morning last week, well provided with material in the way of electric cables, torpedo-cases, and other apparatus, and with science in the persons of the trained torpedo officers and men of the Fleet. The whole was under the personal control of Captain Howard, of H.M.S. Black Prince; Lieutenant Ferris, of the same ship, being the practical working officer. The morning was fine, with a slight swell rolling in the Channel, but it died away considerably during the afternoon. The wreck was sighted bearing about S.E., distant two miles from the Shambles light-ship. It was lying in a position that gave rise to many conjectures as to what kept it from sinking or drifting away. Having arrived on the scene of action, the steam-pinnaces of the Black Prince, Defence, and Warrior, immediately went alongside the wreck, examined it closely, and then, hauling off to a safe distance, the Defence fired a Palliser projectile at the wreck. So well did Lieutenant Statham perform this operation, that the shot passed clean through the hull, and flew away beyond, causing many of the spectators, some of whom were naval men, to imagine that it did not strike at all. The boats then again approached the wreck, and the torpedo work commenced. A barrel containing about 300 lb. of gunpowder was lowered along the keel, as deep as the strength of the cask would allow, in the hope that it would get under the vessel. The boats again retired, and an electric wire from the pinnace of the Black Prince was put in connection with the submarine mine. This, by its explosion, threw up an immense column of water, but did little damage to the wreck, which got a severe shaking, but appeared uninjured. The next operation was the carrying out of a plan proposed by Captain Cator. A long iron bar, bent much in the shape of a semicircle and held by rope slings in such a manner that its diameter was nearly horizontal, was placed over the keel. From its centre and two ends were suspended service cases, each containing 100 lb. of powder. These were all connected by electric wires, and arranged in what is technically known as "fork." The whole fabrication was then allowed to slide down as before, and was exploded in a similar manner to the first from the pinnace. This time, a large quantity of wreckage, such as timber planking, was blown away, and the wreck slightly altered its position, nevertheless the actual hull remained intact. The evening was now closing in, for these operations took much longer to carry out than might be supposed, owing to the careful handling the electric firing apparatus requires, and the Defence and her fleet of small attendant vessels returned to their anchorage for the night.

THE WAR: OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, WITH THE FEVER, CONSULTING THE STAFF-SURGEON.

MISS RYE'S HOME FOR EMIGRANT FEMALE CHILDREN, AT NIAGARA LAKE ONTARIO.

They recommenced work on Wednesday morning, when, by daylight, the destroying party were again on their way to the wreck. During the night several mines had been prepared. The first experiment consisted of lowering down, in much the same manner as previously, three oil-barrels, made of iron, each containing about 150lb. of powder. But, on account of the tendency these barrels have to collapse when submerged to any depth, they were only sunk about eight fathoms and exploded. The result of this attempt, indeed, was far more satisfactory, for an enormous quantity of the wreck's bottom was blown away, the hull itself being bodily lifted and considerably shaken; but it settled down again in much the same position, although heeling over more than before. Again a series of torpedoes were lowered, consisting of five hundred-pounder cases, arranged in "fork," and kept in position by an iron bar similar to the one prepared by Captain Cator; and the effect of their explosion was very similar to the previous one. The hull was again lifted, and also much loosened from the bottom; for, on the men climbing on to it, it could distinctly be felt heaving up and down with the sea. A great deal of the bows of the vessel came to the surface; one piece of her bottom was so large that three men with ease stood upon it; and amongst other things that came up was a large tub containing fresh meat. Whilst these mines were being got into position and fired, a large twenty-seven gallon cask was being fitted on board the Defence and filled with 240lb. of gun-cotton. The operation of laying this down was personally superintended by Admiral Dowell, who had come out in the pinnacle of the Thunderer. The mine was lowered to the bottom from one boat, and then towed well under the wreck between two other boats. On its being exploded everyone thought the hull would go down, so violently was it shaken; but it still remained above water, heeling much over on one side, and what was supposed to be the cross-jack yardarm appeared above the surface; this proving that, at any rate, some of the masts were standing. This concluded the operations for the day, and the Defence and other vessels returned to Portland.

On Thursday morning work was again resumed, charges, as before, having been prepared overnight. Two barrels of gun-cotton were consecutively fired, but without obtaining the wished-for result of entirely sinking the stern of the wreck. Afterwards a cask of gunpowder was fired; and although at each explosion an enormous amount of timber floated away, the actual rudder remained in sight. During Thursday afternoon a constant attack was kept up with submarine mines placed about the hull in all available positions; but still the wreck obstinately remained above water, while timber, &c., by the ton floated from it, and one or two of the yards came away, also the lid of a seaman's chest, with an oil-colour representation of the ship under sail. The final explosion for the afternoon was that of a boat's water-breaker, containing about 100lb. of gun-cotton, after which the work ceased for the night.

Friday morning again saw the Defence on the scene of action; but now a different idea altogether was put into execution. It was determined to try and tow the remains of the Forest—not with any idea of being able to take it ashore, but simply, as it were, to give it a pull about; for this purpose the Trinity House steamer Galatea, which had joined the Defence's fleet on Thursday, took the wreck in tow, and commenced steaming ahead, but without any perceptible effect, as the hull, heaving slowly up and down, in all other respects remained stationary. The paddler-steamer proving, as was thought, too light for such a heavy job, cast off; and the Defence, passing a strong six-inch hawser of steel wire to the wreck, began in her turn to try. In the meantime a series of three mines, each containing about 270 lb. of gunpowder, had been prepared, and these were exploded very fairly under the bottom of the Forest, completely breaking her back, and bringing up two or three of her yards, together with the heel of one of her masts, but not entirely separating it, owing, it was surmised, to her rigging being of wire, and having generally become entangled below the surface. All Friday night did the Defence continue to tug at the wreck; but so slowly and to such little purpose did she do so, that on Saturday morning the hull appeared unaltered, and within five miles of its position overnight.

On Saturday morning Lieutenant Statham proceeded to the wreck, and, having carefully placed a mine containing nearly 900 lb. of powder, exploded it from the stern of the Defence, with such good effect that the work of destruction was virtually done; the wreck gave a kind of leap, and broke clean in halves; the bows split completely open in a fore-and-aft direction, floating away by itself, and another mast—probably the foremast—came up. Lieutenants Statham and Marsh were then dispatched in the Defence's steam-pinnacle to destroy the bow-part, and, after exploding a mine under it, succeeded in completing the split and separating the port from the starboard side. One piece then, in a most singular manner, drifted back to the Defence's stern, and became entangled in the shapeless mass she was still towing; while the other piece floated away to some very considerable distance. However, the pinnacle, refurnished with material, gave chase, and commenced its destruction. Three mines were most successfully fired under it, blowing it completely to pieces, throwing several very large timbers an enormous height into the air. Such a thorough "smash-up" had not previously taken place. It was seen, on the water becoming quiet, that only in two places were any planks held together; and a small 100-pounder outrigger torpedo under these soon left no wreck but what could be pulled apart with a boat-hook. All this time the Defence, rejoined by the Trinity steamer Galatea and the steam-launches, had been employed in towing apart various pieces of wreck. The Galatea towed a mast out, and Lieutenant Ferris exploded one more large mine, when it was found the hull was no longer unmanageable; so the Defence turned her head towards Portland, and commenced slowly and surely to tow her victim into harbour. The Galatea, towing in a spar or two and leaving them, returned in the middle of the night, lashing alongside the ironclad, and the two pulled away merrily at about the rate of two and a half knots an hour. Sunday morning saw the Defence and Galatea round the Portland Breakwater, and a few minutes afterwards the remains of the Forest of Windsor were safely at anchor, waiting for the receiver of wrecks to do as he pleased with them.

Thus ended the destruction of the ill-fated ship, a long and tedious job many will think; but when the circumstances of the case are carefully taken into consideration it will easily be understood that a whole fleet of ironclads could with far greater facility have been sunk than the Forest destroyed. Here was a ship, lying bottom up, with her beams held some twenty fathoms down by two tons of ballast, masts standing, yards across, and sails set, a three-knot tide running, and a cross lop of a sea running nearly the whole time. No time was allowed to procure proper service iron mines, consequently nothing but extemporised torpedoes was available, consisting chiefly of rum and salt-beef casks. Several daily papers suggested the use of dynamite; but they were apparently unaware of the fact that gun-cotton, an explosive equally powerful and by far safer, was used, and freely used. It is a very different matter comfortably fitting a torpedo on the upper deck of the Vernon at Portsmouth, with every appliance at hand, and with the heads of the torpedo school to look after things, laying out the torpedo in the still waters of Porchester creek, and then carefully mooring a boat over it. Here were mines to be made extempore and laid from a steam-pinnacle by men who had little or no practice at the work, and then to be hauled as far as rigging, &c., would allow under the wreck. On the whole, it cannot be denied but that the actual explosions of the various charges were highly satisfactory, considering that only four mines hung fire, and two of these owing to the breaking of the conducting wires.

Many people who are unacquainted with the difficulties the officers and men had to contend with in all this work will be apt to think disparagingly of torpedoes as a destructive engine of war; but it should be borne in mind that, although an enormous amount of material and labour was expended on the Forest, any one of the mines used would have easily sunk the largest ironclad vessel afloat. Owing to the extraordinary position of the wreck, the charges could not be got under its bottom; consequently, all that could be done was to rest charges on the sides and trust to their being deep enough to act crushingly on them; whereas, had she been floating, one of the mines could have been placed, by means of an outrigger pole or otherwise, in actual contact with her bilge, and the powder, acting as it always does along the line of least resistance, would have inevitably blown her to pieces.

The coroner's inquest on the bodies washed ashore at Portland was closed on Saturday; the jury expressed their disapprobation of the neglect to provide decently for their interment. There will be an official inquiry, by order of the Board of Trade, into the circumstances of the collision between the two ships. The Agent-General of New Zealand has given £5 each to the Portland boatmen who relieved the survivors, on the morning after the disaster.

THE EMIGRANT-GIRLS' HOME IN CANADA.

We lately published an interesting letter from a lady who accompanied Miss Maria Rye with her last party of seventy emigrant children from London to Canada; and we now give an illustration of the house in which they are lodged and taken care of while Miss Rye is making arrangements for placing them in household service or apprenticeship with respectable homely families in that country. Writing from Toronto on Sept. 7, the correspondent of the Standard supplies the following description:—

"At the mouth of the Niagara river, where its curiously green deep waters lose themselves in Lake Ontario, lies the quaint old town of Niagara. A large and comfortable hotel, facing the lake and exposed to the cool northerly breezes, attracts thither a large number of Americans and Canadians during the three or four months of summer; but at other times and in other respects the old capital of Upper Canada must be a decidedly quiet place of residence, though to many persons this feature is fully compensated for by its cheapness, its charming climate, and the amazing fertility of its fruit orchards. The Niagara district is the fruit garden of Canada; and the hundreds upon hundreds of baskets and boxes of peaches, pears, plums, and grapes which the steamers bring across daily to Toronto in the height of the season are among the pleasantest sights—and smells—in Canada. It is not, however, in the luscious fruits of Niagara that I wish to interest your readers, but in a certain square brick building standing about a mile out of the town, which, if not architecturally attractive, yet, with its deep verandahs and jalousies, looks comfortable and well cared for. Neither outside nor inside does it in any way betray the fact that its walls were originally those of the gaol of the district; for it stands in a garden and orchard where the trees are literally breaking under the weight of peaches and plums, and the vines are loaded with hundredweights of grapes; and its general appearance, as well as all its internal arrangements, were completely changed when it passed into the hands of its present owner and was adapted for its present use—the receiving-house, the 'Western Home,' as she calls it, of the young children who are intrusted to Miss Rye for deportation from England to Canada. Cleanliness, space, and airiness are the characteristics of the house that most strike the visitor on first entering; and the arrangements, if simple and inexpensive, are admirably adapted for their several purposes. To anyone who knows what is the life of a child in a London slum or an English workhouse, the picture presented and the contrast suggested by those twenty-five children—the latest arrived batch—whom I saw the other day, clean, ruddy, and happy, shouting up and down the verandahs, was certainly very striking indeed; but, instead of sending me away contentedly thankful that Miss Rye's labours had wrought such a happy change in these and hundreds of their predecessors in this 'Western Home,' it the rather incited me to ascertain what, if any, are the real objections which lie against Miss Rye's scheme and her system of carrying it out. The children, if I understand the process right, are derived from two sources—from workhouses, the guardians of which are willing and are authorised to intrust orphan and other children to Miss Rye; and from the streets and wretched tenements of London, whence waifs, orphans, deserted children, drunkards' children, and such like, find their way to her Home or receiving-house in Peckham. On arrival in Canada the whole batch is almost invariably brought to Niagara for rest, for study of their characters, for washing after the voyage, and for perfecting the arrangements for placing them in families, which usually have made applications for all of them long before their arrival. After the lapse of a week or two the concourse is dispersed, the children are sent or taken to their new homes, and their new life begins."

There has been some controversy in official quarters upon the merits of this system; and Mr. Doyle, an Inspector of the Local Government Board, who was sent out to Canada, reported that it had in many cases not proved satisfactory. It appears that in the six years terminating with 1876, Miss Rye had landed at her establishment in Niagara 1100 children from the streets and workhouses of England, and it reflects credit upon the sanitary and dietary regulations to which her numerous charge has been subjected that during this entire period the death rate in the number specified amounted only to fifteen. She is reluctantly compelled to admit, however, that sixteen of the workhouse girls fell, and that a considerable number besides had displayed violent temper and extreme insubordination, resulting in a frequent change of situation and sometimes in their return to the Home. Nor is this fact strange, when their previous lack of firm but gentle discipline is taken into account. She also admits having lost sight of twenty-eight girls under fifteen years of age.

Notwithstanding these partial failures and disappointments, we receive the testimony of the Toronto correspondent of the Standard in favour of Miss Rye's proceedings. "We in Canada," he says, "know something of her work, and we in Canada are to a great extent satisfied that it is a good work, and fairly well done. It is true she is overtaxed; it is true that, single-handed, she is not equal to the labour and expense of doing the whole thoroughly. No one person, man or woman, however much his or her heart may be in the work, can possibly supervise the collection of the children in England, their exportation, their reception here, the selection of homes for them, and keep up also a careful systematic supervision over them for many years. Miss Rye has done wonders; her energy and her enthusiastic devotion to her self-imposed labours have triumphed over difficulties which would have swamped an official craft long ago; and she can have the satisfaction of feeling that she has rescued from a life of wretchedness, and probably of sin, hundreds of children, who have a useful and, on the whole, happy career open to them. Nobody in Canada ever expected that the mere passing through Miss Rye's hands would be a more efficient detergent than the waters of baptism; that with her workhouse clothes the workhouse girl would 'shed' all her moral delinquencies, not only those acquired by herself, but those inherited from, perhaps, generations of ignorant or vicious parents. Children brought up, or 'dragged up,' as most of these have been, cannot be expected to show either a morality or a capacity above the average; and, though there have been some very black sheep in the flock, the experiment of importation has been, on the whole, very satisfactory. This is the verdict of the Canadian public. As regards the children themselves, I believe that their position is, in nine cases out of ten, good and satisfactory. No one in his senses ever expected that these waifs and outcasts were to be placed on beds of roses; that their days were to be passed in happy romping among the peach-trees of their 'Western Home'; that they were to be free from toil, and subject to none of the rough usage that falls to the lot of the children of the poor all the world over. Occasionally, no doubt, they have fallen into bad hands, and been subjected to the caprices of cruel or grasping mistresses. But let us have no 'goody' philanthropy in this matter. Think what these children were, and what they would inevitably have developed into if left to chance and the workhouse, and then let anyone ask himself whether the lot of at least nine tenths of them is not immeasurably better now."

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR W. CLARKE-TRAVERS, BART.

Sir William Henry St. Laurence Clarke-Travers, Bart., D.L., of Rossmore and Barryroe, in the county of Cork, died at his residence, No. 3, Queen's-gardens, Hyde Park, on the 31st ult. He was the eldest son of the late General Sir W. Clarke, Bart., by Margaret, daughter of Mr. Thomas Prendergast, of Dublin. The baronetcy was granted to General Sir W. Clarke for distinguished military services in India in 1804, he having held the command of the British forces at Goa in 1799, and subsequently the command of Mysore in February, 1808. The second Baronet, now deceased, was born Aug. 3, 1801. He entered the Army in 1820, and served in the 5th Dragoon Guards till 1827, when, on Sept. 4, he married Elizabeth Barbara, only child and heir of John Moore Travers, Esq., D.L., of Barryroe and Clifton, in the county of Cork, and by whose wish he assumed, by her Majesty's Royal letters patent, for himself and heirs, the name and arms of Travers on inheriting his estates in the county of Cork, granted in 1599 to Brian Travers, of Nateby, Lancashire, whose ancestor, Laurentius Travers, was the possessor of Nateby in 1292. Sir W. Clarke-Travers is succeeded by his eldest surviving son, now Sir Guy Francis Clarke-Travers, Captain in the 86th Royal Regiment.

SIR J. T. TYRELL, BART.

Sir John Tyssen Tyrell, Bart., of Boreham House, Essex, J.P. and D.L., formerly Hon. Colonel West Essex Militia, died at Brighton on the 19th inst., in his eighty-second year. He was elder son of Sir John Tyrell, first Baronet of Boreham (so created Sept. 28, 1809), by Sarah, his wife, daughter and heiress of William Tyssen, Esq., of Waltham House, Herts, was educated at Winchester, and Trinity College, Cambridge, and succeeded his father Aug. 3, 1832. For twenty-six years and during six Parliaments he represented the county of Essex. His first contest at the election of 1830 was a very memorable one. His opponents were Mr. Western, of Felix Hall, and Mr. Long Pole Wellesley, but Colonel Tyrell gained the first place on the poll, which had been kept open fifteen days. Another election occurred the following year, but with a different result, Tyrell was defeated; but he remained out of the Commons for a brief period only, being chosen for North Essex in 1832. From that date he continued uninterruptedly, on high Conservative principles, to sit for the same constituency. Sir John married, May 19, 1819, Eliza, eldest daughter and co-heiress of Sir Thomas Pilkington, Bart., and had by her three daughters—Eliza Isabella, wife of William N. Tufnell, Esq., of Hatfield Place, Essex; Mary, who died 1876, widow of Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny, Bart.; and Sarah, widow of John Ralph, first Lord Harlech. As Sir John leaves no male issue the Tyrell baronetcy becomes extinct.

SIR J. GREEN.

Sir John Green, Knt., C.B., late her Majesty's Diplomatic Agent in Roumania, died at Marienbad on the 18th inst., aged sixty-nine. He was for a considerable period connected with the Consular service, having been appointed Vice-Consul at Nauplia forty-two years ago, and having continued that service until 1874, when he retired from the important post of Diplomatic Agent and Consul-General for the united Principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia. He received the insignia of C.B. in 1865, and was knighted on his retirement, in requital of his long official career. Sir John married, 1831, Margaret, daughter of George Suter, Esq.

MR. TALBOT, OF LACOCK ABBEY.

William Henry Fox Talbot, Esq., of Lacock Abbey, Wilts, M.A., F.R.S., one of the chief inventors of photography, died at his seat near Chippenham on the 17th inst. He was born Feb. 11, 1800, the only son of William Davenport Talbot, Esq., of Lacock Abbey, by Lady Elizabeth Theresa Strangways, his wife, daughter of Henry Thomas, second Earl of Ilchester, and was descended, in the female line, from Sir John Talbot (of the noble house of Shrewsbury), a warm adherent of King Charles II. He was educated at Harrow, and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1821, and where he gained two University prizes. In 1844, in his "Pencil of Nature," he describes the steps that led to the discovery of photography, for which he was accorded the medal of the Royal Society. He was also author of "Hermes; or, Classical and Antiquarian Researches," of "Illustrations of the Antiquity of the Book of Genesis," and of "English Etymologies." For a short time he sat in Parliament for Chippenham. He married, Dec. 20, 1832, Constance, daughter of Francis Mundy, Esq., of Mark-eaton, Derbyshire, and leaves issue.

DR. GELDART.

Thomas Charles Geldart, LL.D., the late Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, who died on Monday, the 17th inst., at the College Lodge, was the youngest son of the Rev. James Geldart, of Biggin Grange, Yorkshire, Barnwell Abbey, Cambridgeshire, and Rector of Kirk Deighton, Yorkshire. He was born in March, 1797, and commenced residence as an Under-graduate of Trinity Hall in October, 1814, under the tuition of his brother, the late Rev. J. W. Geldart, Regius Professor of Civil Law. Mr. Geldart took his degree as Seventeenth Wrangler, was elected a Fellow of his College, and was called to the Bar as a member of Lincoln's Inn, in 1823. He married, in 1836, Elizabeth, the only daughter of Thomas Cooke, Esq., of Gorsefield, near Manchester. On the death of the Rev. Frederick Geldart, of West Wickham, Kent, whose residuary legatee he was, Mr. Geldart retired from active practice, and was elected by his college to succeed Sir Herbert Jenner Fust as Master of Trinity Hall in 1852. As Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, he took a prominent part in the University reforms of 1855. Mrs. Geldart and the Master were munificent in their gifts towards the restoration of the Master's Lodge, the Chapel of Trinity Hall, St. Edward's Church, Cambridge, and were liberal supporters of every kind of good work.

The deaths have also been announced of—

Sir Arundel Neave, Bart., on the 21st inst. His memoir will be given next week.

Lieutenant-Colonel Vertue, Royal Engineers, on Aug. 16, at Trichinopoly, of cholera, in the forty-fourth year of his age.

The Rev. Charles Craved, Rector of Spexhall, Suffolk, on the 20th inst., in the eighty-first year of his age.

Major-General John Elphinstone, on the 15th inst., at 21, Chepstow-place, Bayswater, in the fifty-third year of his age.

The Rev. Edward Miller, M.A., Vicar of St. John's, Bognor, on the 17th inst., at his vicarage, in his seventy-ninth year.

Rawdon Briggs, Esq., J.P., of Birstwith Hall, Ripley, Yorkshire, on the 17th inst., aged fifty-two years.

The Rev. Dr. Wilkinson, President of Ushaw College, near Durham, on the 23rd inst., in his fifty-third year.

Frederick Engleheart Moore, Esq., Deputy Commissioner of Rohitak, India, on the 6th ult., in his forty-seventh year.

Mary Lady Crosley, wife of Sir Charles Decimus Crosley, J.P., of Sunningdale Park, Berkshire, on the 15th inst.

Norman J. B. Uniacke, Esq., of Mount Uniacke, in the county of Cork, the representative of an old county of Cork family, on the 14th inst., in his fifty-fourth year.

Elizabeth Phoebe Lady Oxenden, on the 13th inst., at Barham, near Canterbury, wife of Sir Henry Chudleigh Oxenden, Bart., of Broome.

William Haughton, Esq., Chairman of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company of Ireland, on the 5th inst., at his residence, Moorefield, Dundrum.

James Stewart, Esq., of Cairnmore, Kirkcudbrightshire, J.P. and D.L., on the 19th inst., at his seat near Newton Stewart, N.B., aged eighty-six.

William Cooper, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Ipswich, a very able lawyer, on the 17th inst. His death was very touching referred to at the Middlesex Sessions by the Deputy Judge and the Senior Barrister.

Miles Charles Seton, Esq., of Treskerby, Cornwall, late Lieutenant 8th Regiment, on the 18th inst. He was eldest son of the late Colonel William Carden Seton, C.B., and was twice married, his second wife being the Hon. Mary Ursula Addington, daughter of Viscount Sidmouth.

The Hon. Mrs. Arthur Cadogan, at Sheen House, East Sheen, Surrey, on the 16th inst., aged twenty-nine. She was youngest daughter of the late Richard Arabin, Esq., and niece of Sir Henry Meux, Bart., and was married, April 9, 1870, to the Hon. Arthur Charles Cadogan, second son of the late Earl Cadogan.

The Rev. Chancellor Williams, at his residence, The Vicarage, Bassaleg, South Wales, on the 24th inst., aged eighty-three years. For upwards of forty years the late Chancellor held the living at Bassaleg. In the year 1875, amid the general rejoicings of the family and his parishioners, he commemorated his golden wedding. The Chancellor was the author of several recognised ecclesiastical works.

The Rev. William Andrewes Uthwatt, J.P., late Vicar of Howe, Rector of Maid's Moreton, and Private Chaplain to three successive Dukes of Buckingham, lord of the manors of Maid's Moreton and Linford, on the 20th inst., at Maid's Moreton House, Buckingham. He was eldest surviving son of the Rev. Henry Uthwatt Uthwatt, of Great Linford, Bucks, and was married to Mary, daughter and coheir of the Rev. James Long Long, of Maid's Moreton, by whom he had an only daughter, Mary Henrietta.

Colonel the Hon. Berkeley Wodehouse, brother of the second Lord Wodehouse, and uncle of the Earl of Kimberley, at Pau, on the 13th inst., at the age of seventy-one. He entered the Army in 1824, became Major in 1839, and retired from the service in the following year. He was appointed Resident of the Island of Ithaca in 1852, Resident of Cephalonia in 1855, and Resident of Zante the same year. He was created a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in May, 1864, and on the union of the Ionian Islands with the Hellenic Kingdom, in 1864, was appointed Consul in the Island of Zante. He was appointed Consul at Dunkirk in May, 1870.

The prizes gained by the successful students of the Kingston Science and Art Classes (in connection with the Science and Art Department, South Kensington) were distributed last week by Viscount Middleton.

The meetings of the Iron and Steel Institute, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, were brought to a close yesterday week by an excursion to Middlesbrough, where the members visited various works in the district. They were entertained to luncheon by the members of the Cleveland iron trade.

A great gathering of eminent men will take place at Cheshamfield on the 17th of next month, when the Marquis of Hartington will lay the foundation-stone of a splendid hall to be erected in that town to the memory of George Stephenson, the great engineer. The hall, which is from the designs of Messrs. Smith and Woodhouse, of Manchester, will cost about £12,000. It will be used for purposes of higher education, arrangements having been made for science and art teaching.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

T E H (Lincoln).—The problem is much too simple, although it is encumbered with an unnecessary number of pieces. In a chess problem there should be no piece or pawn that is not necessary to the combination whereby the solution is effected.

J H S (Inverness).—The position would make a very pleasing enigma.

N B (Freckenham).—The letter containing your proposed solution was destroyed after perusal. If you will send a duplicate, we shall be glad to comply with your request.

N B (Hull).—We are obliged for the games, and they shall have early attention.

E E G (India Avenue).—Thanks for the trouble you have taken. Similar positions are well known to students and have been frequently published.

C J L (Edinburgh).—Walker's "Chess Studies" is a very scarce work. It contains nearly all the games played in the several matches between Macdonnell and Labourdonnais that were ever recorded.

PROBLEMS received from P C Collins, James Pierce, W McArthur, J Armstrong, J W Abbott, H Schiemer of Bahia, and Le Comte de Bourbais.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1750 received from Baz, T E Hughes, W S B, Copplano, M Macrae, H Beurnann, S A Sillem, J C Martin, and East Marten.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1751 received from E K B, Baz, Hampstead Heathen, Barcalaine, V W, and Carl Imandt.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1752 received from H B, Cant, Boeslack, W S B, Copplano, Queen of Connaught, N Brock, F G V, Con, W Lee, S Western, B Parkinson, C H Ekins, D Leslie, R Schofield, P Hampton, St J E, F Wharton, W C Dutton, M Ross, N Powell, W Nelson, Leonard, and Leon, A G R, Long Sten, T B Young, Americanine, J F Spiers, Mechanic, Robin Gray, A Scot, J S W, T W H, J Lyndford, H Bingham, W Whitley, L S R, J Wentone, Paul's Root, S Threlfall, G W, A Macdonnell, I Burnett, G Reeves, Black Knight, Robin Roughed, Only Jones, Simplex, Liz, B R Stone, W Cowell, W Alston, E Esmond, N H H, R T King, E Worley, N E D, G F Brooke, H Stansfield, T Edgar, S Adams, M Rawlings, M Macrae, G H V, E H H V, W F Aman, R D Skuse, H M Pridoux, T E Hughes, E P Vuillamy, W F Payne, N Rumbelow, The Three Castles, Woolwich Chess Club, J Sargent, J de Houdsteyn, E L G, A Wood, R H Brooks, Baz, Jane N, B Lewy, J Sowden, and Farley Mechanics' Institute.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF ENIGMA No. 9 received from Copplano; Enigma No. 10 from M Macrae; Enigma No. 11 from P H L, Americanine, S Adams, W Alston, and J Wentone; Enigma No. 12 from H B, T Bradford, J W Fletcher, W V Pettit, W K H, B Schly, C B Cox, G T J, M Tayer, R Greenbank, W Hutchinson, G Sharswood, T Elder, E Lewis, J W Cooper, O Johnson, R Champneys, M Dickenson, W Franklin, J Brewster, M Meredith, J Ried, S Dimmick, C Darragh, R Ingersoll, Cant, W E A, T E Hughes, Copplano, H M Pridoux, N Rumbelow, Hereward, Woolwich Chess Club, J de Houdsteyn, E L G, R H Brooks, D J of Leeds, and Co-Charbonier.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1751.

WHITE. BLACK. WHITE. BLACK.
1. R to Q 5th Kt takes R* 3. Q mates.
2. Q takes Q P Any move
* If 1. B to R 2nd, Black continues with 2. R to B 2nd and mates by 3. B to B 3rd.

PROBLEM No. 1754.

By I. O. HOWARD TAYLOR.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

THE COUNTIES' CHESS ASSOCIATION.

The following well-contested game was played at the Birmingham meeting between Messrs. HALFORD and THOROLD.—(Ray Lopes Opening.)

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. T.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. T.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	26. Kt to K 3rd	Kt to R 3rd
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	27. R to K sq	R to B 2nd
3. B to Kt 5th	P to Q B 3rd	28. Kt to K 3rd	Q R to K B sq
4. B to R 4th	B to B 4th	29. Kt to Q sq	Kt (from R 3rd) to B 4th
Decidedly inferior to Kt to K B 3rd.		30. Kt to Q 2nd	Kt takes R P
5. P to B 3rd	Q to K 2nd	It is doubtful if White could have secured more than a remise if Black had remained on the defensive. This attack, although pursued with ingenuity and vigour, is unsound.
6. Castles	B to R 2nd	31. P takes Kt	Q takes P
7. P to Q 4th	P to Q Kt 4th	32. Kt to K 4th	R to B 6th
8. B to B 2nd	P to Kt 2nd	33. Kt to Kt 3rd	Q to Kt 4th
9. B to Kt 5th	P to B 3rd	34. Q to Q 2nd	Q R to B 6th
10. B to K 3rd	P to Q 3rd	35. B to K 4th	B (at B 6th) takes R
11. Q Kt to Q 2nd	P to K Kt 4th	36. Q takes R	P to R 5th
This attack is altogether premature, as the sequel shows.		37. Kt to B sq	Q to Kt 3rd
12. P to K R 4th	P to K Kt 5th	38. R to K 3rd	Kt to B 4th
13. Kt to R 2nd	P to K R 4th	39. Q to B 2nd	Q to B 2nd
14. Kt to Kt 3rd	Kt to Q sq	40. R to K sq	P to R 6th
15. Kt to R 6th	B to B sq	41. Kt (from Q sq) to K 3rd	Kt to R 5th
16. Q to K 2nd	B to Kt 3rd	42. Kt to R 2nd	Kt to B 6th (ch)
17. Kt to Kt 3rd	Kt to K 3rd	43. Kt takes Kt	P takes Kt
18. P to Kt 3rd	Kt to R 3rd	44. K to R 2nd	P to K 5th
19. K R to Q sq	Kt to Kt 2nd	45. R to Kt sq (ch)	Kt to B sq
20. Kt to K B sq	Kt to B 2nd	46. P to B 4th	P to Kt 5th
21. P to Q 5th	P to K B 4th	47. Q to R 4th
22. B takes B	P takes B	The counter-attack is now foiled, and this ally of the Queen decides the battle.
23. P takes P	B takes P	48. Q to B 6th	P to R 4th
24. Kt to K 3rd	B takes B	49. Q to B 5th (ch)	Kt to B 3rd
25. Kt takes B	Castles K R	50. R to Kt 8th	K to K 2nd
26. R to Q 3rd		Black resigned.

ENIGMA No. 14.

By J. BERGER, of Gras.

In compliance with the request of several correspondents, we present our readers this week with the problem to which was awarded the first honours in the Leipzig Tourney. We are indebted for the position to the Deutsche Schachzeitung.

White: K at K 8th, Q at K 8th, R at K 4th, B at K Kt sq and Q Kt 5th, Kts at K 6th and Q 4th; P at K Kt 4th and 6th, K B 6th, Q B 2nd, and Q R 3rd.

Black: K at Q 4th, R at Q R 7th, B at Q B 2nd and Q Kt 2nd, Kts at Q B 6th and Q Kt 7th; P at K Kt 2nd, Q 2nd and 3rd, Q B 3rd, Q Kt 3rd, and Q R 3rd.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

CHESS INTELLIGENCE.

A preliminary meeting of the members of the City Chess Club was held on Monday last, when arrangements were made for the commencement of the winter season. The programme included a handicap tourney on a large scale, consultation games between the leading English players, and blind-fold play by Mr. Blackburne. Upon the conclusion of business, the members present sat down to an excellent supper—the president of the club, Mr. H. F. Gastineau, in the chair—and the remainder of the evening was enlivened with songs and recitations.

A new work, entitled "The Chess Openings Theoretically and Practically Considered," by Mr. H. F. Bird, the well-known English amateur, will be issued from the New York press in the course of next month. Only a limited number of copies will be printed; and therefore intending subscribers should at once send their names to the author, whose address is Congress Hall Hotel, New York.

The Comte de Chambord has arrived in Switzerland, and will remain for a month.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated April 11, 1874) of Mr. William Dixon, late of Yaldhurst, in the county of Southampton, and of No. 4, Pelham-crescent, Hastings, who died on the 21st ult. at Ryde, was proved on the 6th inst. by John Spofforth Dixon, the brother, and John Penfold, the nephew, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £60,000. The testator bequeaths certain furniture and plate between his sisters, Miss Harriet Dixon and Miss Hannah Sophia Dixon; to his said two sisters, and to his nephews, the Rev. William Thomas Penfold and John Penfold, £5000 each; to his secretary, Edward King, £1000, free of duty; all his real estate in the counties of Gloucester, Hants, and Surrey he leaves to his brother, John Spofforth Dixon, for life, and after his death to the said Rev. William Thomas Penfold, if he should survive his said brother; and the remainder of his property between his brother and his nephew, John Penfold.

The will and three codicils (dated June 27 and July 19, 1877) of Mr. John Miland, late of Clairville, Wimbledon, who died on the 13th ult. at No. 9, Holles-street, Cavendish-square, were proved on the 13th inst. by Mrs. Elizabeth Miland, the widow, George Humphreys, and John Hoby, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £50,000. The testator gives to his wife £500, his furniture and effects, and his freehold residence with the land adjoining; and he leaves other considerable legacies. Until the payment of these legacies the widow is to have £1400 per annum, and then the income of the whole residue of his property for life; on her death, in the event of his leaving no children, which it seems was the case, the following charitable legacies are to be paid—viz., £10,000 each to the National Benevolent Institution, Southampton-street, and the Governes' Benevolent Institution, Sackville-street, Piccadilly;—£1000 each to the Metropolitan Convalescent Institution, Walton-on-Thames and Kingston-hill; the National Refuges for Homeless and Destitute Children, Great Queen-street; the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's-inn-road; and the Charing-cross Hospital;—£500 each to the Royal Society of St. Anne's, Streatham; the London Orphan Asylum, Watford; the Infant Orphan Asylum, Wanstead; the Seaside Convalescent Hospital, Seaford; the Westminster Hospital, King's College Hospital, the Hospital Sunday Fund, the Bishop of London's Fund, the Church Missionary Society, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts; the Ophthalmic Hospital, King William-street, Strand; and the Incorporated Society for Building and Repairing Churches and Chapels, Whitehall;—£300 each to the Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Benevolent Institution, Hibernian Chambers, London Bridge; the Metropolitan Visiting and Relief Association, Regent-street; the London Female Preventive and Reformatory Association, Euston-road, and the Metropolitan Drinking-Fountain and Cattle-Trough Association;—£200 to the Church of England Temperance Society, and £100 to the Ladies' Charity School. On the death of the widow some freehold ground-rents are also given to her sister; and Mr. George Humphreys is appointed residuary legatee.

The will of Major Scantlebury, late of Broad Oak, Clapham-common, was proved on the 3rd ult. by Arthur J. Scantlebury, the son, John Thomas Hunter and William Gadsden, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator leaves to his executors £100 each, and the remainder of his property to his widow and children.

The will and two codicils (dated Feb. 7, 1874, and March 28 and June 4, 1877) of Mr. George Loch, Q.C., late of Bishopgate, Surrey, who died on the 18th ult., were proved on the 17th inst. by Mrs. Catharine Loch, the widow, and William Henry Deverell, the acting executors, the personal estate in the United Kingdom being sworn under £18,000. Subject to a few legacies, the testator leaves all his property upon trust for his wife for life, and then for his four daughters.

In the abstract of the will, recently given, of Mr. John Alexander, late of 49, Porchester-terrace, the statement as to the personal estate, sworn under £50,000, had reference to that portion of it only which was in the United Kingdom.

ASTRONOMICAL OCCURRENCES IN OCTOBER.

(From the "Illustrated London Almanack.")

The Moon is near Mercury on the 5th, and near Venus on the 9th. She is near and to the west of Jupiter during the evening hours of the 11th, and to the east of the planet during the evening hours of the 12th. She is near Mars during the night hours of the 17th and 18th, and near Saturn during the evening and night hours of the 18th; the nearest approach will be at 7h. p.m. Her phases or times of change are:—

New Moon	on the 6th at 58 minutes after 9h in the afternoon.
First Quarter	" 14th " 42 " 8 " morning.
Full Moon	" 22nd " 31 " 7 " morning.
Last Quarter	" 29th " 21 " 2 " afternoon.

She is nearest the Earth on the morning of the 5th, and furthest from it on the morning of the 17th.

Mercury is a morning star, rising on the 3rd at 4h. 58m. a.m. on the 8th, at 4h. 34m. a.m., on the 13th at 4h. 35m. a.m., on the 18th at 4h. 53m. a.m., on the 23rd at 5h. 19m. a.m., and on the 28th at 5h. 46m. a.m.; or being 1h. 7m., 1h. 40m., 1h. 47m., 1h. 37m., 1h. 19m., and 1h. 2m. respectively before sunrise on these mornings. He is in his ascending node on the 4th, stationary among the stars on the 5th, and near the Moon on the same day; in perihelion on the 9th, and at his greatest western elongation (18 deg. 2 min.) on the 12th.

Venus is still an evening star, setting on the 8th at 6h. 32m. p.m., or 1h. 10m. after the Sun; on the 18th at 6h. 23m. p.m., or 1h. 23m. after sunset; and on the 28th at 6h. 19m. p.m., or 1h. 40m. after sunset. She is near the Moon on the 9th, and in aphelion on the 18th. She is due south on the 1st at 2h. 13m. p.m., on the 15th at 2h. 25m. p.m., and on the last day at 2h. 43m. p.m.

Mars sets on the 9th at 2h. 38m. a.m., on the 19th at 2h. 8m. a.m., and on the 29th at 1h. 44m. a.m. He crosses the meridian or is due south on the 1st at 10h. 5m. p.m., on the 15th at 9h. 10m. p.m., and on the last day at 8h. 19m. p.m. He is stationary among the stars on the 8th, and near the Moon on the 18th.

Jupiter is an evening star, and sets on the 1st at 8h. 57m. p.m., on the 8th at 8h. 33m. p.m., on the 18th at 7h. 59m. p.m., and on the 28th at 7h. 27m. p.m., or 2h. 48m. after sunset. He is near the Moon on the 11th, and in his descending node on the 24th. He is due south on the 1st at 5h. 2m. p.m., and on the last day at 3h. 24m. p.m.

Saturn sets on the 1st at 3h. 54m. a.m., on the 9th at 3h. 20m. a.m., on the 19th at 2h. 38m. a.m., on the 29th at 1h. 56m. a.m., and on the last day at 1h. 44m. a.m. He is near the Moon on the 18th. He is due south on the 1st at 10h. 26m. p.m., on the 15th at 9h. 28m. p.m., and on the last day at 8h. 23m. p.m.

Some experiments showing the adaptability of the Boyton Life Dress to the purposes of torpedo warfare took place opposite the Granville Cliff, St. Lawrence-on-Sea, on the 20th inst.

ROYAL WORCESTER CHINA, from the celebrated ROYAL PORCELAIN WORKS can be obtained from OETZMANN and CO., Complete House Furnishers, 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, who are also SOLE VENDORS of the CLEOPATRA TOILET SERVICES (over, basin, &c., complete—nine pieces), from 10s. 6d. per set.—Descriptive Price-Lists of the same can be had post-free on application.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

OETZMANN & CO.

67, 69, 71, 73, 77 & 79,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,

NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street; Bedding Factory, Eagle-place, London, N.W. Carpets, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper-Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout.

THE IMMENSE RANGE of PREMISES

formerly the EAGLE BREWERY having been REBUILT and ADDED to their SHOW-ROOMS, it is now one of the largest and most commodious in the world. Comparison of price and quality respectfully solicited before deciding elsewhere. OETZMANN and CO. are enabled to offer special advantages to Country Customers in delivery of Goods by their own large FANTASTIC VANS, and fixing in position by competent persons. Descriptive Catalogue, the best Furnishing Guide extant, post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

PAINTINGS, OILS, CHROMOS, PHOTOS, and ENGRAVINGS.—A choice assortment, in handsome frames. The paintings are by well-known artists, and the names guaranteed. Also, a large assortment of Bronzes, Statuettes, Vases, Clocks, Antique Furniture, and artistic furnishing items. A Catalogue, the best Furnishing Guide extant, post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

CABINET and UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.—Best Plate Chimney-Glasses, in double-gilt frames, elegant pattern, large size, 2 guineas; magnificent ditto, from 5 to 20 guineas. Handsome Walnut Chiffonier, shaped front, and richly-carved mountings, 4 ft. 3 guineas. Noble Mahogany Sideboards, 6 ft., 8 guineas; 8 ft., from 9 guineas upwards. Easy-Chairs, from 1s. 9d. upwards. Drawing and Dining Room Chairs, from 10s. 6d. each.—OETZMANN and CO.

STANLEY DINING-ROOM SUITE in solid carved Spanish Mahogany, upholstered in best maroon leather; comprising a noble Couch, two Easy-Chairs, and six Chairs; price 14 guineas. Quality guaranteed. A variety of other patterns on show, from 8 guineas upwards. Massive Mahogany Telescope Dining Tables, 6 ft. by 4 ft., patent metallic screw, 2s. 1s.—OETZMANN and CO.

DRAWING-ROOM SUITES.—OETZMANN and CO.—Elegant Drawing-Room Suites, richly-carved Italian Walnut Wood; upholstered very soft and comfortable, in best Rep, consisting of a Couch, two Easy-Chairs, and six Chairs, price 15 guineas; ditto, very handsome design, upholstered in rich Faintine, made and finished in superior style, 20 guineas; ditto, very elegant design, richly upholstered in finest Satin, and finished in the best possible manner, 25 guineas. Also a variety of other Drawing-Room Suites, in Black and Gold, Early English, and other designs.—OETZMANN and CO.

BEDDING DEPARTMENT.—Handsome 3 ft. 6 in. Mahogany Chest of Drawers, with deep bottom drawer, 2 guineas; Spanish Mahogany Wardrobes, from 5 guineas upwards. Bed-Room Suites, enamelled imitation of ebony, satin-wood, and other handsome woods, consisting of Wardrobe, Chest of Drawers, Washstand, Toilet Table, Toilet Glass, best plate, 16 in. by 12 in. Towel Alver, three Chairs, and pedestal Toilet Cupboard, all complete for 4 guineas.

SEASIDE LODGINGS.—EXTRA BED to accommodate Visitors.—A strong IRON FOLDING BEDSTEAD, 6 ft. long by 3 ft. 6 in. wide, with a wool mattress, bolster, and pillow complete, for 21s. Same items, 3 ft. wide, 21s. complete. Best carefully packed. Forms a portable package. Also, to suit the above, 2 white calico, 1 ditto, 1 ditto, 1 pillow case, 3 white flannel blankets, and 1 counterpane, for 25s. 6d. the set. Iron Easy-Chair Bedstead, 6 ft. by 3 ft., with cushions, forming the mattress. Price, complete, 21s. Address order to OETZMANN and CO.

BEDSTEADS. BEDDING.

BEDSTEADS. BEDDING.

BEDSTEADS. BEDDING.

LINOLEUM.—OETZMANN and CO. LINOLEUM.—Wagon, soft carpet-like in appearance, and very durable. All the NEW PRIZE DESIGNS are now in stock. A visit of inspection solicited. Prices below those usually charged for this favourite floor covering. The Trade supplied. OETZMANN and CO.

TURKEY CARPETS.—CLEARANCE SALE.—OETZMANN and CO.—A quantity of Turkey, Indian, Persian, Tabriz, Kashmir, Farsi, and other Carpets, Serapeds, Koolas, Ghordies, and Kelim Carpets and Rugs, clearing out at greatly reduced prices, ranging from 1s. 6d. to 50 guineas. A reduced Price-List, with sizes and descriptions, sent post-free on application. Prices will be found much below those usually charged. A quantity of Indian Rugs, 12s. 6d. each; some very handsome ditto at 3s. to 4s.—OETZMANN and CO.

EVERYONE SHOULD SEE the large, handsome AXMINSTER HEARTH RUGS that OETZMANN and CO. are now selling at 9s. 11d. each; usual price 15s. 6d. An immense variety of Designs and Colours to suit every pattern in Carpets. A visit of inspection solicited.

CRETONNES.—OETZMANN and CO. CRETONNES.—An immense assortment of all the choicest designs in this fashionable material, in every variety of style and colouring; excellent imitations of the Tapestry, some being exact copies of the finest Gobelins Tapestry. Prices varying from 9s. 6d. to 11s. 6d. per yard. Patterns sent into the country by sitting mail required.

BOMBAY STRIPED CURTAINS.—The cheapest CURTAINS extant, effective style, 3 yards long by 6 ft. 6 in. wide, 9s. 6d. per pair; 4 yards, 11s. 6d.; 4 yards, 13s. 6d. Patterns on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

KITCHEN REQUISITES.—OETZMANN and CO.'S TEN-POUND SET (List No. 2, page 231 in their "GUIDE TO HOUSE FURNISHING") sent post-free on application) includes Tables, Chairs, Clock, &c., with the various Culinary Utensils and Requisites, and all the most useful articles required in every kitchen, each being of superior quality, and is the most practical selection extant.

CLEOPATRA TOILET SERVICE.—OETZMANN and CO.'S New Special Design, a beautiful Grecian shape, meets the great desideratum of art-manufacture—viz., the shape best adapted for purposes of use required, combined with the most artistic design and decoration. Prices from 10s. 6d. per set. Descriptive Price-List post-free.

NOTICE.—CLEOPATRA TOILET SERVICES.—Messrs. OETZMANN and CO. have COMPLETED ARRANGEMENTS at the works, affording GREATLY INCREASED FACILITIES for PRODUCING this SPECIALITY, and hope to keep pace with the demand, which they have hitherto been unable to do. Customers can now be supplied with the most artistic design and decoration. OETZMANN and CO., Complete House Furnishers, 67 to 79, Hampstead-road. Descriptive Price-List post-free.

OETZMANN and CO., COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHERS, 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, Hampstead-road (three minutes' walk from Tottenham-court-road and convenient with guaranteed quality. Orders per post, large or small, receive prompt and faithful attention in the selection. Close at Seven, and on Saturdays at Four o'clock. Descriptive Catalogue post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free, OETZMANN & CO., HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

AT PETER ROBINSON'S

WAREHOUSE FOR BLACK GOODS,

REGENT-STREET.

For TWO GUINEAS and up to FIVE, CHOICE BLACK MATERIAL COSTUMES COMPLETE, (Princess Polonaises and Skirts.) Patterns and Photos free.

URGENT MOURNING.

"ON RECEIPT OF LETTER or TELEGRAM," MOURNING GOODS will be forwarded to all parts of England, on approval—no matter the distance—with an excellent fitting Dressmaker (if required), without extra charge. PETER ROBINSON, 205, 206, 207, 208, Regent-street, London.

DEEP MOURNING ORDERS.

DRESSES, Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, and all mourning articles, in the most appropriate and best styles, at the lowest possible cost. Dressmaking and Millinery, by clever and expert artists.

INEXPENSIVE MOURNING, as well as the Richest Qualities, can be supplied by PETER ROBINSON upon the most advantageous terms to Families. The Court and Family Mourning Warehouse, 205, 206, 207, 208, Regent-street, London.

BLACK SILKS.

PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, has just completed some large Purchases from the Lyons Manufacturers at a great advantage, and can supply REALLY GOOD BLACK SILKS at 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 10s. 6d.

The EMPRESS BLACK SILK, at 8s. 6d. is specially recommended for good wear by the Manufacturer.

Also, DECOUVRE PURE BLACK SILK, which gives universal satisfaction, at 5s. 7s., and 8s. For Patterns, address PETER ROBINSON, REGENT-STREET, Nos. 205 to 212, where the above can only be obtained.

BLACK SILK DRESS VELVETS.

Exceedingly good quality, at 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 14s. 6d. A Special Bargain in Lyons Velvet, at 10s. 6d.

Black Silk-Trimming Velvets, at 5s. 6d. and 6s. 6d. At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 205 to 212.

SUPERB NOVELTIES

at PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET. Just received, The New Silk Costumes, The New Material Costumes, The New Jackets and Mantles, The New Millinery, and other New Goods for the Autumn Season. Inspection invited.

A BLACK SILK COSTUME,

MADE OF RICH LYONS SILK, for 4s. and 5s.; formerly 6s. and 7s. for 7s.; formerly 9s. for 10s.; formerly 11s. for 12s.

Exquisitely cut and trimmed by French Artists. Photographs and Patterns of the Silk free. Address—PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 205 to 212.

THE NEW CRAPE.

The Pure Silk Gordian Crape, for Widows and Families. Its advantages are—that it is made of Silk so pure that it will not crease when set upon. It is a richer black, free from dress and the gummed appearance so objectionable in other Crape. The wear of every yard is guaranteed.

The Gordian Crape is a Speciality, only to be obtained at PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET. THE MOURNING WAREHOUSE, Nos. 205 to 212. Excellent quality. Patterns free.

FUR-LINED CLOAKS

at Summer Prices. Good useful Cloaks at 8s. 6d. and 9s. 6d.

SEMI-FITTING SEAL PALETOTS,

33 inches long, for 9s. 35 inches long, for 10s. 6d. At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET.

NOTICE.—In reference to the above advertisement, It is important that letters should be clearly addressed to 205 to 212, REGENT-STREET.

SWAN and EDGAR beg to announce that they are now daily displaying, in all departments, the choicest Novelties in LADIES' DRESSES for the approaching season. The prices marked will be found lower than any hitherto known for goods of such excellence. Special attention is called to a new stock of Black and Coloured SILKS, made for wear, at 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d., and 4s. 11d. a yard. An immense variety of Dress Materials in new textures, from 12s. a yard; patterns free. Selected Paris Styles in Costumes, Mantles, and Jackets for autumn wear, and estimates on application. Piccadilly and Regent-street, London.

ROYAL DEVONSHIRE SERGES.

woven from pure Wool, for LADIES' DRESSES in Navy or Dark Indigo Blue, Black, Dark Brown, Fawn, and other solid colours.

price 1s. 11d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 11d. per yard. For CHILDREN a lower quality is made, very strong, at 11d. and 12d. per yard.

For BOYS' HARD WEAIR is extra milled, price, 4d. in wide, 3s. 6d. per yard. Books of Patterns sent post-free by SPEARMAN and SPEARMAN,

The ROYAL DEVONSHIRE SERGES is the only true Yachting Serge. See Water cannot injure it. Any Length is Cut by the Factors, and carriage is paid to all Ports above Two Pounds in value to and as far as London.

EGERTON BURNETT'S

ROYAL WELLINGTON SERGES.

"The Court Circular," "The Queen," "Myra's Journal," &c., unanimously testify to the superiority of Egerton Burnett's Serges as far excellence the material for ladies' wear. EGERTON BURNETT, Wellington, Somerset, respectfully calls attention to these admirable SERGES. He has repeatedly had the honour of supplying them direct to the ROYAL FAMILY, and orders are daily arriving from all parts of the kingdom. Being woven from the finest wools, and of a permanent patent dye, which neither rain nor salt water can affect, they surpass all others in appearance and durability.

Prices from 1s. 6d. to the finest, at 4s. 6d. per yard. E. B.'S NEW HAND-MADE VIGOROUS CACHEMIRE (KILNEN) A SPECIAL STRONG MAKE IS MADE FOR BOYS' AND GENTLEMEN'S SUITS, 4s. 6d., from 3s. 6d. per yard. Pattern-Books of the various makes and shades sent free by post, and carriage is paid to all Ports above Two Pounds in value to and as far as London or London on parcels over 2s. Goods packed for exportation.

EGERTON BURNETT, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

ROYAL ESTAMINE SERGES.—A Stock of this beautiful warm material in the new dark shades, now selling at 4s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. JOHN HOOPER, 25, Oxford-street, W.

THE STOCK of MADAME SILVESTRE, late of Vero-street, Cavendish-square, W. (Modiste by Appointment to her Majesty), has been purchased at a large discount off by PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, W., and will be on sale, together with extraordinary purchases (in anticipation of the Autumn Season) in SILKS, FURS, MANTLES, and COSTUMES, on MONDAY, OCT. 1, and following Days. For Particulars please write for Circular.

WE ARE NOW OFFERING A SPECIAL PURCHASE OF

PARISIENNE SILKS, of extreme Richness, in New Shades, at 5s. 6d. per yard; usual price for this quality, 6s. 6d. Patterns free.

ONE THOUSAND PIECES OF

BLACK SILKS (Extra Width), at 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free from PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

COLOURED GENOA VELVETS,

to match every silk, short pile, well covered, suitable for gowns, 6s. 11d. per yard. Any length cut. Patterns free.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

NEW AUTUMN GOODS. SILK COSTUMES of the most fashionable description, in all the New Colours, from Paris Models, commencing at 5s. 6d.

THREE HUNDRED

BLACK SILK COSTUMES, at 4s. 6d. These dresses are made from good Lyons Silk, and are specially recommended. Five yards Silk given for Bodice.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-ST., W.,

having concluded the purchase of large quantities of SEAL FUR SKINS and Squirrel Furs, they are now on sale, as quoted below:—Russian Seal Fur Jackets, loose shapes, 24 to 28 in. deep, 6 to 10 ga. 25 to 30 in. deep, 9 to 10 ga. 30 to 36 in. deep, 12 to 14 ga. South Sea Seal, loose shapes, 2 to 4 ga.

THE LATEST PRODUCTIONS IN

MANTLES and PALETOTS. Cashmere Circulars, lined Fur, 2 to 5 ga. Cashmere Paletots, lined Fur, 3 to 5 ga. Silk Circulars, lined Fur, 3 to 5 ga. Silk Paletots, lined Fur, 3 to 5 ga.

THE NEW DIAGONAL

CLOTH PALETOTS, 2 ga. to 5 ga. The New Beaver Cloth Paletots, 2s. 6d. to 5 ga. New Ulster Mantles, 17s. 6d. to 22s. 6d. Waterproof Mantles and Ulsters, 17s. 6d. to 22s. 6d.

A LARGE COLLECTION of NOVELTIES FOR

AUTUMN and WINTER DRESSES, in every variety of Fabric and Shade of Colour, from 12s. 6d. to 42s. the Full Dress. Patterns free.

IN 22 NEW SHADES OF COLOUR.

CACHEMIRE DE PARIS. This elegant material is all wool, beautifully soft, and richer in its colouring than any article previously introduced, 4s. 6d. wide, 2s. 11d. and 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

VERY FASHIONABLE THIS SEASON.

CASHMERE MERINOES, all Wool. This most useful material can be had in every new Shade of Bronze, Vert, Bouteille, Prune, &c., from 2s. 6d. to 2s. 11d. per yard, 4s. 6d. wide. Patterns free.

A NEW FABRIC FOR PALETOTS, &c.

POIL DE CHAMEAU. This elegant Fabric, though very warm, is remarkably light and soft, and can be had in choice Shades of Fawn, Drab, Grey, Light Brown, &c., 6d. in wide, from 4s. 6d. per yard.

A VARIETY of NEW MATERIALS FOR

WARM WINTER PETTICOATS, including a large assortment of Silk-striped Cloth Skirts, Reversible Felts, plain Colours, new Striped, Flannel Cashmere, &c., from 3s. 6d. to 6s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free.

IN WHITE, BLACK, AND ALL NEW COLOURS.

VELVET—FINISHED VELVETEENS, beautifully soft, rich, and very wide. This charming fabric can be had in Black, from 2s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. per yard, and in 25 choice Shades of Colour at 2s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, 105 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

AUTUMN COSTUMES.

New Designs in Cashmere and Silk Costumes, 4 ga. Specialties in Travelling Costumes, 3s. 6d. to 7 ga. Gilette and Matching Silk Costumes, 4s. 6d. PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

WOOLLEN CLOTHS.—Waterproof

Tweeds, Matisse Cloth, Sealskins, Fur Beavers, and other materials for Ladies' Jackets; also every kind of Woollen Goods for Gentlemen's and Boys' wear. C. MEEKING and CO., Woollen Warehouse, 111 and 112, Hatton-garden, Holborn-circus, London.

SANGSTER and CO., UMBRELLA

MAKERS. Six Prize Medals awarded. Sangster's Silk Alpaca Umbrella, upon Fox's Celebrated Paragon Frames, all bearing Trade Marks, and with the new Automatic Runner, are the Cheapest, Smallest, Lightest, and Best in the world.

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR THE AUTOMATIC.

This invention has long been sought after. THE PATENT AUTOMATIC RUNNER is Self-opening—Self-closing. Always ready. 140, Regent-street, W. 75, Chesham-street, E.C. 10, Royal Exchange. Also Wholesale and Shipping Depot. Philadelphia Exhibition, Prize Medal and Diploma awarded.

PRETTY FLOWERS.—Bridal, Bridesmaids, and other Bouquets of the choicest flowers tastefully arranged at very moderate prices. Wreaths and Crosses. Loose cut flowers forwarded to any part of London or to most any train.—WILLIAM HOOPER, 25, Oxford-street, London, W.

TRAVELLING BAGS.

Write for their "Bag" Catalogue (Illustrated). MAPPIN and WEBB, 76, 77, & 78, OXFORD-STREET, } London. W.: 2, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, CITY.

MUSICAL-BOX DÉPÔT for NICOLE,

FRERES', celebrated Instruments. Boxes of exquisite tone, in rosewood cases, playing four airs, 24s. A choice assortment of Boxes, playing the most popular airs. Lists of tunes and prices gratis and post-free.—11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.

GOLDSMITH'S ALLIANCE Limited, request the attention of Purchasers to their PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which, being manufactured on the Premises, are confidently recommended for accuracy and durability.

Prices of Silver Watches.

Patent Lever Watch, jewelled, enamel dial, and seconds 24 14 6 Ditto, jewelled in four holes, and capped 24 12 0 Ditto, the finest quality, jewelled in six holes 24 10 0 Silver Watches—Size for Ladies.

Patent Lever Watches, with gold dial, jewelled 11 11 0 Ditto, with richly engraved case 12 12 0 Ditto, with very strong case, and jewelled in four holes 14 14 0

Gold Watches—Size for Gentlemen.

Patent Lever Watches, jewelled, seconds, and capped 12 12 0 Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance 12 10 0 Gold Watches in Hunting Cases, 23s. extra.

Lists of prices, with remarks on watches, gratis and post-free. The Goldsmith's Alliance (Limited), 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

GASLIERS, in Crystal, Glass, Ormolu, or Bronze, Medallion Fittings, &c. A large assortment always on view. Every article marked with plain figures. D. SULETT and CO., Manufacturers, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S

WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER.

IT CANNOT FAIL TO RESTORE

GREY HAIR TO ITS YOUTHFUL COLOUR, GLOSS, AND BEAUTY. WHEN THE HAIR TURNS GREY, LOSES ITS LUSTRE, AND FALLS OUT, IT SIMPLY REQUIRES NOURISHMENT. MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER, BY ITS GENTLE TONIC ACTION, STRENGTHENS AND INVIGORATES THE HAIR, AND, BY THE OPERATION OF NATURAL CAUSES, GREY OR WHITE HAIR IS QUICKLY RESTORED TO ITS YOUTHFUL COLOUR, GLOSS, AND BEAUTY. IT WILL STOP ITS FALLING, AND INDUCE A HEALTHY AND MOST LUXURIOUS GROWTH. USE NO OTHER PREPARATION WITH IT, NOT EVEN OIL OR POMADE, OR ZYLO-BALSAMUM.

CAUTION!!—The Genuine only in Pink Wrappers.

Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers in Toilet Articles.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Mrs. S. A. ALLEN manufactures two entirely distinct Preparations for the Hair. One or the other is suited to every condition of the Human Hair. Both are never required at one time. For details as to each preparation, kindly read above and below this paragraph. Readers can easily determine which of the two they require.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S

ZYLO-BALSAMUM,

For the Growth and Preservation of the Hair. A cooling transparent liquid, entirely vegetable, without sediment.

A SIMPLE TONIC AND DRESSING

OF INESTIMABLE VALUE TO BOTH SEXES THE FAVOURITE WITH THE YOUNG AND ALL THOSE WHO HAVE NO GREY HAIR. PRE-MATURE LOSS OF THE HAIR, SO COMMON IN THESE DAYS, MAY BE ENTIRELY PREVENTED BY THE USE OF ZYLO-BALSAMUM. PROMPT RELIEF IN THOUSANDS OF CASES HAS BEEN AFFORDED WHERE THE HAIR HAS BEEN COMING OUT IN HANDFULS. IT PROMOTES A HEALTHY AND VIGOROUS GROWTH. HAIR DRESSED WITH ZYLO-BALSAMUM IS ALWAYS CLEAN, FREE FROM DANDRUFF, AND WITH THAT BEAUTIFUL GLOSS ONLY SEEN IN HEALTHY HAIR. IT IS DELIGHTFULLY FRAGRANT. NO OIL OR POMADE SHOULD BE USED WITH IT.

CAUTION!!—The Genuine only in Blush Grey Wrappers.

Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and Dealers in Toilet Articles.

GOLDEN STAR

BAY-LEAF WATER.

Triple distilled from the fresh leaves of the Bay Tree (Myrica Aëria). For the Toilet, Nursery, and Bath.

A few drops on a sponge or towel moistened with water, and the face and hands bathed with it, is very beneficial to the skin, removing all roughness. Most highly recommended to apply after shaving. A small quantity in the bath gives a delightful aroma, and it has most remarkable cleansing properties. Particularly adapted to the bathing of infants and young children. Most grateful to invalids and all who suffer from headache from mental labour or fatigue. Buy only the genuine Golden Star Bay-Leaf Water, sold in three sizes Toilet Bottles, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., by Chemists and Perfumers, or on receipt of stamps from the Wholesale Depot, 114 and 116, Southampton-row, London.

WANTED, by a well-introduced

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 1995.—VOL. LXXI.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1877.

WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE.
By Post, 6d.

THE WAR: A HOT CORNER IN THE VALLEY AT THE BATTLE OF SINANKEUI.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

BIRTHS.

On the 28th ult., at Wrottesley, the Lady Wrottesley, of a son.
On the 24th ult., at Fintray House, Lady Forbes, of Cragievar, of a son.
On the 26th ult., at Plowden Hall, Lydbury North, Lady Mary Plowden, of a son.
On the 30th ult., at 19, Portman-square, the Hon. Mrs. Drury Lowe, of a son and heir.
On the 28th ult., at 1, Bryanston-street, the wife of W. A. Sanger, of a son.
On the 26th ult., at Harpenden Hall, Hertford, Mrs. Arthur Griffin Rumball, of a son.
On the 30th ult., at 1, North Villas, Underhill-road, Lorislip-lane, the wife of William Alfred Norman, B.A., of Downing College, Cambridge, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On Aug. 30, 1877, at St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, by the Rev. B. T. Atlay, T. Charles, son of the late Thomas Gill, of Brooklands, Devon, formerly M.P. for Plymouth, to Blanche Isabel, widow of Edward Badham, late of Staverton, near Cheltenham.
On the 26th ult., at Filleigh church, North Devon, Lord Ernest Seymour, third son of the Marquis of Hertford, to Lady Georgiana Fortescue, fourth daughter of Earl Fortescue.
On the 27th ult., at Holy Trinity Church, Clapham-common, by the Rev. Augustus Shears, Vicar of Sibley, Leicestershire, uncle of the bride, assisted by the Rev. G. C. Blackland, brother of the bridegroom, William Athelstan Blackland, Esq., of Clapham, and 32, Lincoln's-inn-fields, to Frances Elizabeth, eldest daughter of William Shears, Esq., of Clapham-common.
On the 12th ult., at St. Mary's Chapel, Isle of Orleans, Quebec, by the Rev. G. Vernon Housman, Edward Brenton Archibald, son of E. M. Archibald, Esq., C.B., her Majesty's Consul-General at New York, to Caroline Roberta Mann, daughter of Joseph W. Leaycraft, Esq., of Beaulieu, Isle of Orleans, Quebec.
On the 2nd inst., at St. Mary's, Sunbury-on-Thames, by the Rev. Thomas Helmore, M.A., Priest in Ordinary to her Majesty's Chapels Royal, assisted by the Rev. C. H. Wenn, M.A., Curate of Sunbury, and the Rev. Harcourt Skrine, M.A., Stafford Francis Still, of Lincoln's Inn, to Sophia Barbara, eldest daughter of John George Holloway, of the Middle Temple, and Sunbury-on-Thames.
On the 26th ult., at All Saints', Oystermouth, by the Rev. Secretan Jones, William Barnett, Esq., of Clifton, to Mary Bruce, eldest daughter of the late D. Nicol, M.D., of Swansea.

DEATHS.

On Aug. 19, at Clinton, British Columbia, in the 32nd year of her age, Anne Sanders, the beloved wife of Edward Howard Sanders, Esq., J.P.
On the 1st inst., at Sandfield House, Waterloo, Liverpool, Octavia, wife of Sir Alexander E. Ramsay, Bart., of Balmain, aged 39.

* The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 13.

SUNDAY, Oct. 7.

Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity.
St. Paul's Cathedral, Harvest-Thanksgivings, collections for Indian famine fund; 10.30 a.m. Rev. Prebendary Rogers; 3.15 p.m. Bishop Claughton; 7 p.m. Rev. M. Tweddell, Curate of St. James's, Piccadilly.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m., Rev. J. Troutbeck; 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Duckworth.
St. James's, noon, Rev. F. Garden, Sub-Dean of the Chapel Royal.
Whitehall, 11 a.m., Savoy, closed.
Temple Church, 11 a.m., Rev. Alfred Blomfield; 3 p.m., Rev. Alfred Anger, the Reader.

MONDAY, Oct. 8.

Rowing Match (championship and £200 a side), Boyd and Higgins, Putney to Mortlake.
University College, 4 p.m., Professor Clifford on Quaternions (first of ten lectures).
King's College, 7 p.m., Mr. W. N. Hartley on Chemistry (beginning of the course).
Races: Newmarket Second October Meeting.
High spring tides.

TUESDAY, Oct. 9.

Church Congress at Croydon.
Medical and Chirurgical Society, 8.30.
Photographic Society, soirée, and exhibition opened, 8 p.m.
Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m. (Dr. Symes Thompson on Physics); and three following days.
South Kensington Museum: Dr. G. Zeri on the Historical Development of Art with General Reference to Architecture, Sculpture, Painting, and the Principles of Aesthetics (first of course of forty lectures), 8 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 10.

Oxford Michaelmas Term begins.
Church Congress at Croydon.
Royal Toxophilite Society, Sir R. McDonnell's prize day.

THURSDAY, Oct. 11.

Old Michaelmas Day.
Church Congress at Croydon.
Royal Toxophilite Society, autumn handicap.

FRIDAY, Oct. 12.

New Shakespeare Society, 8 p.m. (papers by Mr. P. A. Daniel and Mr. F. J. Furnivall).
Clinical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
Church Congress at Croydon.

SATURDAY, Oct. 13.

London Athletic Club, Stamford Bridge.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOM.		WIND.		Rain in 24 hours, in. at 10 a.m. next morning.
	Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum, read at 10 P.M.	Minimum, read at 10 P.M.	General Direction.
Oct. 6.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
7.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
8.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
9.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
10.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
11.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
12.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
13.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
14.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
15.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
16.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
17.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
18.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
19.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
20.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
21.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
22.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
23.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
24.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
25.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
26.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
27.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
28.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
29.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47
30.	29.30	50.2	46.0	87	6	59.8	44.4	W. NNW. NNE.	47

* Dew.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:-
Barometer (in inches) corrected .. 30.70 30.76 30.72 30.72 30.70 30.63
Temperature of Air .. 50.2 50.2 50.2 50.2 50.2 50.2
Temperature of Evaporation .. 49.7 49.7 49.7 49.7 49.7 49.7
Direction of Wind .. W. NNE. ENE. ENE. E. E. ENE.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 13.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
1 40	1 30	2 20	2 40	3 30	4 20	5 10

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS, "THE BRAZEN SERPENT,"
"CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," and "CHRIST ENTERING THE TEMPLE," each 33 ft. by 22 ft.; with "Dream of Pilate's Wife," "Christian Martyrs," &c., at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, W. Daily, 10 to 6, 1s.

CRYSTAL PALACE PICTURE-GALLERY.—Open all the year round for the RECEPTION and SALE of PICTURES by the British and Foreign schools. For Particulars apply to Mr. C. W. Wase.

MASKELYNE and COOKE. Daily at Three and Eight o'clock. EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly. Fifth year in London. The present programme embraces: Psycho and Zee, the twin automatic mysteries; the sensational scene, in exposure of so-called Spiritualism, in which Mr. Cooke floats about the room taking the cabinet with him—the most astounding feat ever accomplished; and many other illusory items of novel and original character. Such is the success of the entertainment that it is advisable to book seats in advance, for which there is no charge. Admission, 6s., 3s., 2s., 1s. W. Mouron, Manager.

AGRICULTURAL HALL.—Great Success.—HAMILTON'S RUSSO-TURKISH WAR. Vivid representations of the most important Events of the Campaign. Magnificent Scenes in Constantinople, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Vienna, Belgrade, &c. EVERY EVENING at Eight; Wednesday and Saturday, at Three and Eight.

MR. and Mrs. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT. A HAPPY BUNGALOW: AT THE SEA-SIDE, by Mr. Conroy Grain; and A NIGHT SURPRISE. Admission, 1s., 2s., 3s., 5s.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS
will introduce an ENTIRELY NEW PROGRAMME. The whole of the Songs contained in the first or musical portion of the Entertainment will be changed. New Dances, New Whimsicalities, and New Burlesque Sketches. The New Programme will be given.
EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT, and on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at THREE and EIGHT.
Fountainla, 5s.; Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Doors Open at 2.30 for the Day Performance; at 7.30 for the Evening Performance. No fees. Ladies can retain their bonnets in all parts of the Hall.

THE MOONSTONE. By WILKIE COLLINS. A New Drama. EVERY EVENING at 8.30.—OLYMPIC THEATRE.

Now ready,

THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK for 1878.
containing Twenty-Four Engravings from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—viz. Gates of Constantinople, Ports on the Bosphorus and the Black Sea, Old Modes of Locomotion, &c.; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Licences; Eclipses, Remarkable Events, Post-Office Regulations, and a great variety of Useful and Interesting Information. The Trade supplied by G. VICKERS, Angel-court (172), Strand; and H. WILLIAMS, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1877.

Reasons enough, plausible if not conclusive, may be suggested to account for the fact that General Todleben did not accompany the Russian army when it set forth for the Invasion of Bulgaria, but was left at home at St. Petersburg. He is, perhaps, the best Military Engineer of the present day; but it was not anticipated by the Czar of Russia and his Staff that the war was going to be one of Engineering. A great mistake was made as to the probable character of the campaign. No accurate information had been gained respecting the impediments which the Russian Army would meet with after it had crossed the Danube. There were fortresses, to be sure, too strong to be taken by assault; but they were to have been masked while a sufficient portion of the Russian Army should make a military promenade to Adrianople. It was too easily taken for granted that the strategy to be adopted with success was that of dispersion and extension, rather than of concentration. Confident in the effect which would follow upon striking terror into the minds of the Turks, the Staff of the Czar eschewed the rules of scientific warfare and undertook enterprises which, if they failed of success, would almost necessarily entail great disasters. They have probably come to see their error. Their neglect of the most obvious precautions has proved to be more than a counterpoise to the superiority of numbers which they were supposed to possess. The consequence is that there is no probability of finishing the war during the present campaign. The presence of General Todleben at Plevna may be held as ground for the assurance that time and labour will for some weeks to come be more in requisition than mere impetuosity and dash, and that if Osman Pasha is to be forced out of the strong position which he holds before winter sets in, the slower methods of science will be substituted for those more showy but disastrous ones which have hitherto been employed.

An army without a capable head; all the material forces which, properly handled, might have achieved, not an easy, but a certain, conquest; bravery and devotion the most thrilling wasted as completely as the spilling of water upon the ground; fierce fighting without any decisive results; exhaustive conflicts, devoid, as far as one can see, of meaning;—such, hitherto, has been the campaign in Bulgaria. And one knows not whether to attribute to the Turks or the Russians the lower conception of the duties of generalship. On the whole, we fear it must be confessed that, for immediate objects, the Turks have a slight advantage. There has been nowhere, on their part, any considerable inferiority even of numbers. Their troops are better armed than are those of the Russian Emperor. Their knowledge of the ground under contention is naturally fuller and more to be relied upon than that of the invaders. They are not exempt, it is true, from the paralysing influence of divided commands, yet, on the whole, the great majority of their soldiers, of whatever post, high or low, are conscious that they fight for the continuance of an ascendancy which Eastern Rule has conferred upon the representatives of Islam. They are not, therefore, likely, even if they are able, to appreciate the probabilities of what lies before them. They do not seem to admit that in the end they must be worsted in the struggle. They hope to maintain by their arms that deliverance from the tutelage of the Western Powers which they have not feared to proclaim to the world as their right. Their military morale is at a high point of excitement, and, looking back upon what has occurred in days long gone by, and especially since the opening of the present campaign, they deem themselves justified in putting forth their utmost strength, inasmuch as they believe that they will not have done so in vain.

The Russians, on the other hand, have to pay, as they themselves admit, a heavy penalty for their earlier errors. Their reverses, following hard upon the first flush of apparent success, have brought with them, as might have been expected, some discouragement. The system of warfare sanctioned by their chiefs has tested with terrible severity their patriotic and martial spirit. They are still sound in their allegiance. There is no evidence that they have become lax in their discipline. They attempt whatever they are told to attempt with a verve which, all things considered, is astonishing. Strong as they know themselves to be, however, they also know that incapacity at head-quarters bids them undertake tasks which no soldiers ought to be asked to perform, while in numberless cases, as they cannot but be aware, to be wounded by the foe is to be exposed to a worse fate than death upon the battle-field. Of course, this aspect of affairs, even although it may not have undermined the spirit of the men, can hardly have failed to have awakened in their breasts a strong feeling of disappointment, and perhaps the very best prospect which the Russian army could have before it would be the transference of the Command in Chief to one competent to recognise and meet all the responsibilities of the position.

The arrival of General Todleben at Head-Quarters was not a day too soon. A genius for war, happily for mankind, is not hereditary, nor is it a matter of course that the sons of Emperors, however highly qualified in other respects, should possess within themselves the instincts which the chief command of a great army presupposes. Grand Dukedoms do not necessarily attract towards themselves even supplementary talent. Though General Todleben has acquired a high reputation for scientific skill, he has hitherto employed it in defensive rather than offensive strategy. But there is little doubt that if he is let alone his methods of warfare will largely supersede those which have hitherto been blindly adopted. It may be confidently hoped that henceforth there will not be that waste, one might almost call it that wanton waste, of human life which the Russian command has until recently displayed. There will, perhaps, be less of sensationalism and more of true science. It is not to be inferred that the difficulties which the incapacity of the Czar's Staff has brought upon the Army are insurmountable. That they are great is clear enough, but experience is the most efficient of teachers. Even Russian Dukes are bound to listen to the reiterated monitions of indisputable facts. There are still on the side of the invaders most of the elements of eventual success. But they will have to wait and work; to woo victory by patience and foresight in order to win it. They must be lowly as well as brave. They must neglect no chances if they would secure fortune in their favour. They have before them, even now, an enterprise of surpassing magnitude, and it seems not unlikely that in accomplishing it they will become enlightened as to the only sure means of achieving solid and permanent triumph.

In the circumstances to which we have alluded, the Czar and the counsellors who have nearest access to him have begun to perceive that no help which they can legitimately secure is to be thrust aside. It seems that they are holding a different tone towards Serbia and even Greece than that which they displayed at the commencement of the campaign. It is by no means certain that they will not accept help from the little State upon whose heroic efforts some months since they looked with proud disdain. If the neutrality of Austria can be secured Serbia might undoubtedly render some aid by blocking the road between Plevna and Sofia. But we hope it will not come to this. One cannot but dread any extension of the area of the present struggle. The present campaign draws to its close, and the conclusion of it, we trust, will admit of such an interposition by the neutral Powers of Europe as may put an end to one of the most savage and sanguinary conflicts of the present century.

THE COURT.

The Queen and Princess Beatrice continue at Balmoral Castle.

The Princess of Wales, with her children, lunched with her Majesty yesterday week. Mr. Henry Lambert's choir came from Glasgow to the castle and sang a selection of music in the ball-room before the Queen, the Princess of Wales, Princess Beatrice, and the young Princes and Princesses of Wales; the ladies and gentlemen and servants of the Royal household and their families, as well as some of the tenants, were present. Prince Leopold arrived at Balmoral. The Duke of Connaught and Strathearn left the castle on Saturday last on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Breadalbane at Taymouth. On Sunday the Queen and Princess Beatrice attended Divine service, performed at Balmoral by the Rev. Archibald Campbell, of Crathie. Her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and Princess Beatrice, drove to the Geldie Shiel on Monday. Prince Leopold drove to the Linn of Quich. Viscount Macduff and Colonel the Hon. C. Lindsay and Miss Lindsay arrived at the castle. Miss Lindsay, Viscount Macduff, and the Right Hon. R. A. Cross, dined with the Queen.

Her Majesty has paid frequent visits to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Abergeldie Castle, and, accompanied by the members of the Royal family, has made various excursions, among which have been those to the Linn of Dee and the Derry. The Queen has made a donation of £250 to the Red Cross Society's funds for the relief of sick and wounded of both armies in the East.

The Lord Chancellor has succeeded the Right Hon. R. A. Cross as Minister in attendance on her Majesty. Major-General Ponsonby has left, and Sir Thomas Biddulph remains at the castle.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, with their children, continue at Abergeldie Castle. Their Royal Highnesses have frequently visited the Queen at Balmoral, and have also made varied excursions in the neighbourhood. The Duke of Connaught has dined with the Prince and Princess. On Tuesday the Prince and Princess had a picnic party at Loch Maick. The Prince drove to Ballater to meet the party from Abynne Castle, and, being there nearly half an hour before the others arrived, had refreshment at the Invercauld Arms, subsequently taking leave of Lord Fife at the station on the arrival of the party, which consisted of the Marquis and Marchioness of Huntley, Lord Granville Gordon, Lady Margaret and Lady Grace Gordon, and Mr. Oliver.

Princess Louise of Lorne and the Marquis of Lorne arrived at Greenock yesterday week from the south, and drove to Prince's Pier, where they embarked on board the Duke of Argyll's steam-yacht Columba for Inverary Castle.

The Duke of Connaught arrived at Taymouth Castle on Saturday last on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Breadalbane. His Royal Highness travelled by special train to Aberdeen, and joined the mail to Stanley, where another special train conveyed him to Aberfeldy. Triumphant arches were erected, and the Duke was enthusiastically welcomed. He drove to Taymouth in company with Lord and Lady Breadalbane.

Prince Leopold, accompanied by his host, Mr. Whyte Melville, visited the Tay bridge on Thursday week. His Royal Highness drove to Newport, and crossed thence by steamer to Dundee. After driving to the north end of the bridge, the Prince recrossed the Tay and returned to Mount Melville. In the evening he was present at the annual ball of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club at St. Andrews.

The Duke of Cambridge returned to Gloucester House on Saturday last, from visiting Lord and Lady Londesborough, at Londesborough Lodge, Scarborough. His Royal Highness, during his journey from Scarborough, visited York, and inspected the Scots Greys, now stationed in the York barracks, and also visited the men's quarters and inspected the plan for the new barrack accommodation at York, the contract for the completion of which has just been let to a Bradford firm for some £150,000. He also inspected the staff-quarters which are in course of construction near the city.

The Duchess of Sutherland arrived at Stafford House, St. James's, on Saturday last from Dunrobin Castle.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Hertford have left Ragley Hall for Scotland.

The Earl and Countess of Wilton have arrived in Grosvenor-square from Cowes.

The Earl of Tankerville has arrived at Gordon Castle, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Richmond and Gordon.

The Countess of Harrington, accompanied by Lady Fanny, the Hon. Lincoln, and the Hon. Wyndham Stanhope, has arrived at Harrington House from Stanhope Lodge, Cowes.

Viscountess Combermere has left Tunbridge Wells for Brunswick-square, Brighton.

Lord and Lady Rendlesham have arrived at Rendlesham Hall, Suffolk, from Torquay.

Lord and Lady Odo Russell have arrived in London from the Continent.

Lord and Lady Monson have returned to Belgrave-square from the Continent.

Lady Egerton of Tatton returned to St. James's-square on Saturday last from Germany and Switzerland.

Lord Brabazon has joined the Earl and Countess of Meath and Lady Kathleen Brabazon at Kilruddery House, in the county of Wicklow.

Captain and Lady Rosamond Fellowes have arrived at the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin.

Captain and Lady Florence Duncombe have arrived at Gordon Castle on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Richmond and Gordon.

On Friday, the 28th ult., the mortal remains of Madame Negrete, wife of his Excellency the Minister of Guatemala, were conveyed from the Embassy, 21, Bedford-square, to St. Mary's Cemetery, Kensal-green. The funeral service having been celebrated by Father Liguori, Prior of the Carmelite Fathers, assisted by the cemetery priest, the remains were temporarily deposited in the catacombs, pending their ultimate removal to Guatemala.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

The marriage of Lord Ernest Seymour, third son of the Marquis of Hertford, with Lady Georgiana Fortescue, fourth daughter of Earl Fortescue, was solemnised on Wednesday, the 26th ult., at Filleigh church, North Devon. The party at Castle Hill was restricted to immediate relatives of both families. The bride's dress was composed of white poul-de-soie trimmed with old point de Flandre lace, a wreath of myrtle and jessamine with a long tulle veil fastened to the hair by diamond and pearl marguerites. The bridesmaids were the Ladies Susan, Mary, Alice, and Frances Fortescue, sisters of the bride; Lady Margaret Seymour, niece of the bridegroom; and Miss Leslie, cousin of the bride. They wore Puritan dresses of dove-coloured cashmere with high white muslin caps and aprons. Soon after two o'clock the bride and bridegroom left for Bittescombe Manor, Somerset, to pass the honeymoon. The presents to the bride were numerous and costly.

Marriages are arranged between the Hon. Lionel Massey, late Lieutenant-Colonel and Captain Scots Guards, and third son of the late Lord Clarina, and Miss Bannatyne, eldest daughter of Mr. Alexander Bannatyne, Woodstown, in the county of Limerick; between Mr. Cyril Flower and Miss Constance de Rothschild, eldest daughter of the late Sir Anthony de Rothschild.

Two spoons which are supposed to be relics of the Franklin expedition have been bought by an American Consul at St. John's, Newfoundland.

A Board of Trade inquiry into the circumstances connected with the fatal collision in the Channel between the Avalanche and the Forest was opened on Wednesday, at the Wreck Commissioner's Court, Westminster, before Mr. H. C. Rothery.

Lord Shaftesbury attended a crowded meeting, held in the City Hall, Glasgow, on Monday evening, in celebration of the union of the Young Men's Society for Religious Improvement, instituted in 1824, and the Young Men's Christian Association, instituted in 1841. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Burns, of Castle Wemyss. Lord Shaftesbury, in the course of his address, said that he rejoiced he was invited that night to aid in so good a work as that before them. The inventors of Young Men's Christian Associations, he said, ought to be reckoned among the benefactors of mankind. These associations were not the result of theory, but were the result of much experience and the pressure of necessity. The rush of modern days to the towns was such that they were sucking up the life-blood and strength of the country. We could no more prevent this than we could prevent the movement of the solar system. We must accept it, utilise it, and make it not only safe, but co-conservative. Young persons who left their homes and went to all parts of the country to seek employment had many difficulties and temptations to contend with. They had none to receive, guide, and protect them, and were removed from all domestic influences and securities. It might have been so on a small scale in former days, but now it was on a vast scale—so vast that, considering the numbers of young men in her Majesty's dominions so situated, it had become a question of national importance. He mentioned in detail the social, moral, intellectual, and religious advantages to be derived from these institutions, the friendships they might form for mutual aid and encouragement, the libraries, the lectures, and the time that might be passed pleasantly and profitably otherwise spent in solitude or in mischief.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Bank directors on Thursday morning advanced the rate of discount from 3 per cent, at which it was fixed on Tuesday, Aug. 28, to 4 per cent.

A gang of burglars have lately made the neighbourhood of Clapham the scene of their labours; and in the course of a week or two have broken into nine houses.

The Lord Mayor has consented to distribute the prizes to the successful students at the Young Men's Christian Association next Monday evening, Oct. 8, at seven o'clock.

The extension of the Great Western Railway between Westbourne Junction and Southall was opened last Monday for passenger traffic. The Great Western and Metropolitan new service to Richmond was also opened.

A show of dairy produce, poultry, donkeys, goats, mechanical appliances, &c., was opened at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Wednesday, when a number of prizes were awarded by the judges of the several departments.

A new board school, which will accommodate 271 boys, 271 girls, and 307 infants, was opened last Friday in Medburn-street, St. Pancras. A public meeting was held, presided over by Sir Charles Reed, Chairman of the School Board. There are now in London 166 board schools, giving accommodation for 142,134 children.

In addition to the works by deceased British painters in water colour to be exhibited this winter at the Grosvenor Gallery, it is proposed to exhibit drawings by the old masters. Her Majesty will contribute some drawings from the Windsor library, and it is hoped that the assistance of other well-known collectors may be obtained.

At the weekly meeting of the School Board for London, held on Wednesday—Sir Charles Reed presiding—a resolution was passed, on the suggestion of the Rev. G. M. Murphy, instructing the school management committee to prepare and submit to the board a draught memorial to Government respecting the establishment of secondary schools.

Cardinal Manning presided last Sunday afternoon over a meeting consisting of about 6000 people, on Tower-hill, convened by the Temperance League of the Cross, for the promotion of teetotal principles. Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M.P., having given an address, the Cardinal also exhorted his hearers to observe temperate habits. His Eminence was followed by other speakers, and several men and women took the pledge.

The regimental gold badge of the 2nd London Volunteers was competed for last Tuesday at Rainham, the following being the result of the competition:—Captain Hardy, 30 points; Sergeant H. J. Brown, 22; Corporal Orram, 21; and Colour-Sergeant J. W. Green, 19 points. A match was afterwards fired between the right and left half battalions, which resulted in a victory for the left half battalion.

The autumn term of the Quebec Institute for evening classes will begin on Monday next, Oct. 8. The institute has been removed from Lower Seymour-street to 28, Baker-street. Several additional classes have been formed in connection with South Kensington. Mr. C. J. Plumtre, of King's College, will give a course of lectures on elocution, beginning Oct. 18. The reading-room is supplied with reviews and magazines, and a library of useful books is open to the members.

The verdict and sentence in the case of what is known as the Penge murder have given rise to a great conflict of opinion, as shown by the letters on the subject, some of them very violent, with which the daily papers are flooded. At a meeting held on Wednesday at the Cannon-street Hotel a petition to the Crown in favour of commuting the sentence passed in the Penge case was unanimously agreed to, and a committee appointed to superintend its presentation.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers at the end of the fourth week of September was 76,693, of whom 36,648 were in workhouses and 40,045 received outdoor relief. Compared with the corresponding weeks in the years 1876, 1875, and 1874, these figures show a decrease of 914, 4946, and 19,564 respectively. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 661, of whom 452 were men, 169 women, and 40 children.

The second annual exhibition of poultry and pigeons will be held at the Alexandra Palace on the 16th inst., and two following days. The poultry, which are divided into sixty-one classes, are to be confined to birds bred this year; while the pigeon classes, seventy-four in number, are mostly for birds of any age. Forty-one silver cups, varying in value from three guineas to ten guineas each, are offered for competition, and the total value of the prizes amounts to between £700 and £800.

A conference of librarians began on Tuesday at the London Institution, under the presidency of Mr. J. Winter Jones, Principal Librarian of the British Museum, who gave an opening address on the subject of printing and the formation of collections of books. He advocated the establishment of libraries for general readers in all localities. Several papers were afterwards read. On Wednesday several papers dealing with subjects of organisation and cataloguing were read; and on a paper calling into question the admission of fiction into free public libraries a discussion took place. In the afternoon the members of the conference visited the library of the British Museum, on the invitation of Mr. Winter Jones, the chief librarian. The conference continued until Friday.

We are requested to announce that the Commissioners of her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings intend to distribute this autumn among the working classes and the poor inhabitants of London, the surplus bedding-out plants in Battersea, Hyde, Regent's, and Victoria parks, and in the Royal Gardens, Kew, and the pleasure gardens, Hampton Court. If the clergy, school committees, and others interested will make application to the superintendent of the park nearest to their respective parishes, or to the director of the Royal Gardens, Kew, or the superintendent of Hampton Court gardens, in the cases of persons residing in those neighbourhoods, they will receive early intimation of the number of plants that can be allotted to each applicant, and of the time and manner of their distribution.

Mr. Alderman Nottage and Mr. Alderman Staples, the Sheriffs elect of London and Middlesex, were yesterday week inducted into their office. They subsequently entertained a numerous company at the Albion.—On the following day Mr. Alderman Owden was elected Lord Mayor for the ensuing civic year. Immediately after the announcement of the fact, Mr. Jones moved, "That, in view of the high responsibilities of the office of Lord Mayor, the Aldermanic veto is a valuable security for the dignity of the office," which was carried by a small majority. In the evening a banquet was given at the Mansion House by Sir Thomas White and the Lady Mayoress, in honour of the Lord Mayor elect. Mr. Alderman Owden has appointed Mr. William Jameson Soulsby, barrister-at-law, of the Middle Temple, to be his private secretary during his year of office. Mr. Soulsby has held the same position in the present mayoralty and in that of Mr. Alderman Cotton, M.P.

A wardmote was held at the Guildhall Tavern on Tuesday—the Lord Mayor presiding—to nominate a fit and proper person to represent the Ward of Cheap in the Court of Aldermen. Sir John Bennett was again selected by show of hands against Mr. Deputy Breffit, on whose behalf a poll was demanded. The poll took place on the following day, when Sir John Bennett was again returned at the head of the poll by a great majority. Both candidates briefly addressed a crowd outside the Guildhall Tavern, and Sir John Bennett, in an address he issued subsequently, says:—"I go again before my colleagues as the only candidate you will return. You have done your duty to the great principle I have the honour to represent—a principle which is the very essence of municipal government. I alone can be recognised as the Alderman chosen by the electors of the Ward of Cheap."

At an adjourned meeting of the Royal Humane Society on Wednesday a long list of cases of saving life from drowning was investigated, and rewards were conferred. The silver medallion was unanimously voted to T. W. Shortland, midshipman of her Majesty's ship Pallas, and to W. H. Ford, ordinary seaman, of the same ship, for saving William Nicholls, who was in danger of drowning at Salonica on May 17. On the recommendation of the Lords of the Admiralty, the silver medallion was also voted to Lieutenant J. Brant, R.N., of her Majesty's ship Research, and to Robert Lawrence, able seaman, for saving Henry Godwin at sea off Port Said on July 31. The rescue was effected notwithstanding the presence of sharks, one (a hammer-headed shark) being seen at the time close to the spot. It was incidentally mentioned that Lawrence had distinguished himself in a similar way to the above on three separate occasions since the Research had been in commission.

There were 2410 births and 1237 deaths registered in London last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 96, whereas the deaths were 136 below the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths from smallpox, which had been 10 in each of the two preceding weeks, rose to 13 last week. There were 16 deaths from measles, 40 from scarlet fever, 4 from diphtheria, 18 from whooping-cough, 22 from different forms of fever, and 52 from diarrhoea; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 174 deaths were referred, against 226 and 190 in the two preceding weeks. These 174 deaths were 118 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The Registrar-General states in his report this week that the widow of a carpenter died in South Hackney on Sept. 23, who is stated to have been born on Sept. 10, 1777, and thus to have completed the hundredth year of her age. In Greater London 2956 births and 1452 deaths were registered. In the Outer Ring 6 fatal cases of smallpox were recorded, five of which were unvaccinated cases. Another fatal case of diphtheria was registered at Bromley (Kent). The mean temperature was 48.5 deg., or 6.2 deg. below the average. The duration of registered sunshine during the week was 19.7 hours out of the 83.1 hours that the sun was above the horizon.

The Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of London Cabmen has issued its report, which contains curious information. After reviewing some disputes between masters and men, the report states that during the past year 386 horses and 3431 public carriages were reported unfit for public use; 95 omnibuses, 272 hansoms, and 363 four-wheelers were rejected; while 50 omnibuses and 400 new cabs were placed on the streets. The following licenses were issued:—Metropolitan stage carriages, 1448; hackney carriages, 8262; drivers of stage or hackney carriages, 13,012; conductors, 3742. During the past seven years 83,393 articles were found in public carriages, and given up. Many valuable articles were deposited during the past year with the police, the principal being a bag of jewellery valued at £1000, a case containing £1000 in Bank of England notes, and a diamond necklet worth £1000. In all these cases the drivers were suitably rewarded. The number of summonses issued on the application of the police against metropolitan, stage, and hackney carriages was 4903. These numbers included those engaged at Staines, Epsom, Hampton Court, Richmond, Putney, Wimbledon, Twickenham, Kingston, and other small places near London. In London proper there were not more than 8000 cabmen. There were more summonses taken out during the past year against cabdrivers than any other body of men. Of the 130 persons killed in the streets last year by vehicles 13 only were caused by cabs. During the same period 2740 were injured, of which 618 were by cabs.

MR. FORSTER ON THE WORKING CLASSES.

Mr. W. E. Forster, M.P., addressed a large meeting of Oddfellows and others at Bradford on Saturday evening. He said that one of the most hopeful features of this time and in this country, where there were many things that were not very hopeful, was the amount of self-help and voluntary exertion existing among working men themselves to better their condition in the best possible way—by the exercise of self-denial, care, and foresight. His opinion was that no strike could be a prudent thing for working men at the present moment. All classes must see which could work the hardest for the purpose of endeavouring to get goods produced as cheaply as possible, and the depression of trade would then probably disappear, but he did not believe it would disappear much before. He did not believe it was true that in proportion to their means working people saved less than others. There was no doubt that one great good which friendly societies were doing was that, just in proportion as they were succeeding and had succeeded in perfecting their organisations, they tended to diminish that greatest of all our social dangers—the number of paupers and the cost of their relief. He was not opposed to the poor law, believing that, great as its evils were, it was a necessary law, and, upon the whole, had done more good than harm in England. He believed it was our duty to have a State provision against starvation. He believed that one chief reason why we had got over many social and political changes in this country without those bloody revolutions which had taken place among nations on the Continent was that our people had not had that terrible, embittering, infuriating fear which possessed the people of France, at the time of their First Revolution, of being actually left to starve to death. Still, he thought the friendly societies should make some provision for old age, and he should be glad to offer £50 for those two members of any registered friendly society or societies who should write the best essays on the question of the duty of working men to provide for old age, and especially how members of friendly societies could best do so.

A telegram from Bahia announces that the Emperor and Empress of Brazil landed there on Sept. 26, and were enthusiastically received.

At the Royal South Bucks agricultural meeting on Wednesday the Prince Consort's silver cup, value twenty guineas, for the growth of root crops, was awarded to Mr. Slocock, of Upton; Mr. Pullen, of Horton, taking Mr. Lamber's cup for second prize.

WAR SKETCHES, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

TURKS RETURNING WITH SPOILS FROM THE FRONT.

TURKISH WOUNDED TAKEN OUT OF ACTION AT THE BATTLE OF KIZIL-TEPE.

THE WAR: TURKISH ARTILLERY AT WORK AT THE BATTLE OF KACELJEVO.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE WAR.

The past week, to Thursday evening, has witnessed no active operations in Bulgaria of any great importance. The Turkish army under Mahomet Ali Pasha, between the Lom and the Jantra, met with a serious check on the 21st ult. at Teherkova, and has been obliged, instead of attacking the positions of the Czaritch, to fall back on the line of the Lom. This leaves the Russian communications with the Danube at Sistova perfectly free and secure. The whole of the Russian Imperial Guard has arrived on the Danube, and will reinforce both the Czaritch, and the army of the Grand Duke Nicholas before Plevna. Mahomet Ali Pasha has therefore, by an order of the Sultan published at Constantinople, been superseded in his command of the principal Turkish army, which is to be taken by Suleiman Pasha, late commander of the Turks in the Shipka Pass and the Balkans. The Sultan has also conferred the honorary title of "Ghazi," or "Victorious," on two of his most successful Generals—namely, Osman Pasha, the commander at Plevna, and Ahmed Moukhtar Pasha, commander-in-chief in Armenia. The Russian General Kriloff is to be superseded.

A Russian official despatch, dated from before Plevna on Tuesday last, says:—"Yesterday and to-day the Grand Duke Nicholas, accompanied by Prince Charles and General Todleben, inspected all Russian and Roumanian advanced positions and batteries. All our works, as well as those of the Roumanians, are far advanced. The Turks do not reply to our fire." The Standard has received the following telegram, dated Sistova, Wednesday:—"Very heavy and continuous cannonade is being kept up against the Turkish position opposite to the Gravitz redoubt, shot and shell being poured in without intermission in order to deter the Turks from massing in sufficient numbers in their trenches to direct a sudden attack upon the Roumanian working parties. They have pushed forward their fourth parallel in close vicinity to the great redoubt facing the Gravitz, and it is expected that, should the weather prove favourable, an attack will be made within three days. The entry of the Turkish convoys into Plevna has created a very unfavourable impression here, and, in order to prevent the arrival of any more convoys, two rifle brigades and a strong cavalry force have been sent westward to intercept the columns reported to be already on the road from Orhanieh."

The Emperor Alexander has declared, it is said, that he will not go home till the war is ended. His sixth son, the Grand Duke Paul, has joined the Imperial Camp at Gorny Studeni. There has been some excitement on account of the discovery of a plot in Transylvania to send an irregular invading expedition into Roumania.

News of this week from the seat of war in Asia is rather difficult to estimate. A battle was fought last Tuesday somewhere between Kars and the Russian frontiertown of Alexandropol. It is admitted that 1500 were killed on the Russian side. General Loris Melikoff commanded, under the orders of the Grand Duke Michael. The Daily News' correspondent says that the Russians were victorious, and that they hope to cut off Moukhtar Pasha from Kars.

The war of Montenegro seems to be closed, or at least suspended, as the Prince of Montenegro is satisfied with the conquests he has made.

THE BATTLE OF KIZIL TEPE.

The Russian campaign in Armenia, during the month of August, was a series of military disasters. Our Special Artist (Mr. Bell) with the army of Ahmed Moukhtar Pasha, the Turkish Commander-in-Chief, continues to supply us with illustrations of the battles to the eastward of Kars, which have been partly described. That of Jahnilar, fought on Aug. 18, was the subject of two or three Engravings in our last publication. The Russians were driven back to their entrenched camp at Kizil Tepe, a name which in Turkish means "Red Hill;" and there, on the 25th, they were attacked by the Turks, who succeeded in capturing the position. The following is a correct account of this important action:—

Kars, Aug. 25.
Moukhtar Pasha—having received information of a Russian movement from Kizil Tepe to the camp of Pulwaran, with fifteen battalions, on the night of the 23rd, leaving only five battalions, with little cavalry, and two batteries—gave orders to attack Kizil Tepe on the night of the 24th. At one o'clock in the morning six battalions, under the command of Captain Mehmet Bey, moved out from our centre, drove away the Russian outposts between Sarbatan and Kizil Tepe, and approached the foot of Kizil Tepe. This brigade's movement was supported by the advance of the right Turkish wing, with two brigades under the command of Ferik Ali Pasha. After a short struggle—the firing only lasted two hours—the heights of Kizil Tepe were stormed by the Turkish battalions and taken, besides which some hundred tents were captured, and, it is said, two ammunition-waggons. To judge from the Russian fire, the force holding the heights was very small, and it was clear that the Russians had moved the bulk of their forces to Pulwaran and the mountains in front. It was only an hour after sunrise that fifty Russian guns and several columns of infantry took up position in front of Kurukdara on the eastern side. They opened a formidable cannonade on Sarbatan, and sent great masses of tirailleurs against Kurukdara, just occupied by the Turkish soldiers. Three times they assaulted the eastern and north-eastern side of the hills of Kizil Tepe, but without any result, all their attacks and assaults being repulsed. Meantime, while the struggle was very severe about Kizil Tepe and between that place and Sarbatan, twenty-six battalions of Turkish troops from the left flank, consisting of eighteen battalions under the command of Cheket and Hussein Hamid Pasha, and eight battalions of the garrison of Kars, under the general command of Achmet Pasha, who has recently come back from Bayazid, were seen advancing on our left on the plain. The Russians dispatched large forces of infantry, as well as cavalry and artillery, against the assailants. At the same time a Russian tirailleur column tried to storm the village of Sarbatan, and opened a terrible fire on it. Before the village could be stormed, however, the troops of Hussein Hamid Pasha, supported by four batteries, which opened a fierce fire on the Russians, attacked the enemy. The Russians then changed front from Sarbatan to oppose Hussein's army, facing westward, and some of the sharpest fighting that has been seen during this war ensued. It lasted till half-past two or three o'clock, when the Russians, no longer able to withstand the irresistible attacks and the effective fire of the Turks, commenced retreating en échelon towards Pulwaran, closely followed by our pursuing tirailleurs. At four o'clock in the afternoon all was over. The Turkish Commander-in-Chief, soon after the occupation of Kizil Tepe, went down, and remained there during the whole of the fight.

"I cannot tell you how much I have been surprised by the gallantry and great courage of the Turkish troops. I was present at the fighting at Sarbatan, and there I had occasion to see with my own eyes the intrepid manner in which Turkish soldiers attacked the enemy; but I have heard from high officers present at the assault on Kizil Tepe that their behaviour there had been yet more admirable. The hero of the day was Captain Mehmet Bey. It was he who with his five battalions stormed the heights. But it must be said that all the Turkish commanders did their duty in the best way. It must be remembered, also, that thirteen batteries, with 104 guns, were firing from the Russian side, while the Turkish troops were only able to oppose to them nine batteries, with fifty-four guns. You know that a Russian battery has eight guns, while a Turkish battery has only six.

"Five Turkish battalions and one battery now occupy Kizil Tepe, which has been strongly entrenched. The Turks also pushed forces out into the plain east of Kizil Tepe, where they now are, and where the Russian camp had been before. Between Kizil Tepe and Sarbatan is a long ravine. Behind it were stationed several Turkish battalions and a couple of batteries. The Russian cannonade at ten o'clock against these positions was very severe, but without result. Long columns of fugitives were seen in the afternoon, when the Turks succeeded in pushing back the Russians at Batrakta, on the road to Alexandropol. The losses on the Turkish side are very heavy; the Russian losses in every case much greater."

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

A Cabinet Council was held on Tuesday morning at the Elysée, under the presidency of Marshal MacMahon. All the Ministers were present, with the exception of M. Paris, who is at Chambéry. The sitting was occupied with the discussion of current affairs.

The election meetings in Paris are proceeding quietly. The Government have issued an official list of their candidates, all of whom are avowed Bonapartists or Legitimists.

The Minister of Finance has issued a circular in which he invites his subordinates to afford the prefects all the assistance in their power during the electoral period without going beyond the reserve imposed on them by their official position.

The pastoral of the Archbishop of Bourges, prescribing special prayers on the eve of the elections, is being imitated by many prelates. The Archbishop of Chambéry declares that a supreme effort must be made pro aris et focis, for religion and society, and that abstention from the poll would argue a bad citizen and a bad Christian, for Church and country tearfully entreat that they may not be abandoned to the power of the wicked. All should vote, and vote well—which in the present case means vote for Catholic Conservatives.

A letter of M. Thiers has been published, in which, approving of the idea that to his electoral manifesto he should add a brief résumé, which every deputy could incorporate with his address, and so placard it through France, he says that the crisis did not leave him free to choose between activity and idleness. All who had ever had to do with the conduct of public affairs in France were now defied, and every man who desired for France moderate but ample liberty was bound to resist the pretensions of a power which had become arrogant and blind.

M. Gambetta has visited a large factory at Noisiel, and, addressing the workpeople, expressed his confidence, not only of the return of the 363 members of the late Chamber of Deputies, but that the approaching elections would fulfil his prediction that the new House would contain 400 Opposition members.

M. Gambetta has lodged an appeal against the recent judgment by default condemning him to three months' imprisonment and 2000f. fine.

Prince Napoleon, who represented Ajaccio in the last French Chamber, and whose seat is contested by Baron Haussmann, the well-known Bonapartist, has issued an address to the electors, in which he says that they are deceived in being told that the Empire is coming back. A frankly Republican Government can alone respond, he declares, to the needs of modern society.

M. Rouher has issued an address to the electors of Riom, which may be regarded as the manifesto of the Bonapartist party. He says that the nation being threatened by Radical despotism, the Imperialists have been induced for the time being to forget their animosity to the present Constitution, and to associate themselves with Marshal MacMahon and his party.

In view of the forthcoming elections in France, a large meeting of Radicals was held last Sunday afternoon in Paris to hear M. Clemenceau's defence of the late Chamber. The officials wore blood-red rosettes, the audience was mainly composed of working men of strong Democratic opinions, and the president frequently addressed the assembly as citizens, often exclaiming "Vive la République!" M. Clemenceau's candidature was unanimously accepted.

Judgment has been given by the Tribunal in the appeal of the Lanterne against the sentence of two months' imprisonment and 2000f. fine pronounced against the journal for libelling General Ducrot. The Court has reduced the term of imprisonment to fifteen days, but increased the fine to 3000f.

Judicial proceedings have been instituted against M. Fourot, formerly deputy, on account of a letter which he wrote in reply to the prefect's decree dismissing him from the post of mayor. Fresh dismissals of mayors are announced. Several persons in the provinces have been condemned for libelling Marshal MacMahon and the Ministers. M. Mestreau, a former deputy, is to be prosecuted for libelling Marshal MacMahon and insulting the Ministers in his electoral circular.

The Tribunal of Commerce of Paris has dismissed the demand for the dissolution of the Crédit Mobilier and raised the sequestration of the company's property.

SPAIN.

The King returned to Madrid yesterday week, accompanied by the ex-Queen Isabella, the Duke and Duchess of Montpensier, and the Princess Mercedes. There was a great crowd in the streets and much cheering.

The Minister of Finance has introduced economies to the amount of 1,000,000 pesetas in the expenses of his department, and has also requested his colleagues to make all possible retrenchments compatible with good administration.

Castillo and his son, two prominent leaders in the Cuban insurrection, have surrendered to the authorities.

HOLLAND.

The Ministry, having been defeated in the Second Chamber in the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, have tendered their resignation to the King.

Dr. Van Lansberge, Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, has been created Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Lion of the Netherlands.

GERMANY.

The Emperor William arrived on Sunday at Baden-Baden, where he intends to remain about a fortnight.

An Imperial Order has been issued convoking the German Federal Council at Berlin for the 8th inst.

The opening of the Prussian Diet is expected to take place on the 21st inst., at the Royal Palace.

Signor Crispi, the President of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, previous to his departure from Berlin, sent the following telegram to the Emperor William:—"On the point of bidding farewell to Germany, and regretting not being able to take leave of your Majesty personally, I feel it my duty to express my most sincere thanks to your Majesty, as the sovereign protector of a great nation, for the proofs of sympathy for Italy given by the élite of the German nation."

AUSTRO-HUNGARY.

Prince Auersperg, in the Austrian Reichsrath, and Herr Tisza, in the Hungarian Diet, have replied to questions as to the policy of the Government with regard to the war. Both Ministers declare that absolute neutrality will be maintained, and that the interests of the Monarchy will be the first object considered. Both decline to say what would be done in the case of Serbia becoming a belligerent. The Hungarian Minister appears to have spoken more plainly than Prince Auersperg. He says that the victories of the Turks have undoubtedly made the interests of the Monarchy more secure than they were some months ago. Herr Tisza adds that no alliance of the three Emperors exists with reference to the Eastern Question, and declares that the Austrian Cabinet has never entertained the notion of a division of the Ottoman dominion.

A secret project for helping the Turks is said to have been discovered in Transylvania. Its object is reported to have been the formation of a Hungarian legion of 5000 men, who were to meet at a certain point in the Alps, on the frontier of Transylvania, with the view of making an irruption into Roumania, where, in conjunction with a Turkish corps, they were to destroy the Roumanian railways, with the object of preventing the Russian reserves from proceeding to the seat of war. As usual in such cases, many persons are being arrested, and rumour connects many names, probably without truth, in the wild project. General Klapka denies complicity. He has written a letter in which he states that had he known, during his recent stay in Hungary, that the formation of a Hungarian legion, destined for the invasion of Roumania, was intended, he should have dissuaded his friends from taking such a step, as it would be useless to Turkey, and calculated to bring about divisions in the ranks of the Hungarians.

The death of Baron von Lichtenfels, a member of the Upper House of the Austrian Reichsrath, is announced.

DENMARK.

The Rigsdag was opened on Monday by the President of the Council. There was no Speech from the Throne. Next day the Minister of Finance submitted to the Folkething the Estimates for 1878-9. The Budget for 1877-8 will be laid on the table subsequently.

Prince Waldemar, youngest brother of the Princess of Wales, has passed a brilliant examination, and has been appointed a Sub-Lieutenant in the Navy.

AMERICA.

At the New York Republican Convention resolutions have been passed to the effect that they will take no issue nor express any opinion on the Southern policy of the President. They hope the result will be peace and justice, and that he will advocate a wise reform of the civil service, and oppose the exclusion of officeholders from active participation in politics. The Convention demands the enforcement of the Act for the resumption of specie payments and that the President will oppose the granting of subsidies to corporations. An amendment heartily approving the Southern and reform policies of Mr. Hayes was opposed by Senator Conkling, and rejected by a majority of 295 to 109.

The Minnesota Republican State Convention has re-nominated for Governor Mr. John G. Pittsburg, and has also unreservedly endorsed the President's Southern and civil service policies.

Two of the band of robbers who on the 19th ult. robbed the passenger-train on the Union Pacific Railroad in Nebraska of 75,000 dols. have been overtaken and shot, and 20,000 dols. of the sum stolen have been recovered.

Colonel Shafter, at the head of 600 Federal troops and two Gatling guns, crossed the Rio Grande for the purpose of extricating a detachment that recently went over the frontier into Mexican territory in pursuit of Indians, and who were believed to be surrounded. A telegram from New York of the 2nd inst. states that the American troops have recrossed the Rio Grande into Texas without loss. The expedition was unsuccessful, as the Indian thieves had been forewarned. A small body of Mexican cavalry followed the Americans during a part of their return march.

A New York telegram announces the death of Archbishop Bayley.

THE CAPE COLONIES.

An official telegram received from the Governor of East London confirms the fact that affairs are settling down quietly in the Trans-Kei districts. Traders and farmers are returning to their usual vocations.

JAPAN.

The Mikado opened a national exhibition at Tokio on Aug. 21.

The total amount expended by the Government for military purposes during the insurrection in Japan is estimated at £5,500,000.

A telegram received on Wednesday at Lloyd's, from Liverpool, states that the steamer Olga, having the Cleopatra Obelisk in tow, has put into Algiers for coals.

The scientific survey of Western Palestine has been completed by the party under the command of Lieutenant Kitchener, R.E. The result will be embodied in a splendid map.

Announcement is made in the Pesth journals that Captain Engelbach, inspector of police, has discovered traces of the thieves who stole bonds of the value of one million florins in London in 1875. According to these statements the principal perpetrator of the robbery is a London house-owner.

Tuesday's Gazette announces the following appointments:—The Hon. Sir Arthur Hamilton Gordon, K.C.M.G., Governor of Fiji, to be her Majesty's High Commissioner for the Western Pacific; Colonel Robert William Harley, C.B., C.M.G. (late Lieutenant-Governor of the Island of Tobago), to be Lieutenant-Governor of the Island of Grenada; and Augustus Frederick Gore, Esq. (late Colonial Secretary of Barbadoes), to be Lieutenant-Governor of the Island of Tobago.

The correspondent of the Daily News at Alexandria telegraphs that information has been received there that Colonel Gordon had arrived at Kassala on his way to Sennaar to conclude terms of peace with King John of Abyssinia. Colonel Gordon will afterwards go down to the coast to embark for Egypt. A steamer has arrived at Suez from Massowa, having on board the body of General Rachid Pasha, who was killed in the war with Abyssinia last year. The body has now been ransomed by order of the Khedive from the Abyssinians and it was forwarded to Cairo by special train.

NEW BOOKS.

Great popularity may be predicted for Fénelon, Archbishop of Cambrai, a biographical sketch, by the author of "Life of Bossuet," &c. (Rivingtons), greater even than that which may be presumed to have been attained by similar works of the same author. For there are special reasons why the Archbishop of Cambrai should be an object of interest to even a larger circle than that which would be attracted by the splendid reputation acquired and bequeathed by the famous Bishop of Meaux. The very sourest Protestants feel a sneaking kinship for Fénelon, because they harbour an unfounded suspicion of his orthodoxy, and believe that he was at heart such as they are. Then, he was the author of "Télémaque," a story which, probably, no sane person, having come to years of discretion, would read, unless for penance, in the present day, but which is still, no doubt, a favourite school-book; so that Fénelon's memory is kept alive, and perhaps endeared, among tens of thousands to whom the name of Bossuet suggests nothing more than a great preacher of surpassing eloquence. It was the fate of "Télémaque," moreover, to have been published, in the first instance, treacherously, and to have, whether consequently or not, fallen under suspicion of being intended as a satire "upon Louis XIV. and his surroundings;" so that Fénelon comes to be included among the authors whose prestige is enhanced, among a certain large class, by the sort of mystery belonging to their works and by the credit or discredit they may have, rightly or wrongly, obtained for revolutionary tendencies. Fénelon's connection, also, with the case of Madame Guyon was such as to give him favour in the eyes of the majority, at any rate in a Protestant country or among religious Gallios; they would look at the romantic and chivalrous aspect of the matter. For many reasons, then, one is justified in supposing that, if a biographical sketch of Bossuet attracted its thousands of English readers, one of Fénelon will attract its tens of thousands; the very prejudices which would produce a coldness in the reception of the former would promote the circulation of the latter, whilst the persons who would be unaffected by those prejudices would, nevertheless, be likely to feel the greater interest in the more romantic character and flock to the study of it in proportionately greater numbers. An outline of Fénelon's life and career is soon sketched, and may be serviceable as a refresher. He came of a noble family; he at a very age distinguished himself as a scholar; and he displayed so precocious an eloquence that, "like Bossuet, he was put forward at fifteen to preach to an admiring audience." He would fain have become a missionary; but his friends opposed this step. He was constrained to remain at home; he was ordained in due time; he acquired celebrity as a preacher and as a writer, especially by his "Treatise on the Education of Girls;" he was sent on a difficult mission, after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, to Poitou and Saintonge; and in 1689, when he was thirty-eight years of age, he, having recommended himself by his many personal graces and mental endowments to Madame de Maintenon as well as to other good judges and influential personages, was appointed preceptor to the little Duke of Burgundy, grandson of Louis XIV. Six years afterwards he was nominated Archbishop of Cambrai; and his favour, having culminated, began to decline. He was involved in the charges brought against Madame Guyon; he was attacked and roughly handled by his old friend Bossuet; he was disgraced by the King and banished from the Court; and the publication of "Télémaque" soon confirmed "Louis XIV. in an unchangeable aversion and mistrust of Fénelon." Henceforth he busied himself almost entirely about his diocese, where he lived a simple, blameless life, and, being given to hospitality, as a Bishop should be, entertained all comers handsomely. Thence he corresponded with his former pupil and with his many friends; there he received the heart-rending news of the Duke of Burgundy's untimely death; and there he himself, in his sixty-fifth year, died and was buried. At his death, according to Saint Simon, "he neither owed nor left behind him a sou," in which case the servants, to whom he is said to have left "certain legacies," and his nephew, whom he constituted his "residuary legatee," must, probably for the first time in their lives, have felt themselves aggrieved by the conduct of the good Archbishop, whose life, as set forth in the volume under consideration, is very interesting as a narrative, and very profitable as an object of contemplation.

A frightful act of literary piracy, alleged to have been committed full forty years ago, is submitted to the notice of the public in the second edition (greatly extended and improved) of Origin and Migrations of the Polynesian Nation, by John Dunmore Lang, D.D., A.M. (Sampson Low and Co.), a work of which the first edition is understood to have been published, under a somewhat different title, as long ago as 1834. It appears that the two gentlemen who are charged with having committed the aforesaid act of piracy are now dead, so that the complainant has no remedy against them; and whether he expects public indignation at his wrongs to take the form of a general rush upon the new edition of his work he does not say; but he himself is naturally very much hurt at having been deprived, as he asserts, "of the credit and honour" due to him "for forty years past." The history of the case is as follows:—Our author, about half a century ago, made, or thought he had made, two important discoveries—one as to "the origin and earlier movements of the Polynesian race;" and the other as to "God's way of peopling America, after man had been vainly toiling at the great problem in all the languages of Europe for upwards of three centuries before." In 1834 he published a modest little volume, of some two hundred pages, announcing his discoveries, as it seems. The little book apparently fell rather flat, so far as the general public were concerned; but the value of the discoveries did not escape the notice of the Rev. Mr. Williams and the Rev. Mr. Ellis, who, between them, composed and published, in 1835 or 1836, "A Narrative of Missionary Enterprises in the South Sea Islands," and who are roundly taxed, notwithstanding their holy orders, with having appropriated, without acknowledgment, and with having embodied in their joint work all that they considered valuable in the aforesaid little book of two hundred and odd pages. Both those reverend gentlemen, of whom Mr. Williams, described as "one of Nature's own undoubted gentlemen," is considered to have been comparatively blameless in the matter and to have acted under influence, have now gone to their account; but our author is reasonably of opinion that, in order to vindicate his own just claims before the public, he is at liberty, in the case of these two literary pirates, to change the maxim which runs "of the dead naught but good" into "of the dead naught but truth." So that the public have now an opportunity of learning who was the original maker of certain more or less important discoveries, what they are, and how he was led to make them. It will probably be deemed sufficient to state here, in brief terms, the conclusions to which his investigations have conducted him. Firstly, then, he satisfied himself that "the Polynesians, or South Sea Islanders, were of Asiatic origin and Malay race;" secondly, that "there was a belt of ocean in the Pacific in which it was quite as practicable, at certain seasons, to sail to the eastward as to the westward;" thirdly, that "America had been first reached by the Polynesians," whose "identification, as being the same people, with the Indo-Americans," he believes himself to have established. For his arguments and for the details of his various inquiries the reader must be referred to his interesting book; and the soundness and the value of his deductions must be left to the judgment of ethnologists and other scientific bodies.

A very vigorous picture of a very interesting country is drawn in the volume entitled Peru in the Guano Age: by A. J. Duffield (Richard Bentley and Son), and described as "a short account of a recent visit to the guano deposits, with some reflections on the money they have produced and the uses to which it was applied." The author states that he "was sent to Peru for the express purpose" of examining into "the existing guano deposits;" but he, of course, did not confine himself to that. He evidently used his opportunities of general observation assiduously; and he has recorded his impressions freely and strongly. His style, indeed, reminds one of "sloshing about." He may speak well of the country, as regards its natural charms and capabilities, and he may have a good word to say both for the inferior classes and for particular friends of his own; but for the better classes in general, if there be any good and better in the case, for the Government, for the public works, for the habits, manners and customs, except hospitality, he has little but evil to say. He hits out right and left. Nor does he spare his own countrymen and country-women, such of them as he met in Peru. He has harder knocks for them than for the natives. "Few English ladies," he says, "have ever been permanently resident in Lima. It has been visited by one or two showy examples of the money-monger class;" and that is about the best he can say of his country-women. Of his countrymen he gives a sad account. "An English sailor," he declares, and it is to be feared, with some foundation, "in every part of the commercial world which he visits is too often a disgrace to himself and a dishonour to his country. But in Peru he is a standing disgrace to humanity." He became "personally acquainted with nearly five hundred captains of merchant-ships in the Pacific," and he is "ashamed to confess that the French, the Italian, the North American, and the Swede were every way superior men to the English captains." He made the acquaintance of several Chinamen in Peru; he found them "all shrewd, courteous, gentleman-like fellows," and goes so far as to say that it was a much greater pleasure to him "to pass an evening with some of these," than with his own "brandy-drinking, tobacco-smoking, and complaining countrymen, whose conversation is garnished with unclean oaths, whose Spanish is a disgrace to their own country, and their English to that in which they reside." His description of Peru may be summed up in a few sentences. The government is as "unstable as water;" the land, which "cannot be said to belong to anyone—certainly not to God," is uncultivated; the system of irrigation which once prevailed is "all broken up;" as for cleanliness and health, "it is a wonder the inhabitants have survived;" as for idleness, it is among the upper classes "the order of the day;" as for "going to law," it is made "a means of living;" as for education, "the education of the people has never been seriously attempted, except in carrying a flimsy old musket;" as for marriage, "if marriage be a public virtue, large numbers of the Peruvians of the Manure Age are not virtuous;" but "incontinence is general, and the number of illegitimate children greater than those born in wedlock." Our author has "known a Bishop of the Peruvian State Church, sworn to celibacy, whose illegitimate children were more numerous than the years of his life," and "a parish priest who had living in several houses more than thirty children by several women;" as for public works, "the chief during this time has been a penitentiary, and a railway to the moon not yet finished;" as for dress, "the coffin in which a Peruvian of the Guano Period is carried to his last home is about the best made suit he ever wears, and the best fitting;" as for the way of living, "there are no public granaries," and "people live from hand to mouth on what others grow for them and bring to them;" the "roads and bridges of the present day" are beneath contempt; "there are no woollen manufactories," although there is no reason for the deficiency, and every reason for the contrary; and "as for stealing—not that form of it which comes within the range of petty larceny, but the wider and more awful range of felony—it may be safely said that nearly all public men have steeped themselves to the neck in this crime, and the common people take to it as easily and naturally as birds in a garden take to sweet berries." And if anybody should ask: "What use has Peru made of the great income it has derived during the past generation from the national guano? What is there to show for the many million pounds sterling it has derived from this source, and from money lent by English bondholders?" Here is the answer: "Let us hasten at once to acknowledge that it has spent 150,000,000 dols. in railways. But let us also add that the greatest authority in Peru has stigmatised these railways as locuras, or follies. This is not an encouraging beginning. But, alas! it is not only the beginning, it is also the end of the account." This is severe criticism and a fearful picture. What means the critic and painter had of forming his judgment and filling his canvas is, of course, the principal question; and he can boast that he has "lived in every kind of house, rancho, posta, cottage, quinta, and mansion, occupied by the various classes which make up the population of Peru," and has consorted "with archbishops and bishops, priests and monks, merchant princes, senators, judges, generals, miners, doctors, professional thieves, and widows." He, therefore, seems to have had a pretty wide experience, and to have been thrown among persons most capable of affording him information upon most subjects, as well as, in their own persons, offering him subjects for study and samples of the orders to which they severally belonged.

To Mr. Greenwood, editor of the Pall-Mall Gazette, the public are indebted in the first instance, if there be no mistake, for the much lauded and also much abused purchase of the Khedive's shares in the Suez Canal; and to that purchase we are, no doubt, indebted for the publication of the two large volumes entitled The Great Canal at Suez, by Percy Fitzgerald, M.A. (Tinsley Brothers). The work professes to contain a "political, engineering, and financial history" of the canal, together with "an account of the struggles of its projector, Ferdinand De Lesseps." But, unless memory be extremely delusive, it is not so very long since the illustrious projector himself published an account of his own struggles; and, to speak from recollection, nothing of any great importance and nothing of any particular interest has been added in the present instance to that personal narrative, upon which, of course, the biographical portion of the two volumes is based. Nor, as regards the political, engineering, and financial aspects of the great venture, is a flood of fresh light let in upon us. It is true that official documents and other authoritative papers have been drawn upon unsparingly; they have even been introduced bodily into the text; but it would have been sufficient to extract the spirit of them, instead of leaving readers to perform the extraction for themselves, and to state in a few words, for the satisfaction of the curious and of such as might seek after a reference, from what materials the essence had been distilled. That the two volumes contain a vast amount of information is unquestionable, and that they may on that account be of considerable service for reference is probable enough; but that they contain anything about which the general reader had not already heard as much as he would be likely to consider interesting is not to be asserted with any confidence. Still there may be persons to whom the story of the Suez Canal, with its concomitants, may come with all the exhilarating effect of an agreeable surprise. The compiler, at any rate, appears to have gone to the best sources for his materials, and to have expended a considerable amount of labour upon his work, which, on the whole, may be regarded as an exhaustive account of a great undertaking.

THE POSITIONS AT PLEVNA.

Our Special Artist, Herr Schönborg, was with the Second Division of the Roumanian army before Plevna, and saw the storming of the Grivitza Redoubt on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 11th ult.; and a facsimile of his sketch of that surprising action is engraved for our Extra Supplement. He writes to us:—"I was an eye-witness of the action, from four o'clock in the afternoon, taking my stand near Colonel Herdt's battery, where some of the Russian spent balls whistled close to my head. The assault was terrific, and the Turkish defence was extremely obstinate. The losses seem enormous, in proportion to the object to be gained by this attack. I should think the Turks had about 600 killed and wounded; but there must be 3000 dead on the attacking side, besides all the wounded. So far as I understand, from what I hear, this redoubt cannot be long occupied. There is another Turkish redoubt, 400 metres distant; and the dead and wounded lying about this one cannot be approached by the ambulances without coming under the fire of that other. I left the place at eight o'clock the same evening, and rode to Metschka through a tremendous rainstorm. Being already ill, and getting very wet, I had to turn into the hospital there and put myself under the skilful care of Mr. Davilo, surgeon to the General Staff. But the excitement of feeling prevented sleep, in spite of my extreme fatigue; the slaughter of such heaps of poor soldiers which I had just seen was still before my eyes. So I rose from my bed in the night and finished the sketch that I now send you. It would have been taken immediately to the post by my own hand, but I was obliged to go back to Plevna, to the head-quarters of the Second Roumanian Division. It was there I found the best point of view for my second sketch of the Russian and Roumanian positions, looking towards the south-west. I will next send you a sketch of the battle-field, with the dead lying on it, and a scene of the burying. The Turks have recaptured two of the redoubts which were taken on Tuesday by the Russians."

The two general views, one looking towards the south-east, the other towards the south-west, of the Russian and Roumanian attacking positions, were carefully drawn by Herr Schönborg, on Sept. 9 and 13 respectively, and will be found worth examination, with the references to foot-notes beneath each of those Engravings. We have already given a particular description of the hills surrounding Plevna; and our plans or maps have shown the positions occupied and fortified by Osman Pasha for its defence, as well as those of the allied beleaguering forces. The Gravitza or Grivica redoubt, so called from the village of that name, situated on the hill eastward of Plevna, was the central advanced work of the Turkish fortifications; but it is commanded by another redoubt north-west of it, which is now the object of attack, not by the sanguinary method of a direct assault, but by approaching lines of trenches, in which the Roumanians are still hard at work. Should this Turkish work fall, the great entrenched camp on the western brow of the ridge upon which stands the Gravitza redoubt will probably be the next object of attack. This camp is the key of the Plevna position. It overhangs the city, and dominates the redoubts west and south-west of the village of Gravitza, and, should it fall, the Turkish centre would be pierced and the position untenable. The capture of the redoubt against which the Roumanians are now working would give the besiegers very favourable facilities for attacking the entrenched camp. Straight along the line of this ridge, where the Roumanians are advancing, was the true direction of attack upon Plevna. Had the Russian Commander-in-Chief commenced on this line with pick and shovel, and merely entrenched himself on the rest of the line around Plevna to prevent flanking sorties from the garrison while his eminently superior force of cavalry prevented convoys of provisions approaching from the south and west, he might have taken Plevna with one fourth the loss he has now sustained—without, too, making sensible impression on the Turkish lines. This ridge, running east and west, was the palpable highway into the heart of Osman Pasha's position, and his desperate defence and attempted recapture of the great redoubt shows his appreciation of the facts above stated. This ridge dominates all the other Turkish fortifications, and therefore must depend upon its own strength alone.

We were informed last week that the Roumanians have sapped up to within fifty yards of the redoubt which at a distance of 200 yards commands with its fire the great work that they have already occupied. The most difficult portion of their task, even as far as this redoubt is concerned, is still before their pioneers. The sap must be carried in the last fifty yards up the glacis, and the descent into the ditch must still be made. Under the fire of the breechloaders of the garrison it will be extremely difficult to establish breaching batteries, and probably the actual advance against the ramparts will have to be made by the aid of mines. Turkish engineers have never been found wanting in a capacity for subterranean warfare. Counter-mines will probably be freely employed, and many days may probably be expected to elapse before the assault can be delivered. Its success then is problematical, for the attacking columns must advance from narrow trenches, and will be able to rush upon the breach only with a small front. If this redoubt falls, a distance of 1500 yards separates it from the entrenched camp at the western extremity of the Gravitza ridge, which alone commands the works below Radishevo, and a long time must be required to carry trenches across this space of ground. The Russian troops on the left of the Roumanians seem to make no progress in their siege operations. Meantime, as stated in our last, the Turks have been enabled to send reinforcements, supplies, and munitions into the entrenched lines held by Osman Pasha; and their being able to do so demonstrates that the fortress is not invested, but is being merely attacked on a portion of its front.

We shall give further illustrations of the conflicts at Plevna, from our Special Artist's sketches, next week.

The premises occupied by Messrs. Kershaw and Co., cotton-spinners, and Mr. David Howarth, founder, Watworth-road, Leechdale, were nearly destroyed by fire on Wednesday night. The loss is estimated at about £20,000.

THE ATTACK ON PLEVNA: SKET

Village of Gravitza behind the hill of left foreground. _ Balkans in the distance.

1. Rifle-pits on the hill against Gravitza. 2. Russian

VIEW OF THE POSITIONS AT PLEV

Village of Gravitza (or Grivica) in the hollow of left foreground. The Balkans in the background.

1. Turkish redoubts. 2. Russian batteries

VIEW OF THE POSITIONS AT PLEV

CHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

infantry advancing. 3. Roumanian infantry. 4. Roumanian battery. 5. Turkish redoubts. 6. Russian battery.

YA, LOOKING SOUTH-WEST, SEPT. 13.

3. Roumanian batteries.

Colonel Angelescu and staff, commanding Second Roumanian Division.

YA, LOOKING SOUTH-EAST SEPT. 9.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

The main object of the British Constitution is, as we have all been told, to get twelve honest men together in a box, and, in the good old times, when the twelve honest men, being impanelled as a jury sworn well and truly to try a case between a prisoner and the Crown, the public were wont respectfully to acquiesce in the verdict, and leave the sentence to the Judge, and the commutation of that sentence (if there were cause) to the wisdom and mercy of the Sovereign and her advisers. We seem to have changed all that nowadays; and to impugn the verdict of a jury, to challenge the purity of the witnesses, to sneer at the counsel engaged on either side, and to libel the Judge and seek to disturb the judgment, have become a growing and to my mind a most pernicious fashion.

It was bad enough in the Tichborne case; but in this horrible Penge business the practice to which I have referred has assumed an even more offensive aspect. Four wicked people have been found guilty by a jury of their countrymen of a most foul, unnatural, and cowardly murder. They have been sentenced to death. Surely the revision of the sentence (if revision it needs) might safely be left to the Home Secretary. Unfortunately, this happens to be what is called the "silly season" in journalism. Readers are finding the daily butchers' bills from Plevna growing somewhat monotonous; the great newspapers find it somewhat difficult to fill their columns; and to their depleted pages the verdict of the Penge murder has come as a sweet boon. All the bores, all the crotcheters, all the sciolists, all the people who are fond of "seeing themselves in print," have rushed into it; and the amount of gabble and brabble indulged in has reached the astounding point. Against such unseemly manifestations those lofty (and often useful) censors the World and the Pall Mall Gazette sternly protest, and I dare say that the Saturday Review is likewise protesting, even as these Echoes are passing through the press; but the censors are wrong when they qualify the nonsense which has been talked as emanations from the "mob" and the "street." The nonsense emanates from Jawkins and from Borekins: from the people who have nothing to do, or who insist upon doing more than they are called upon to do, and whose chief object in life seems to be to "write to the papers." I know them well enough for my sins and to my sorrow; and they write me many hundreds of letters every year. If the Penge murderers had been left to the "mob" or the "street," the wretches would probably have been torn to pieces. As it is, I believe that the vast majority of the people thoroughly agree with the verdict of the Jury. If I am wrong let Jawkins write and tell me that I am an ignoramus, while Borekins denounces me at a public meeting (got up by himself) as a hard-hearted monster.

Mem: One amazing newspaper correspondent has delivered himself of the opinion that, "in cases where the medical testimony holds such a prominent position, the jury should be exclusively medical, as an ordinary jury are in no way fit to grapple with such evidence." Tous des orfèvres, Monsieur Jossé. For my part, if I had murdered anybody, there would be nothing I should like so much as to be tried by an exclusively medical jury. I am perfectly certain that no twelve medical gentlemen put into a box would be able to arrive at a unanimous verdict; so they would be discharged, and fresh jurors would have to be empanelled, and again discharged, till the public cried at last, jam satis! and the Judge bade me begone for a nuisance.

Many most interesting and a few somewhat whimsical statements have been made at the Congress of Librarians, just now being holden at the London Institution. For example, I learn from Mr. Poole, of the Public Library, Chicago, that "books cannot live where men cannot live." I can understand that very lofty libraries are a mistake, because the atmosphere above an altitude of fourteen or fifteen feet is apt to become too rarefied; but this contingency may always be provided against by building a clerestory or second range of windows over against the wall which is lined with books. "Louvre" windows, like those in the cooling-house of a brewery, are best. Circular libraries (I don't mean circulating ones) are apt to become ovens; but Mr. Poole's assertion that books cannot live where men cannot live is only a smart piece of dogmatism. There are some notable books which have managed to live for thousands of years in the sarcophagi, and even in the wooden coffins of Egyptian mummies. Indeed, next to a cat, I do not know anything that is so difficult to kill as a book.

Mem: There are exceptions to every rule. Many thousands of cookery-books mysteriously disappear from the face of the earth every year. My impression is that when a lady is kind enough to send a cookery-book into the kitchen, Mrs. Cook takes the earliest opportunity of lighting the fire with the volume, yielding as she does to the superstitious prejudice that the culinary ritual should be orally and not literally preserved. That is why there are so few first editions of Mrs. Glasse extant.

Talking of first editions of rare books, can any kind and scholarly correspondent tell me who was "Thomas Gayton, Esq.," the author of "Festivous Notes upon Don Quixote," London, 1654? I find these notes (a quarto of nearly 300 pages) bound up with the first edition of Thomas Shelton's translation of "The History of the Valorous and Witty Knight-Errant, Don Quixote of the Mancha," London, 1632. I am not ashamed to ask the question (notwithstanding my hideous turpitude in the matter of the Ladies of Llangollen), because I think I once heard my grandmother (who was the widow of a Dr. Hippocrates) say that life was short and that art was long; that the occasion was fleeting, judgment difficult, and experience fallacious; and that if people were not continually asking questions nobody would ever know anything. Until last Friday I had never seen nor heard of the "Festivous Notes upon Don Quixote."

The book is a mine of curious matter of the Notes and Queries kind. Here is just one tiny sample in a note on the passage about the Don's weapons and armour. "This description of his house is in short the very same with an ancient Justice of Peace his Hall, a very dangerous Armory to be touched like Paul's scaffolds, monumentally standing because none dare take them down (Where were these monumental scaffolds in 1654? Round the dilapidated spire of Paul's?) he proceeds, not unlike the Welsh Inventory (What was the Welsh Inventory?) but it is not so large nor so good, Sow's babies in Spain being a meat for the House of Austria (What is the meaning of this "festivous" allusion?), his wardrobe not much exceeding that of the Mayor of Quinborough (Who was the Mayor of Quinborough?), though for the thrift less notorious." The whole "festivous" note recalls the prediction of Junius of the period when "the force and direction of personal satire shall be no longer understood."

"We did not see that whale, my boys!" Is not this, or something like this, the refrain to a wondrous after-dinner song which in old days I have heard one W. H. R. (who is an LL.D. to boot, and was in India the other day with the Prince) sing to an admiring audience of merry men? Shirley Brooks and Michael William Balfe were among the merry men present the last time that I heard W. H. R. sing "The Whale." We have not seen that whale yet. For some days the "wooden walls of old England" (I mean the ubiquitous Mr. Willing's boardings) have been covered with proclamations—"The Live Whale is Coming!" He came—a poor little white fellow, not much more important in size than a large porpoise—to the Westminster Aquarium. They put him into a tank, and gave him eels to eat; but there was something the matter with the whale, or the tank, or the water; and the poor lilliputian leviathan died. And then the eels fastened on the fins of the deceased and began to eat him! Which is the way of the world.

Mr. George Reeves Smith, of the Brighton Aquarium, was so sorry when he heard that the Westminster whale was dead that he shed floods of tears (of course, salt ones), and caused the flag of the popular establishment by the old Chain Pier to be hoisted half-mast high. But the experienced naturalist of the Brighton establishment, Mr. Francis Francis, writing to the Brighton and Sussex Daily Post, adds to his condolence with Mr. Wybrow Robertson the significant reminder, "I told you so." Mr. Francis Francis knew well enough that the conditions of the whale's captivity must be fatal to its existence. "When we can get a good open pond," he writes, "in a nice breezy spot, and from 150 to 200 ft. long, 50 or 60 ft. wide, and a dozen feet deep, with a constant stream of salt water flowing in and out, then I will confidently undertake the introduction of whales with a full expectation of keeping them alive." For my part, I am of good Bishop Piers Claughton's opinion (the Bishop has written to the papers complaining of the constructive cruelty of cooping a whale in a cistern), and would let Leviathan alone. John Keats used to revel in that magnificent Spenserian epithet, "the sea-shouldering whale." What would the author of "Endymion" have thought of a "tank-shouldering whale?" G. A. S.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on Sunday night, says that the famine report for Madras is still highly favourable. There has been a good rainfall throughout the whole Presidency, and agricultural operations are in active progress. The summer crops are nearly harvested. The out-turn of the southern districts is fair, while in the north it is small. Prices, however, have not yet fallen appreciably. In Mysore a general rain has fallen, with a marked improvement in the harvest prospects. The weather reports from Bombay are favourable. The crops are thriving, but rain is urgently wanted. In Gojerat the rivers are still low. In Scinde the harvest prospects are bad. There has been no rain in the Central Provinces, save a few local showers, and great anxiety is felt for the crops. There is scarcely any rain in Rajpootana, and no improvements in prospects. In the North-West the drought still continues. The prospect for the Punjab is very gloomy. There is hardly any rain; and prospects are decidedly bad. Colonel Merriman's report for the Bombay famine districts for the week ended Sept. 20 states that the number on the relief works had fallen to nearly a quarter of a million, being actually 241,314, or a decrease of 9399 since the previous week; but there is an increase of 11,866 in receipt of charitable relief, and of 841 young children taken care of. The actual expenditure to date is—on the relief works, £9,212,696; charitable relief, £640,495; maintenance of children, £314,375. Since June 9, the date of the maximum number on the relief works, there has been a decrease of 153,191, and a general, though gradual, improvement in the situation. The prevailing high prices, however, have told severely on the poorer classes. From the Madras returns for the week ended Sept. 22 it appears that the total number employed on the relief works of the Presidency was 708,255, or a decrease of 64,839 since the previous week; but the number seeking gratuitous relief had increased to the extent of 119,882, and reached 1,633,437. In Mysore the number of persons on relief work was 53,601, or an increase of 100 on the previous week. The number in receipt of charity was 221,176, showing a decrease of 5881.

THE MANSION HOUSE FAMINE FUND.

The Fishmongers' Company on Thursday, the 28th ult., voted £525 to the fund. Among the subscriptions from towns on that day were:—Darlington, £500; Derby (second contribution), £500; Heywood, £500; Louth (house to house collection), £478; Dublin (twelfth), £500; Rochesay and Bute, £300; Harrogate (second), £300; Keighley (second), £250; Canterbury (fourth), £200; Teignmouth, £100; Carlisle, £100; Taunton (fifth), £100; Lewes (fourth), £100; Stourbridge, £200; Hanley (fourth), £100; Derry, £100; Kilkenny County (second), £100; Holmfirth, £100; West Bromwich (fourth), £100; Monmouth, £646; Mr. Philip T. Smith contributed £100. Among the church and chapel collections were the following: St. James's, Marylebone, £102; Lugwardine Chapel, Hereford, £109; Blackheath Congregational Chapel, £163; St. Mary's, Chelmsford, £142; Matson Church, Gloucester, £213. In the box outside the Mansion House £16 odd were found.

The Lord Mayor received an autograph letter yesterday week from the Prime Minister, in reply to a communication announcing that the Indian Famine Relief Fund had reached the sum of over £250,000 in less than six weeks. Lord Beaconsfield says in his letter that that amount raised in such a time is a splendid instance of national sympathy. He expresses the hope that that generous aid will be continued, as, although the action of the Indian Government is not hampered by want of funds, the assistance administered by private hands reaches localities and classes which the necessarily more formal help accorded by public authority cannot touch. The principal contributions from towns were:—Burnley, £1000; Grimsby, £600; Brighton (third contribution), £500; Hull (third), £500; Tynemouth (second), £300; Saffron Walden, £300; Batley (second), £150; Ripon, £140; Loughborough, £130; York (additional), £100; Scarborough (fourth), £132; Burton-on-Trent, £119; Kingston-on-Thames, £100; Gravesend (second), £100; Southampton (tenth), £100; Nafferton, £100; Yeovil, £100; Hanley (fifth), £100; Pontefract (third), £100; Rochester (third instalment), £50; and Beaumaris, £35. Earl Cowper contributed £100; Lord Penrhyn (second donation), £100; E. B. C. L., £100; Mr. Henry Clarke, £160. Among the church and chapel collections received were: St. Peter's, Belize Park, £166; New Court Congregational Church, £103; Christ Church, Highbury, £197; Christ Church, Malvern, £105. In the box outside the Mansion House £32 19s. 5d. in notes and coin was found.

Among the principal sums received last Saturday were:—Leicester (additional), £1000; Wakefield (second), £500; Halifax (fourth), £500; Hartlepool (fourth), £400; Salisbury, £500; Arbroath, £350; Rotherham, £300; Tenby, £231; Gloucester (second, including £77 in church collections), £200; Perth (second), £250; Yarmouth (second), £200; Winchester (fourth), £100; Chesterfield, £100; Peterborough, £100; Knottingly, £100; Faversham, £153. The Cordwainers'

Company contributed £100; the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, £100; Messrs. John Broadwood and Sons, £100.

A meeting of the executive committee was held on Monday, the Lord Mayor presiding. The fund was reported to amount to £284,000. A telegram from Madras, dated Saturday, was read representing the demands to be daily increasing, and prospects to be without material change. It was resolved to telegraph to Madras the state of the fund, and to postpone a remittance until Friday, the Madras committee having money in hand, and some of the native States presenting strong claims. The principal donations from the provinces were the following:—County of Banff, £750; Stockton (second instalment), £200; Dublin (thirteenth), £500; Norwich (fifth), £400; Whitby (second), £200; Wolverhampton (additional), £200; Grantham (third), £150; Shrewsbury (third), £100; Tamworth (second), £100; Stoke-on-Trent (fourth), £100; Tavistock, £100; Bedford, £100; Royston, £100; Newport (second), £100; Penzance, £100; Montrose, £110. Among the church and chapel collections were Christ Church, Gipsy-hill, £143; Downs Baptist Chapel, £113; St. James's and Old St. James's, Dover, £139; St. James's, Paddington, £125.

On Tuesday the principal contributions from towns were:—Hull (fourth remittance), £500; Plymouth (third), £500; Cleckheaton, £400; Nottingham (fourth), £400; Barton-on-Umber, £295; Southport (additional), £250; Southampton (eleventh), £100; Carnarvon (second), £100; Winchester (fifth), £100; Lymington (second), £100; Gravesend (third), £100; Stourport, £100. The Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight sent £105; Mr. John Bilke, £105; Messrs. Gonzalez, Byass, and Co., £100; Messrs. Schuster, Son and Co., £100. Over 300 church and chapel collections were received during the day, including St. Jude's, Mildmay Park, £102; Otley Church, £126.

The sum paid in on Wednesday was £8000; and among the contributions from towns were the following:—Doncaster, £500; Dublin (fourteenth instalment), £500; Congleton, £300; Neath, £272; Reigate (second), £250; Keighley (third), £250; Cambridge (second), £200; Torquay (third), £100; Maidstone (sixth), £100; Kirkcaldy (second), £100; St. Austell, £100; Colchester (fourth), £100; New Malton, £100; Cheltenham (third), £300; Mr. W. Gibbins subscribed £200; Messrs. Siemens Brothers, £105; Mr. Thomas Stainton, £100; Messrs. J. Lirie and Co., £100. Upwards of 200 church and chapel collections were received, including St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, £333; St. John's, Penge, £155; St. Matthew's, Redhill, £112; and Christ Church, Cheltenham, £143.

The Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund amounted on Wednesday night to £302,000, of which a quarter of a million has been remitted to India for distribution through the famine districts.

The police have been informed of the fact that persons are collecting money in London, using collecting-boxes, and professing to be authorised by the Mansion House Committee. No such authority has been given.

The Duke of Marlborough has sent £100 to the Lord Mayor of Dublin as a subscription to the fund.

Last Saturday the Edinburgh committee reported that the sum received by them on behalf of the fund amounted to £12,671, of which £11,000 had been transmitted to Madras.

The members of the Glasgow Trades' House have agreed to give a subscription of £250 from the funds of the incorporation towards the Famine Fund.

At Westminster Abbey last Sunday collections were made in the morning and afternoon in aid of the relief fund; and next Sunday (to-morrow) the annual harvest thanksgiving services will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, and the offertories at the three services will be given to the Relief Fund.

The annual competition between selected shots of members belonging to the Royal East Kent Mounted Rifles for a valuable silver cup, presented by Colonel the Marquis Conyngham, took place on Wednesday. Thirty-four marksmen competed, and Private Whiting, of the Faversham troop, won.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Liverpool Town Council Alderman Bennett presented to the town the picture, "Self Emancipation," painted by Mr. Armitage, R.A., which found a place in the last Academy Exhibition, and is now on the walls of the Liverpool Autumn Exhibition. The picture was accepted with thanks, and will find a permanent place in the new Walker Art-Gallery.

Under the presidency of Mr. Chadwick, C.B., the first annual congress of the Sanitary Institute of Great Britain was begun on Wednesday afternoon at Leamington. The chief event of the evening meeting was the delivery of an address by Dr. Benjamin Richardson, consisting of an exposition of his theory of the origin and course of the various epidemic, or spreading, diseases which affect mankind. The papers read at the daily meetings were diverse, including all subjects relating to the preservation of health and life.

At a general meeting of the Midland Farmers' Club at Birmingham Mr. G. Lindsey read a paper on A Few Features of American Farming, in which he pointed out the probability of the United States ultimately securing the control of the grain markets of Europe, the present war greatly tending to limit the advantages of Russia, now the greatest cereal-producing country. In the discussion which followed the reading of the paper, Mr. Houghton contended that the produce of wheat per acre in America was only about one half that of England, and that the larger aggregate yield was only due to the great extent of land under cultivation.

Mr. Farmer having resigned the judgeship of the Sussex County Court, the vacancy has been filled up by the appointment of Mr. Martineau, formerly of the Staffordshire Circuit, who, a few months ago, was transferred to the circuit comprising Berks and Surrey on the removal of Judge Stonor to one of the metropolitan courts. Mr. Vernon Lushington, Q.C., who has recently resigned the permanent secretaryship of the Admiralty, has been appointed Judge of the Surrey and Berks Circuit, in the room of Mr. Martineau.—Mr. J. Heatn Cadman, barrister-at-law, of Leeds and Ackworth, has been appointed Recorder of Pontefract, in the place of the late Mr. R. N. Phillips.

Professor Tyndall, who has accepted the presidency for the year of the Birmingham and Midland Institute, gave an address last Monday night at the Birmingham Townhall, on the occasion of the opening of the new session. His topic was the law discovered by Dr. Joule, which governs the conversion of heat into force, from which has been deduced the doctrine of the conservation of energy, and Dr. Mayer's illustrations of the same subject. From this Professor Tyndall passed to some considerations of the scientific difficulties surrounding the belief in the existence of a free human soul and to observations upon the doctrine of free will. Mr. J. Chamberlain, M.P., in proposing a vote of thanks, advocated the establishment of a University for Birmingham similar to Owens College.

THE CHURCH.

PREFEMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Acworth, Carr Glyn, to be Perpetual Curate of Combe Down.
 Aulyn, W. St.; Rector of Stoke Damerel.
 Bigge, H. J.; Rural Dean of the Second Portion of Weldon Deanery.
 Bradstreet, William; Rural Dean for South Dunwich.
 Breay, Henry Thomas; Sine Cure Rector of East Hams.
 Campbell, W. P. A.; Vicar of Almeley, Hereford; Rector of Fladbury.
 Francis, J. L.; Rector of Monkokehampton, Devon.
 Fry, Charles E.; Missions to Seamen Chaplain, Penarth Roadstead.
 Hill, A.; Chaplain of Portland Convict Prison; Rector of Preston, Dorset.
 Hustler, G.; Rector of English Bicknor.
 Kennedy, William James; Vicar of Barnwood.
 Lowndes, E. S.; Curate of Ludlow; Curate of Little Comberton, Pershore.
 Powell, Charles; Vicar of East Coker.
 Reece, J. E.; Curate of St. Michael's Cathedral, Barbadoes.
 Robinson, C. J.; Surrogate for the Diocese of Chester.
 Warner, Richard Hyett, Vicar of Astley; Vicar of Almeley, Hereford.
 Wilkinson, T. W.; Rector of Pen Selwood, Somerset.
 Wilson, C. W.; Rector of Lapford.—Guardian.

Canon Carter laid the foundation-stone of a new district church in the parish of Charlton-by-Dover on the 27th ult.

The Oxford Diocesan Conference began on Thursday morning in the Sheldonian Theatre, under the presidency of the Bishop of the diocese, and was largely attended.

The usual autumn confirmation will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral by Bishop Piers Claughton on Thursday, Nov. 22. Names should be sent to the Bishop at the cathedral.

Among the subscribers to the rebuilding of Woolwich parish church are the Rector, £500; the Earl of Lichfield (brother of the Rector), £100; Sir S. M. Maryon-Wilson, £500; and Mr. Gladstone, £20.

A stained-glass window, by Mr. Kempe, of Beaumont-street, has been placed in the Church of the Holy Ascension, Upton, near Chester, by Colonel Humberston, in memory of his late wife. The subject is the Annunciation.

The foundation-stone of a new church at Burton Leonard, near Ripon, was laid on Saturday last by Mrs. Shiffner, sister of the late Mr. James Brown, of Copgrove Hall, by whose liberality the church was mainly erected.

Her Majesty has approved the appointment of the Rev. T. Valpy French, late Fellow of University College, Oxford, and for many years head of the college at Lahore, to be the first Bishop of the newly-created see of Lahore.

The Temple Church will be reopened on Sunday next (to-morrow). The morning preachers for this month will be:—Oct. 7, the Rev. Alfred Blomfield, M.A.; Oct. 14, the Rev. Dr. Edersheim; Oct. 21 and 28, the Rev. W. Boyd Carpenter, M.A. The Master of the Temple (Dr. Vaughan) will resume his place in November.

The parish church of Thirsk, which has been restored at a cost of £4500, was reopened on Tuesday by the Archbishop of York, who preached at the service in the morning, and also at that in the afternoon, when the members of the friendly societies of the town were present. His Grace also presided at a luncheon which was held.

The parish church of Pensher, in the county of Durham, was reopened on the 26th ult. Towards its restoration the Marquis of Londonderry, the Earl of Durham, and Sir G. Elliott, M.P., gave £500 each. The Bishop of the diocese preached at the morning service, after which the Vicar (the Rev. P. Thompson) entertained his Lordship and a large number of the clergy and laity at luncheon.

Lord Coleridge, presiding at the annual meeting of the Exeter Auxiliary Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, said that, notwithstanding the zeal and self-denying energy on the part of clergy and laity, the present state of the Church of England was unsatisfactory, internal dissensions having reached a point without parallel. Dissensions at home might have done something to cool enthusiasm for foreign missions; but with reference to that work it was not easy to conceive that there could be any difference of opinion.

Last Saturday the Bishop of Chester consecrated the new Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Dalton, near Wigan, which had been built at a cost of between £5000 and £6000 by Lord Skelmersdale and Mr. Prescott, of Dalton Grange. The first stone was laid two years ago by Lady Skelmersdale, who was prevented by ill-health from attending the opening services. At the luncheon the noble Lord said he wished it to be clearly understood that all sittings were free and open for ever. The architect was Mr. Wyatt, of London.

At the Lichfield Diocesan Conference on the 27th ult. the question of the Burials Law was discussed, on a motion of the Earl of Dartmouth against any alteration in the law, which was carried by overwhelming majorities of both orders. A strong opinion was expressed by many speakers that considerable ignorance prevailed on this question, and that it was desirable that people should be instructed. The Reform of Convocation was debated on the 28th ult., when resolutions were adopted in favour of allowing curates to vote for proctors, and increasing the representation of the parochial clergy; but the proposals for amalgamating the two Convocations and for the creation of a consultative house of laymen were rejected.

A large meeting was held at Bradford last Monday night on the question of free and open churches—the Earl of Wharncliffe presided. Mr. T. Hughes, Q.C., moved a resolution to the effect that the pew system was opposed to scriptural precept, to the law of the Church, and to the spiritual requirements of the people. The Dean of Manchester and Mr. W. Spencer-Stanhope, M.P., spoke to the resolution, which was carried. Earl Nelson moved a resolution declaring that every church ought to be open and free of access at all times. The Rev. Canon Lowe and others spoke to the resolution, and it was adopted, as was also another enjoining the use of the weekly offertory.

The Bishop of St. Asaph delivered his third triennial charge to the clergy of the diocese at Wrexham on Wednesday. His Lordship referred to the satisfactory progress and present position of the several institutions in the diocese to aid in carrying on the Church. He urged the clergy to come into personal contact with every one of their parishioners, and to make themselves acquainted with their character, habits, and conditions. He would, however, caution them against the abuse of such intercourse. If they encouraged them to make what was usually termed sacramental confession, they would convert what might prove a wholesome remedy into a deadly poison. The reasons alleged for the introduction into the Church of auricular confession were various. Some regarded it as a help to those who might not otherwise be able to quiet their consciences; others recommended it as a remedy against sin; and some treated it as a wholesome discipline to be undergone by those who aspired to a higher spiritual life. To forgive sins was a function too high for any created intelligence. God alone had the requisite knowledge. But, if auricular confession was dangerous to the confessor, what must it be to the shrinking, modest spirit of one who was urged to unveil her heart, and was gradually led into thoughts of evil to which she had hitherto been an utter stranger? The practice thus sought to be introduced into the Church of England was perfectly alien to her system.

The annual conference of the diocese of Bath and Wells was begun last Tuesday in the Chapterhouse of Wells Cathedral. Lord Arthur Hervey, the Bishop of the diocese, who presided, delivered an opening address, in the course of which he reviewed the Ridsdale judgment, and expressed his general approval of it. His Lordship also spoke in support of the authority of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, from whom the judgment emanated. The Rev. A. Mahon read a paper on the Ridsdale case, and proposed a resolution approving of the same as being generally in accord with the mind of the English Church as expressed in her formularies, and no encroachment upon her liberties. Archdeacon Denison moved, as an amendment, that it was inexpedient for the conference to express approval of the judgment. The Archdeacon dissented from it in principle and in detail, and characterised it as the biggest falsification on record. There had (he said) been no more remarkable instance of non-natural interpretation than that of the Ornaments Rubric by the Judicial Committee. As to the vestments question, their decision was the biggest judicial failure on record; while, so far as the eastern position was concerned, it was a great judicial evasion. Other amendments were proposed; and eventually the conference decided to abstain from expressing either approval or disapproval of the judgment, and passed on to the next business. The burials question was discussed, and a resolution was adopted to the effect that it was not expedient for other than clergymen of the Church of England to officiate in churchyards.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Oxford University Commissioners having decided upon suspending two out of the three fellowships now vacant at All Souls', only one Fellow will be elected in November.

Monday being the first day of the Michaelmas Term at Cambridge, there was a Congregation for the election of Proctors for the ensuing academic year, when the following were chosen—the Rev. George Forrest Browne, M.A., of St. Catharine's, and the Rev. Alfred Edward Humphreys, M.A., Fellow of Trinity. The pro-Proctors for the year are the Rev. James William Cartmell, M.A., Fellow of Christ's, and Mr. William Francis Smith, M.A., Fellow of St. John's.—The secretaries to the Cambridge University Commission are the Rev. G. F. Browne, M.A., Senior Proctor of the University and member of the Council of the Senate, late Fellow of St. Catharine's College, and Mr. Henry Davidson, M.A., Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow and Bursar of Trinity Hall.

The Cambridge Local Examinations begin on Monday, Dec. 17, at eighty-two centres for boys and sixty-four for girls. Lists of the centres of examination and the addresses of the local secretaries at the centres may be obtained from the Rev. G. F. Browne, St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. The forms of entry for candidates are now in the hands of the local secretaries, to whom application for them must be made. The forms are to be returned to the same local secretaries on or before Oct. 10, 1877. The certificates obtained in these examinations excuse the holders, under various conditions, from the Cambridge previous examination and the preliminary examination for the legal and medical professions, and for musical degrees in Cambridge.

Mr. Archibald Orr-Ewing, M.P. for Dumbartonshire, has announced his intention of founding, in connection with Glasgow University, four bursaries of £25 per annum each, tenable for four years. Mr. Orr-Ewing expressly declares this to be an experiment to test the working and results of the bursary system before resolving upon a permanent endowment. To this end he has decided to place the sum of £1600, payable in seven annual instalments, at the disposal of the Senatus.

Dr. Scott, Head Master of Westminster, has written to the papers to contradict the rumour of the removal of the school into the country being under the consideration of the governing body. He says:—"As far as my knowledge goes, this statement has absolutely no foundation in fact. Under the Public Schools Act, 1868, Westminster School, if removed beyond the limits of the city of Westminster, is to forfeit the whole of its endowment, and all buildings or property derived from the Dean and Chapter or the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are to revert to those bodies. This could not be altered without a new Act of Parliament. The governing body have never had, nor have they now, the question of 'removal' before them. They met last in July, and cannot meet again before November. Under the Act of 1868 the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are required to endow the school with real estate in lieu of the present annual payment; this arrangement is now in progress, and such estate will no doubt be out of London; that, however, has nothing to do with the site of the school." An under master of the school gives the following list of honours gained for the school within the last ten or eleven years:—At Oxford—Seven First Class in Final Schools (besides a large number of First in Moderations), thirteen Second Class, twelve Third Class, one Fellowship of All Souls', one Vinerian Scholarship, one Burdett-Coutts Natural Science Scholarship, one Mathematical Fellowship at New College, one Denyer Theological Scholarship, one Radcliffe Travelling Fellowship, one Scholarship of Corpus, one Scholarship of Pembroke, one Proxime accessit for Hertford Scholar, one Newdigate Prize, one Fellowship of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, one Professorship of Elphinstone College, Bombay. At Cambridge—One First Class Classical Tripos, four Second Class, five Third Class, one Ball's University Scholarship, one Trinity Scholarship (first year), two Trinity Scholarships (third year), one Scholarship of Jesus College, one Law Studentship at Trinity Hall. Civil Service—Four Indian Civil Service (open competition), four Artillery or Engineers (Woolwich). "This list," says the under master, "may not be found complete; but, at any rate, it will show that, under the shade of the Abbey, a school of somewhat less than 200 boys is able to hold its own in the wider fields of public competition into which our old pupils enter after they leave us."

The Rev. C. T. Cruttwell, Fellow and Tutor of Merton College, Oxford, has been appointed to the Head Mastership of Bradfield College. Mr. Cruttwell took a first in classics, in moderations, and again in final schools. He was also Pusey and Ellerton Hebrew scholar.

The first examination of candidates for the Bishop Lee Scholarship has been concluded at Owens College, Manchester. There were five candidates, and the successful competitor was Mr. Francis Joseph Kelly, of the Manchester Grammar School, son of the Rev. J. D. Kelly, Vicar of Christ Church, Ashton-under-Lyne.—The Bishop of Manchester, in opening the session of Owens College last Tuesday, replied to some observations of Professor Tyndall on the previous evening. The Bishop considers that the theory of evolution postulates the interfering presence of a personal Creator at every stage of its operations.

Professor Goldwin Smith, as president for the year of the Salt schools at Shipley, which include the schools and institute founded by the late Sir Titus Salt, delivered an address at the opening of the lecture session on the 27th ult. He highly commended the clause in the foundation deed of the schools which provides that the teaching shall be unsectarian.—Presiding on Monday last at the opening of a series of lectures at Bolton in connection with the Cambridge University extension scheme, he referred to the question of the multiplication of universities, alluding especially to the application by the council of Owens College, and said that, without presuming to express any opinion as to the propriety of granting a charter to that institution—for which he expressed the highest respect—he trusted that, before any irrevocable step was taken, some definite rule of proceeding for the future would be established. He seemed to fear that the founding of additional universities would involve the danger of a general lowering of the university standard and of a general depreciation of degrees, and he pointed out what had been the effects of the system in the United States.

The subjects of examination in military history and geography at the examination for admission to the Staff College, to be held in June, 1878, are:—"The Campaign of 1813 in the Peninsula" (candidates will be expected to have a general knowledge of the geography of the country), and "The General Principles of War" (text-books: Jomini, "L'Art de la Guerre," and Hamley, "Operations of War").

A testimonial has been presented to Mr. Maxwell, who held the position of Second Master of the Perse Grammar School at Cambridge, and whose dismissal created a great deal of sympathy, as it was alleged that such dismissal was due to the fact that he was a Nonconformist. The testimonial consisted of a handsome silver salver and £120 in money. It was presented at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Some important changes are contemplated in St. Olave's Grammar School, which was founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1573, a draught scheme having been issued by the Charity Commissioners for its future administration. The present building accommodates 584 children, and provision is made in the scheme for increasing this number to 700. The school is now divided into an upper and lower school, and in future is to be divided into three departments—senior, junior, and elementary—and in the first two the children of the ratepayers of St. Olave's and St. John's, Southwark, are to be charged not more than one half of the amount payable by boys from other parishes. A number of free scholarships are provided, and will be granted to not more than 10 per cent of the pupils, and, in addition, power will be given to the governors to apply £400 per annum in scholarships, each of the yearly value of not more than £25. An annual sum of £500 is to be devoted to exhibitions for girls—half to enable girls to attend any upper school in Southwark, and the other half to enable holders to enter any college or training institution for the higher education of women. The charity is endowed with sixteen acres in Fleet-lane and part of Tooley-street, and has an estimated income of £5000.

THE INTERNATIONAL RIFLE-MATCH.

The international contest of skill between eight United States' citizens and eight of her Majesty's subjects of Great Britain has resulted in the victory of the American marksmen. It took place on the 13th and 14th ult., in the neighbourhood of New York. The British team consisted of Sir Henry Halford, Lieutenant-Colonel Fenton, Lieutenant G. Fenton, and Messrs. J. K. Millner, W. Rigby, H. S. W. Evans, W. Ferguson, and A. P. Humphry. The Americans were General T. S. Dakin, Major H. S. Bruce, and Messrs. Frank Hyde, J. L. Allen, L. Weber, C. E. Blydenburgh, W. H. Jackson, and L. C. Bruce. We present a bird's-eye view of the grounds, which are situated at Creedmoor, Queen's County, Long Island, upon the Long Island and Central Railroad, not far from the city of New York. These grounds are admirably adapted to the purpose for which they were selected by the American Rifle Association. As level as a billiard-table, they afford twenty separate ranges, each of which can be used at distances varying from a hundred to a thousand yards, without the use of elevated firing stands, found necessary upon most English and Canadian rifle-ranges. The grounds forming a perfect plain, the Association, in order to ensure safety, was compelled to construct a heavy embankment in the rear of the targets. This was originally 25 feet high and 570 feet long. The height has been materially increased by a close fence of thick planking on the top of the embankment, running its whole length, and since the grounds were first opened, in 1873, many improvements have been made. A large area of land has been added, affording more space for the tents and camps shown on the left of our picture. The building in the middle of the foreground is the railway station. To the right is a structure which forms a general rendezvous for visitors, where a great deal of sport may be enjoyed in firing with shot-guns at glass balls thrown into the air. From the station a broad avenue, lined with trees, runs to the main entrance to the grounds. On the right are flag-poles indicating the several ranges at which the matches are shot. In the centre is seen a tall tripod surmounted by a vane, which is connected by rods with a large clock-face, the hands of which indicate the direction of the wind, and this explains the frequent announcement upon published scores that the wind was from half-past six to seven. The pennant upon this tripod, as well as those upon the various flagstaves down the range, serves to acquaint the rifle-men with the varying force or value of the wind. The restaurant, controlled by the Association, stands on the right of the entrance. On the left is General Dakin's tent, with the running deer beyond, and in the extreme distance may be seen the fixed targets, relieved against the heavy embankment.

The shooting at Creedmoor was an interesting sight: from five to eight thousand spectators were present. The first range taken was 800 yards, at which the American team made a score of 568 points, the fullest possible score being 600, while the British team made 558 points. The next range, 900 yards, allowed the Americans to gain an equal further success, their score being 547 against 537 made by our countrymen. In the shooting at the 1000-yards' range, again, the Americans made 540 points, while the British riflemen made 534. The highest scores of individual marksmen were, at the longest range, those of Mr. Blydenburgh and Major Jewell, each 72, and of Sir H. Halford, 71; at the second range, Messrs. Weber and Bruce, each 73; and Mr. J. K. Millner, Lieutenant Fenton, Mr. Evans, and Mr. F. Hyde, 70 each; and at the 800 yards' range, Mr. Blydenburgh, 74, General Dakin and Mr. Rigby, 73; Messrs. Millner and Ferguson, 72; Colonel Fenton, Sir H. Halford, and Mr. Evans, 71, and the same for three of the Americans. The result, however, was decided enough, showing a moderate superiority of the Americans at all the ranges, and giving them an aggregate majority of 92 in the total score of points for the two days' shooting.

A terrible railway accident is reported from Russia. A train which was laden with 400 Abchassian prisoners on their way to Siberia was destroyed, and all the exiles were killed.

INTERNATIONAL MATCH OF AMERICAN AND BRITISH RIFLEMEN AT CREEDMOOR, NEW YORK: BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE GROUND.

THE INGRAM PATENT ROTARY MACHINE FOR PRINTING ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPERS.

A. Roll of paper. B B. Type cylinder and impression cylinder for printing the inner forme. C C. Calendering or smoothing rollers, to remove the indentations caused by B B.
D D. Type and impression cylinders for the outer forme. E E. Cylinders with saw-teeth and corresponding indentations, to perforate the sheet of paper.
F F. Rollers for holding the paper securely. G G. Snatching rollers, to break the paper at the lines perforated.
FOLDING MACHINE.—H. Vibrating arm which delivers the sheet. J and K. Alternate carrying tapes. L. Roller to deliver sheets unfolded.
The dotted line from A to L shows the course of the paper from the roll A to the folding machine.

SIDE ELEVATION.

GENERAL VIEW.

THE INGRAM PATENT ROTARY MACHINE FOR PRINTING ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPERS.

Reviewing the vast progress which has been made in the literary and art education of the people during the past thirty-five years, Sir Stafford Northcote lately paid the Illustrated London News the compliment to mention this Journal as one of the beacons that illuminated the dark period of 1842. Whilst we hope that our pages have themselves been a faithful record of the chief improvements which have enriched and elevated the nation since that time, we may, perhaps, be allowed for a moment to dwell upon a new and ingenious invention which has been effected to facilitate the printing of the Illustrated London News. As it was the late Mr. Herbert Ingram, M.P., who originated in the Illustrated London News the first illustrated newspaper, so it was his son, Mr. William James Ingram, M.P., who conceived the idea of the rotary machine depicted in our present Number, and never rested till he had brought this machine to perfection. "As type is printed from circular formes, why should not engravings be so printed?" That was the question Mr. Ingram put to himself; and as a practical answer he has now the satisfaction of pointing to the successful working of the first web rotary machine that has been made for printing illustrated newspapers. The difficulties to be overcome were enormous. Indeed, it may be said that only a practical printer, thoroughly versed in the niceties of "overlying" and "underlying"—that is, of preparing engravings for printing after they have left the hands of the artist and engraver—could have surmounted the thousand-and-one obstacles which barred the way to success. It was to Mr. James Brister, Manager of the Machine Department of the Illustrated London News for the past seventeen years, that Mr. Ingram intrusted the carrying out of his design. Working from the plans and instructions of Mr. Brister, Messrs. Middleton and Co., the engineers, of Southwark, finished the machine in little more than two years, whereas, we believe, previous improvements in rotary machines had not been accomplished in less than five years.

The "Ingram" Machine should be seen at work to fully appreciate its excellence. But a fair idea of its completeness and compactness is given by the accompanying Engravings. At one end is placed a roll of paper about three miles long; and the machine is no sooner started than the paper is caught in the first instance by the cylinders immediately above the reel, receiving an imprint of the inner letterpress forme; thence it is carried diagonally downward to the picture cylinders which print the illustrations on the other side of the sheet; it is next conveyed to the species of guillotine which cuts each Number to its proper size, and being carried therefrom by tapes to the folding-machine, this finally delivers a perfect copy of the paper—well printed on both sides, and folded—at the rate of 6500 an hour. One marked advantage claimed for this new machine is the great saving of time in making ready the illustrations for printing, from the fact that the cylinders are more rigid, and require a thinner "overlay" than any other machine we know. As for the letterpress forme, neither "underlying" nor "overlying" is required, and the machine is constructed to work without roller-lifts or bearers on either forme. We may remark, in further illustration of its many advantages over the ordinary press, that in the second week it was in use for printing a large issue its average work exceeded that of four of our fastest "two-feeders"—a rapidity which may be realised all the more forcibly when we add that, whereas the new machine prints both sides of the paper, cuts each sheet, and delivers it folded, the old horizontal machines simply printed one forme in the same time, and did not fold the sheets. There is thus a considerable saving of manual labour, only four men being engaged on the rotary machine, whilst twenty-four men were employed on the four machines. Let it be added that the "Ingram" Machine only occupies the space of an ordinary perfecting machine; and little more need be said to prove that it bids fair to effect as great a revolution in the printing of illustrated newspapers as the latest Walter and Hoe rotary machines have effected in the printing of daily newspapers.

We may here quote from Mr. Ingram's specification to the Commissioners of Patents the passages referring to the principal improvements which he has introduced:—

"It has been found in practice that 'cuts' or engravings require much more careful inking than the letterpress, and that the ordinary inking arrangements, which are found to answer very well for printing letterpress, will give but very imperfect work from engravings or cuts. It has also been wellnigh impossible to obtain satisfactory impressions from 'cuts' or engraved plates bent to the sharp curve required to correspond to printing cylinders of the ordinary size.

"In order to overcome these difficulties I considerably increase the diameter of the printing cylinder to which the 'cuts' or engraved plates are to be adapted, so that the curves to which these 'cuts' or engraved plates are bent may be gentler and of longer radius than the curved surface of the other printing cylinder. By this means I am also enabled to place on the same printing cylinder two, three, or more copies of the cuts or engravings, so that while the surface speed of the large and small printing cylinders is the same, the small cylinder, if it contains only one set of stereotype plates for the letterpress, will rotate two, three, or more times for every revolution of the large cylinder. The impression cylinder, which acts in conjunction with the large printing cylinder, is also correspondingly increased in size, and rotates at the same surface speed. If desired, the type cylinder may be increased in size so as to be capable of receiving a duplicate set of stereotype plates for the letterpress, while the large cylinder will have a triplicate or other suitable number of sets of cuts for the engravings. The large printing cylinders will therefore perform two thirds of a revolution while the smaller or type cylinder is making one complete revolution.

"My next improvement relates to the inking apparatus, which is used in conjunction with the large printing cylinder, and consists in the use of an increased number of inking rollers and distributing rollers, so that the engravings may be more perfectly inked than heretofore. The ink, as is usual, is transferred by a vibrating roller from the ductor or fountain roller to the first distributing cylinder, from which it is taken by two rollers, and is deposited on a second distributing cylinder, to which an endway motion is given by means of any suitable mechanism. The ink is thereby evenly distributed over the surface of this second cylinder, from which it is transferred by other rollers to two other distributing cylinders, in contact with which four inking rollers rotate and take therefrom the ink, which they transfer to the printing surface. In this manner the cuts or engravings are plentifully and evenly supplied with ink, and good impressions are obtained therefrom."

Practical printers will readily acknowledge that it required a rare combination of skill, knowledge, and perseverance to bring to perfection the improvements suggested by Mr. Ingram. To Mr. James Brister, next to the originator of the idea himself, praise is due. And so ably have the plans been carried out by Messrs. Middleton that this well-known firm of engineers has received an order for another machine to be constructed with a few fresh improvements, which will make it possible to print two whole sheets and two half-sheets of the Illustrated London News on the same machine. It should also be mentioned that the folding-machine (which can be used or not, at will) was made by Mr. Davis, late of Messrs. Harrild and Sons; and that the plates are being very successfully curved by Messrs. Leitch and Co. It will suffice for the general reader if we add particulars of the side elevation view, representing the action of the "Ingram" Machine:—

A is the roll of paper, containing a length of from two to three miles. B B, the type and impression cylinder for printing the inner forme, or type side, of the paper. C C, calendering or smoothing rollers to remove the indentations produced by the impression of B B, so that a smooth surface is preserved to receive the outer forme, or illustrated side of the paper, which is printed by D D. E E are cylinders, one provided with a saw-toothed knife, and the other with a corresponding indentation, to perforate the paper between each impression.

F F are rollers for holding the paper securely, to resist the effect of G G, which are called snatching rollers, and, being driven at a rather higher surface speed than the holding rollers, snatch or break the paper at the places where it has been perforated, and form it into separate sheets. As it is found that machinery for folding newspapers works much better at a moderate speed, in this case it has been arranged in duplicate, so that each folder only works at half the speed of the printing machine. The vibrating arm H delivers the sheets alternately to K and J, which are carrying tapes leading to the two folding machines. If the sheets are wanted unfolded, the arm H is moved to its highest position and there fixed; it then delivers the sheets to the roller L, and, by means of a blast of air and a flyer, they are laid in a pile on a table provided for them. This change can be made without stopping the machine.

It is announced that Mr. Robert Baker, Chief Inspector of Factories for the western district of England, Wales, and Ireland, retired from the department on the 1st inst.

At the review of the Worcestershire Yeomanry Cavalry at Powick on Wednesday Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Sandys said he intended to resign the command of the regiment, and intimated that Lord Lyttelton would be his successor.

A course of forty lectures on the Historical Development of Art, by Dr. G. G. Zeff, F.R.Hist.S., will be begun next Tuesday evening, Oct. 9, at eight o'clock, in the lecture-theatre of the Science and Art Department, South Kensington Museum. Students in training and national scholars are admitted free, whilst the public may attend on payment of nominal fees. The lectures will be richly illustrated by photographs, diagrams, maps, plans, and sketches, and are of general interest, directed more to a correct appreciation of the history of art than to the technicalities of ornamentation.

The Earl of Kimberley presided on Wednesday evening at the annual dinner of the North Walsham Agricultural Association at Norwich, and, in replying to the toast of his health, which was proposed by Colonel Duff, M.P., his Lordship referred at some length to the Eastern Question.—The same evening Mr. Lambert, M.P., and the Hon. T. F. Fremantle, M.P., were present at the forty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Royal South Bucks Agricultural Association, at the Royal Hotel, Slough. The Hon. R. Carington (the unsuccessful candidate at the last election) was also among those present.—The annual meeting of the Wokingham Agricultural and Horticultural Association, of which Mr. Walter, M.P., is president, was held the same day. In the course of a speech at the dinner Mr. Walter said he should be glad to see something like a compulsory deduction made from every man's wages for the purpose of providing a retiring allowance. Many banks and other establishments acted on that system. He saw no other mode of dealing with the gigantic evil of pauperism, and he would recommend its adoption to all the employers of the country.

The recent annexation of the Transvaal territory to the British dominions in South Africa makes it desirable to have correct geographical and statistical knowledge of that fine country in a compact form. This is provided by Messrs. S. W. Silver and Co., of Cornhill, in the newly-published "Handbook to the Transvaal," which contains, in little more than a hundred pages, all the information likely to be wanted, methodically arranged, and clearly set forth in an agreeable style. It ought to have been in the hands of some honourable members of the House of Commons during the last few weeks of the late Session, and it would have saved them from perpetrating many blunders of ignorance when they spoke against the South African Confederation Bill. The history of the Dutch settlement and Republican province is fairly related, with its helpless quarrels and native wars, and the final collapse of its Government. The natural features of the country also, its population, and their gold-field and other industries, are sufficiently described.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Now ready, at all the Libraries,
NEW NOVEL BY MISS BRAMSTON.

E M
By Miss BRAMSTON, Author of "The Cartridges," "Country Maidens," &c. One Volume. Price 10s. 6d.
London: WARD AND CO., London and Belfast.

Now ready, at all the Libraries,
NEW NOVEL BY MR. R. D. BLACKMORE.

EREMA; or, My Father's Sin. By R. D. BLACKMORE, Author of "Lorna Doone," "Alice Lorraine," &c. 3 vols.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 214,
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for

OCTOBER. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and Frank Dicksee.

CONTENTS.
"For Percival." (With an Illustration.) Chap. IV.—Wishing Well and Ill. V.—Why not Lettie? VI.—Her Name. VII.—Jed, or Judith, or Charlotte Corday. VIII.—Perhaps I'm Letting Secrets Out.

The Men of St. Mary's.
A Swiss Bath in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries. Lech Castron, Western Highlands.
House of a Librarian. No. XVII.—Massinger.
Carving a Clock. No. XVIII.—The Carver.
Experience of an Indian Family.
The Enigma of London.

Errema; or, My Father's Sin. (With an Illustration.) Chap. I.—Life, Death, Life.—For Life, Death, Life.—Brantley's Death.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

THE ART JOURNAL for OCTOBER

(Price 2s. 6d.) contains the following

LINK ENGRAVINGS:
I. ON THE HILLSIDE. After W. Holman Hunt.
II. RAIN (HO PAVIA). After Sir E. Landseer, R.A.
III. ELAINE. After F. J. Williamson.

LITERARY CONTENTS:
Norway, Chapter IX. By R. T. Old Nankin Blue. Part I. By Fitchett, F.S.A. Illustrated. E. H. Shublin, M.D., M.A.
The Art of Dressing and of (continued). Chapter I. Illustrated. By Percy Fitz-Gerald, M.A., F.S.A.
About 18th Art. By L. J. Jewell, F.S.A. Illustrated. E. H. Shublin, M.D., M.A.
Furnishing "A Perfect House." Illustrated. By Edwin Gandy.
Art at Home and Abroad.
Obituary, Reviews, &c.
London: VINTAGE and Co., Limited, Ivy-lane, and all Booksellers.

Ready on the 15th inst., price 3d. or, by post, 3d.
OUR EGYPTIAN OBELISK:

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE, BY FRANK WILSON, F.R.S.
BRISTOL AND CO., 26, PATERNOSTER-ROW; and all Booksellers.

Price 6d. (or free by post 8d.),
MADAME DEMOREST'S

WHAT TO WEAR, AND HOW TO MAKE IT.

Information on Dress and Dress-making. Contains nearly 500 Miniature Illustrations of Ladies' and Children's Fashions for Autumn and Winter, with full descriptions of Latest Styles, &c., including Materials, Trimmings, Making and Outdoor Costumes, Dinner, Evening, and other Toilet, Jewellery, Lace, Collures, Millinery, and every new and desirable article connected with Ladies' and Children's Dress.

Just what every Lady, Milliner, Dressmaker, Draper, Warehouseman, and Outfitter wants to know about the Autumn and Winter Fashions.
Sold by all Booksellers and Newsagents, and at every Railway Station.

WALTER and ROGERS NEWS COMPANY, General Agents for Demorest's Reliable Patterns, 11, Bouverie-street, London.

Just published, post-free, 2 stamps,
DYSPEPSIA AND THE SEVERER

FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A small Pamphlet on these distressing complaints, and the complete cure, by DR. CHARD KING, Esq., Surgeon, R.N., 25, Warwick-street, Rugby.

Large 8vo, pp. 724, bound in cloth, 8s., post-free,
HOMOEOPATHIC DOMESTIC

PHYSICIAN. By Drs. PULTE and EPES.

CONTENTS:—General Diseases—Cutaneous Diseases—Fever—Affections of the Mind—the Head—the Eyes—the Ears—the Nose—the Face, Lips, and Jaws—the Teeth, Gums, and Mouth—the Windpipe and Cough—the Stomach and Bowels—the Urinary and Genital Organs—Diseases of Women—Treatment of Children—Anatomy and Physiology—Hygiene and Hydropathy—Materia Medica—Domestic Surgery—Medical and Surgical Appliances—Dietetics and Laxatives—Fractures.

A Chest of Medicines, Book included, 23 10s. or 25 5s.
London: JAMES EPPS and Co., 48, Threadneedle-street.

22mo, pp. 300, bound in cloth, 1s., or 14 stamps,
HOMOEOPATHIC FAMILY

INSTRUCTOR. By RICHARD EPES, M.D., M.R.C.S.

This handy book describes and prescribes for a hundred diseases. James Epps and Co., No. 48, Threadneedle-st., and 170, Piccadilly.

23rd Edition, 8vo, cloth, pp. 1102, 16s.,
HOMOEOPATHIC DOMESTIC

MEDICINE. By J. LAURIE, M.D. Completely rearranged and revised by R. S. Gutteridge, M.D. The most comprehensive Guide published for the use of families, emigrants, and missionaries, being free of all technicalities. The present edition contains, in addition to the symptoms and treatment of all general diseases, including those of Females and Children, many important new chapters, comprising, among others, the specific curative effects of all the new American remedies, and plain directions for the treatment of Accidents, and Illustrations delineating the minor operations in surgery. Hydropathic Appliances, Affections of the Eyes (with a description of various parts of the eye). Full directions are also given for the treatment of 14 diseases prevalent in Tropical Climates. A new and concise Dictionary of Medical Terms and Treatment, with leading indications of treatment prefixed to the various chapters and divisions. An Epitome of the above, 2nd Edition, price 6s.

A Chest of Medicines adapted to the former Work, in tinctures or globules, price 44 6s.; in globules, 23 10s.
To the latter, tinctures or globules, price 22 2s.; in globules, 21 10s.
LEATH and ROSS, 8, St. Paul's-churchyard; and 9, Vere-street, W.

CANCER—ITS CONSTITUTIONAL AND

SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT: An Experience of Twenty-five Years. By the late Dr. J. D. BARTON, F.R.C.S. and F.R.S. Edited by his son, M. MONCRIEFF BARTON, M.D. (New York).—RANK and ASHWAEL, 74, New Bond-street, London, W. Price One Shilling, post-free.

COLLECTIONS of PHOTOGRAPHS.
PRINTS, &c. arranged.—MARION and CO., 22 and 23, Soho-square, undertake to put into order collections of Photographs, Prints, &c., to make them into convenient volumes, for reference, to frame them for the library or dining-room, or to put them into portfolios, in order to keep them separate. Patent Portfolios, holding into one space, 100 prints enlarged, framed, and matted. Estimates given for work in general.

VITREMANIE.—An Easy Method of Decorating Windows in Churches, Public Buildings and Private Houses equal to Real Stained Glass. Illustrated Handbook of Instructions, post-free, 1s. 2d. Particulars free. London: J. BARNARD and SONS, 338, Oxford-street, W.

SCRAPS for SCREENS and SCRAP-BOOKS.
A Large Collection of Coloured Scraps of the best kind—Flowers, Figures, Birds, &c., 1s. per Sheet; 12 Sheets, 10s. 6d. W. M. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

WHITE WOOD ARTICLES for Painting.
Fern Painting, and Decalcomanie; Screens, Book-Covers, Glove, Knitting, and Handkerchief Boxes; Paper-Knives, Fans, &c. Priced list post-free.
W. M. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.

Sold by all Stationers
THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

ASK your Stationer for PERRY and CO.'S 6d. Sample Box of 36 Selected Patterns of Steel Pens. Post-free for 6d. in stamps.

Wholesale, 19 and 20, Holborn Viaduct, London.

PERRY and CO.'S NEW PATENT

ANTI-BLOTTING PEN, with Nickel Silver Points.—This is the latest improvement in steel pens, having all the requisites of a good pen, and being much more durable on account of the nickel point. Price 1s. per Box of three dozen, or 3s. 6d. per gross.

PERRY and CO. (Limited) are the largest

PEN and PENCIL MAKERS in the world. They employ 1900 hands; cut up about four tons of steel, making 5,000,000 pens per week. Show-Rooms and Warehouses, 19 and 20, Holborn Viaduct, London.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION.

97a, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine Daily. Persons of all ages received (privately), and taught at any time during their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extra improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies.—Apply to Mr. Smart as above.

STOCKS and SHARES, Telegraphs,

Tramways, Railways, Banks, and other leading Securities, WILLIAM ABBOTT, 10, Tokenhouse-yard, London, E.C.

THE GRANVILLE, ST. LAWRENCE.

ON-SEA, near Ramsgate.—Baths, Theatre, Concert, Billiard-room, Board, with attendance, in the Grand (Oceanic Dining Hall, 12s. per day.—Address, THE MANAGER.

HEIDELBERG.—HOTEL SCHRIEDER.

Renowned hotel, provided with every comfort. Moderate prices. Beautifully situated. Best view of the castle. Opening of the Winter Season Oct. 1. Very liberal arrangements for families and single persons. Low rates for pension. A. DREIER, Proprietor.

ACCIDENTS BY FLOOD AND FIELD.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4. Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4. Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

Accidents of all kinds may be provided against by a Policy of the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, Limited, of the Strand, E.C. 4.

SPECIAL INFORMATION.—La Directrice des Modes dans l'établissement de Messieurs JAY et CIE, a l'honneur d'informer sa Clientèle de son retour de Paris avec un grand CHOIX de CHAPEAUX et COIFFURES pour l'AUTOMNE. Les Chapeaux sont différents et des plus confortables formes. Les Bonnets et Coiffures sont élégants, et de formes tout à fait nouvelles.

SPECIAL INFORMATION.—The latest FRENCH SILK COSTUMES for Autumn wear, composed of Black Silk with Velvet, and some very novel garnitures, have been imported by Messrs. JAY. Ladies are specially invited to view these productions of the French modiste's art and good taste.

SPECIAL INFORMATION.—New Pattern Black SILK COSTUMES, trimmed handsomely with velvet and other fashionable garnitures, at 64 gs. each Costume, including 34 yards of Silk for making a Bodice.

SPECIAL INFORMATION.—FASHIONS for AUTUMN.—Messrs. JAY have received from Paris some beautiful specimens of French art and ingenuity, in a variety of Mantles so diversified in style, texture, and material as almost to constitute a new class in lady's costume.

JAY'S THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, Regent-street, W.

G A S K and G A S K. NEW VIGONA CLOTH, 2½d. per yard, in New Autumn Shades; also, fine FRENCH CACHEMIRE, 2s. 11d., double width; and the fashionable SNOWFLAKE CLOTH, 10d., with a large collection of NEW DRESS FABRICS, from 10d. to 3s. 9d. per yard. PATTERNS FREE. Oxford-street and Wells-street.

NEW AUTUMN COSTUMES, made of the fashionable Foreign and English Fabrics from novel and elegant Paris Models, 2s. to 4s. 6s. RICH BLACK SILK COSTUMES, exceptionally good, 4s. SILK COSTUME SKIRTS, 21s., with a vast variety of new Costumes of all kinds equally cheap. GASK and GASK, Oxford-street and Wells-street.

G A S K and G A S K. New Lyons Silks, Blacks and Colours, still cheaper. The best makes of BLACK SILKS, recommended for wear, and every shade of Colour, in all qualities, 3s. 3d. to 7s. 9d. per yard. NEW FANCY SILKS. PATTERNS FREE. 66, 68, 69, 71, 73, 75, Oxford-street; 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, Wells-street, London.

THE STOCK OF MADAME SILVESTRE, late of Vere-street, Cavendish-square, W. (Modiste by Appointment to her Majesty), has been purchased at a large discount off by PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, W. and is now on Sale, together with extraordinary purchases (in anticipation of the Autumn Season) in SILKS, FURS, MANTLES, and COSTUMES. For Particulars please write for Circular.

A LARGE PURCHASE OF NEW COLOURED SILKS, at 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., and 4s. 6d. per yard, 220 choice shades to select from. Patterns free.

ONE THOUSAND PIECES OF BLACK GROS GRAINS. This extensive purchase comprises Silks of the best and most reliable makes, and are specially recommended. Prices 2s. 6d., 3s. 3d., and 3s. 9d. per yard. Also richer goods, from 4s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. Patterns free from PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

THE NEW PEKIN BROCADES (Spun Silk), in all the New Colours, at 4s. 11d. per yard. A novel Material, having a pretty effect blended with plain-coloured Silks. Patterns free.

COLOURED GENOA VELVETS, to match every silk, short pile, well covered, suitable for gowns, 6s. 11d. per yard. Any length cut. Patterns free.

COLOURED SILK COSTUMES, of the latest designs and most fashionable description, in all the new Coloured silks, commencing at 4s. 6s. Patterns of the Silks and Engravings post-free.

BLACK SILK COSTUMES, made from the new Paris Models in eight different styles of the most approved designs, as shown in engravings. Price, with bodice complete, 4s. 6s. Patterns of the Silk and Fashion-Plates post-free from PETER ROBINSON, Oxford-street, London, W.

A LARGE COLLECTION OF NOVELTIES FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER DRESSES, in every variety of Fabric and Shade of Colour, from 12s. 6d. to 42s. the Full Dress. Patterns free.

IN 62 NEW SHADES OF COLOUR. CACHEMIRE DE PARIS. This elegant material is all wool, beautifully soft, and richer in its colourings than any article previously introduced, 48 inches wide, 3s. 11d. and 4s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

VERY FASHIONABLE THIS SEASON. CASHMERE MERINOES, all Wool. This most useful material can be had in every new Shade of Bronze, Vert, Bouillie, Prune, &c., from 2s. 2d. to 2s. 11d. per yard, 48 in. wide. Patterns free.

A NEW FABRIC FOR PALETOTS, &c. POIL DE CHAMEAU (Registered). This elegant Fabric, though very warm, is remarkably light and soft, and can be had in choice Shades of Fawn, Drab, Grey, Light Brown, &c., 54 in. wide, from 5s. 6d. per yard.

A VARIETY OF NEW MATERIALS FOR WARM WINTER PETTICOATS, including a large assortment of Silk-striped Cloth Skirtings, Reversible Velvets, plain Colours, &c., from 3s. 3d. to 6s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free.

IN WHITE, BLACK, AND ALL NEW COLOURS. VELVET-FINISHED VELVETEENS, beautifully soft, rich, and very wide. This charming fabric can be had in Black, from 2s. 9d. to 6s. 6d. per yard, and in 35 choice Shades of Colour at 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NOW ON SALE AT HALF PRICE. 1000 UNMADE PALETOTS (Black), richly embroidered on very fine Cashmere or Diagonal Cloth. Full size and Newest Shape, from 2s. 6d. to 42s. each; formerly 3 to 4 gs.

AUTUMN COSTUMES. New Designs in Cashmere and Silk Costumes, 4 gs. Specialties in Travelling Costumes, 3s. 6d. to 7 gs. Rich Velvet Under Skirts, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Illustrations and Patterns Materials post-free.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-ST., W., having concluded the purchase of large quantities of REAL FUR SKINS and Squirrel Furs, they are now on Sale, as quoted below:—Russian Seal Fur Jackets, loose shapes, 24 to 28 in. deep, 6 to 10 gs. Ditto, fitting shapes, 30 to 36 in. deep, 9 to 20 gs. South Sea Seal, loose shapes, 2 to 4 gs.

THE LATEST PRODUCTIONS IN MANTLES AND PALETOTS. Cashmere Circulars, lined Fur, 2 to 5 gs. Cashmere Paletots, lined Fur, 3 to 8 gs. Silk Circulars, lined Fur, 3 to 10 gs. Silk Paletots, lined Fur, 6 to 15 gs.

THE NEW DIAGONAL CLOTH PALETOTS, 2 gs. to 5 gs. The New Beaver Cloth Paletots, 2s. 6d. to 4 gs. New Under Skirts, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. Waterproof Mantles and Ulsters, 1s. 6d. to 42s. PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, London, W.

LADIES' SEALS HATS, 1000 Seal Turban Hats, 4s. 11d., 5s. 6d., and 6s. 6d., post-free. 150 Ladies' Alpine ditto Shape, 15s. 6d. BAKER and CRISP, Regent-street.

BAKER and CRISP'S CHEAP SILKS, Dress Fabrics, Costumes, Jackets, and General Drapery, &c. Patterns, Engraving, or Price-Lists free.—Regent-street, London, and Eastbourne.

LADIES' DRESSES! SERGES! SERGES! Patterns post-free. All the New Colours and Makes in Wool Serges, from 34d. per yard. Patterns free.—138, Regent-street.

LADIES' DRESSES. All the New Snow Flakes and other Fancy MATERIALS FOR AUTUMN from the lowest prices. Patterns free.

LADIES' DRESSES. All the New Cachemires, French Merinos, and other Soft Woolen Fabrics, from 1s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free.—BAKER and CRISP.

LADIES' DRESSES.—VELVETEENS! Velveteens!—The Royal Silk Molekin Velveteens in Black and all Colours, from 1s. 9d. to 3s. 6d. per yard. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP, 138, Regent-street, London.

COSTUMES! Engravings free. All the New and most Ladylike Costumes, Jackets, Ulsters, and Cloaks. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP, 138, Regent-street.

SILKS, SILKS, SILKS. The Richest Black, Coloured, Figured, and Japanese Silks, from 1s. 11d. to 4s. 8d. per yard. Patterns free. BAKER and CRISP, 138, Regent-street.

HENRY GLAVE'S NEW SILK PATTERNS are now ready. The Princess Black Silk, at 3s. 9d. } A new make of The Princess Black Silk, at 4s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 5s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 6s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 7s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 8s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 9s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 10s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 11s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 12s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 13s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 14s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 15s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 16s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 17s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 18s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 19s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 20s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 21s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 22s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 23s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 24s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 25s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 26s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 27s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 28s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 29s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 30s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 31s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 32s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 33s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 34s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 35s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 36s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 37s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 38s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 39s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 40s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 41s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 42s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 43s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 44s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 45s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 46s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 47s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 48s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 49s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 50s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 51s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 52s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 53s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 54s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 55s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 56s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 57s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 58s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 59s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 60s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 61s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 62s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 63s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 64s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 65s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 66s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 67s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 68s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 69s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 70s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 71s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 72s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 73s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 74s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 75s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 76s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 77s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 78s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 79s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 80s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 81s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 82s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 83s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 84s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 85s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 86s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 87s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 88s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 89s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 90s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 91s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 92s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 93s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 94s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 95s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 96s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 97s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 98s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 99s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 100s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 101s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 102s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 103s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 104s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 105s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 106s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 107s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 108s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 109s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 110s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 111s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 112s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 113s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 114s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 115s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 116s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 117s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 118s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 119s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 120s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 121s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 122s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 123s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 124s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 125s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 126s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 127s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 128s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 129s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 130s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 131s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 132s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 133s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 134s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 135s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 136s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 137s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 138s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 139s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 140s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 141s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 142s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 143s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 144s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 145s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 146s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 147s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 148s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 149s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 150s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 151s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 152s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 153s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 154s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 155s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 156s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 157s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 158s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 159s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 160s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 161s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 162s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 163s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 164s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 165s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 166s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 167s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 168s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 169s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 170s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 171s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 172s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 173s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 174s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 175s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 176s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 177s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 178s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 179s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 180s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 181s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 182s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 183s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 184s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 185s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 186s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 187s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 188s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 189s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 190s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 191s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 192s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 193s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 194s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 195s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 196s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 197s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 198s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 199s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 200s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 201s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 202s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 203s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 204s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 205s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 206s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 207s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 208s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 209s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 210s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 211s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 212s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 213s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 214s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 215s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 216s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 217s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 218s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 219s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 220s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 221s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 222s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 223s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 224s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 225s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 226s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 227s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 228s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 229s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 230s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 231s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 232s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 233s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 234s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 235s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 236s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 237s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 238s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 239s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 240s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 241s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 242s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 243s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 244s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 245s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 246s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 247s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 248s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 249s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 250s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 251s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 252s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 253s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 254s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 255s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 256s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 257s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 258s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 259s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 260s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 261s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 262s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 263s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 264s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 265s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 266s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 267s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 268s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 269s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 270s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 271s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 272s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 273s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 274s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 275s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 276s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 277s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 278s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 279s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 280s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 281s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 282s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 283s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 284s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 285s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 286s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 287s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 288s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 289s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 290s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 291s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 292s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 293s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 294s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 295s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 296s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 297s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 298s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 299s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 300s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 301s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 302s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 303s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 304s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 305s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 306s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 307s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 308s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 309s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 310s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 311s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 312s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 313s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 314s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 315s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 316s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 317s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 318s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 319s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 320s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 321s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 322s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 323s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 324s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 325s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 326s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 327s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 328s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 329s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 330s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 331s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 332s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 333s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 334s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 335s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 336s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 337s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 338s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 339s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 340s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 341s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 342s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 343s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 344s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 345s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 346s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 347s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 348s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 349s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 350s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 351s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 352s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 353s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 354s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 355s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 356s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 357s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 358s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 359s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 360s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 361s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 362s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 363s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 364s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 365s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 366s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 367s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 368s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 369s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 370s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 371s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 372s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 373s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 374s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 375s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 376s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 377s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 378s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 379s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 380s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 381s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 382s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 383s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 384s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 385s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 386s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 387s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 388s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 389s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 390s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 391s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 392s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 393s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 394s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 395s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 396s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 397s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 398s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 399s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 400s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 401s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 402s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 403s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 404s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 405s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 406s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 407s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 408s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 409s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 410s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 411s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 412s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 413s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 414s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 415s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 416s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 417s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 418s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 419s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 420s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 421s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 422s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 423s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 424s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 425s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 426s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 427s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 428s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 429s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 430s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 431s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 432s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 433s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 434s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 435s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 436s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 437s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 438s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 439s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 440s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 441s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 442s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 443s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 444s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 445s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 446s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 447s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 448s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 449s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 450s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 451s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 452s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 453s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 454s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 455s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 456s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 457s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 458s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 459s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 460s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 461s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 462s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 463s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 464s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 465s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 466s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 467s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 468s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 469s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 470s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 471s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 472s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 473s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 474s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 475s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 476s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 477s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 478s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 479s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 480s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 481s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 482s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 483s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 484s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 485s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 486s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 487s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 488s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 489s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 490s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 491s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 492s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 493s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 494s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 495s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 496s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 497s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 498s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 499s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 500s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 501s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 502s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 503s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 504s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 505s. 9d. } The Princess Black Silk, at 506s.

NEW MUSIC.

NOW READY,
CHRISTMAS NUMBER

CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE

(No. 114)
containing the following Popular Dance Music:—
Trial by Jury Lancers. . . . Charles D'Albert.
Constantinople Quadrille. . . . Charles D'Albert.
Die Fledermaus Waltz. . . . J. Strauss.
Les Lointains Waltz. . . . Emile Waldteufel.
Maiden's Dream Waltz. . . . Edward Hoffman.
The Schomberg Galop. . . . Charles D'Albert.
Florella Polka. . . . Charles D'Albert.
Pizzicato Polka. . . . J. and J. Strauss.
Forget-me-not Galop. . . . A. Hecker.

And a New Quadrille, MOLLIE DARLING,
by CHAS. D'ALBERT.
Price One Shilling; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S NEW SONG.
THE DISTANT SHORE. New Song.
By ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd during his provincial tour in October. Price (in E flat, F, or G), 2s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

MARCH OF THE PASHAS, for the Pianoforte. By JOHN PRIDHAM. Beautifully illustrated with Portraits of Mehmet Ali, Suliman Pasha, and Robert Pasha. Price, post-free, 2s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW POLKA BY CH. D'ALBERT.
THE FANFARE POLKA. By CHARLES
D'ALBERT. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. net; Orchestra, 2s.;
Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NEW DANCE
MUSIC.
SWEETHEARTS. Waltz on Arthur Sullivan's popular Song. "One of the best waltzes ever written by the Net.
above favourite composer."
TRIAL BY JURY LANCERS. on Airs from Sullivan's popular work.
TRIAL BY JURY QUADRILLE. . . . 2s. 0d.
TRIAL BY JURY WALTZ. . . . 2s. 0d.
TRIAL BY JURY POLKA. . . . 2s. 0d.
RINK GALOP. . . . 2s. 0d.
FLEUR DE THE QUADRILLE. . . . 2s. 0d.
FASCINATION VALSE à Trois Temps. . . . 2s. 0d.
SULTAN'S POLKA (New Edition). . . . 2s. 0d.
The above, arranged for Full Orchestra, 2s.; Septet, 2s. each.
N.B. A Complete List of M. D'Albert's Popular Dance Music will be sent on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LIST of NEW SONGS.
SWEETHEARTS (sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd) . . . ARTHUR SULLIVAN 2s. net.
THE BOWAN TREE (sung by Mademoiselle A. Sterling) . . . M. W. BALFE 2s. net.
THOU'RT PASSING HENCE,
MY BROTHER (sung by Mr. Santley) . . . ARTHUR SULLIVAN 2s. net.
IF (sung by B. McGuckin) . . . PINSUTI 2s. net.
THE CAPTIVE SKYLARK . . . PINSUTI 2s. net.
THE SKYLARK FREE . . . PINSUTI 2s. net.
BOOKS AND PLAYBOYS . . . PINSUTI 2s. net.
OH! FOR THY WINGS . . . PINSUTI 2s. net.
THE EVERLASTING SHORE . . . PINSUTI 2s. net.
SWEETHEARTS . . . ARTHUR SULLIVAN 2s. net.
CRADLE SONG . . . CARRINGTON LEE 2s. net.
THE LAST LETTER . . . CARRINGTON LEE 2s. net.
WHEN THOU ART NIGH . . . GOUNOD 2s. net.
I'LL SING THREE SONGS OF
L'AMOUR . . . F. CLAY 2s. net.
THE FATE OF A ROSE . . . HENRY SMART 2s. net.
MY LOVER ACROSS THE
BLUE SEA . . . S. ADAMS 2s. net.
THE DAY MY LOVE WENT
MAYING . . . I. GRAY 2s. net.
NOT FAR AWAY . . . B. TOUBES 2s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TRIAL BY JURY. Dramatic Cantata.
Written by W. S. Gilbert. Composed by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now being performed with immense success at the Strand Theatre. Complete for Voice and Pianoforte. 2s. 6d.
net. TRIAL BY JURY. Pianoforte Solo. 2s. 6d. net.
THE JUDGE'S SONG. 2s. net.
THE LOVE-SICK BOY. Defendant's Song. 1s. 6d. net.
KUHNS FANTASIA. 2s. net.
SMALLWOOD'S FANTASIA (easy). 1s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

L'ORGANISTE PRATIQUE.
240 Easy Pieces for Organ or Harmonium, by J. LEYBACH, in 2 vols., price 6s. each net; or in eight parts, each 2s. net. The above will supply a want long felt by amateur performers on the organ or harmonium, as all the pieces are very pretty without being difficult.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM OF HIRE.

PIANOFORTES of every description by all the most celebrated makers from Two Guinea's a Quarter.

HARMONIUMS by ALEXANDRE, from
One Pound Five Shillings per Quarter.

SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES, at immense Reductions for Cash, or on the Three-Years' System.

CHAPPELL'S ENGLISH 20-GUINEA OR SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE with Check Action, in Canadian Walnut or Mahogany. This instrument combines good quality of tone and excellence of workmanship. Has lovely touch and is capable of enduring hard practice without going out of order. Owing to its size, it is admirably adapted for the parlour or any room where space is an object. In Solid Oak or White Ash, 22 ga. Rosewood or Walnut Case, 27 ga.
50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC PUBLISHED by JOSEPH WILLIAMS.

H. WEIST HILL'S Compositions, as performed at the Alexandra Palace.
True Love Valse. 2s. Belle of the Promenade Polka. 1s. 6d.
Alma Valse. 2s. 1s. 6d.
Bon Image Valse. 2s. 1s. 6d.
Carlotta Mazurka. 1s. 6d. To Paris Galop. 1s. 6d.
Madame de Pompadour Gavotte. 1s. 6d.
Osmanli Grand March. Dedicated to the Heroes of Erevan. 2s.
Above net, free by post.
JOSEPH WILLIAMS, Berners-street and Cheapside.

SIR MICHAEL COSTA'S NAAMAN.
Vocal Score, complete, Octavo Edition. 4s. net.
Do. bound in cloth. 5s. net.
All the numbers of "Naaman" can also be had separately, including the celebrated Aria, "I Dreamt I was in Heaven." 3s.;
and the Triumphal March, "Naaman," as Piano Solo, 3s.; Piano Duet, 3s.; and also as Organ Solo, with Pedal, 3s.

SIR W. STERNDAL BENNETT'S
WORKS for the PIANOFORTE, in two vols. Cheap Edition now ready, including the celebrated Tocatta, Scherzo, op. 13; Capriccio, op. 27; Three Sketches, &c. Price 6s. net each vol.; or, bound in cloth, 7s. net.

FRANZ ABT'S NEWEST SONGS.
ONE LITTLE WORD. 2s.
"Destined to be one of the reigning favourites. This gifted composer has written nothing more beautiful since 'When the Swallows'."—Empire.
"This is MY LOVE. 2s.
"The music is of Abt's best; the melody is full of variety and charm."—Illustrated News.
THE FAIRY DELL. 2s.
FAIR JEANNETTE. 2s.

CATALOGUES SENT POST-FREE.
Sole Agents for Moore and Burgess Minstrel's Songs.
Shipping Orders on favourable terms.

LONDON: JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 125, Cheapside, E.C.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS' IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
"A CONDUIT-STREET, REGENT-STREET, W."

NEW MUSIC.

NOTICE.—THE FOLLOWING SONGS
WILL BE SUNG throughout the Provinces during the months of October and November by the various Artists singing on the Autumnal Tour. Price 2s. each, net.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

THE OLD SAILOR WIFE. By MOLLOY.
Sung by Madame Antoinette Sterling every night at Mr.
Lloyd's Provincial Concerts.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

FAIR IS MY LOVE. By HATTON.
Sung by Mr. Santley at all Mr. Pyatt's Concerts.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

WHEN THE HEART IS YOUNG. By DUDLEY BUCK. Sung by Mrs. Osgood every night on Mr. Pyatt's Tour.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

THE OLD-FASHIONED WAY. By
Madame SAINTON-DOLBY. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd every night on his Tour in October and November.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

SONGS by HAMILTON AIDÉ.
Remember or Forget. The Fisher. Maid I Love is Six Years Old.
Spanish Boat Song. Brown Eyes, or Blue Eyes.
Let me Dream of Happy Days.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

SONGS by ALFRED SCOTT GATTY.
Boothay Bay. One, Morning, oh! so early.
Old Sweet Story. The Departure.
Hay is in the Mow. Apart.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN.
The Lost Chord. Let me Dream Again.
Living Poems. Sleep, my Love, Sleep.
Golden Days. Looking Back.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

SONGS by F. H. COWEN.
It was a Dream. Almost.
Spirits. Marguerite.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

SONGS by DOLORES.
Destiny. The Fairies.
Clear and Cool. Seaweed.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

SONGS by PINSUTI.
Still Waters Run Deep. As You Like It.
All the World's a Stage.
Price 2s. each, net.—Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. On the Celebrated
Song. The Waltz of the Season.

NANCY LEE WALTZ. Price 2s. net.
Solo and Duet; Orchestra, 1s.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S ANTHEMS and SACRED PART-SONGS in THE CHORALIST. Price
One Penny each.

ANTHEMS.
216. Rejoice in the Lord. 222. Love not the world.
218. Sing, O Heavens! 223. Come, ye children.
221. O that thou hadst harkened. 224. I will arise.
SACRED PART-SONGS.
164. It came upon the mid-night. 198. Watchman, what of the night?
197. Lead, kindly light. 200. The way is long and dreary.
196. Through sorrow's path. 215. A hymn of the home-land.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

New Cantata for Amateur Societies.
THE SONG OF THE MONTHS. Cantata by FRANCIS HOWELL, Composer of "The Land of Promise." Containing twelve numbers, illustrating the months of the year. Price 2s. 6d. complete. Separate parts for the chorus, price 6d. each voice. The band parts may also be had.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

Next week, price 2s. 6d., paper; 4s. cloth, gift edges.
RUBINSTEIN'S FIFTEEN BEST SONGS.
With German and English Words. Also RUBINSTEIN'S EIGHTEEN VOCAL DUETS. With German and English Words. Price 2s. 6d., paper; 4s. cloth, gift edges.
RUBINSTEIN'S PIANOFORTE ALBUM. Contains his Eleven most celebrated pieces. Price 1s.
RUBINSTEIN'S SIX PIANOFORTE STUDIES. Price 1s.
RUBINSTEIN'S SIX PIANOFORTE PRELUDES. Price 1s.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street.

Price One Shilling each,
BOOSEY'S MUSICAL INSTRUCTORS.
DR. CALLOTT'S GRAMMAR OF MUSIC.
W. T. BERRY'S FIRST ORGAN BOOK.
J. W. FLEET'S NEW HARMONIC TUTOR.
HENNING'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLIN.
CASE'S VIOLIN TUTOR.
BRINLEY RICHARDS' FIRST LESSONS FOR THE PIANO.
GEORGE MOULTON'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE TUTOR.
DR. SPARK'S HANDY-BOOK OF CHORAL SINGING.
BALFE'S BALLAD TUTOR.
VACCAR'S SINGING METHOD, without Solfege.
HIGGINS'S SINGING METHOD FOR MEN'S VOICES.
HATTON'S SINGING TUTOR FOR MEN'S VOICES.
KAPPEY'S CLARINET TUTOR.
EDWARD HOWELL'S FIRST BOOK FOR THE VIOLON-CELLO.
R. S. PRATTEN'S FLUTE TUTOR.
STANTON JONES'S CORNET TUTOR.
CASE'S ENGLISH CONCERTINA TUTOR.
Boosey and Co., 255, Regent-street, W.

SECONDHAND PIANOS.—BOOSEY and
CO. have a large Stock of Instruments by all the great Makers, which they offer, according to their custom on the close of the season, at greatly reduced prices. The majority of these Pianos have been hired for one season only, and are as good as new.—Sole address, 255, Regent-street.

BOOSEY and CO.'S BRASS INSTRUMENTS FOR AMATEURS.
THE DISTIN CORNET, from 25 10s.
THE DISTIN CELEBRATED LIGHT VALVE CORNETS,
7 and 8 ga. are the best Cornets made. Price 10s. 6d. each.
THE DISTIN MINIATURE CORNET-à-PISTONS, 9 ga.
THE DISTIN BALLAD HORN in C, 9 ga.
THE DISTIN DRAG and POST HORNS and BAND IN-STRUMENTS at all prices.
THE DISTIN MONTHLY BRASS BAND JOURNAL, 10s. 6d. per annum.
The above instruments were exhibited by Boosey and Co., at the Philadelphia Exhibition, and were awarded a Prize Medal.
"For power and quality of tone, fine workmanship." Estimates for Bands of all sizes, also illustrations and prices, to be had of the sole manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 255, Regent-street, London.

DRUMMER-BOY'S POLKA. By ARDITI.
Great success. Re-demanded nightly with acclamation.
"The Drummer-Boy's Polka," by the same composer, introducing the drummers of the Coldstream, was likewise unpro-priately re-demanded."—Daily Telegraph. Price 2s.
A. HAMMOND and Co., 6, Vigo-street, Regent-street, W.

LE TORTORELLE VALSE. By ARDITI.
Also encored nightly. "A delightfully flowing and melodious valse, from the pen of Signor Arditi. 'Le Tortorelle' obtained a hearty encore."—Daily Telegraph, Aug. 13. Price 4s.
A. HAMMOND and Co., 6, Vigo-street, W.

BAISER DE PRINTEMPS. LAMOTHE'S loveliest and most popular Waltz, played with greatest success at all Coote and Tinney's engagements, and by all the Regimental Bands of the Service and Volunteers. 2s. net.
CUNNINGHAM BOOSEY and Co., and all Musicellers.

A. S. GATTY'S BEST SONGS.
A DAISY SONG. TRUE TILL DEATH.
Sung by Madame Cave-Ash-ton. Sung by Mr. Maybrick.
CUNNINGHAM BOOSEY and Co., and all Musicellers.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageollets, Guitars, Banjos, Accordions, Flutinas, Cornets, Sax-horns, Drums, and Musical Instruments of every description.
Largest assortment in the kingdom. BUTLER'S Manufactory, 29, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue, post-free.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE,
from 25s. upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS,
No. 33, Great Pultney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory,
No. 46, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

NEW MUSIC.

Just published,
KING HENRY'S SONG. By ARTHUR
SULLIVAN. Introduced in the revival of "Henry VIII."
Price 4s. Half price.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

Now ready,
THE FIRE KING. New Cantata. By
WALTER AUSTIN. Produced at the Leeds Festival on Wednesday Evening, Sept. 19. Piano and Vocal score, price 5s.;
post-free, 6s. stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

THE FIRE KING.—THE PAST IS BUT
A TROUBLED DREAM. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd.
Also, TO ARMS! War Song. Price 4s. each. Half price.—METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London.

SEA NYMPHS. The New Operetta. By
LEOCOCQ (now being represented at the Folly Theatre). The Libretto (written by H. B. Farnie) and the Music complete, with all stage directions, published at 2s. 6d., post-free, in Metzler and Co.'s Edition of Comic Operas.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WHISPERING KISSES. The New Song.
By E. JONAS (from the popular French play, "Bébé").
Is sung by Miss Violet Cameron in "The Croire" at the Folly
Theatre with the greatest possible success, and is nightly encored.
Post-free, 18 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MR. BARTON MCGUCKIN.
MINE OWN. A New Song. By H.
GADSBY. Words by F. E. Weatherly.
Price 4s.; post-free, half-price.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

SUNG BY MADAME LIEBHART.
FAIR FROM HOME. New Song. By
G. B. ALLEN. Words by Edward Oxenford.
Sung with the greatest success at Madame Liebhart's Concerts.
Price 4s.; post-free, half price.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

EDITH'S SONG. From Tennyson's
"Harold." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI.
Post-free, 24 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

A WINTER'S TALE. From Tennyson's
"Harold." "Two young lovers in wintry weather." Set to Music by ODOARDO BARRI.
Post-free, 24 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

WAR SONGS OF THE EAST. By
H. B. FARNIE.
In handsome cover, price 1s.; post-free, 13 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA SERENADE. Waltz. By METRA.
A most attractive and popular waltz.
Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

LA VAGUE. Waltz. By METRA.
Solo or Duet. Post-free, 24 stamps.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

W. SMALLWOOD'S NEW PIECES for PIANOFORTE. Illustrated Titlepages.
CRYSTAL DEWDROPS.
AVELETTE. Gondola Song.
FAIRY DREAMS.
Post-free, 18 stamps each.
METZLER and Co., 37, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS.
Now ready.
New Illustrated Book.
Post-free.
METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS.
New Style 235. Nine Stops.
Viola Dolce, Seraphone, &c.
Price 28 gs.
METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MASON and HAMLIN'S ORGANS.
New Style 312. Ten Stops.
With Octave Coupler and Sub-Bass.
Price 40 gs.
METZLER and Co., Sole Agents, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE MUSICAL TIMES. Price Threepence.
The Largest and Best Musical Journal.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—The Great Composers, sketched by themselves:
Weber—Dussek's Pianoforte Sonatas—Sensational Paragraphs—
Sketch of the History of Music-Printing—Occasional and Foreign Notes—Gloucester and Leeds Musical Festivals, by Special Correspondents—Dr. Julius Rietz—Part-Songs: "The Lover to his Mistress," by John Bennett, and "T'other Morning very early," by Thibaut, King of Navarre—Reviews—Country News, &c. Postage free, 4d. Annual Subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains Part-Songs, edited by T. Oliphant: "The Lover to his Mistress," by John Bennett, and "T'other Morning very early," by Thibaut, King of Navarre. Music separately, 1d.

NOVELLO, EWER, and CO.'S MUSIC
PRIMERS. Edited by Dr. STAINER: 1. The Pianoforte (Second Edition, price 2s.). E. Pauer. 2. The Rudiments of Music (in the Press). W. H. Cummings. 3. The Organ (ready Oct. 15). Dr. Stainer. In preparation: 4. Harmonium, King Hall.
5. Singing, A. Rindge. 6. Pronunciation in Singing, A. J.
Elms, F.R.S. 7. Musical Forms, E. Pauer. 8. Harmony, Dr.
Stainer. 9. Counterpoint, Dr. Bridge. 10. Fugue, J. Higgs.
11. History of Music, E. Pauer. 12. Scientific Basis of Music, Dr.
Stone. 13. Church Choir Training, Rev. J. Troutbeck. 14. Plain Song, Rev. T. Helmore. 15. Instrumentation, E. Pauer. 16. The Elements of the Beautiful in Music, E. Pauer.—(To be continued.)

Second Edition, price Two Shillings.
THE PIANOFORTE PRIMER. By ERNST PAUER (Principal Professor of the Pianoforte at the National Training School for Music).
No. 1 of NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.'s Music Primers.

Ready on Oct. 15.
THE ORGAN PRIMER. By Dr. STAINER.
No. 3 of NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.'s Music Primers.

In the Press,
THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC PRIMER.
By W. H. CUMMINGS.
No. 2 of NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.'s Music Primers.

Second Edition, price Two Shillings.
CATHEDRAL PSALTER CHANTS.
Edited by Rev. S. FLOOD JONES, M.A.; JAMES TURLER; Rev. J. TROUTBECK, M.A.; Dr. J. STAINER, and JOSEPH BARNEY.

SCHUMANN'S VOCAL ALBUM, containing Thirty Songs, with English and German Words.
By ROBERT SCHUMANN. Paper covers, 2s. 6d.; handsomely bound, 4s. 6d.

SCHUMANN'S PIANOFORTE ALBUM for YOUNG PIANISTS, containing Fifty-Six Short Pieces. By ROBERT SCHUMANN (Op. 49 and Op. 15). Paper covers, 2s. 6d.; handsomely bound, 4s. 6d.

GERMAN VOLKSLIEDER ALBUM, containing Forty Songs, with the Original German Words, and an English version by John Oxenford. Paper covers, 2s. 6d.;
handsomely bound, 4s. 6d.
London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.,
1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

W. MORLEY, Jun.'s, New Publications.
RALPH THE RANGER. By JOSEPH P. KNIGHT.
THE LITTLE FLOWER GIRL. By W. C. LEVEY.
THE MILL MAID. By W. C. LEVEY.
Post-free, 1s. 6d. each.—W. MORLEY, Jun., 70, Upper-street, N.

HYDROLEINE. (Hydrated Oil). Equal to ten times the quantity of Cod-Liver Oil.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil).
The nauseous taste of Cod-Liver Oil is removed by Hydration.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil).
Easier to administer than Cod-Liver Oil.
Contains ready-digested Cod-Liver Oil.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil).
Can be taken by the most delicate stomach.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil).
Is immediately assimilated, and

PRODUCES RAPID INCREASE

IN FLESH AND WEIGHT.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil) has been described as partially-digested oil, which will nourish and produce increase in weight in those cases where oils or fats not so treated are difficult or impossible to digest. All tendency to emaciation and loss of weight is arrested by the regular use of HYDROLEINE, which may be discontinued when the usual average weight has been permanently regained.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil).
Superior to any Emulsion or Pancreatic Oil ever prepared.

IN "NOTES ON CONSUMPTION AND WASTING DISEASES SUCCESSFULLY TREATED BY HYDRATED OIL," with Cases showing the Immediate Increase in Weight produced by it.

G. OVEREND DREWRY, M.D., Physician to the National Free Dispensary for Consumption and Wasting Diseases, Gower-street, W., Author of "Common-Sense Management of the Stomach," &c. (Published by Dymally, Baskman, and Co., Sheffield-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.) Referring to cases treated at the National Free Dispensary for Consumption and Wasting Diseases, says the "Hydrated Oil" produces an effect such as neither cod-liver oil nor any preparation of it with which I am acquainted even faintly approaches.—Page 23, and on page 21.
"Patients are unanimous in their statement that the appetite is much increased by taking Hydrated Oil; and that, so far from possessing the unpleasant taste of ordinary Cod-Liver Oil, the taste of Hydrated Oil is agreeable rather than the reverse, and is described by some as resembling Devonshire cream. These important points in its character, the general improvement in strength shown within a fortnight was in many instances surprising, even to myself, who had seen already in private practice many startling results from its use. My experience, however, shows that in cases where Cod-Liver Oil or an emulsion of it has been depended upon increase of weight is rarely obtained."— Page 26.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil), Economical in Use and Certain in Result.

THE agreeable character of HYDRATED
OIL is conclusively shown by the fact that Delicate Women and Young Children take it with avidity; and in the case of Infants who do not thrive upon the food given, the Hydrated Oil is well-conditioned appearance of the child after this treatment is most marked.—To BRAIN-WORKERS of all classes HYDRATED OIL is invaluable, supplying, as it does, the TRUE NERVE FOOD.
"There are many in these days of feverish work and continued strain who insensibly are drifting towards degeneration of nerve tissue, without the evidence of any special disease, excepting nervous irritability and sleeplessness. In these cases I have found Hydrated Oil act like a charm, tranquillizing and restoring tone to the nervous system with startling rapidity." "It is an exceedingly difficult preparation to make; but from many hundred samples examined by Dr. Bartlett and myself, I am in a position to say that in the Hydrated Oil, manufactured by Messrs. J. M.
Richards and Co., of Great Russell-street, London, all the chemical changes necessary to transform the oil from its original state to one of partial solubility in water are perfectly produced. The unstable nature of such a combination is one of its most valuable characteristics, and it frequently happens that changes of temperature and exposure to light cause a certain small separation of watery extracts from the essential hydration, which is, however, invariably permanent to the requisite extent. This is of no consequence, sufficient combination being again produced instantaneously by shaking the bottle."—Pp. 33 and 41.

FOR RESULTS OF CASES TREATED BY HYDRATED OIL, SEE "NOTES ON

CONSUMPTION AND WASTING DISEASES."

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)

IS NOT A SECRET PREPARATION.

IS NOT A PATENT MEDICINE. The Formula is on every Bottle. The chemical principles upon which Hydrated Oil is prepared were first described in a Treatise on the Assimilation and Digestion of Fats in the Human Body, by H. C. BARTLETT, Ph.D., F.C.S.
Published by Messrs. J. and A. CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

"FAT IN THE HUMAN BODY." Page 41.

"NOTHING appears to restore the healthy functions of the liver and pancreas in these cases except the frequent ingestion of oil or liquid fat, so treated artificially that it is already partially transformed by fermentation and

WILLIAM GALE WALKING 1500 MILES IN A THOUSAND HOURS.

LAYING THE MEMORIAL-STONE OF THE NEW UNIVERSITY COLLEGE AT NOTTINGHAM: MR. GLADSTONE ADDRESSING THE ASSEMBLY.

THE GREAT WALK AT BROMPTON.

The great pedestrian feat in which William Gale, of Cardiff, has been engaged at the Lillie-bridge Grounds, West Brompton, during the past six weeks, has attracted much public notice. It covers much greater space and time than the recent performances of Weston and O'Leary at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, or that of Captain Barclay in 1869, at Newmarket. Captain Barclay walked a thousand miles in a thousand hours, doing one mile in each hour. William Gale, on Sunday, Aug. 26, started to walk 1500 miles in 1000 hours, one mile and a half to be walked regularly at the commencement of each hour. There are other points of difference. When Captain Barclay walked his 1000 miles in 1000 hours, he was allowed to walk each mile in any part of the hour he chose; so that by walking one mile at the finish of the hour, and the next mile at the commencement of the following hour, he was enabled, supposing he walked at the steady rate of only four miles an hour, to obtain a rest of an hour and a half at one time. Consequently, Captain Barclay for six weeks walked twenty-four miles a day, and never at any one time had more than an hour and a half's sleep. William Gale, on the contrary, has been compelled to walk each mile and a half at the commencement of each hour; consequently his undertaking amounts to the far more arduous one of walking for six weeks thirty-six miles a day. Again, presuming four miles an hour to be the average rate of his walking, it has never at any one time been possible for him to take more than 37½ minutes' rest. Unlike Captain Barclay, William Gale is a little man, forty-two years of age, standing 5 ft. 3½ in. high, and weighing, at starting, but 8 st. 4 lb. Captain Barclay was a tall, fine man, thirty-nine years of age, over 6 ft. in height, and weighed at the commencement of his memorable walk 13 st. 4 lb., which decreased to 11 st. at the finish, showing how much the fatigue had told upon him.

William Gale has already accomplished many great feats in walking. Among other achievements, he has covered 1000 quarters of a mile in consecutive intervals of ten minutes, thus walking a mile and a half per hour for a fortnight, during the whole of which time he never rested for more than seven minutes at a time. His average pace is about four miles per hour; but his thousandth mile, which was accomplished last Saturday week, only occupied ten minutes. He generally starts rather stiffly, but this soon wears off; and he is in apparent health, and sanguine of success. His present performance should be finished this day (Saturday, Oct. 6), at five o'clock in the afternoon.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, NOTTINGHAM.

The speeches of Mr. Gladstone and Lord Carnarvon at Nottingham on Thursday week, upon the occasion of laying the foundation-stone of the buildings for the new University College, were reported in the daily papers. We give an illustration of the scene at the performance of this ceremony upon the platform in Shakespeare-street, adjacent to the old Horse-Fair Close. The stone was laid by the Mayor of Nottingham, Mr. J. Warren Bowers. Among those present were the Duke of St. Albans, Earl Manvers, Lord Belper, Mr. Lancelot Rolleston, High Sheriff of the county, and Mr. S. Morley, M.P., with the Duchess of St. Albans, Lady Belper, and other ladies, besides the members of the municipality and local clergy. There was a luncheon afterwards in the Albert Hall, at which Mr. Gladstone again spoke; and he made a third speech in the evening to the Liberal Association at the Alexandra Rink.

The history of this institution, since the beginning in 1873 of a movement for the establishment of University education in Nottingham, is worthy of notice. The Nottingham Mechanics' Institution memorialised the Syndicate of Cambridge University, which appointed lecturers on English and French literature and history, and on physical sciences. An anonymous benefactor, in March, 1875, offered £10,000 for a college, upon condition that the Town Council should erect a suitable building, and endow it with £400 a year. In 1876 the arrangements were made, and the designs of Messrs. Lockwood and Mawson, architects, were adopted for the proposed building, which is to cost £42,000. It will be divided into three sections—the Free Library, the Natural History Museum, and the Scientific and Chemical Department, with class and reading rooms, which can be used in connection with each department or separately. The accommodation provided by the Free Library consists of a large news-room, general reading-room, and the lending library, with a spacious entrance and staircase to this part of the building from South Sherwood-street. A separate reading-room is set apart for ladies, and also one for students. The Natural History Museum forms the north-east wing of the building towards Bilbie-street, corresponding to the Free Library wing, in South Sherwood-street. The vertebrate and invertebrate museums are on the front and first floor. A separate entrance and staircase from Bilbie-street give access to this department. A reference library, curator's room, and working and preparation rooms adjoin the museum, with rooms for students and special objects. Ladies' and gentlemen's cloak and retiring rooms are provided. The centre of the building towards the front and the central wing at the back are occupied by the University Extension and Science School and Classes. It contains a large theatre for popular lectures and addresses and for public meetings, capable of holding 600 people. This theatre, together with the other rooms belonging to this department, are approached from the principal entrance of the building, in the centre of the front towards Shakespeare-street, through three wide open archways, filled with wrought-iron gates, giving access to a lofty entrance-hall. The principal staircase opens out of this hall through three arches. The audience in the large theatre may enter and depart without interfering with any other part of the edifice. To the right and left of the principal entrance are placed the students' class-rooms, on the ground and first floors, approached by broad, well-lighted corridors. At the back of the large lecture theatre, and lighted from the open quadrangle formed by the wings of the library and museum, are placed the chemical theatre, chemical laboratory, and professors' rooms. Separated from these, but in the same block, are the physical theatre and laboratory, with professors' rooms, borough analyst's laboratory, and other accommodation. The building will be constructed of Ancaster stone; its style of architecture is the Pointed, simple and of a collegiate character, without excessive ornamentation; and the grouping of its three several parts will have a picturesque effect.

The Lords of the Admiralty arrived at Portsmouth on Monday on their annual tour of inspection. Their Lordships were received with a salute from the batteries and flagships.

A proposal having been made to the Prince of Wales to consider practical measures for preventing wrecks and loss of life at the Scilly Islands, which are embraced in the dukedom, his Royal Highness has directed the correspondence to be laid before the Duchy of Cornwall Council at their next meeting.

MUSIC.

At the Covent Garden Promenade Concert of last Saturday evening M. Maurel made his first appearance at these performances. This accomplished baritone is well known in association with the Royal Italian Opera, of which establishment he has been a prominent member during recent seasons. M. Maurel's artistic singing has continued to be a feature in each evening's performance. Wednesday was a Wagner night, the instrumental selection from the works of the composer having comprised the overture to "Tannhäuser," the funeral march on the death of Siegfried, and a grand orchestral arrangement of themes from "The Flying Dutchman." Vocal pieces were contributed by Miss Warwick and M. Maurel. M. Henri Ketten's brilliant pianoforte playing is still an attractive item in each evening's programme. This (Saturday) evening is to be a ballad night.

We referred last week to some of the specialties announced for production during the ensuing season of the Crystal Palace Saturday afternoon concerts, the first of which takes place this week, the programme including Beethoven's first symphony (in C), Weber's overture to "Oberon," and Auber's to "Le Premier Jour de Bonheur." Sir J. Benedict's pianoforte concerto in E flat (with Madame Arabella Goddard as pianist), and Mr. Arthur Sullivan's incidental music to Shakespeare's "Henry the Eighth." Performances of operas in English are still continuing at the Crystal Palace, under the direction of Mr. Isidore de Solla. On Tuesday Donizetti's "L'Elisir d'Amore" was given, and for Thursday "Il Trovatore" was announced.

THEATRES.

The London houses are now in full activity—each, after its kind, aiming at distinction and success. Small houses as well as great houses unite in the general competition.

The Prince of Wales's, on Saturday, tried its fortune with Mr. Tom Taylor's comedy of "The Unequal Match." This work owed its original prosperity to the heroine, and its heroine to the remarkably genuine manner in which the part was interpreted by Miss Amy Sedgwick. Her performance was, indeed, a representation of the author's idea deserving itself the name of a "creation;" for the actress improved upon the playwright's conception in a manner that must have excited even his astonishment. Mrs. Bancroft now undertakes the impersonation—on a smaller scale, perhaps, but with as great an effort to be true to the ideal in which the public had been already so well instructed. Gladness was in her steps and joy on her cheeks as she first tripped before the audience, following the fascinating Henry Arcliffe (Mr. Charles Sugden), who is henceforth to become the master of her destinies, yet to prove himself not altogether worthy of her simple and pure affection. But Hester has undeveloped powers which, in the end, shall secure her final victory. A rich nature like hers includes the minor modifications of inferior individualities. Mrs. Montessor (Miss Marie Linton) was outshone in worldly display by the blacksmith's daughter; whose triumph, besides, was shared by Sir Henry, her husband, so soon as his first surprise was fairly conquered. This comedy must be looked upon as its author's best, and will serve eminently the purpose of the enlightened management.

The Strand, during the recess, has been redecorated by Mr. W. J. Ball. The prevailing colour is white for the front of the boxes, with gold festoons and borders of blue and gold. The cushions of the stalls and dress circle are of amber; the whole presenting a cheerful appearance. The performance on Saturday opened with Mr. H. J. Byron's "Timothy to the Rescue," followed by a new comedy taken by Mr. F. C. Burnand from "Aux Crochets d'un Gendre," and entitled "Family Ties." A newly-married bride is too much attached to her scheming father, always in a state of reckless bankruptcy, but saved from its effects by a settlement made upon his wife. He and his family take the opportunity of intruding on the newly-married couple, possessing themselves of all the bed-rooms in the house, and compelling its owners to take refuge for themselves at a neighbouring inn. After suffering every kind of inconvenience, they only get rid of them by presenting the chronic bankrupt and his wife with a house of their own. Mr. Barton Bryce (Mr. Horace Wigan) is the type of selfishness, and was capitally well sustained. The action of the piece is slight, but its structure is ingenious, and admitted of a large amount of business. It was followed by a new burlesque, entitled "Champagne: a Question of Fiz," by Messrs. H. B. Farnie and R. Reece. The business is military, and its hero a poor example of courage; for, being called upon by his Suzerain to take part in an impending war, he manages to evade his duty by changing dresses with the Family Minstrel (Mr. Penley), who goes in his stead. What can be done by puns and funny situations is supplied for bringing to a merry end an essentially comic plot. The scenery and accessories were tasteful and appropriate.

A morning performance at the Globe on Saturday consisted of "The Rivals," with a new epilogue by Mr. H. J. Byron. The cast included Mrs. Stirling as Mrs. Malaprop. To-day another matinée representation will be given, consisting of "Still Waters Run Deep."

Sir Stafford Northcote will preside at the annual meeting of the Exeter Chamber of Commerce, next Monday afternoon.

The Liverpool papers announce that the Upper Mersey dues were abolished on Monday, sufficient money having been forthcoming to redeem the entire debt and interest.

Mr. Claudius Beresford has been appointed assistant private secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; this office to be held in addition to the office of aide-de-camp which Mr. Beresford already holds on the viceregal staff.

The memorial-stone of a new general Baptist chapel was laid at Cambridge on Tuesday by Mr. J. J. Colman, M.P. for Norwich. The new chapel is rendered necessary by reason of the increasing congregation at Zion Chapel, under the ministry of the Rev. J. P. Campbell. It is calculated to seat 900 persons. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Colman and the Rev. J. P. Chown, of London. There was a luncheon at the Alexander Rooms, and a tea at the same place in the evening.

Mr. W. E. Forster, M.P., and Sir John Lubbock, M.P., attended the annual soirée at the Bradford Mechanics' Institute on Tuesday night. Sir J. Lubbock distributed the prizes to the successful students, and addressed the meeting on the importance of introducing scientific teaching into the code for elementary schools. Mr. Forster also spoke, and said he thought that Sir John Lubbock had made out a strong case for elementary science to be put in the same position as history, geography, and grammar, but neither of these three things ought to be omitted from the school list. He referred to the efforts which had been made by the late Government in the cause of education, and said the time was fast coming when education should be given free of charge in all cases in which the parents were not in a position to pay for the training.

OPENING OF THE MEDICAL SCHOOLS.

Monday being the commencement of the academical year of the English Schools of Medicine, opening addresses were, as usual, delivered in the schools attached to the various metropolitan hospitals, with the exception of St. Bartholomew's, the London, and Guy's.

Mr. W. Warwick Wagstaffe, B.A., M.B., London, F.R.C.S., Assistant-Surgeon and Lecturer on Anatomy at St. Thomas's Hospital, gave the lecture at that hospital. After a reference to the recent deaths of Sir F. Hicks (treasurer) and Mr. R. G. Whitfield (medical secretary), he urged that the first condition of success in anything they had to do or meant to do was to understand what result they were aiming at. The second condition of success was that they saw, or strove to see, how they were most likely to bring about the result they aimed at. Of the many qualities which it seemed to him were wanted not only in student life, but when that was over, he placed first honesty in their work—reading nothing without understanding it, and verifying the accuracy of statements made to them; and caution in scientific research and in making disclosures of what they considered real discoveries or unique cases. Without multiplying too much the qualities they ought to cultivate, he added to these courage in their work, courage in themselves and in their own opinions when honestly worked out.

Dr. John Williams, Assistant Obstetric Physician at the University College Hospital, delivered the inaugural seasonal address to the students of that hospital, and treated of the progress of gynaecology and the history of the discoveries which have been made in pathology, the treatment of the organs, and the bearing of the study of physiology on the pathology of them. The address was a purely technical one, and concluded with an earnest exhortation to the students to be diligent.

The address at the Middlesex Hospital was given by Mr. Arthur Hensman. He began with a review of the early history of the hospital and its medical school. He urged students to work diligently in the dissecting-room, for though they would forget much they would learn more; and if they did not become accomplished anatomists they would have learned enough to make them cautious hereafter. In conclusion, the lecturer, contrasting the medical with other "so-called" learned professions, said that it must be obvious that, whilst the faculties and powers of the mind were exercised alike in all, the special cultivation of the senses was necessary in theirs alone.

At Charing-cross Hospital Mr. J. Astley Bloxam, F.R.C.S., assistant-surgeon, pressed upon his hearers the great importance of application and study, and pointed out that there was no boundary to their studies. In addition to their ordinary studies, he exhorted them to gain some further knowledge of the allied sciences—botany, zoology, geology, and mineralogy—for without it they could not hope to lay a sure foundation. He begged them to adopt habits of regularity and industry, and, above all, to avoid "cramming."

The lecturer at St. George's was Mr. Thomas Pick, the senior assistant-surgeon. He began by giving a brief sketch of the boyhood and early career of Hunter, Astley Cooper, and Brodie—three of the great masters of their art of the past, two of whom had graced the walls of the hospital in which those of his hearers to whom his words were more especially to be addressed had that day enrolled themselves. He pointed out the great disadvantages they had suffered from, and the entire absence of systematic teaching which existed in their days; and, in spite of this, he showed the distinctions they had won and the amount of knowledge they had obtained and transmitted to their successors. He besought his hearers, with their immeasurably greater advantages, to endeavour to follow in the footsteps of these men, and, like them, do some good in the world, so that their names should be revered and honoured when their place should know them no more.

Dr. Grigg was the lecturer at Westminster. In the course of his address he said that, unhappily for the cause of suffering humanity in England, the hands of the physiological student were seriously trammelled by recent legislation, and experimental physiology, the sheet-anchor of medicine, had received a severe strain. To show how inconsistent was this Act of Parliament, he stated that investigations in certain cases had been greatly delayed by the difficulties placed in their way in obtaining the now necessary license to perform a few experiments in transfusion. It might seem incredible, yet it was only too true, that at the introduction of anaesthetics a considerable opposition was raised against them by some theologians on account of their supposed interference with the literal fulfilment of the curse under which they suffered, that their first entrance into life should be attended with sorrow and suffering. With regard to State legislation, Dr. Grigg said that it was of no use passing half measures, which only irritated the public without effecting any real benefit.

At University College Dr. John Williams said that medicine had now reached its final phase, and had assumed a preventive character, the power of preventing and even stamping out some diseases having been acquired, the acquisition of this power being the result of labour extending over a long period.

Professor Lister, at King's College, referred principally to some experiments he had made at Edinburgh into the nature of that class of phenomenon known as the change of organic matter, or fermentation.

The address at St. Mary's was given by Mr. Herbert Page, who confined his remarks chiefly to the influence and importance of culture.

The opening of the winter session was inaugurated at the London Hospital with a conversazione, which was numerously attended; and a similar entertainment was given at Guy's Hospital, where, in the course of the evening, the medals, scholarships, and prizes awarded at the end of the last session were distributed.

The opening of the London School of Medicine for Women, Henrietta-street, Brunswick-square, also took place, an address being given by Mrs. Garrett-Anderson, M.D., at the school; and Dr. Cockle giving an address at the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's-inn-road, with which the school is now in connection.

On Tuesday evening Dr. Richard Hughes gave the opening address of the session to the students of the Homoeopathic Medical School, at the Homoeopathic Hospital, Great Ormond-street. The lecturer urged his hearers to make good use of the advantages offered to them, and invited others who might not mean specially to devote themselves to this system to study it, as he said homoeopathy and its practice were a necessary part of a liberal and thorough medical education. In conclusion, he called upon all those who were homoeopaths to support the hospital and schools.

At the National Dental College the inaugural address was to have been delivered by Dr. B. W. Richardson, but at the last moment that gentleman was prevented from attending, and an address was therefore given by the President, Mr. S. Lee Rymer. The subject of the discourse was upon the progress made in the profession of dental surgery during the last twenty years.

The students were urged to avoid the mistake of being contented with a routine course, and to cultivate original investigation, so as not to be men of one idea. The importance of legislative action was dwelt upon at length, with the object of securing in the future the registration of qualified practitioners, for the protection of the public.

The session at the Royal Veterinary College was opened with an address to the students by Professor Axe, Professor of Pathology and Morbid Anatomy. Colonel Sir Frederick Fitzwigram presided. Professor Axe said it was with regard to that section of political economy which dealt with the food supply of the nation that veterinary science claimed its most intimate relation with the people, and the fact that nearly two thirds of the losses which affected our meat stock resulted from causes completely within the control of a judicious application of hygienic and sanitary principles, imposed on them a serious responsibility. If there was one subject in which the wisdom of recent reformers in our educational system stood out more boldly than another, it was in that science of "preventive" medicine. He concluded by referring to the improved conditions under which the students studied, and pointed out the necessity for the introduction of physics as one of the subjects of preliminary education in veterinary science. The prizes were presented by the chairman.

LIFE-BOAT SERVICES.

A meeting of the Royal National Life-Boat Institution was held on Thursday at its house, John-street, Adelphi. Rewards amounting to £97 were granted to the crews of life-boats for recent services. The sum of £13 was voted to some boatmen of Kinsale, Ireland, for saving, under perilous circumstances, five men belonging to a fishing-boat which had been capsized off Blackhead, in the county of Donegal, in a S.W. wind and heavy sea on Aug. 28; also £8 10s. to some fishermen for putting off in their boat and saving three men belonging to the fishing-boat St. Columb, which had been capsized by a heavy sea off Tory Island, in the county of Donegal. Other rewards were granted to the crews of shore-boats for saving life from wrecks on our coasts; and payments amounting to £3310 were made on life-boat establishments. The institution has contributed this year, by its life-boats and other means, to the saving of 655 lives from different wrecks.

A contribution of £1028 has recently been received, being the amount of a fund raised to provide a life-boat as a memorial to the late Admiral Rous. The gift will be appropriated to the life-boat station at Withernsea, on the coast of Yorkshire. Mrs. Turner, of Liverpool, has forwarded £100.

Reports were read from the inspectors of life-boats to the institution on their recent visits to the coast.

From Mr. Giffen's report to the Board of Trade it appears that 31,711,000 acres of land in Great Britain were under crops last year, an increase of 160,000 acres on the previous year, mostly due to the reclamation of marsh or mountain land.

The fourth delegate meeting of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was opened on Monday at Birmingham, and continued during the week. One hundred and twenty delegates, representing about 200 branches, were present from all parts of England, Wales, and Scotland. The business consisted chiefly of alterations in rules for reconstruction of the society. Mr. P. S. MacIver, of Bristol, presided on Monday, and, referring to the railway strike in Ireland, expressed a hope that the society might be instrumental in bringing about a reconciliation.

The fourth annual tour of the Durham and Northumberland Archaeological Society has been made this week in North Yorkshire. On Monday a strong party, headed by the Rev. Canon Greenwell, F.S.A., of Durham, visited Malton and the neighbourhood, which is rich in antiquities. The society called at Thirsk on their way down, and inspected the newly-restored church there. On arriving at Malton they were met by Mr. G. Edson, a local antiquary, who showed them a lot of Roman pottery, just discovered in some excavations at the Gasworks. Thence they proceeded to the Roman camp, and forward to the fine old church of Old Malton, now being restored at the cost of Earl Fitzwilliam. The party then adjourned to the Talbot Hotel, where they dined and spent the night. On Tuesday morning early they drove off to Castle Howard, the picturesque seat of the Earl of Carlisle. The mansion, which was from the design of Sir John Vanbrugh, the architect of Blenheim House, was closely inspected, and the magnificent Great Hall, with its finely-painted cupola by Pellegrini, the picture-gallery, and the museum were much admired. The party next drove to Sheriff Hutton, to view the remains of the interesting old castle, built by Bertram de Bulmer, in the reign of Stephen. Some time was spent over the castle, and after a short visit to the adjoining Church of St. Helen, the party took train at Flaxton station for York, where they remained till Wednesday, and, after viewing the city, they proceeded homewards.

The Metropolitan Board of Works has resolved to carry out the following alterations in the names of streets and numbering of houses:—The houses in Peacock-street, Newington, will be re-numbered; Queen-street (east of Pittfield-street), and Crown-street, Hoxton, will be incorporated under the name of Coronet-street, N., and the houses re-numbered. The subsidiary names in Hanover-street, Newington, will be abolished, and the houses re-numbered; Abercorn-place and Abbey-place, St. John's-wood, will be incorporated under the former name, and the houses re-numbered. The houses in Sarah Ann-street, Newington, will be re-numbered. The houses on the western side of New Bond-street, from No. 168 to the end of the street, will be re-numbered with consecutive numbers, and the name Clarendon-mansions abolished. The Board will adhere to their order of March 16 last, incorporating Michael's, The Grange, and Grange-terrace, Brompton, under the name of St. Michael's-grove. Queen-street (west of Pittfield-street), and Charles-street and Charles-square, Hoxton, will be incorporated under the name of Charles-square, N., and the houses re-numbered. The subsidiary names in Church-passage (otherwise Church-place), Newington, will be abolished, the houses re-numbered, and the whole line named Church-passage, S.E. The subsidiary names in Downs-street, Camberwell, will be abolished and the houses re-numbered. Little Store-street, Chienies-mews, and Upper Chienies-mews, Tottenham-court-road, will be incorporated under the name of Chienies-mews, and the houses and premises re-numbered. The names of Ivanhoe-road, S.E., Grove-hill-road, S.E., Bromer-road, S.E., Malfort-road, S.E., and Arondale-road, S.E., have been sanctioned for new roads on the Denmark Park estate, Camberwell, on the condition that no barriers be at any time erected or other obstructions caused to the free use by the public of the said roads. The houses in Ontill-road, Bow, will be re-numbered.—The suggestions before the board include a letter from the Vestry of Camberwell asking for the re-numbering of houses in Blake's-road, Peckham, and a memorial from residents in Albert-terrace, Knightsbridge, praying for a change of name to Albert-gate.

THE BATTLES ON THE LOM.

Our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, accompanying a division of the army of Mahomet Ali Pasha on the River Lom, furnishes illustrations of the battle of Kaceljevo (or Kazelevo), fought on the 3rd ult., and the battle of Sinankeui, on the 14th, both of which were decided Turkish victories.

The following is a concise account of the former action, which took place on the upper stream of the Kara Lom on the 3rd:—"At eight o'clock in the morning Ahmet Eyoub's forces, under Fuad Pasha, moved towards the Lom, and encamped for the night at Esirdji. The column stopped at Kustandje, on the Little Lom. On the following day the troops made for Solenik, following the course of the Lom through a country covered with pathless woods. In the meantime the remainder of the Rasgrad army had arrived at Solenik by the high road. The Russians occupied positions at Kazelevo. Fuad's troops were placed opposite, and attacked, whilst Sabit was coming up from Karahassan with his division. The manoeuvre of the day, however, was a turning movement towards Stroko, where the Russians had retired, which was made by Rachid Pasha's brigade. It proved very useful, but was not entirely successful, owing to a misunderstanding. The Russian attack commenced at eight o'clock in the morning. At one in the afternoon the Russians, although fighting hard, were beaten back, their three lines of offence broken, and they beat a retreat by Stroko and Ablava, their line being dangerously threatened by Rachid's turning movement. Entire possession of the Lom was accomplished; but Ibrahim Pasha, with six battalions, unluckily attempted to pass the Lom without orders. He took Ablava, half way up the hill, but the Russians came down upon him from the crest of the hill, and he had to beat a hasty retreat. Nevertheless, the battle at Kazelevo was a marked success for the Turks. The Fourteenth Russian Corps were engaged, and one division of the Fourth. The Turkish losses in killed and wounded were 1200, and the Russians upwards of 2000. The results were important. The Turks thus compelled the complete evacuation by the Russians of the whole country around Rustchuk east of the Lom, and even forced their base of operation back to Biela and the Jantra; for, to the surprise of all, the Russians not only repassed the Lom, but also abandoned the left bank of that river and retreated to the plain in the vicinity of the Jantra." With regard to the engagement on the 14th ult., our Special Artist writes as follows:—

"Battle-field of Sinankeui, before Bjela.

"We have had another very strongly-contested battle, in which the Turks were again completely victorious. The Russians commenced the attack with very heavy cannonading, and pushed forward their infantry to take the village of Sinankeui, which was then in our hands. For several hours it was difficult to tell how it was going; but just before sundown the 'Allah! Allah!' from our troops proved that we had been successful, and that the Russians had had to retire with very heavy loss on their side. I am writing this, and drawing, on the field of battle, with a naked candle between my feet, which act as a candlestick. I am surrounded by the dead; and the groans of the wounded pain my ear. The English doctors, as in my sketch, are very hard at it, and have been for some hours. Drs. Busby, Wattie, and Boyd are indefatigable in their labours, and astonish all around with the unceasing way in which they go through their horrible and ghastly work. At the commencement of the battle, I went over with my interpreter and Circassian, through a thick forest, to a battery of six cannons, which was banging away as fast as it was possible, and with wonderful effect. As I rode up across a ploughed field the enemy's shells came rolling over and around so thick that I was almost compelled to retreat; but I put spurs and galloped up. These particular shells were all clearing and missing our battery, and only came hissing and crashing some 300 or 400 yards to the rear. At last it became so terribly hot that I actually had to beat a side retreat. The village lies on a ridge running into a deep valley, with hills spreading out each side in the shape of a V, and it was along the crest of the right-hand hills that I had to travel in order to gain a safer place for looking. I found, however, that I was worse off; and the ping, ping, ping, of the Russian bullets as they went overhead was most demoralising. Again we advanced quickly out of the forest, and suddenly the whole village opened before our eyes, and I soon found Dr. Wattie busy at the wounded, every now and then having a look round to see how it was going on. The Russians poured up the valley, and even advanced so close to us that we had to take counsel how we could save our arabes in case of being forced back; but the Turkish troops met them with a fire so fearful and deadly, and with such determination, that it was quite clear we might remain for the time being. Each time the enemy sent in fresh troops, each time were they received with an incessant volley so severe and crushing that an old campaigning Turkish officer beside me remarked that no troops could possibly live in such a thunderstorm of leaden hail; and so it turned out. While we—i.e., a Turkish officer, my interpreter, and myself—stood talking, a messenger of death came up the hill and hit the officer through the leg, smashing the bone into splinters. The poor fellows being operated upon are very, very brave; but it is impossible to resist whining and groaning, and the sounds are ringing in my ears all round as I write. I have just been to see how a bullet had gone through a body and killed a man who was just coming up to join us. Another, returning for more cartridges, received a bullet in the back, which struck upwards and came out of his mouth; a man beside him received another in the mouth, which travelled downwards and was cut out of his back.

"Saturday morning. In conversation with Ibrahim Pasha this morning I managed partly to understand the manner of attack of the Russians. It appears Prince Hassan with his army was attacking the enemy from his side on his march to join us; and our opponents, under the impression we were a weak force, and knowing our retreat was simply through a narrow path in a forest, advanced steadily up a gorge in the middle of the valley, while their artillery, planted on three different mountains, began pounding away to cover their advance and draw off, if possible, our attention. But our sentinels on the crest of the mountains were too wide awake to be taken unawares like that, and simply fell back to allow them to come well up, when all of a sudden they opened the deadly fire already mentioned. They succeeded in crowding out of the gorge up into the valley, and then began pouring up the mountains on each side; but, as they had fifteen battalions engaged, and we only four battalions, I think it must be allowed that the Turks fought bravely and grandly. We had large amounts of reserves, but for some reason they were not engaged. Cavalry could simply look on, as there was no means of operating in the valley; but though the Russians succeeded in working up the hills still it was no use; they had to give in and retire. This morning I have been again over the battle-field just in time to see the burial of the dead (as in sketch), which is generally a solemn proceeding, but is most affecting when you see fine fellows thrown into a gorge, or the dry bed of a mountain torrent, one on top of the other, and the embankment simply dragged down on them. Having a desire if possible to see the Russians, or even Bjela, I rode on along a ridge running far into the valley of the White Lom, within 800 or 900 yards of the enemy's advanced posts, going right up to the skirmishing trenches. The beauty of the valley dividing us from Bjela now broke upon us. We clearly saw the Russians building gun-pits and shelter-trenches for our next attack, which I imagine is not far off. While making a note of all I could see and occasionally looking through my telescope, a Russian sentry took a steady pot shot at us, and I had the unpleasant satisfaction of hearing the bullet flatten itself against a stone not far ahead. An officer went forward and called to me, and when I went up I found the stone cracked and the lump of lead as flat as a penny. We returned, and I went on with my work, but almost instantly another puff of smoke and a sharp bang showed that another attempt had been made to dislodge us. The aim was far better this time, for there was no doubt about the 'ping' as the bullet whizzed by. The only thing to do was to get under shelter, which I very soon did. We are now tented, but I fear not for long. For my part, I should like a smart march, a grand victory, and home, having been away now ten months with the exception of a fortnight, and I am longing to see a hansom cab again."

THE NEW ARMY SCHEME.

Last Tuesday's London Gazette contains twenty-one columns of military retirements and promotions consequent on the provisions of article 137 of the Royal Warrant of Aug. 13, 1877. Sixty-eight Generals, thirty-two Lieutenant-Generals, and 118 Major-Generals are placed on the retired list from the 1st inst.

Among the best-known of the Generals included in this list are Sir Richard England, Sir William John Coddington, Sir Duncan Macgregor, the Earl of Lucan, Sir Edward Cust, Sir William Knollys, Sir Richard Dacres, Sir William Fenwick Williams, Lord Rokeby, Sir Edward Sabine, Sir Patrick Grant, Lord Airey, Sir George Buller, Sir James Alexander, Viscount Templetown, Lord W. Paulet, and Sir C. Hastings Doyle.

Consequent on these retirements, and in order to complete the establishment of general officers provided for the Indian Staff Corps, by article 26 of the Royal Warrant of Aug. 13 last, eighty Lieutenant-Generals are under the head brevet promoted to be Generals, and under the same heading 118 Major-Generals are promoted to be Lieutenant-Generals.

Sir Arthur Cunynghame, Lord George Paget, Sir John Garvoock, Sir Alexander Hamilton Gordon, Sir Frederick Chapman, Sir Trevor Chute, Sir Lintorn Simmons, Sir Frederick Paul Haines, Sir Charles Ellice, Sir Thomas Bidolph, Sir Thomas Steele, Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, Sir Collingwood Dixon, and Sir David Wood are among the Lieutenant-Generals who receive promotion; while the Major-Generals who advance a step include Sir Eardley Wilmot, Sir Thomas MacMahon, Sir Edward Greathead Shute, Lord Alfred Paget, Sir Charles d'Aquilar, Sir Arnold Kemball, and Sir Arthur Phayre. Thirty-three Lieutenant-Generals on the retired list are promoted to be Generals, and eight Major-Generals on the retired list are made Lieutenant-Generals. Nine Lieutenant and three Major-Generals on half pay of their former regimental commission are promoted to be Generals and Lieutenant-Generals respectively; 138 officers are made Major-Generals; they include Sir Garnet Wolseley and Sir William Jervois. There are 438 promotions to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and 136 Captains become Majors.

There are also a number of promotions in the Royal Artillery and Engineers. In the former branch twenty-one Brevet-Colonels become Colonels. There are eighteen promotions to the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel, eleven to that of Major, and six to that of Captain.

The Royal Engineer changes include seven promotions to the rank of Colonel, fifteen to that of Lieutenant-Colonel, twelve to that of Major, and nineteen to that of Captain.

At a meeting of the subscribers of the Wolverhampton Orphanage on Monday Mr. William Rogers, the chairman, announced a donation of $1000 to the funds. He was prohibited from telling the name of the donor.

The American Society for the Encouragement of Study at Home has 576 names on its list of students. During the last year history was selected by 208, English literature by 211, science by 108, art by 78, German by 42, and French by 34. The society now possesses 231 volumes, of which 178 are in Boston, 25 in New York, and 28 in Louisiana. A fourth library is to be established on the Pacific Coast.

Parliamentary papers recently issued include a copy of the report of the Astronomer-Royal, Sir J. B. Airy, "On the telescopic observations of the transit of Venus, 1874, made in the expedition of the British Government, and on the conclusion derived from these observations." This report contains a large number of astronomical data of great value, and is accompanied by illustrations of the various phases of the transit witnessed at the different stations. The general result arrived at is that the mean solar parallax is 8.760 seconds, which corresponds to a mean distance of the earth from the sun of 93,300,000 miles.

The Duke of Cambridge on Tuesday made his usual autumnal inspection of the troops at Woolwich, the number of men upon the ground being about 6000, including eleven batteries of artillery, with sixty guns.—On the same day the troops at Aldershot went through a sham fight, under the direction of Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Steele. They were divided into attacking and defending forces. The former, consisting of a regiment of cavalry, four batteries of artillery, and seven battalions of infantry, was commanded by Major-General Anderson. The defending force was composed of two regiments of cavalry, three batteries of artillery, four battalions of infantry, and a detachment of the Engineers, under Major-General the Hon. F. Theigier, and took up positions to cover a large dépôt of supplies. The field operations lasted about three hours, and at the conclusion the attacking force had apparently the best of the fight.

The Earl of Strathmore, Lord Lieutenant of Forfarshire, opened an exhibition of pictures, sculpture, and works of art in the Albert Institute Buildings, Dundee, last Monday. The pictures, of which there are about 1100, have been almost exclusively forwarded by the artists, and include works by Millais, Marcus Stone, Macwhirter, Oakes, Peter Graham, Poole, Desange, Richmond, Sir Noel Paton, Boughton, Leighton, Goodall, Fyfe, and others. The sculpture embraces busts in marble of Gladstone, Bright, Brougham, Cobden, Napoleon III., and many others distinguished in politics, literature, &c. Among the sculptors represented are Brodie, Stevenson, Webster, Bruce-Joy, Lawson, and others. In addition to the pictures and sculpture, there are large collections of works of art. Competent judges pronounce the exhibition the finest, most extensive, and most complete which has ever been held in Scotland. It will be kept open some months; and it may be mentioned that it is under the immediate patronage of the Queen, who has sent the picture of Sir Francis Chantrey's Studio, by Landseer.

1, 1, 1. Turks (also in right foreground). 2, 2, 2. Russians. 3, 3. Russian Guns. 4. Turkish Guns.
THE WAR: BATTLE OF SINANKUI: TURKISH POSITION DEFENDED AGAINST THE RUSSIAN ATTACK.
FROM A SKETCH BY ONE OF OUR SPECIAL ARTISTS.

THE WAR: STORMING THE GRIVITZA
FACSIMILE OF A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST

REDOUBT BEFORE PLEVNA, SEPT. 11.
WITH THE ALLIED RUSSIAN AND ROUMANIAN ARMY.

ANIMALS AND NUBIANS AT THE ALEXANDRA PALACE.

ANIMALS AND NUBIANS, ALEXANDRA PALACE.

The exhibition at the Alexandria Palace of a collection of wild and tamed animals from Nubia, with people of that country in attendance, has been much admired. It comprises five elephants, eight giraffes, three rhinoceri, twenty-one dromedaries, eight buffaloes, and a number of ostriches and Abyssinian hunting-dogs. The animals are all in fine condition, and do not appear to have suffered from their journey to England. The elephants are youngsters of twelve or thirteen months old, and are playful, inquisitive little creatures; the giraffes and rhinoceri are also of tender age. The camels are mostly full-grown animals, of various species. The Nubian attendants are fourteen in number, drawn from five or six different tribes, inhabiting the great Nubian desert. They are tall, slim, active men, with dark skins, splendid white teeth, and fantastically arranged hair; and, robed in their loose cotton dresses, they present a decidedly picturesque appearance. All but one are in religion Mohammedans, the exception being a heathen negro of the Baza tribe. The others are of the tribes Beni-Amir, Hadendoa, Halenga, Djaalein, Hamrau, and Takroui. The negro of the Baza tribe is scarcely admitted to any sort of fellowship with the rest, but is treated by them as a pariah. He is a freed slave, aged twenty-one, that being about the average age of the entire party, the eldest of whom, by at least five years, is thirty-two, and the youngest fifteen. They are under the leadership of a Maltese, Vincenzo Callija, long resident in Upper Egypt. The introduction of these men and their various captives of the chase into civilised Europe is due to the enterprise of Mr. Carl Hagenbeck, of Hamburg. Having long been in the habit of sending periodically to Nubia for his elephants, giraffes, ostriches, dromedaries, and other zoological pets, he conceived the notion of fetching thence a few specimens of the humanity employed by his agents in the collection of game. The animals may be classed under two heads—those trained in servitude, and those which, being either untameable or of no use when tamed, are valued simply as rarities for exhibition. Such are the rhinoceroses or rhinoceri, the buffaloes, the zebras, the giraffes, the ostriches, and the hippopotamus. Several elephants are among the "utility" members of the band; one little fellow is exceedingly clever at all kinds of tricks, which have been taught him in a wonderfully short time. There are twenty-four dromedaries, all highly trained, and many of the black species, almost new to Europe. One of the ordinary light-coloured kind is only six weeks old, having been born on the voyage from Egypt. Goats and Abyssinian hunting-dogs make up the catalogue of the camp. Tents of matting, decorated with leopard skins, trophies of savage arms, and skulls of large beasts killed in the chase, are pitched by the Nubians, as in their native wilds, and every day, weather permitting, they go through their representation of desert life, saddling their dromedaries, racing them, and moving in slow, long procession, with the huge waterskins, and other baggage on the backs of the patient beasts. But the most curious picture is afforded when the animals lie down to rest in a circle, and the drivers are busied in the preparations for repose or refreshment, incidental to a halt of the caravan.

THE ROYAL AQUARIUM WHALE.

The whale from Labrador, which arrived at the Royal Westminster Aquarium on Wednesday week, expired on Saturday morning shortly before four o'clock. While on its way from Southampton to London, Mr. John T. Carrington, naturalist, and curator to the Royal Aquarium Society, noticed that it had a severe cold and that mucus was issuing from the blow-hole. On arrival at the Royal Aquarium, the whale was put into the tank which had been specially constructed; but the symptoms gradually increased. On Friday week Mr. Carrington remained with the whale until midnight; it was then breathing very heavily, often coming to the top and blowing several times before diving. About one o'clock on Saturday morning it became very uneasy, and its uneasiness developed into a state of delirium; going about the tank a great deal and swimming very rapidly, its head came into contact with the end of the tank, but without doing itself much damage. Having somewhat recovered, it again swam several times round the tank, again came into collision with the end of the tank, turned over, and died. The body was removed to a table and exhibited to the public on Saturday, and in the evening a plaster cast was made. On Sunday morning Professor Flower, F.R.H., Hunterian Conservator to the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, Dr. Garrod, Prosector of the Zoological Society, Mr. H. Lee, F.L.S., naturalist, Mr. T. Bond, Westminster Hospital, Mr. H. Pollack, F.Z.S., Mr. Tegetmeier, and Mr. J. T. Carrington attended at the Aquarium; and a post-mortem examination was held. The stomach was found well filled with food and all the parts were healthy, except the lungs, which were in a high state of congestion. It was considered by the professional gentlemen that this congestion had been going on probably eight or nine days, proving that the cold had been caught during the voyage. This is the more probable, seeing that the creature was exposed on deck, where it was soured with sea water at intervals of not more than five minutes; and in the intervals very rapid evaporation occurred from the skin of the animal, which would produce intense cold. The whale was a female, and had attained about two thirds of the full size of its species, being 9 ft. 6 in. in length. All the internal organs have been presented to the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons; they will make very interesting preparations.

The whale was valued at about £1000, and was insured only up to the time of delivery at the Aquarium. A contract has already been signed between Mr. Wybrow Robertson and Mr. Farini, under which Mr. Zack

THE DEAD WHALE AT THE ROYAL AQUARIUM.

Coup, who captured and brought over from America the whale just deceased, undertakes to supply a series of whales to the Royal Aquarium during the coming season, so that the extensive preparations made will not be altogether thrown away. It is the opinion of the curator that, with the experience just gained, failure in keeping a whale alive in captivity is in future not very likely.

BOOKS ABOUT EGYPT.

